"Neither the Governor, Gen. Andrews, nor myself has made public anything contained in Mr. Kling's petition, and we regret we had not the power to prevent its publication."

An official of the Trust Company, in speaking of the same matter, said: "Superintendent Kilburn in all his interviews in the newspapers makes the statement that every loan made by the company is amply secured. He has made the same statement to this office also. It is a sufficient refutation to the charge that a loan was made to Mr. Payn on insufficient collateral."

In answer to an inquiry the same official said a margin of 20 per cent. of the amount of the loan was usually required by a trust company in the collateral for that loan.

Charles W. Bacon, who has been acting as the attorney of Mr. Kling in the present controversy, does not take the same view as to Mr. Payn's loan. According to Mr. Bacon, the report of Gen. Andrews will disclose the fact that Mr. Payn obtained a loan $435,470.48 on the following securities: $15,000 New York and North Shore firsts, 1,050 shares Electric Storage, 1,012½ Metropolitan Street Railway, 500 United States Express, 100 Electric Storage, (preferred,) and a certified check for $100,000 drawn by the Metropolitan Street Railway Company on the State Trust, and marked "Construction account."

Mr. Bacon gives the following valuation to these collaterals: New York and North Shore 1sts, $15,000; Electric Storage, at 75, $123,750; Metropolitan, at 104, $165,968; United States Express, at 45, $22,000, and Electric Storage preferred, at 77, 77,700. These securities with the one-hundred-thousand-dollar check show at Mr. Bacon's figures a value of only $434,418, which is less than the loan instead of being 20 per cent. in excess.

In answer to the statement made by President Johnston of the trust company that Mr. Kling had been dropped from the Board of Directors of the American Surety Company, Mr. Bacon said: "Thomas F. Ryan sent W. H. Wheelock, temporarily President of the State Trust Company, and still one of its Directors, to Mr. Kling, who held 400 shares of the American Surety Company and 190 of the State Trust Company. Mr. Wheelock told Mr. Kling that he would have to sell one-half of the latter stock to the syndicate at $200. Mr. Kling refused to sell, believing that it would soon be worth $400.

"In a few minutes Mr. Ryan called him on the telephone and told him that he was making a fool of himself by not selling his stock. Mr. Kling still refused to sell. Mr. Ryan then said, 'You are a Director in the surety company. If you do not sell one-half of your stock to us we shall drop you from the board.' Mr. Kling told Mr. Ryan to go ahead, and he was almost immediately dropped from the Board of Directors of the American Surety Company."

As to the criticisms on Morris S. Decker, formerly Secretary of the trust company, assisting Gen. Andrews in the examination, Mr. Bacon said: Mr. Decker had been asked to aid in the work at the special request of Gov. Roosevelt, who was anxious to have him owing to his knowledge of the system of bookkeeping in use by the company.

President Walter S. Johnston, R. A. C. Smith, William F. Sheehan, and others interested in the State Trust Company held a conference at the President's private office yesterday afternoon. Mr. Johnston declined to talk about the affairs of the company with the reporters after this conference. An authorized representative of the company, to whose attention Mr. Bacon's statement was called later, said:

"Mr. Bacon may go on making all the statements he cares to, and issuing all the figures that he can get the newspapers to print. We shall pay no attention to him and make no answer. The State Trust Company is simply going about its business, and any report to be made on the matter must come from the Banking Department. Any man of common sense can see the personal nature of Mr. Kling's attacks."

"Would Mr. Kling, as a former Director, or Mr. Bacon as his counsel, not be in a position to know what collateral was given to secure Mr. Payn's loan?" he was asked.

"No," was the reply.

STATE TRUST INVESTIGATION.

A Reader Blames Gov. Roosevelt for the Action He Took.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read with interest your editorial of this morning on the Banking Department and the State Trust Company, and agree pretty well with your conclusions except as to the application. I think on reflection you will absolve the Superintendent of the Banking Department from any error of conduct in conducting "with noise and publicity an investigation that the welfare of the company and recognized public policy demanded should be made quietly and without any public annoyance."

If you will read back through your own news columns, you will find that the request for the examination by the disgruntled stockholder and ex-official was made to the Governor, and that it was upon the initiative of the Governor that ex-Adjt. Gen. Avery D. Andrews was appointed to conduct the investigation, as it was stated, substantially, that the reason for this extraordinary conduct was because of the legal questions involved, &c.

This was a reason given by the Governor and iterated by the Superintendent of Banks to shield the Governor from criticism for going outside of the well-equipped and thoroughly competent corps of examiners of the Banking Department to investigate this particular company on a complaint which proves to have been absolutely inadequate and grounded in bad faith.

Mr. Kilburn, the Superintendent of Banks, aside from his very considerable practical banking experience and his excellent record as a public official in the performance of his duties as the Superintendent and official visitor of financial institutions, is a member of the bar and a lawyer of equal repute in financial matters with the ex-Adjutant General.

It is plain from the procedure and its result that "Tactless Teddy" has made another flying leap to a "busted" bronco and that the examination of this company on this thin, sleazy complaint was taken outside the department and given to a man other than a regular employe of the Banking Department because the Governor hoped from it to gain some advantage in his pending fight to oust the present Superintendent of Insurance, and that he apparently decided on that course without any regard or consideration for the financial institution involved or its depositors.

The action and its result speak for itself and are but another evidence of the lack of sound, discriminating judgment on the part of an otherwise able man.

Mr. Kilburn is known to be an organization Republican. It is suspected the organization favors the retention of Mr. Payn; ergo, where it is hoped or suspected that a financial institution may be connected with Mr. Payn in a way that should subject it to criticism, the Governor refuses to trust the regular channels, and insists upon the appointment of an outsider under obligations, and therefore friendly to himself.

This communication, however, is not for the purpose of criticising the Governor, but to call your attention and the attention of such of your readers as may have been influenced by the strong editorial in this morning's paper, to the fact that the Banking Department was not to blame for the "noise and publicity" with which the investigation of the State Trust Company was conducted. H.

New York, Jan. 15, 1900.

WILL NOT SUPPORT MR. PAYN.

Republicans in Capt. Goddard's District Pass Resolutions Supporting Gov. Roosevelt.

It was demonstrated last at a meeting of the East Side Republican Club that Superintendent of Insurance Payn will not be able to count on any support in the Twentieth Assembly District in his fight against Gov. Roosevelt to retain the position from which it is the intention of the Executive to oust him.

The sentiment of the district was expressed at a large meeting held in the clubhouse, 217 East Thirty-fourth Street. Capt. F. Norton Goddard, the leader of the district, started the ball rolling by introducing a set of resolutions indorsing the stand taken by the Governor and condemning all those in the party who did not rally to his support. The reading of the resolutions started a wave of enthusiasm and they were adopted unanimously. The resolutions read in part as follows:

Resolved, That the regular Republican organization of the Twentieth Assembly District pledges to Gov. Roosevelt its loyal support through thick and thin, and condemns those unworthy Republicans who desire to stir up factional opposition to his exercise of his Constitutional powers, and to thwart him in his efforts to carry out his honest, far-seeing, and Republican policy of filling all offices in his gift with the best men available.

Capt. Goddard, in introducing the resolutions, made an address which was enthusiastically received and which showed at once the feeling of the representatives of the district. He said in part:

"We see a great deal in the papers just now about the State Superintendent of Insurance and of Gov. Roosevelt's intention not to renominate the present incumbent. As this is a matter that concerns the Republican Party, it seems suitable that we should give expression to our views, and I think our views are that opposition to Gov. Roosevelt in this matter is wrong. [Applause.]

"To oppose Gov. Roosevelt means to oppose as good a Republican as ever sat in the Governor's chair—that is a fine business for self-styled Republicans to be in. [Cheers and applause.]

"To oppose him means to encourage Democrats and corporations who are sore on him for taxing their franchises, and the boodlers, whose boodling he interferes with.

"To oppose him means to oppose the best friend that the poorer class of people, on whose votes in this district we are absolutely dependent for success, have got in office in this State to-day.

"We are, therefore, in favor of Gov. Roosevelt through thick and thin, because he is helping us to win our battle right in this district. We are in favor of him because he is making Republican votes for us every day, because his every act is a justification of the wisdom and honesty of the organization that nominated him, and thus increases the strength of that organization and of us as a part of it, and enables us to get independent men and honest Democrats to join with us, and unless I am very much mistaken will enable us to free our city, at the next Mayoralty election, from the putrid and polluting political pestilence which disfigures and makes loathsome the rule of Tammany in almost every public department, and will enable us to do it under Republican leadership. [Applause.]

"Factional opposition to Gov. Roosevelt of any kind, and especially in a matter like this of the State Superintendent of Insurance, where he manifestly is acting in accordance with his high ideals of his public duty if unrebuked by the Republican organization is calculated to repel and discourage the citizens whose absolute confidence we must possess if we are to realize the golden hope of uniting for a Republican Mayoralty candidate the support of all good citizens, without which such a man must fail of election." [Great applause.]

GOVERNOR AND MR. PAYN SILENT.

Both Decline to Say Anything About the State Trust Company.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—Gov. Roosevelt and Superintendent Payn both refuse to say anything about the State Trust Company's affairs. Superintendent Kilburn reached Albany to-night, but has not seen the Governor.

Gov. Roosevelt suggested the name of Gen. Andrews, his personal friend, to Superintendent Kilburn, who assigned him to make an investigation of the State Trust Company. It is suggested here that as Superintendent Kilburn and Superintendent Payn are both State officials, Gov. Roosevelt thought it best not to have one State official make a report on another.

It is understood that the name of the man selected by Gov. Roosevelt to succeed Mr. Payn as State Superintendent of Insurance will be sent to the Senate on Thursday.

SEEKING A TREASURE BOX.

Valuables of Miss Ackerley of Asbury Park Cannot Be Found.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Jan. 15.—The funeral of Miss Susan Ackerley of Mount Hermon Villa, Ocean Grove, was held yesterday afternoon. Miss Ackerley was at one time the proprietor of a fashionable millinery establishment in New York City, but of late years was to some extent a recluse.

J. Wesley Cross, the executor of Miss Ackerley's estate, is searching for a box referred to by Miss Ackerley before her death. The box is said to contain a receipt for $25,000 in Government bonds. Mr. Cross, who is a Justice of the Peace, was called in to draw up Miss Ackerley's will the day before she died. She directed that the money from the bonds be given to Mrs. Isabella Condell, a second cousin, living in New York.

No trace of the box has yet been found. Mrs. Harriett of Philadelphia, a former nurse, and several Ocean Grove and Asbury Park residents are mentioned as beneficiaries in the will.

WILL OF SAMUEL DANA GREENE.

A Small Estate Is Left Aside from Insurance of $20,000.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, Jan. 15.—The will of Lieut. Samuel Dana Greene, who with Mrs. Greene was drowned while skating on the Mohawk last Monday, was admitted to probate to-day. It is one of the most peculiarly worded instruments that have ever been filed in this county.

The will says: "If my said wife be not living at the time of my decease and for one week thereafter, then I devise and bequeath said rest and residue to the person or persons who would be entitled to the same if I died intestate."

Mrs. Greene was a daughter of Rear Admi

two miles of the Colonial camp at Birds River, the British force being too weak to interfere.

A partial development of the movement referred to in these dispatches Jan. 12, though by no means the main objective hinted at, can be recorded to-day in the formation of a strong committee of South Africans and ex-officials, with Lord Loch, the former Governor of Cape Colony and British High Commissioner, as President. The object is the remedying of the defects of the War Office. When the War Office sanctioned the formation of a corps of South Africans acquainted with the topography of the country and the Dutch and Kafir languages, the committee insisted that they must choose their own officers. The War Office demurred, but the committee pointed out that the South Africans were cognizant of the defects in the campaign and were not going out to be led to slaughter like sheep and the officials yielded. Consequently, prominent South Africans, crack shots, and acquainted with every stream and kopje, are flocking to join the contingent. As a prominent enlister said:

"We are not going to fight for promotion or the Victoria Cross. We simply want to meet the Boers on their own ground and according to our own methods. Our object is to defeat the enemy and not run splendid but useless risks."

ORANGE FREE STATE INVADED.

ORANGE RIVER, Jan. 12.—Gen. Wood, for the first time in the campaign, has established a post in the enemy's country. With a force of all arms he took up a position Jan. 6 at Zeutpans Drift, on the north side of the Orange River, in the Free State.

RUSHING SUPPLIES FOR BOERS.

LONDON Jan. 16.—The Daily Mail publishes the following from a special correspondent at Le Creusot, France:

"After two days' inquiry, I do not hesitate to assert that the Schneider Company is not only working night and day in the manufacture of guns and ammunition for the Boers, but that it has already packed, ready for shipment to the Transvaal, six heavy guns of large calibre. The workmen told me that ere long thirty additional guns would be dispatched to the Boers."

The Hamburg correspondent of The Daily Mail says:

"An export firm here has undertaken the immediate delivery of 300,000 meters of barbed wire to the Free State."

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 15.—An agent of the Colt Company, who was here to-day, says that his company is working night and day on a rush order for the British Government, principally for a large number of the Colt machine guns. The Union Metallic Cartridge Company has a rush order for several million Lee-Metford cartridges.

MOVEMENTS OF VOLUNTEERS.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—The Dudge of Marlborough, who volunteered for service in South Africa, will sail for Cape Town Saturday next.

The yeomanry recruiters are disturbed by the fact that they are able to get only one and one-half companies out of upward of 1,000 applicants in the Metropolitan District. All the other applicants fail short of the requirements. One thousand would be regarded as a very small number, even were all accepted.

The provinces are doing better, although to raise 10,000 appears far from the easy matter it did a fortnight ago.

Among the minor perplexities of the War Office is a strike among the military tailors, which causes delay in uniforming the recruits.

Major Gen. Sir Frederick Carrington, the well-known South African officer, until now commander of the Belfast District, has been ordered to South Africa.

OOM PAUL QUOTES THE BIBLE.

He Cites the Psalms to Encourage the Boers to Greater Exertions in the Field.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—A dispatch to The Daily Mail, dated Saturday, Jan. 13, from Lorenzo Marques, says:

"President Krüger has issued a proclamation ordering all burghers to the front. The Volksstem, the Transvaal official organ, suggests that the moment the British cross the border the gold industry should be 'irretrievably destroyed.'

"President Krüger also issued a circular, dated Jan. 8, to Boer commandants and burghers, urging them to show more energy in the Transvaal cause. He quotes Psalm xxxiii., verse 7, as God-given instructions to the burghers, and says that the British have fixed their faith in Psalm lxxxiii. He also quotes Psalm lxxxix, Verses 13 and 14, and asserts that he has searched the Bible without being able to find any other mode which can be followed by the Boers, who 'must fight in the name of the Lord.'

"Commandeering is proceeding busily at Pretoria, where the Town Guard is exchanging Mausers for Martinis, as the former are badly needed at the front. It is said that there are nearly 3,000 British prisoners in Pretoria."

The correspondent of The Times at Lorenzo Marques, telegraphing last Saturday, says:

"The Free Staters has now called out every available man, including the leading merchants, who have expected to enjoy immunity.

"The Volksstem, in the course of an article obviously inspired, vindicates the gold tax as a political move, holding that, if the assumption be correct that the bulk of the Rand shares is held on the Continent, Germany, France, and other countries must recognize the desirability of bringing the war to a speedy close. It adds that every day the war continues costs the shareholders £17,500. A threat of confiscation will be used to enforce the tax.

"With the invaluable assistance of a considerable number of British subjects, the Boer Government is steadily increasing the yield from the mines, thus securing funds to pay foreigners employed in the manufacture of explosives, shells, and other agents for the prosecution of war. The time must come when the Imperial Government will proclaim that such British subjects will be prosecuted for treason or deprived of British citizenship.

"The Boer Government is feeding 14,000 British subjects. I am informed that the Portuguese customs officials recently seized three cases as contraband containing field signaling appliances consigned by a French firm."

The quotations from the Psalms to which President Krüger refers in his proclamation are as follows:

THIRTY-THIRD PSALM, VERSE 7.

He gathereth the waters of the sea together as a heap; he layeth up the depth in store-houses.

PSALM 83.

1. Keep not Thou silence, O God; hold not Thy peace, and be not still, O God.
2. For lo, thine enemies make a tumult; and they that hate Thee have lifted up the head.
3. They have taken crafty counsel against Thy people, and consulted against Thy hidden ones.
4. They have said, Come, and let us cut them off from being a nation; that the name of Israel may be no more in remembrance.
5. For they have consulted together with one consent; they are confederate against Thee:
6. The tabernacles of Edom, and the Ishmaelites; of Moab and the Hagarenes;
7. Gebal and Ammon and Amalek; the Philistines with the inhabitants of Tyre:
8. Assur also is joined with them; they have holpen the children of Lot. Selah.
9. Do unto them as unto the Midianites; as to Sisera, as to Jabin, at the brook of Kison.
10. Which perished at En-dor; they became as dung for the earth.
11. Make their nobles like Oreb, and like Zeeb; yea, all their princes as Zebah, and as Zalmunna:
12. Who said, let us take to ourselves the houses of God in possession.
13. O my God, make them like a wheel; as the stubble before the wind.
14. As the fire burneth the wood, and as the flame setteth the mountains on fire.
15. So, persecute them with Thy tempest, and make them afraid with Thy storm.
16. Fill their faces with shame; that they may seek Thy name, O Lord.
17. Let them be confounded and troubled forever; yea, let them be put to shame, and perish.
18. That men may know that Thou, whose name alone, is Jehovah, art the most high over all the earth.

THIRTEENTH AND FOURTEENTH VERSES OF THE EIGHTY-NINTH PSALM.

Thou hast a mighty arm; strong is Thy hand, and high is Thy right hand.

Justice and judgment are the habitation of Thy throne; mercy and truth shall go before Thy face.

KRUEGER ON THE JAMESON RAID

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Mr. J. B. Robinson, the South African millionaire, in a signed article in The Daily News this morning relates conversations he has had with President Kriiger and describes several interviews in which the Jameson raid was talked over. On one of these occasions President Krüger said:

"Do you mean to tell me that you do not know that the men who organized and engineered the raid organized it for their own benefit? They had decided how they would divide the Transvaal, and how each of the parties was to have certain interests in this country.

"Many reformers who were put in jail were perfectly innocent. They were ignorant of the schemes of the men in the inner circle. There were only twelve men in that inner circle, and they were to divide the Transvaal among themselves.

"They and their companies found the money for the raid. Do you think we are so innocent as not to know that Rhodes, metaphorically speaking, held a pistol at the heads of certain men in England and said to them, 'If you do not support me, I shall denounce you and your complicity in the raid?'"

At this stage, according to Mr. Robinson, President Krüger became more excited, and shouted so loudly that people in the street stopped to listen to the conversation. Mr. Krüger then said:

"And now you are remonstrating with me about arming. It is true; I am arming, and it is because I see clearly that I must defend my country."

To this Mr. Robinson replied:

"The British public is aroused. If any attempt were made again to enter this country, there would be a great outcry in England, and the imperial authorities would take steps to punish the organizers and to prevent such freebooting expeditions."

President Krüger approached Mr. Robinson, placed a hand on his shoulder, made a violent effort to suppress his excitement, and said:

"You mean well, but I have lost all confidence. What has happened would take place again, and I am determined to guard against it."

Later Mr. Krüger said:

"What is to prevent Rhodes and his coadjutors engineering another diabolical attempt against the independence of my country?"

MOBBED BY LONDON BROKERS.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—A disgraceful scene occurred on the Stock Exchange to-day. When Maurice Herzfelder of the big stock-broking firm of Kahn & Herzfelder, doing considerable New York business, appeared on the Exchange, he was mobbed, knocked down, and kicked because, as alleged, he had refused to keep open the place of a clerk employed by him who had volunteered for service in South Africa.

Mr. Herzfelder was so severely ill-used that he fainted, and when he recovered he was again maltreated. Finally he was rescued from his assailants.

CABINET TO STAND TOGETHER.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—The Birmingham Mail, the organ of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, says:

"We understand, on the highest authority, that if the Government is defeated in Parliament on the question of the war the Cabinet will immediately appeal to the country, all the Ministers having decided to stand together and not to permit any individual Minister to be made a scapegoat.

Rumors of Indian Trouble Denied.

OTTAWA, Jan. 15.—Owing to reports of excitement among the Indians of the North, the home of the Cree, over the Transvaal war, Clifford Sifton, Minister of the Interior, ordered an inquiry, the result of which has just been received from the Indian Agent at Edmonton, who says he has visited five of the reservations and found that the Indians were even ignorant of there being a war in South Africa.

Webster Davis Leaves Cape Town.

CAPE TOWN, Jan. 13.—Webster Davis, the United States Assistant Secretary of the Interior, visited the Boer prisoners today and subsequently dined with the Admiral. He then visited and bade farewell to the Governor, Sir Alfred Milner, previous to starting for the Transvaal.

KAISER IS STILL FURIOUS.

Regards the Seizures Made by Great Britain as Ungraceful and Uncalled For.

BERLIN, Jan. 15.—Emperor William still takes the deepest interest in the Bundesrath incident and holds frequent conferences on the subject with the Foreign Secretary, Count von Buelow. The matter was under consideration to-day and a correspondent was informed after the conference that the Emperor is still furious about the seizures, which he regards as particularly ungraceful and uncalled for on the part of Great Britain, inasmuch as he was led to believe, during his recent visit, that England would hereafter do everything in her power to preserve amicable relations. In view of all this His Majesty regards the seizures of German vessels as "apparent bad faith on the part of Lord Salisbury." The German Ambassador in London, Count von Hatzfeldt, has informed the German Government that the seizures were made upon the order of the British Admiralty and not of the Foreign Office. The Kaiser, however, considers this a mere subterfuge.

At the Foreign Office to-day it was asserted, in reply to inquiry, that the reported discovery of a quantity of rifles in the cargo of the Bundesrath was unimportant, since it was already known, through the manifest, that there were several cases of hunting rifles on board.

It is believed in Court circles that, while the visit of Rear Admiral von Senden-Bibran, Chief of the Imperial Marine Cabinet, will retain a strictly private character, he will drop a word of the above tenor in the proper quarter. The semi-official dementi of the political mission attributed to Freiherr von Senden-Bibran's visit, which the Foreign Office reiterated to-day, is discredited in a section of the press, including the Deutsche Tages-Zeitung and the Staatsbuerger Zeitung, the latter remarking that "the times are too critical to think of regattas."

The Kolnische Zeitung, in the course of a severe article, protests against the "needless delay in searching the Bundesrath's cargo, which is engendering bad feeling in Germany against England." It declares that the British authorities have been led on a false scent by provocative agents and warns England that, if she desires to preserve Germany's friendship, she will do well to pay more attention to German opinion than has hitherto been thought necessary."

The Post Office Department, in view of the British cable regulations, publishes a circular advising the public to write for African cables in the English language, avoiding cipher.

The Stettin authorities notify vessels that they should display their flags when passing warships. This order is interpreted in connection with the recent seizures.

STATUS OF THE SEIZED FLOUR.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The State Department does not know officially that the American provisions seized by the British war vessels have been released. It is understood, however, that the New York firms which consigned the goods to South Africa have received information to that effect from their representative at Lorenzo Marques. The department does know that the flour on the Mashona has been landed at Durban and that the cargo of the Maria has been placed in lighters. It is probable that all of the provisions will pass into the possession of the British Government through purchase, if the owners are willing to sell, and the State Department is now trying to ascertain their wishes.

If the owners decide not to sell, then the goods will be turned over to their regular representatives, and the British Government will pay a sum of money sufficient to cover any loss that has been incurred. It is suggested that in view of the rapid rise in the price of provisions in South Africa the owners of these seized provisions may actually realize a handsome profit by the detention of their goods until this time. The sum of money involved, in case the British Government is expected to pay damages, is said to be insignificant, although the absence from the invoices of figures showing the billed price of the commodities has so far prevented an accurate estimate.

GOV. McLAURIN VERY ILL.

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 15.—Gov. and Senator-elect McLaurin, who has been ill of pneumonia for four days, is in a critical condition, and his physicians admitted tonight that his recovery is doubtful.

The disease has made deep ravages on his system, and he is in an enfeebled condition. This afternoon he insisted upon looking after several State matters, principally pardons which had been docketed, and the exertion of signing his name to the documents caused his fever to rise several degrees.

MAYOR JONES ENJOINED.

Special to The New York Times.

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 15.—Judge Pratt today granted a temporary injunction restraining the Mayor and City Clerk from selling the city natural gas plant to Kerlin Brothers for $228,000.

The injunction was asked to include the Aldermen, that they might not pass the resolution for the sale over the veto of Mayor Jones, but the Court held that vetoes of Councilmen could not be enjoioned. The ruling will block the sale until a bill to refer the matter to the popular vote shall pass the State Legislature.

Mayor Jones has opposed the sale, but recently lost control of Council and that body has been ignoring his vetoes.

PLOT TO DAMAGE CANAL.

Alleged Forestport Liquor Dealers Caused Breaks in Banks to Get Trade from Laborers — Nine Arrests.

Special to The New York Times.

UTICA, Jan. 15.—Four more arrests were made to-day in the matter of the breaks in the canal banks at Forestport, making nine in all. The indications are that detectives have unearthed a conspiracy on the part of saloon keepers at Forestport, who caused the breaks of 1897, 1898, and 1899 for the purpose of getting revenue from the army of laborers sent to repair the damage done.

Three saloonkeepers and one hotelkeeper are among those arrested. The others are said to have been the tools of the principal conspirators, the men who did the actual work of drilling through the banks of the canal. The breaks in the aggregate cost the State over $200,000. It is stated on good authority that a dozen more arrests will follow. The ringleaders of the plot are thought to be those in custody, but they employed different men to do the work each year, and some of the latter are yet at large.

The District Attorney has five confessions from those implicated. He says that he has evidence to convict all under arrest. There is much excitement at Forestport.

OSTRACISM AGAINST TRUSTS.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 15.—Col. William Jennings Bryan and President Hadley of Yale University were interviewed here to-day relative to the latter's Denver speech relating to trusts. President Hadley said, in response to a question regarding the remedy for some of the bad effects of trusts: "When people have clearly made up their minds as to what are great social evils, ostracism is an effective remedy." Then he said, by way of explanation:

"The trouble is that the public mind is not clear on the matter. My opinion is that many of the evils commonly attributed to trusts do not properly belong there. This is where the public needs education.

"The evils that do exist ought to be clearly pointed out, and where it is shown that a man is engaged in an unworthy enterprise, the people should have the courage to deny him social recognition. I believe the time will come when they will do so. I do not mean that every man who is interested in a trust should, therefore, be canceled from the list of one's acquaintances. That is a matter requiring judgment for each individual case."

Col. Bryan was asked for his views on the plan of Prof. Hadley. He said:

"The idea is a good one and should be encouraged. A man who tries to rob the public by means of a trust or by wrecking a bank or a railroad should no more be countenanced by society than a plain highwayman. The thing needed is to waken and educate the public mind and conscience on such matters.

"When the people understand the harm that there really is in trusts they will be ready to apply a remedy. There are things which were permitted in society twenty-five years ago which are not tolerated at all to-day.

"The change has been wrought through education. A similar change will take place when the people learn the true moral status of the trust question.

"I am glad indeed that college men, who are leaders in education, are taking up the matter for discussion. It is a step in the right direction, and I have no doubt that their researches will result in greatly helping to solve the problem. But, so far as ostracism is concerned, I do not believe that as a remedy for the trust evil it is likely to become notoriously effective very soon."

STOCKHOLDERS CRY FRAUD.

SEATTLE, Washington, Jan. 15.—A bill in equity on behalf of New York and Canadian stockholders of the Seattle, Lake Shore and Eastern Railway, was filed in the United States Circuit Court to-day against the Seattle and International Railway, asking for a receiver for the road, also asking for an injunction against the moving of the tracks of the company.

An examination into the accounts of the Union Trust Company of New York is also demanded. Charges of fraud and conspiracy are made against the Union Trust Company and the Seattle International Railway in the mortgage foreclosure, wherein the Seattle, Lake Shore and Eastern Railway was sold to satisfy the mortgage of the trust company.

The bill makes specific charges that a combination and organization agreement was entered into by the committee representing the Union Trust Company and those who subsequently organized the Seattle and International Railway, to bid in the property for $1,000,000 when the same was worth $10,000,000; to make accounts to the court so as to show that the property was only equal to the value of the mortgage and that certain stockholders of the Seattle, Lake Shore and Eastern Railway, who have become the principal organizers of the Seattle and International Railway, combined in a scheme with the Union Trust Company to make such showing to the court that all other creditors could be frozen out from receiving any benefits from the property.

AT THE GAY FRENCH BALL.

Amid a myriad of twinkling lights and twinkling toes, the flutter of gonfalons and banners, the strains of seductive music, the sparkle of wine, and the glitter and tinsel of high revelry, high and low life of New York joined hands once more at the annual ball of the Cercle Francaise de l'Harmonie at Madison Square Garden.

It was the same old French Ball, with a few slight and unimportant variations, such as recur from year to year, but which the thousands of revelers notice not at all. The decorations last night, for instance, were far more elaborate than on any previous occasion. The dome of the great building was hidden by great sheets of yellow and white bunting. Draperies of the French colors swung from the four sides, shutting out the rear tiers of seats. Pendent from the centre of the dome swung festoons of bunting of many colors, illumined by chains of Japanese lanterns. Great shields of American flags studded the balcony. All the ugliness and defects of bare walls were hidden by draperies and fluttering tinsel, and much of the defects and frailties of human nature were softened and hidden in the same way for a few brief dazzling hours.

The advertised "feature" of the ball, consisting of a ballet with 300 participants, more interesting and complete possibly than in former years, took place early in the evening before a half-filled house. Then midnight came, and the great orchestra began with a crash and the ball was on. There was the usual crush and jam at the entrance. The great floor became a kaleidoscopic mass of color, while hundreds of picturesque and grotesque Follies, Pierrots and harlequins pirouetted in a spirited quadrille. Then, as the hours rolled on, the big wine room began to fill up, and the dances became more lively. The whirl of the waltzes became swifter and the twinkling feet were lifted higher and higher in the quadrilles. Between the numbers professional dancers were introduced and earned their money, while nobody looked on or cared.

Wine had ascended to the throne by 2 o'clock, and by 3 o'clock was dealing out justice to its subject with an iron hand. Everybody was there who claims to be a man about town, and many of the revelers came from a distance. Men worth millions came and looked on or joined in the revelry with men wearing hired dress suits. There were women who came from the upper heights of society to catch a glimpse of how the other half wooed and won the fickle Goddess of Pleasure. There were politicians, brokers, bankers, merchants, gamblers, and possibly, worse, swelling one vast careless throng. There were incidents comic, pathetic, and tragic, all coming under the head of pleasure, and crowding ceaselessly one upon the other until the night had worn itself away, and the gray light of dawn shone in upon the ruins.

TO REMOVE INDIANA PLANTS.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 15.—The American Foundry Company, which absorbed the leading soil pipe plants of the country, including those in Alabama, last Summer, has decided to dismantle the two leading plants at Hammond, Ind., and remove them to Bessemer, Ala. This was brought about, it is stated, by the desire to get nearer the cheapest raw material.

The Bessemer plant was closed down today for the additions which will double its capacity. The main portion of the Hammond plants, including engines and boilers, will be brought there, the remainder going to the company's pipe plants at Anniston and Bridgeport, Ala., so it is stated.

The Alabama plants have been enlarged since the absorption and have been operated continuously.

A MOTIVE FOR MOLINEUX

Attempt to Establish a Reason Why He Should Hate Barnet.

WITNESSES TO SHOW RIVALRY

Servants at Places Where Mrs. Molineux Lived Before Her Marriage Called by Mr. Osborne.

Evidence of a sensational character marked the first day of the tenth week of the Molineux trial, and dragged into the case the name of Mrs. Molineux. This evidence, while not connecting Molineux with the death of Mrs. Katherine Adams, was designed, the Assistant District Attorney explained, to show that Molineux had a motive for the killing of H. C. Barnet, and that Mrs. Adams may have been the victim of a scheme similar to that which the prosecution holds accomplished the death of Barnet.

The important witnesses of the day were two colored women, both of whom had been servants. One, Rachel Greene, now living in Washington, said that she had lived with a Mrs. Bell, as a servant, at 251 West Seventy-fifth Street in the latter part of 1897, and that during that time a Mr. and Mrs. Chesebrough had lived there. The dramatic feature of the day was her identification of Roland B. Molineux as the man who had lived at the address given as Mr. Chesebrough. The first name of Mrs. Chesebrough, the witness said, was Blanche. Blanche Chesebrough was Mrs. Molineux's name before her marriage.

The other important witness was Minnie Betts, who lived with a Mrs. Bellinger at 257 West End Avenue, in 1898. She testified that Miss Chesebrough had lived there in that year, and that prior to a time when she had gone away for the Summer Miss Chesebrough had received calls from a man, not the defendant; that it was not until after her return from the country that Molineux called. This was after the date on which Barnet died, and soon afterward Molineux and Miss Chesebrough were married, the testimony showing that they took up their residence thereafter with Mrs. Bellinger.

MOLINEUX PALER THAN USUAL.

The courtroom presented very much the usual scene when Recorder Goff took the bench at 10:40 o'clock yesterday morning, though the absence of women among the spectators was commented upon. Molineux, naturally pale, and made more so by his long confinement, seemed a trifle paler than usual. His father, Gen. Molineux, brought to him a bundle of letters, which he immediately began to read. It had been expected that the prosecution would call Herman Koch and Nicholas Heckman, the letter-box men, and possibly the wigmaker, William Hepner, an expert in disguises; the last mentioned to offset the testimony of Emma Miller, who had testified that the purchaser of the bottle holder had a blonde beard. None of these was called. The first witness was Mr. Kinsley, the writing expert, whom Mr. Weeks called upon only to ask when he had first seen the exhibits of writing brought up on Friday last—the new Barnet series, so called. The witness said that he had seen all of them after he had given his testimony in December.

"Have you been in daily attendance here ever since?" Mr. Weeks asked.

"Almost daily," replied the witness.

"Under the regular allowance, $25 per diem?"

"I don't know."

"That is what you expect?"

"Yes."

Then Rachel Greene was called. She is a woman of perhaps thirty-five years, and was neatly dressed. Mr. Osborne soon made apparent the purpose of the witness's presence.

"Did you ever live at 251 West Seventy-fifth Street?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Who was the woman you worked for there?"

"Mrs. Bell."

"Did you know the defendant?"

"I knew Mr. Chesebrough."

"What do you mean by that?"

"The gentleman who lived there."

"Who lived there?"

"Mr. and Mrs. Chesebrough."

"Do you see him in court?"

The witness stood up. She looked all over the room as though expecting to see a face she knew, but it did not at once appear to her. Then she took the different rows of faces—first along the jurors' box, then back among the auditors, and then to the other side of the inclosure, where the reporters were seated. Then she looked down the row of seats at which were seated the District Attorney's office contingent. The table at right angles to this, at which sat Molineux and his counsel, and Mr. Weeks's assistants, was the last to come under her survey. When her eyes reached an angle that indicated that she was looking at the prisoner she said, nodding her head toward him.

"I think it's that gentleman, there. He had a mustache then."

Molineux's eyes seemed riveted to the witness, but his face was expressionless.

"That will not do," said the Recorder. "She said she thought it was the man. That is too indefinite."

MR. AND MRS. CHESEBROUGH.

Mr. Osborne asked: "How long did you know Mr. and Mrs. Chesebrough?"

"Since Nov. 2, 1897."

"What room did they occupy?"

"The front room."

"Point Mr. Chesebrough out to the jury."

The witness pointed again to Molineux.

"I can't tell who you mean by that. You may come down here," said Mr. Osborne.

The woman left the stand and passed around the space in front of the Recorder's desk to the table where Molineux sat.

She had a handkerchief in her right hand, which she raised rather awkwardly as she pointed to the defendant, standing exactly opposite and across the table from him. There was nothing spectacular in her manner, but the circumstance made the incident dramatic. Molineux became very white. He looked straight at her as she approached him, but shifted his eyes to one side as she lifted her hand. A smile which had played about his face a few minutes before had disappeared, and his facial muscles twitched nervously. Gen. Molineux flushed and seemed greatly distressed.

"What name was the lady known by?" asked Mr. Osborne when the witness resumed her seat.

"Mrs. Chesebrough."

"Her first name?"

"Blanche."

The witness said that the room was one flight up, and in reply to the question "Did he have a latch key?" she said:

"I believe he did."

"How long did they stay there?"

"How long did you know Mrs. Chesebrough?"

"Until she left. From Nov. 2, 1897, until some time in January, 1898."

The witness said that she had not heard the name of Molineux until after he had left.

MOLINEUX HAD A DRESSING CASE.

"Did he have any things there?"

"Yes; a dressing case."

It developed that the witness meant a dress suit case. She then described some of the articles which he had about the room—hairbrush, comb, toothbrush, &c.

Mr. Osborne then called for a young man named Fisk, who had been employed at the Knickerbocker Club, and asked if he had brought the dress suit case to the house for Mr. Chesebrough. The witness thought he was the man who did. Mr. Osborne then asked if there was any trouble between Mr. and Mrs. Chesebrough before they left, and the witness said she had not known of any trouble. To another question she said that Mrs. Chesebrough did no work while she lived at the house.

The Recorder asked how this was relevant, and Mr. Osborne said: "The witness has shown that the defendant lived with Blanche Chesebrough in 1897. I'll show by the next witness that there was a following time when he didn't. Another man intervened."

"What has that to do with Cornish?" asked the Recorder.

Mr. Osborne started with a statement showing his intention of bringing in the name of Barnet, and Mr. Weeks quickly put in an objection, which was sustained.

In reply to a question as to where they had gone when they left Mrs. Bell's, the witness said: "The lady went to 257 West End Avenue, Mrs. Bellinger's."

Minnie Betts, who said she lived at 426 Central Park West, was then called. She had lived with Mrs. Bellinger for four years, she said.

"Did you ever know Miss Chesebrough?" asked Mr. Osborne.

"Yes."

"When?"

"In 1898."

"When did she come to Mrs. Bellinger's?"

"Early in the year of 1898."

"Did she and Mrs. Bellinger go away in the Summer?"

The witness said they were away in June, July, and August.

Mr. Osborne brought out that Miss Chesebrough had occupied a hall room on the top floor at first, but that just before she left for the Summer she had occupied a large room, one flight up in the rear, and that she took this room again on her return. The witness had never seen Molineux before Miss Chesebrough went away.

"Did you know that she was married?" asked Mr. Osborne.

"Yes."

"Whom did she marry?"

"Mr. Molineux."

"Where were they married?"

"In the Church of the Heavenly Rest."

"Where did they live after they were married?"

"At Mrs. Bellinger's."

"In the same room she had before she was married?"

"Yes, Sir."

MISS CHESEBROUGH'S CALLERS.

Going back to the period before Miss Chesebrough went away for the Summer, Mr. Osborne asked: "Did she have any callers?"

"Yes, Sir."

"Who?"

"A young man; I don't know who."

"Describe him."

Mr. Weeks objected and was sustained by the Court.

Mr. Osborne then said:

"I propose to show that from November, 1897, to January, 1898, the defendant and the woman he afterward married, lived together at 251 West Seventy-fifth Street, and that Blanche Chesebrough then went to live at 257 West End Avenue, and lived there alone, and that the defendant dropped out of sight and was not heard of until they were married. And I propose to show that there was another caller at the West End Avenue house, and that he was H. C. Barnet."

The Recorder interposed: "But Cornish is not Barnet."

Mr. Osborne then said that he proposed to show that there was a complete scheme in the Cornish case, the sending for remedies, and the sending of the cyanide of mercury through the mails; that the Barnet case was similar and that there had been a motive. He spoke with great earnestness and was listened to with the closest interest. Molineux looked very grave. Once he turned nervously and said something to his father, who was evidently much worried, but replied with a kindly look to his son.

Mr. Osborne resuming said that the evidence would help to establish the fact that Molineux had written the Barnet letters, and had therefore written the address on the poison package. These letters certainly showed that the defendant was in no philanthropic state of mind toward Barnet. Barnet had died from taking cyanide of mercury, and the State had thereby lost an important witness.

Turning again to the witness, Mr. Osborne brought out the fact that she had known Miss Chesebrough for four years, the latter having lived there before the time when she came back in January, 1898.

BARNET'S PHOTOGRAPH ADMITTED.

Mr. Osborne then showed the witness a photograph. It was that of Barnet. "Is that the man who called on Miss Chesebrough?" he asked.

Mr. Weeks objected and the Recorder sustained him. The picture was again presented and the question was put in different form and allowed. The witness said that it looked like the man. She was next asked for a description of the man and the Recorder this time allowed it. She said:

"He had a mustache. It was brown. He had brown hair."

"He was nice looking," she added.

"Did he call after she came back from the country, in 1898?"

"No, sir."

"You saw Mr. Weeks there, didn't you?"

"Yes, twice."

Mr. Weeks interposed to ask when she had seen him, and brought out the fact that it was just before Molineux's arrest.

Mr. Osborne said: "I did not mean to infer that you were the handsome man."

"I did not know what you were driving at," retorted Mr. Weeks.

"Did I talk with you at all about this case?" asked Mr. Weeks.

"No," replied the witness.

Mr. Osborne then asked: "From whom did you first hear Mr. Molineux's name?"

"Miss Chesebrough told it to me about a week before they were married."

"Did you ever hear of Barnet's name?"

"Yes, after his death."

The witness was excused and Herbert H. Jackson, the undertaker who attended in the case of Barnet, was called and asked as to the size of the coffin. It was five feet nine inches, inside measurement, he said, and it was customary to allow an inch space. He had not, however, taken any measurements of the body. He was present when the body was exhumed in February, 1898.

Albert S. Osborn of Rochester, a handwriting expert, who said that he was not related to the Assistant District Attorney and that he had had twenty years' experience, occupied all the remainder of the day.

When he had made considerable progress in the elucidation of his theory, a recess was taken. After court was resumed in the afternoon the aspect of the room was changed by the presence of a number of women, some of whom were visitors from Virginia. Molineux had recovered his familiar smiling countenance when he came into the courtroom, and he followed the expert's testimony with the same interest that he has displayed throughout in this phase of the case, examining the exhibits with his glass.

This expert took up a new method of showing similarity in the various exhibits of writing. He said that he had not known the line of the prosecution's case when called into it. He was one of the experts who appeared before the Coroner. He expressed the belief that all of the Barnet and Cornish letters were written by the same person who wrote the address on the poison package, and that they were the same as the exhibits of Molineux's admitted writing.

He was equally certain, he said, that none of them was written by either Cornish or Barnet, of whose genuine writing he had seen specimens. His method in general, he said, was based on the great number of similarities and the character of the dissimilarities. Where one letter was found to have similar characteristics in all of the exhibits, that would not suffice alone to show that all were written by the same hand, but when a great number of letters were so characterized throughout it was not to be presumed that a number of different writers would have all of them.

One of the most common ways, he said, of disguising one's handwriting was by changing the slant; but changing the slant did not change the characteristics. He then took up the various exhibits, and endeavored to show that while there were a variety of slants the characteristics of form remained the same. For this purpose he had prepared various photographs, showing letters taken from forty-two exhibits. Letters having common loops or features were shown in groups and the similar characteristics were pointed out.

The witness had a big stack of these papers, and their introduction was objected to, but the Recorder permitted them to be passed around to the jury on its being explained that they were intended only to illustrate the expert's theory, just as former experts had been permitted to use the blackboard. The witness said that he had never had a case in which there was so much material on which to base a conclusion, because of the use of the same words so often in the letters sent for various drugs. He said that in the writing admitted to be Molineux's the slant was very uniform in the various specimens, but that it varied greatly in the disputed exhibits.

The forms peculiar to the admitted Molineux writing was, however, preserved through them all. Taking up letters separately, he directed attention to the small letter "k," in which he said that one peculiarity appeared in eleven of the disputed letters and two of the conceded specimens of Molineux's writing. This was a building up of the "k," the lower portion being made first as an undotted i, and then the loop put over it.

Another peculiarity in some of the small k's was in that after the down stroke the pen was drawn up and brought down again to form the lower part of the right portion of the letter, while the upper part of that portion was made like the cross of a "t" or an "x." This peculiarity was not disguised by a change of the slant.

Another peculiarity common in both the disputed and undisputed letters was the making of a small "i" with only one stroke, the downward one, while it was higher than the other small letters; again, the letter "a" was found similarly distorted in various exhibits, and the letter "y" was in most cases, where it terminated a word, clipped off short. This occurred in twelve out of thirteen disputed specimens of writing and twenty-five times in acknowledged writing of the defendant.

An exhibit of Cornish's writing was then submitted, and the expert was required to show the points of difference between this and the poison package address, and also one of the disputed writing signed "Barnet."

The prisoner apparently lost interest after a while in this comparison and turned his attention to the afternoon papers, which seemed to cause him considerable amusement. He smiled frequently and called the attention of Mr. Battle of his counsel to various things contained in them. The jurors, however, paid close attention, and the expert was called upon to answer many of their questions.

Mr. Osborne's testimony was finished at 4:25 P. M., when court was adjourned to this morning.

MAZET CHARGES A DICTATORSHIP

Ballot Box the Remedy, Says the Committee's Report.

MAYOR ABDICATES POWER

Public Office Manipulated for the Benefit of Favored Persons.

Tammany's Head Attacked Without Naming Him—On Police and Ramapo—Remedial Bills Recommended—Minority Report Denounces the Findings.

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—In the House to-night Assemblyman Fallows of New York submitted the report of the Assembly special committee to investigate the affairs of New York City, of which Former Assemblyman Mazet is Chairman It was filed and ordered printed. Mr. Trainor of New York presented the report of the minority members of the committee, which took the same course.

The majority report opens with the quotation of the Assembly resolutions of March and April last, pursuant to which the investigation was begun and prosecuted, the March resolution stating in part:

"Whereas, It is currently reported and generally believed that, in the City of New York, funds are being raised by levy upon members of the police force, saloon and resort keepers, and by other contributions for use in corruptly influencing legislation; that there is a lax enforcement of the laws in said city, and in the counties included in said city; that corrupt and tyrannical methods have been resorted to in the enforcement of the same, and that the public funds of said city are being wasted in extravagant increases of official salaries and in other ways; therefore,

"Resolved, That the Speaker of the Assembly be and he hereby is directed to appoint seven members of the Assembly, who shall be a special committee of this body, with full power and authority to investigate all and singular the said reports and charges and all matters and things in any way pertaining thereto."

TEN THOUSAND PAGES.

The report then says:

"Acting under and by virtue of said resolution the said committee proceeded to the City of New York and entered upon its duties as prescribed. It has taken upward of 10,000 typewritten pages of testimony, herewith transmitted, and has examined into the conduct of very many of the public offices and departments of said city.

"The committee has now in preparation a classified and indexed abridgment or summary of said testimony, in which abridgment those subjects of investigation that were purely administrative in their nature are brought together and separated from those for which a legislative remedy may be found.

BALLOT BOX THE REMEDY.

"A great part of the testimony was naturally enough directed to the conduct and control of the various offices and departments. In many of these grave evils were disclosed. For such as were administrative in their nature, the remedy must be sought at the ballot box and not at the hands of the Legislature.

"The one clear and distinct fact brought out by this investigation is that we have in this great city the most perfect instance of centralized party government yet known. We have had explained by the highest authority, the dictator himself, the theory and system of government, and by the highest officials the practice thereof. We see that government no longer responsible to the people, but to that dictator. We see the central power, not the man who sits in the Mayor's chair, but the man who stands behind it. We see the same arbitrary power dictating appointments, directing officials, controlling boards, lecturing members of the Legislature and the Municipal Assembly. We see incompetent and arrogance in high places. We see an enormous and ever-increasing crowd of officeholders with ever-increasing salaries. We see the powers of government prostituted to protect criminals, to demoralize the police, to debauch the public conscience, and to turn governmental functions into channels for private gain.

"The proof is conclusive, not that the public treasury has been directly robbed, but that great opportunities have been given by manipulation of public offices to enable favored individuals to work for their own personal benefit.

REFERENCE TO CROKER.

"The enormous increase in the budget of the City of New York, the inefficiency and wastefulness in the public service, the demoralization of many of the departments are due absolutely to this abdication of power by the officers of the people to an organization, the ruler of which, an autocrat, has testified that he was working for his own pocket all the time.

"We would be derelict in our duty to this Assembly and to the citizens of our great city did we not assert this upon the solemnity of our convictions based upon unimpeachable testimony. Having said this much, we refrain from further particularizing because our duty and your power is confined to remedial legislation, and for these evils there is none such.

"The remedy is certain and efficacious but it is not within the power of your body to apply it. The people alone can remedy these evils. So long as the majority of voters of the Greater New York are satisfied with the present system, theory and practice of government, no laws that you can devise will better these conditions.

There is no legislative panacea for such administrative ills."

The report goes on to state that in the working of the greater charter in the first two years of its existence certain defects, as was, it believes, natural, were disclosed, and then are taken up and discussed the various departments, as administered under this law, and the conditions which the committee says it found prevailing as proved by the testimony adduced on the stand. Regarding revision of the charter to remedy these defects, the report says:

"About many of the things complained of there is a serious difference of opinion among witnesses entitled to the highest respect, and certain of these things are of such fundamental importance to the whole frame of the Government that this committee reports that in its judgment the Legislature should authorize the Governor to appoint a commission which may carefully revise the charter, in order that such changes as may be determined upon may be carefully considered and result in permanent benefit. Your committee, therefore, has drafted a bill for the appointment of such a Charter Revision Commission, which it submits herewith and urges its prompt passage."

ATTACK ON THE MAYOR.

The duties of the Mayor, as contemplated by the charter, next occupy the attention of the committee in the report. In effect, the discussion of the administration of the present Executive is a strong attack on his attitude. The report says:

"The present Mayor has not conceived his duties to be as contemplated by the Charter Commission. He testified that he has steadily maintained the policy of refusing to consult with his Commissioners on proposed action upon their part. He has not attended the meetings of the great Board of Public Improvements. He has asserted that his view of the distribution of governmental power was that after having appointed Commissioners they were responsible for their several departments.

ABDICATES HIS POWER.

"It is a fair inference from all the evidence that he has practically abdicated his powers and exercises merely a registering function of the determination of the leaders of the party which elected him, in which the dominating influence, and therefore the real ruler of the city, is a private individual holding no office, amenable to no law, bound by no oath, and yet exercising almost absolute control over most of the departments of the City Government when he chooses to exercise it."

MAYOR'S TERM TOO LONG.

The report takes up the question of the Mayor's term of office, and says it is too long. It advises that it be reduced to two years, and asks that the question be referred to the proposed Charter Revision Commission. If the term be shortened, as recommended, the report urges that the Mayor's eligibility for re-election be restored. The terms of other city officials, the committee thinks, should also be restricted to two years.

Upon the question of the Commissioners, the report says that the Mayor should have the full power of removal and appointment, as at present.

MORE POWER FOR BOROUGHS.

The committee urges that the question of the boroughs should be referred for careful consideration of the Charter Revision Commission. The report on this subject says:

"Inasmuch as the terms of office of the Borough Presidents cannot now be curtailed, we do advise that their powers be increased in one regard. They are now members of the Board of Public Improvements, but have no vote therein except upon matters exclusively relating to their several boroughs. We regard it as of great importance that they should be given full voting power in said board, especially in view of the fact that in such a matter as the Ramapo Water Company's contract the ruling was made that Borough Presidents could not vote. We urge the immediate passage of an amendment to Section 410 of the charter. We have prepared a bill to accomplish that purpose, and, in view of pending matters, urge its immediate passage."

THE POLICE ATTACKED.

One of the most extended subdivisions of the report is that relating to the police. The committee says:

"The conduct of the present Police Department of the City of New York is unqualifiedly bad. Not only are the laws against poolrooms, gaming houses, policy shops, excise violations, dance halls, and wicked resorts of all kinds not enforced, or enforced in such a way as to be ridiculously ineffective, but the general discipline is lax, grave offenses of personal dereliction in the way of drunkenness, absence from post, inattention to duty, &c., go unpunished, or are visited with such small fines as almost to be an encouragement and not a deterrent for wrongdoing.

"Robberies, bunko games, deceits, frauds, thefts, have increased in an alarming degree, and the detection of these crimes and the recovery of property has steadily decreased during the last two years."

THE MAYOR'S RESPONSIBILITY.

The report then refers to the testimony of Mayor Van Wyck in regard to the existence of poolrooms, and his admitted responsibility in the matter, and continues:

"No trials of the Police Commissioners or removal of the Chief have been had as a result of the existence all over the city of openly conducted poolrooms and gaming establishments.

"We here have fixed by the testimony of the Chief Executive of the city his view of his powers and responsibilities. Upon the question of the enforcement of these laws and the discipline of the force, so long as the control of the Police Department, like that of the other departments, is intrusted to local authorities, it makes no difference, in the opinion of your committee, whether the Police Board is by law single-headed or four-headed, partisan or bipartisan. The responsibility is as much fixed now as it ever can be by law and we have no police legislation to recommend.

"We believe that the great mass of the rank and file of the department under proper leadership would execute all the laws with courage and vigilance, but it is not in the nature of things that subordinates dependent upon their superiors for continuance and promotion in rank should conduct themselves in direct opposition to the clearly known views of those superiors. When, at the direct instance of the gambling and pool-selling fraternity, officers have been 'pounded,' Captains transferred, and a Chief retired, it is hopeless to expect any other administration of such laws than that which the overwhelming evidence proves to exist."

The proposed contract with the Ramapo Water Company is discussed at great length. The report on this point says, in conclusion:

"We suggest the immediate passage of an act amending Sec. 471 of the charter by incorporating therein the provisions of Sec. 472 as the power of condemnation of the source of water supply with the approval of the Board of Public Improvements, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, and the authority of the Municipal Assembly evidenced by a three-fourths vote of the members elected thereto, and a bill to such effect has been prepared and its early passage urged before further mischief can be done."

CORRUPT "PULL" CHARGED.

Attention is called to the administration of the Building Department, and the report says:

"Here again we find the dominant theory of the present Government—corrupt pull and favoritism for private gain—in evidence.

"Some discretion must be lodged in a department having control of the building interests in so diversified a territory as the City of New York. If that discretion be abused or if officials are inefficient, incompetent or even corrupt, the remedy is not to be found at Albany, but in the City of New York, either at the hands of the criminal authorities or the people at the polls.

THE TAX DEPARTMENT.

In regard to the Tax Department the report says:

"The Tax Department increased the assessed valuation of the real estate of the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx for the year 1899 over that of 1898 to the enormous amount of $327,000,000. The examination of very many of the officials of the department indicated ignorance and incompetence so gross as to be ridiculous if the material interests of the citizens had not been at the mercy of such officials."

The conduct of the Dock Department is criticised, especially in reference to the purchase of supplies.

Action to prevent the levying of political assessments on the judiciary is recommended.

The question of the Municipal Assembly is referred to the Charter Revision Commission, the committee stating that in its opinion there should be but one chamber—that of the Board of Aldermen.

QUESTION OF CONTEMPTS.

Referring to the contempts incurred in the conduct of the investigation, the report says:

"A prompt and efficacious way should be provided under which such questions may be determined in a proper forum, where the person proceeded against may have full opportunity of explanation and defense. During the session of the Legislature this is provided for by the requirement that the committee should report to the House and the House should determine the question. There seems to be none provided while the House is under adjournment.

"We, therefore, respectfully suggest that Section 654 of the Code of Civil Procedure should be amended to cover this question of contempt before a Legislative committee, and prepare a bill therefor and urge its passage."

In conclusion the report urges that the meetings of all City Boards be public because "in a free government publicity is absolutely essential."

The report is signed by Robert Mazet, Chairman; Edward H. Fallows, Harris Wilson, Thomas M. Costello, and James B. McEwan.

MINORITY'S BITTER REPLY.

Committee's Work Discredited at the Polls—Platt Referred To as "Easy Boss"—Moss Denounced.

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—The report of the minority members of the Mazet Investigating Committee was handed to the Assembly this evening. It is signed by Municipal Court Justice Benjamin Hoffman, who represented the Sixteenth New York District in the last Assembly, and by Anthony J. Boland, who was elected to the present as well as the last Legislature from the First District of Erie County.

"As to the report of the majority in general, we feel justified in claiming that it is grossly unfair, conspicuously partisan, course in language, vituperative in temper, and absolutely unjustified except by the reckless disregard and perversion of the proof adduced before your committee. In all these respects it agrees with the methods pursued by the counsel of the committee at all its hearings.

In a preliminary report submitted to the Assembly of 1899, we deemed it our duty to direct attention to the notorious fact that the committee had been from the beginning discredited before the people; that the partisan purpose of its creation was universally recognized; that the appointment of two dismissed office holders as counsel was accepted as a clear indication that the aim of the committee would be revenge, rather than reform; that the insulting treatment of witnesses and the ignorance and incompetency with which they were questioned had aroused the public disgust and indignation, and that the people, the press, and the pulpit were unanimous in their unfavorable characterization of the committee and its proceedings.

That the self-respecting and fair-minded citizens of the State, without regard to political affiliations, were opposed to the continuance of the committee and its discreditable practices, and would at the first opportunity publicly condemn both. This condemnation, it will be remembered, was visited upon the committee and its counsel in a most unmistakable manner at the last general election, up to which time both had always acted together. Since the election the committe has separated from the most notorious of its counsel, and the counsel have divided among themselves.

Instead of profiting by this experience, the partisan majority of the committee propose to show just how limitless is their capacity for unfairness and downright misrepresentation. The majority report is framed upon the lowest levels of partisan spite and political prejudices. It in no single line, sentence, conclusion, or recommendation rises above the dignity or importance of the hired, professional, disgruntled agitator. To those familiar with public utterances in the City of New York it will be at once recognized as the reproduction of a vulgar stump speech made familiar to them in many campaigns by the junior counsel to the committee, much to the dismay and always to the defeat of any candidate in whose behalf it has been uttered, so that it may be said that the charges, complaints, falsehoods, insinuations, and detractions set forth in the majority report have already been unfavorably passed upon by the community of the City of New York.

SENATOR PLATT ATTACKED.

A most striking illustration of the partisan arrogance and hypocrisy which has dominated the committee from its very inception is to be found in the paragraphs of the report wherein the majority give expression to the pharisaical indignation with which their souls are filled upon discovering that there is a boss system associated with our politics. But even in this the majority of the committee lack both the courage and candor to point at the typical, though "easy," boss. They may try to mask and conceal him in quite the same subservient manner that they protected him from the subpoena of the committee, and refused our insistent demand that he should be called to the stand as a most unique, necessary, and desirable exhibit.

The people, however, again and again demanded, in a spirit of fair play, that the boss of our State politics should be questioned as to the source and sanction of the authority which he admittedly exercises in governmental affairs, as to the character and strength of the recommendations for appointments and nominations which he has dictated and which he now controls, as to the corporate and other influences operating under his guarantee, and the reason therefor, (whether political, social, or financial,) as to his connection with the legislative brokerage concern which undertakes, for a consideration of one kind or another, to insure to the citizen or corporation knowing the ropes the success or defeat of any proposed legislation affecting him or them or his or their interests just as and when desired, as to his identification with the "family law firm" and his profits therefrom, as to his accumulations by reason of his political connections and political domination, as to whether the signing of the Ramapo Water bill increased his income, and as to whether the failure of the Astoria Gas grab had disappointed his financial expectations. The people's call for the production of the commission of the State boss was both loud and long, but without effect upon the committee until the people had their opportunity at the polls.

CHARTER REVISION COMMISSION.

In keeping with the partisan conspiracy of which the committee and its work is but a solitary element, is the recommendation of the creation of a commission to revise the city charter, to be appointed by the Governor. A singular example of how minds of varying greatness dominated by the same political force or personality will agree upon a political proposition, is the coincidence that this very same recommendation is to be found in the message of the Governor himself. We believe and insist that any commission to revise the charter of the City of New York should be appointed by the Mayor of that city, and in its majority should represent the ascertained and acknowledged political majority of that community.

It should not be made up by the Governor, who holds his present position against the protests and votes of a majority of that people, because then it would be constituted in large part by the Governor's political or social friends. Above all things else the men selected as Democratic representatives on such committee should not be, as have been all of the Governor's other appointments in that direction, Democrats who voted for Roosevelt for Governor, McKinley for President, and Low or Tracy for Mayor, but should be Democrats identified with the Democratic organization, having the respect and confidence of men of that political faith, and who have at some time since 1892 voted for Democratic nominees. The scheme of having the charter of the city revised by a commission which in its majority will represent the political sentiments and the political attachments of but a very small minority of the citizenship is simply to provie a government, by commission in another form.

PRAISE FOR THE POLICE.

The report goes into a defense of the various city departments against the allegations made by the majority, and disputes the necessity for every charter amendment suggested by Mr. Mazet and his colleagues. Under the caption "The Police Department" the report says that the majority has repeated "all the stale, threadbare, and exploded falsehoods" concerning the police force, the administration of the department, the extent of crime, and influences operating with police officials. Continuing on this line the report says:

In addition it may be observed that it is a very noticeable fact that while dishonest and prejudiced men, for their own selfish and unworthy interests, decry the City of New York as a sink of iniquity, dominated by vice of every kind, with crime rampant at every corner, the Police Department demoralized, all our officials corrupt, and the Government in its every department foul and loathsome, nevertheless the wealthy, intelligent, and enterprising citizens from every quarter of the country flock to the city, here establish their permanent homes, and rest in absolute security both as to their persons and possessions.

It is not claimed that in a community of nearly four millions of people the man who determinedly searches for it may not find vice; it is not compatible with the appetites and inclinations of frail human nature that in such a community there should not be crime; but what we claim, and before any fair-minded tribunal can establish by proof that if challenged cannot be controverted, is that in the five boroughs of the greater city organized crime has not been able to find a secure lodgment, and its only temporary refuge has been in the dives and vicious resorts established under the protection and sustained through the encouragement of the infamous Raines liquor law.

Of the Tax Department the report says that the evidence furnished abundant proof that all citizens were treated with equal fairness, and that no distinction was made between the most influential and the most humble. "The insignificant number of appeals taken to the Commissioner's rulings," the report says, "is a complete answer to the unwarranted aspersions leveled in a spirit of partisan hate and intolerance against this department."

COMMITTEE'S COUNSEL DENOUNCED.

Under the caption "Contempts," the report says:

"A full excuse for all the contempts shown the committee might be found in the outrageous and inexcusable conduct of its counsel. To say that the methods pursued in the treatment of witnesses, the character of the questions propounded, the antics indulged in for spectacular effect, the studied unfairness with which every department official and citizen of the Democratic political faith was treated, the sickening sycophancy and subserviency with which witnesses from the Republican Party were catered to, the determination and vigilance exercised to exclude from the record every word and every statement which proved the wisdom, frugality, and efficiency of the City Government; the anxiety to cloak the defects and smother all mention of the iniquities of the corrupt and incompetent and narrow administration with which the counsel himself had been identified as an officeholder, could deserve for the committee nothing better than the contempt in which it was held by every citizen of manly instincts and decent promptings.

If a legal reason to excuse the refusal of Mr. Platt and several other witnesses to answer questions propounded to them is required, it will be furnished in the law under which the committee was in itself an illegal act. There is no plainer provision in the statutes than is to be found in the legislative law requiring that any such committee as this claimed to be can be appointed only under a concurrent resolution of both Senate and Assembly. How silly then it is to complain that the present District Attorney did not institute criminal proceedings to sustain the authority of a committee illegally constituted.

THE MINORITY'S CONCLUSION.

In concluding the minority says:

We have but a single recommendation to make, and that is that the people of the City of New York be permitted to govern themselves. At the same time we embrace the opportunity of directing attention to the fact that the intelligence of our citizenship is quick to detect the bogus investigation conducted on partisan lines for partisan purposes, in contrast with an honest inquiry intended to aid the Legislature in the intelligent discharge of its functions in framing legislation demanded by the people.

From the beginning this committee stood discredited; that it had been organized for a partisan purpose was universally proclaimed, and with equal unanimity admitted. The barrenness of results to which it is obliged to make humble confession was predicted of it at its very birth. When 225 firemen and policemen were subpoenaed for the purpose of showing a favoritism which protected them from punishment for their offenses against the rules of their respective departments, and but five from each department were called when it was discovered that four out of each set of five had been appointed under the reform administration, and that an equal proportion of the entire number constituted an undesirable product of the operation of so-called civil service laws, the hasty and disorderly dismissal of the rest from attendance upon the committee was accepted as an indication of the true character of the work for which the committee had been formed. The people are not slow to recognize such transparent injustice, and the meanness associated with any and every attempt to gain partisan advantage by such methods.

There will always be serious political differences dividing our citizenship, but let us hope there will never again be so contemptible an exhibition of the depths to which partisan bigotry can descend.

COMMITTEE'S REMEDIAL BILLS.

Mazet's Proposed Reforms, Based Upon the Conditions Disclosed by the Testimony of Witnesses.

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—The Mazet committee handed in the following bills to carry out the recommendations in its report:

1. An act to authorize the appointment of a commission to inquire into the local government of the City of New York and the charter thereof, and suggest legislation thereon.

This bill provides that within thirty days after its passage the Governor shall appoint eleven persons as a commission to revise the charter, and said commission shall report to the Legislature by Jan. 15, 1901. Said commission has power to employ assistants, subpoena witnesses, books, and papers, is given the power of a legislative committee, and the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure as to contempts are made to apply to it.

Following the precedent of the original Charter Commission bill the City of New York is required to pay the expenses thereof, not to exceed $25,000.

2. An act to amend Section 410 of the Greater New York charter in relation to the Board of Public Improvements and the powers of Borough Presidents as members thereof.

This bill confers upon the Borough Presidents power to vote on all matters in the Board of Public Improvements.

3. An act to amend Section 471 of the Greater New York charter in relation to the restriction on the power of the Commissioner of Water Supply to contract for the supplying or selling of water for public or private use or consumption.

The bill requires the Commissioner of Water Supply, before making any water contract, to lay the full contract before and obtain the approval of the Board of Public Improvements, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, and three-fourths of all the members elected to the Municipal Assembly.

4. An act to repeal Chapter 942 of the Laws of 1896, entitled "An act in relation to the supply of pure and wholesome water in certain counties of the State."

This bill repeals the law under which the Board of Supervisors of Suffolk County can prevent the city from getting water in that county.

5. An act to amend Section 1,528 of the Greater New York charter in relation to the printing of lists of officials in The City Record.

This bill provides for the printing in January and July of a full list of all city employes, with their positions, residences, time of service, and salaries, and increase or decrease thereof, and provides that until such information is given to the Supervisor of The City Record the head of the department offending shall not be paid his salary.

6. An act to amend the Greater New York charter by repealing Section 1,527 thereof, relating to the publishing in The City Record of the registry of voters.

As the election law now requires the Board of Police to publish in pamphlet form the registry, the retention of this section in the charter means an unnecessary duplication of work and a waste of public moneys.

7. An act to amend Section 821 of the Greater New York charter, relating to the regulation of the construction of piers and docks.

This bill requires the Dock Board to purchase its tools, supplies, and material after public advertisement at public letting to the lowest bidder, as other departments are required to by Sections 419 and 420 of the charter.

8. An act to amend Section 854 of the Code of Civil Procedure, in relation to compelling the attendance and testimony of a witness.

This bill extends to a legislative committee sitting during the session or after the adjournment of the Legislature the power to invoke the prompt aid of the courts of record in aid of its process and authority.

MOSS ON THE REPORT.

Thinks It Agrees with His Own in Important Respects—He Wanted to Call Platt.

A copy of the majority report of the Mazet committee was shown to Mr. Moss last night. After glancing through the report he said he did not care to discuss it in detail, and could not, in fact, do so on short notice. He said, further, that he did not care to place himself in the position of criticising the report, as it was far from his intention to place any obstacle in the way of the accomplishment of some good. Furthermore, he declared it would be too bad if the work of nine months should go for naught.

"This is the first time," said Mr. Moss, "that I have seen the majority report. In a general way it does not go so far as our report did. On many subjects we went deeper and made more specific recommendations. However, in many respects the recommendations in this report are in line with those made by counsel. There are, I see, some curious omissions. For instance, I do not see that this latest report has much to say about the 'dictator.' They have let him off rather easy—considering.

"As to the Police Department I care to say nothing.

"The report agrees with my suggestion that the Mayor's term be shortened to two years, and that he be eligible for re-election. I notice, also, that the report agrees with me regarding the Borough Presidents, Municipal Assembly, Water Supply Department, and Dock Department, but, as I have said, there is a tendency in many of their recommendations to leave the suggestions for relief open."

When asked if he would state the reasons for the adjournment of the committee, Mr. Moss replied that it was not an opportune time for the answer of that question. He admitted that he had wanted to call Senator Platt, but would not say anything regarding the contents of his letter to Mr. Mazet.

Death of a Princeton Sophomore.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 15.—J. Ralph Morton, a member of the sophomore class, died of typhoid fever at his home, in Honey Brook, Penn., last night. Blair Hall Club, of which he was a member, at a meeting to-night passed a resolution of sympathy, which will be sent to the bereaved family. A number of Morton's classmates will attend the funeral, which is to be held on Wednesday.

Steel for New Bridge Towers.

The Atha & Illingworth Company, which is manufacturing the steel to be used for the base of the towers of the new East River Bridge, has forwarded its first shipment, which was received in Brooklyn yesterday. The contract for the steel was given out more than eighteen months ago to the New Jersey Steel and Iron Company, which sublet it. The steel is in sixteen pieces, which will be forged into eight pedestals, each pedestal to weigh twenty-three tons.

PIG IRON FROM THE SOUTH.

Alabama and Tennessee Make a Record in Production in 1899—More Furnaces to Start.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 15.—Official figures on pig iron production in Alabama and Tennessee during 1899 were issued today, and they show that Southern furnaces broke all previous records last year. The two States made and shipped during the year 1,571,570 tons of pig iron, of which Alabama forwarded 1,257,256 tons.

This was an increase of 20 per cent. over the highest previous year. The Birmingham District alone forwarded 945,969 tons. Only two additional furnaces were added to the productive capacity last year, but all the furnaces were run to their utmost capacity.

The outlook for 1900 is that at least half a dozen Alabama furnaces will be blown in and this is expected to increase the State's output to a million and a half tons, while the combined output of Alabama and Tennessee is expected to approach 2,000,000 tons.

The year 1899 closed with less than 20,000 tons of iron in the yards.

Iron pipe shipments last year from Alabama and Tennessee amounted to 146,637 tons, an increase of 19,237 tons. Most of this pipe was forwarded from Bessemer to Mexico City, to be used in building water works. Export pig iron shipments, practically all of which went from the Birmingham district, were 167,003 tons, a decrease of 34,675 tons. This loss was due to the extraordinarily large home demand and the high domestic prices. During the year iron prices doubled and wages were increased 40 per cent.

JOHN MAGEE IS DEAD.

Years Ago He Received $50,000 Damages from Guatemala.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 15.—There died in this city to-day John Magee, who is credited with having caused the guns of two British men-of-war to turn on the City of Guatemala twenty-five years ago, compelling the Guatamalan Government to pay $50,000 to Mr. Magee, who at that time was acting as the British Consul in that country.

Magee incurred the hatred of Rufino Barrios, who, it is reported, hired some thugs to thrash the Consul. Magee was waylaid and beaten. The British Government, through the Consul, demanded $50,000 and kept the guns of the British warships trained on the city until it was paid. Magee invested the $50,000 in paying property and died a millionaire.

Mr. Magee arrived in this city from Paris, en route to Guatemala, on Jan. 6, and was taken ill with liver complaint. His family is in Paris.

FORGED HIS OWN NAME.

Chicago Bird Said to Have Received $1,928.42 Due to New York Bird.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—The novel question whether a man has a right to forge his own name came up before Judge Hutchinson today in the case of James H. Bird. The allegation against Bird was that he signed the name of James H. Bird of New York as an indorsement on a check, and thereby obtained $1,928.42 from the Continental National Bank. J. H. Harris & Co. of the Board of Trade suffered the financial loss, and that firm is prosecuting Bird.

Last Spring the New York Bird visited Chicago and invested in a commodity handled by Harris & Company. Mr. Bird then returned to the East. A statement of the deal was made up, and the clerk whose duty it was to mail it to Mr. Bird found that the only James H. Bird in this city lived at 692 VanBuren Street. The statement was sent to that address.

A few days later the Chicago Bird appeared at the office. He was asked if he desired to continue his investment on margins or wanted it closed. Bird, who appeared somewhat dazed by the statements made to him, said he guessed he would close the deal. He received a check for $1,928.42, indorsed it "James H. Bird," went to the bank, and got the money. A few days later James H. Bird of New York appeared and ordered his deal closed. An investigation followed, and the Chicago Bird was arrested.

SALT WATER FISHERMEN MEET.

A. N. Hoxie Accuses the Massachusetts Legislature.

A meeting of the Protective League of Salt Water Fishermen was held last night at 106 West Thirty-first Street, to hear the report of the Committee on Legislation on the prospect of securing the passage of a bill for the protection of salt-water fish in the waters about New York Harbor. The bill, which will be accompanied by a petition 350 feet long, bearing the names of more than 10,000 signers, will be presented to the Legislature some time during the week.

A. N. Hoxie of Roxbury, Mass., President of the Anti-Seiners' Association of Massachusetts, was present, and told of his efforts during the last seven years to secure action on the part of the Legislature of that State for the protection of salt water fish. He said that they had the combined interests of the large fisheries of every State as well as the interests of foreign capital invested in those enterprises to war against, and he made the charge that the Massachusetts Legislature had been influenced by the money of the fishery trusts to defeat the measures introduced each year for the protection of salt water fish.

Col. Paine Dines His Employes.

Col. Augustus G. Paine, President of the New York and Pennsylvania Company, gave a private dinner at the Union League Club last evening to the employes of his company.

ALEXANDER MAJORS DEAD.

Was One of the Founders of the Famous "Pony Express" and Buffalo Bill's First Employer.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—Alexander Majors of the old Western freighting firm of Majors, Russell & Waddell died here last Friday night at the residence of J. Craig, 4,003 Drexel Boulevard. He was eighty-six years old. In his time he had been foremost among men possessed of wealth and power. Ruined by a former business partner, he died without a dollar. For, with the passing of the wild West, men like Majors were no longer needed, and when the accretions of years were swept away he was thrown late in life upon very limited resources.

Whether or not Majors originated the famous "pony express," his freighting firm at Fort Leavenworth was the first to put it in operation. This was before the days of the telegraph and the transcontinental railroad, and the "pony express" was the nearest to these in speed. A line of "Rough Riders" was strung between Fort Leavenworth and the Pacific Coast. Each had to ride from ten to twenty miles at breakneck speed through a country infested with outlaws and hostile Indians.

Among the earliest of these riders was William F. Cody. He had not earned the sobriquet of "Buffalo Bill" then, but was already famous throughout the Western country as a "boy Indian fighter." It was to Alexander Majors that the mother of young Cody applied when Will, eleven years old, succeeded his father as head and support of the family.

"What can a boy like you do?" asked Majors, smiling.

"I can ride and shoot," said Will.

So Majors hired the lad as "boy extra" on one of the many bull trains that his big freight concern sent out across the Indian country to the army posts.

Majors, Russell & Waddell put through the first overland mail service.

Alexander Majors was born near Franklin, Ky. His early life was spent on a Missouri ranch, and he gave up ranching to establish a great freighting business on the old Santa Fé and Salt Lake trails. At one time he had 5,000 men in his employ, and owned ten times that number of oxen and mules. "Kit" Carson, "Buffalo Bill," "California Joe," and other noted frontiersmen scouted for him.

Majors came to Chicago about Jan. 1 from Denver. He was trying to get an invention on the market. J. Craig, at whose house he died, was an old mining friend. He is survived by several children living in Denver and Kansas City.

BALTIMORE & OHIO'S MEETING.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 15.—The repeatedly postponed annual meeting of the stockholders of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company will be held in this city Wednesday. It has been postponed monthly since last November because of the big deals pending and the perfecting of the reorganization scheme. Whether any formal announcement of the company's new connections with the Pennsylvania or the New York Central will then be made can only be conjectured. William Salomon, Chairman of the voting Trustees, said recently that important developments might be expected at the annual meeting. It is believed that the Pennsylvania will be given representation on the board.

It is the programme to re-elect the present Directors and President John K. Cowen, First Vice President Oscar G. Murray, and Second Vice President Frederick Underwood.

The annual report will cover the fiscal year of the company, ended June 30, 1899. This was a lean period in the earnings, as it embraced a time when the rate situation was in a demoralized state and the Baltimore and Ohio was an aggressive seeker after business. It was on this account that the Baltimore and Ohio was looked upon as a menace to the stability of rates. The report does not show up as well as the results for the six months since June 30. Greater stability in rates and the determination of the trunk lines to stick to the tariffs enable the road to make a splendid showing for the half year.

There is a growing impression in railroad and financial circles that after Wednesday's meeting the Pennsylvania will virtually control the Baltimore and Ohio's policy. It is probable that the Trustees at the meeting will announce that the negotiations for the amalgamation of the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern with the Baltimore and Ohio has been consummated.

William M. Greene, former General Manager of the Baltimore and Ohio, and now General Manager of the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern, is opposed to any arrangement which has for its object the operation of the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern as a division of the Baltimore and Ohio. That is the plan, and it is generally believed that it will be carried out, despite Mr. Greene's objection. Thus far, however, Mr. Greene has successfully blocked all steps in that direction.

THE FITCHBURG ROAD LEASE.

Dr. W. Seward Webb Said to be Opposed to Boston and Maine Proposal

BOSTON, Jan. 15.—The Directors of the Fitchburg Railroad will meet to-morrow noon in what is anticipated to be a very important session, the outcome of which may affect railroad interests over a wide territory. It is said that the matter of a lease of the Fitchburg to the Boston and Maine will be presented in definite form, but that action upon it will be held in abeyance until the State Directors are ready to show their position.

Those who favor the lease of the Fitchburg to the Boston and Maine claim that the opposition is chiefly from the interests represented by Dr. W. Seward Webb.

It is asserted that he will go to the extent of making a better offer for the property than the Boston and Maine people have made.

The Sheen of Silverware Brightens the Store

THIS Annual Silver Sale is a success—a greater success than even we expected.

Good friends in the business who came "to see what Wanamaker was doing" were surprised—and said so.

With the seal of such approval we could well be content. But it is worth much more to us to have you prove your appreciation. And you did. Sales were very large.

We shall be still busier to-day, but with every available part of the first floor given over to the silver and you who come for it, there will be room enough. And courteous, careful attention.

Silver Table Ware and Toilet Pieces

at a fourth to a half below ruling prices

We have been asked why we can sell silverware cheaper than the manufacturers. The answer is simple enough: No manufacturer can become great if he alone retails his product. He must sell to other merchants—and other merchants wouldn't buy, if the manufacturer became a hard competitor in their own market. There might be pretenses of sales, but really large movements must be by independent concerns—general buyers, as we are.

There is quite as good choosing to-day as yesterday—hadn't room to show all the goods at once, but the lists are shorter, because while selling was going on we could not be sure what particular lots would hold out. Not odds and ends, but just such goods as you would be apt to choose when needed, here or in some other silver store. Cheapest now, that's all.

Important News of Upholstery

Reduced prices! We shall end certain lines by this move—and make room for new lots. Used to be that an upholstery store in a general store was an unimportant affair—you liked the careful ways and the artistic bent of this one, and have made it stand away up front. To keep it differe it and best, we must have the stocks very fresh. Hence, these losses—

LACE CURTAINS—One, two and three pair lots—
Eight qualities of real Arabian, that were $10.50 to $90, are now $8 to $75.
Brussels Point Lace Curtains, that were $16 to $26, are made a third to a half less.
The Renaissance Curtains, that were $7.50 to $43—many reduced a half, others a third.
Irish Point—were $3.50 to $20, at like reduced prices.
And so also with Tamboured Laces.

TABLE COVERS
An excellent assortment of fine patterns and colorings—velours and tapestries.
Of tapestry—2 yds. square, at $1.35 to $1.75 instead of $2 to $2.35. Another quality at $2.75 instead of $3.75. Some that are 2½x2 yards are $1.90 to $3.50, though moderate at $2.65 to $4.50. And those 2x3 yds. at $2.75 to $4.25 instead of $3.75 to $5.75.

SOFA PILLOWS
Some with silk tapestry coverings at $3.25, instead of $4.25.
Others with coverings of silk and cotton at $2, though cheap at $2.75.

English Morris Velvets, $1.85 instead of $2.25.
Imported Jute Tapestry, $1 instead of $1.25 to $1.50 a yard.

Remnants—Tapestries and Damasks at a third of their value, and less; Velours and Corduroys at half their value, and under.

Now as to renovating and reupholstering of furniture. This is a good time for such work, and ours is a good factory in which to have such work done. Make selections from the goods above, and we'll send a careful, experienced man to estimate on cost of work. Charges will be moderate enough.

Interested in Fine Plates?

Of course! Doubly interested, perhaps, where they're to be procured at about half their worth. That's the fact about this gathering. Many kinds, fine French china predominating, with a fair sprinkling of Austrian, Vienna, Dresden and Doulton—all richly decorated. In the French ware are:

Dinner Plates, 4 styles, 50c to $2 each. Most of them would be good value at double.
Breakfast plates, 8 styles, at $4 to $18 a dozen; about half regular prices.
Tea Plates, 8 styles, $3 to $15 a dozen. Not all of these are half price. Some are only a third.
Bread-and-Butter Plates, 7 styles, $1.20 to $12 a dozen. Should be $2.40 to $24.
The Dresden Plates, paneled scenes, green grounds and raised gold, are $4 each for dinner size, instead of $6; and $3.25 each for tea plates, instead of $5.
Vienna Plates, dinner size, at $3.25 each, were $5; tea plates, $2.75, were $4.
Doulton Plates, small dinner size, at $2.80 each, reduced from $4.20.

WRECK A MYSTERY STILL

Name of Lost Ship at St. Mary's Bay May be Learned To-day.

COLONIAL CRUISER NOW THERE

If Sea Permits, a Diver Will Investigate—Identity May Be Learned from a Boat.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F. Jan. 15.—The latest advices destroy many theories advanced concerning the wreck of the steamer at St. Mary's Bay and render it more mysterious than ever. Owing to the continuance of turbulent seas, it is impossible to launch boats or to venture down to the beach with any safety. Bodies and wreckage are still visible, the latter increasing as the ship breaks up.

The colonial cruiser Fiona is now at the wreck. She will be joined in the morning by the tug Ingraham, and a diver will then go down if the sea permits. Failing this, an attempt will be made to effect a landing in Sculpin Cove, where there are two bodies and almost an entire boat. It seems highly probable that the name of the vessel will be learned to-morrow.

The firm of Bowring Brothers, shipowners of St. John's, whose New York house is Bowring & Archibald, has an oil-tank steamer named Snowflake, which sailed from New York Sunday, Jan. 7, for Southampton and London, and it is feared that she may possibly be the unfortunate ship. The funnels of the Bowring vessels are black and white, with a red cross. According to calculations, the Snowflake would have been near Cape Race Wednesday night last, when the wreck occurred.

Bowring & Archibald stated yesterday that, in their opinion, there is no possibility that the wrecked steamer is the Snowflake, as that vessel has three masts, while all previous reports received stated that the wrecked steamer had only two.

HOW THE VESSEL WAS LOST.

Sea Captain Says Current Drove Her from Her Course.

HALIFAX, N. S., Jan. 15.—Some light was thrown upon the mystery of the wreck at St. Mary's Bay, Newfoundland, by Capt. Dawe of the steamer Glencoe, which arrived to-night from St. John's, N. F. Capt. Dawe is an old and experienced navigator and pilot who knows every rock, current, and sounding on the Newfoundland coast.

The Glencoe was the first steamer the wreck was supposed to be. Capt. Dawe says he passed the scene of the wreck, bound from Halifax for St. John's, at 1 o'clock on Thursday afternoon, or one hour after the ill-fated ship is supposed to have gone on the rocks. Gull Island, in St. Mary's Bay, where the unknown steamer struck, is twelve miles off the course the Glencoe was steaming, and Capt. Dawe says there is no doubt in his mind the lost vessel was steering the same course to make Cape Race, which was the Glencoe's objective point. There is a strong current there with a westerly set, which would about put the stranger out of her course the distance of twelve miles to St. Mary's Bay. This current is one of the worst on the coast, and several steamers have been carried out of their course in years gone by and cast away in St. Mary's Bay.

There was a blinding snowstorm all day Thursday. The flakes fell thicker than Capt. Dawe ever remembers seeing before. It was impossible to see ahead a ship's length, otherwise he would have seen the wreck.

The Captain says he thinks the ill-fated steamer was bound across the Atlantic from New York or Philadelphia, and, allowing nine knots speed, was about five days out. While in St. John's he saw an official communication from Magistrate Hogan at St. Mary's Bay stating that the steamer on the rocks was most certainly an oil tank.

The Magistrate reported that the ship ran ashore at full speed, and was a craft of about 1,500 tons, and not likely a passenger boat.

Capt. Dawe does not believe that a steamer bound to a Cape Breton port from an American port would go ashore here, as she would be over 200 miles out of her reckoning. The Captain was not surprised to learn that the identity of the wreck was still unknown, as the bay could only be approached from the sea, for the cliffs are precipitous and rise 1,200 feet. Any wreckage cast on the narrow beach at the foot of the cliffs could not be reached.

The Falk Safe at Havana.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 15.—Advices received in this city to-day indicate, beyond question, that the steamer wrecked in St. Mary's Bay, N. F., is not the Norwegian steamer Falk. A dispatch was received here stating that the Falk arrived in Havana on Jan. 8, seven days after clearing from this port, with a cargo of coal.

ART GALLERY FOR BUFFALO.

John J. Albright Will Make a $300,000 Present to the City.

BUFFALO, Jan. 15.—John J. Albright this evening announced to the Board of Directors of the Buffalo Fine Arts Academy his intention to present to the city an art gallery, to cost about $300,000, and to begin its construction immediately. The gallery will be of white marble, and will be built in or near the Delaware Park and within the boundaries of the Pan-American Exhibition grounds.

Mr. Albright recently gave to the city a costly collection of palms and a palmhouse to contain them. A few years ago he gave a public library to the City of Scranton, Penn., his birthplace.

Mrs. Jamieson is in a critical condition and may die.

Dr. Jamieson recovered, but was able to talk but little, and that in a rambling way, consequently it is not yet known whether it was a case of attempted suicide or an accident.

Plague Under Control in Honolulu.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 15.—The steamer China arrived to-day from the Orient, via Honolulu. She did not dock at Honolulu, but anchored off that port, the Hawaiian mail being carried out to the liner on tugs. Up to Jan 8, there had been nineteen new cases of the plague. The disease is now thought to be well under control of the health authorities.

Plague Cases in Brazil.

RIO JANEIRO, Jan. 15.—The bubonic plague is officially declared to be only sporadic in this city. Hitherto there have been twenty-two cases at Santos, fifteen at Sao Paulo, and three or four at Rio Janeiro. Energetic measures have been taken in other ports of Brazil to prevent outbreaks of the plague. At the cities mentioned the Federal Government has undertaken sanitary measures. All vessels are disinfected.

NEW YORKERS CLAIM ESTATE.

Edward, John L., and Philip Livingston Say They Are Heirs of "Lady Livingston" of Paris.

PARIS, Jan. 15.—Edward, John L., and Philip Livingston, living in New York City, have cabled Consul General Gowdy claiming to be brothers and sole heirs, if no will is found, of "Lady Maria Livingston," the eccentric woman whose death was announced from here Jan. 13. They requested that the funeral rites be those of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and that the interment take place in a Protestant cemetery.

Miss Maria Livingston was the sister of Edward Livingston and John Livingston of Tivoli-on-Hudson. She lived for many years in Paris, and was most eccentric. She received allowances from her brothers in New York, who managed the Livingston estate, which is very large. Edward Livingston, her elder brother, is a widower and a member of the Union Club. He lives at 17 East Seventy-fourth Street. Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry is a near relative, as is also Mrs. Ogden Mills.

Philip Livingston, who married Miss Juliet Morris of Morrisania, is a nephew.

Edward Livingston said yesterday that Miss Livingston was his sister, but that he did not wish anything said about her life in Paris.

LADY ALICE MONTAGU BURIED.

Memorial Services Were Also Held in the Chapel Royal.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—A memorial service in honor of Lady Alice Montagu, sister of the Duke of Manchester, who died Jan. 10 at Davos-Platz, Switzerland, was held at the Chapel Royal, St. James's Palace, this afternoon. The Sub-Dean, the Rev. Edgar Sheppard, pronounced the panegyric. The service was fully choral. Among those present were the Hon. Sidney Greville, Equerry to the Prince of Wales, representing his Royal Highness; the Countess of Essex, the Countess of Kintore, the Countess Carrington, Lady Dudley, Lord Rowton, Viscount Curzon, and Arnold Morley.

The interment occurred simultaneously at Kimbolton. Lady Alice was buried beside the remains of her twin sister. The chief mourners were the Duchess of Manchester, the Duchess of Hamilton, Lady Alice Stanley, and other relatives.

SCANDINAVIAN POLITICS.

Foreign Minister Says Mutual Concessions Would Settle Differences.

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 15.—In an interview recently the new Foreign Minister, Lagerham, discussed the political differences between Sweden and Norway. He said he thought the alleged unfriendliness was mostly on the surface, and that if ever the time arrived to test the solidity of the union the two peoples would be found back to back. The political differences, he added, could be smoothed over by mutual concessions.

The Minister also expressed his irrevocable determination to oppose the Norwegian demand for a separate Foreign Minister as unconstitutional, saying it would be equivalent to a dissolution of the union, on which the Minister considered the peace and happiness of both countries were dependent. Sweden, he continued, would never agree to such a change, and it was useless for the Norwegian Storthing to try to pass a law over the King's veto, in the same way the new flag law was passed.

In conclusion, the Minister expressed the hope that the Swedes and Norwegians in the United States would not allow their relations to be disturbed by the frequent political eruptions at home.

The Kaiserin's Mother Is Ill.

DRESDEN, Jan. 15.—The Empress arrived here to-day to attend her mother, the Dowager Duchess of Schleswig-Holstein, who is suffering from pleurisy. The bulletin this morning says there has been no improvement in the Duchess's condition; that she passed a restless night, but that her strength was satisfactorily maintained.

GIRL STOPS AN INTRUDER.

Lively Chase in Big Apartment House and Avenue After an Alleged Burglar.

Miss Mary E. Hughes, small and only eighteen years of age, demonstrated her pluck yesterday afternoon by impeding the escape of an alleged burglar for awhile, and so alarming persons that his capture was effected. Miss Hughes is employed in the apartment of John F. Smith, who, with his family, lives on the top floor of the apartment house at 11 St. Nicholas Avenue. Mr. Smith is connected with the firm of Rogers, Peet & Co.

The members of the family were out yesterday afternoon and Miss Hughes herself went out for a little shopping. When she returned to the house and had ascended to the top floor she saw the door of one of the rooms of the apartment open and soon afterward saw a large man coming out of the doorway.

"Who are you and what are you doing in there?" asked Miss Hughes of the man.

"Oh, don't ask any questions, but just let me by," said the man.

"You won't get by me unless you tell me what you are doing here," said Miss Hughes, and she planted herself on the second step from the top and barred the man's passage. The man advanced and Miss Hughes seized him and began calling for help. He struck Miss Hughes, but she would not release her hold, and continued screaming at the top of her voice all the time. The man finally broke away from Miss Hughes, and, running a little way down the hall, pursued by Miss Hughes, vaulted over the banister railing and landed down on the stairs.

William Brady, the janitor of the house, who by the way is a large man himself, braced himself in the hall doorway and prepared for all comers. The intruder rushed down the stairs. Seeing Brady in the doorway and not wishing to give battle to him he ran down the cellar stairs. Brady gave chase. The man managed to reach the side street and rushed in the direction of Lenox Avenue. Policeman Cassidy and Sweeny of the Park Police happened to be near at the time, and they joined in the chase. The man ran to One Hundred and Twelfth Street, where he was captured. He described himself as John Murphy, twenty-four years of age, of Eighth and Filbert Streets, Philadelphia, Penn. He was taken to the Harlem Police Court and arraigned before Magistrate Mayo.

In court Janitor Brady testified that he saw Murphy throw away a chisel at One Hundred and Eleventh Street and Lenox Avenue. He produced the chisel in evidence. Murphy was remanded to jail until this morning.

SENATOR WOLCOTT GOADS PETTIGREW

HOT PERSONALITIES INDULGED

Exchange Grows Out of the South Dakotan's Attacks on the Administration's Philippine Policy.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Spirited debate on the Philippine question occupied the attention of the Senate for nearly three hours to-day. Mr. Berry (Dem., Ark.,) first addressed the Senate in support of the resolutions recently introduced by Mr. Bacon (Dem., Ga.,) regarding the disposition of the Philippines. He was followed by Mr. Pettigrew (Sil. Rep., S. D.,) in support of his resolution of inquiry. Mr. Pettigrew was very bitter in his attacks upon the Administration. Mr. Wolcott (Rep., Col.,) replied to Mr. Pettigrew, scathingly arraigning the South Dakota Senator for the attitude he had assumed on the Philippine question.

Mr. Wolcott adverted, also, to the speech recently delivered by Mr. Beveridge, (Rep., Ind.,) sharply criticising it for the spirit of greed which, he said, seemed to animate the Senator in making such a deliverance.

Senator Wolcott's excoriation of Pettigrew was made with fire and emphasis and in a thunderous voice, and the big Colorado Senator faced his victim as he delivered his attack at a distance of about three feet. He criticised Pettigrew's personal appearance, his unpopularity with his fellow-Senators, and his acidity of temperament. The South Dakotan listened to the attack huddled in his seat, his usually pale face flushed to a dull red, and his hand to his cheek. Occasionally when the galleries laughed, he toyed nervously with his eyeglasses.

When Wolcott finished, Pettigrew arose, pale-faced again, and responded with an attack which was blunter than Wolcott's, and even more bitter.

The debate was opened by Mr. Berry, who had read the resolution offered by Mr. Bacon and also that of Mr. Beveridge. He believed that the two resolutions fairly represented the views of the two great parties in this country. He was certain that the resolution of Mr. Beveridge reflected the sentiment and feelings of the Administration, because it had been favorably commented upon by the Administration speakers and newspapers throughout the country. The resolution had been indorsed, he said, by the Administration leaders, yet it conferred an authority and a power upon this country as absolute as was possessed by the Czar of Russia.

What is imperialism, Mr. Berry asked, if it be not the assertion of such a power as is asserted by the resolution of Mr. Beveridge?

He argued that the correct view of the situation in the Philippines was taken in the Bacon resolution. If that resolution were adopted to-day he believed that not another gun would be fired in the Philippine revolution, and at the same time the United States would gain all the commercial and material advantages depicted by Mr. Beveridge. He placed the responsibility for the insurrection upon the President, declaring that if his proclamation had not been issued not a gun would have been fired and not a drop of our soldiers' blood would have been shed. He said that, in his opinion, the President had issued that proclamation unwillingly; that he had been forced into the position he now occupied by scheming politicians. It was not too late to repair the wrong done, and it could be repaired by the adoption of the Bacon resolutions.

MR. PETTIGREW RESUMES.

Mr. Pettigrew resumed his speech upon the general Philippine question, his text being his resolution of inquiry. He discussed at length the Constitutional questions involved in the Administration's Philippine policy. He then entered upon a sharp attack on the treaty made by the Administration with the Sultan of Sulu. He charged that polygamy and slavery were not only indorsed, but maintained by the United States through the treaty with the Sultan. He declared that the Republican Party was going out of power as the champion of slavery and a repudiator of the Declaration of Independence.

Turning to the commercial side of the question, he contended that trade did not follow the flag. How were we to get rich supporting a big standing army in the Philippines in order that people who earn 5 cents a day might trade with us? Besides, we did not even supply our own troops in the Philippines. The coal which propelled our transports came from Cardiff and little except canned goods were shipped for the use of our troops.

REPLY OF MR. WOLCOTT.

When Mr. Pettigrew concluded there was a general stir in the Senate as Mr. Wolcott (Rep., Col.,) arose to discuss the resolution.

He expressed the opinion in opening that any general discussion of our policy toward the Philippines seemed to him out of place at this time. Our first duty, he said, was to quell the insurrection. When that prevailed it was time enough to bring order out of the chaos that existed there. He would not have replied at all save for the "remarkable and intemperate" utterances of the Senator from South Dakota. No better demonstration of the value of the Senate as a public forum could be found than this speech. There were in this country 70,000,000 of people, good, bad, and indifferent. They were mostly good, but scattered through every community there were the discontented and unhappy; people who had not been successful, and who viewed with suspicion and hatred all whose lives had been crowned with success. In the warm sunshine they saw only the shadows. Behind every good action they looked for a lurking sinister purpose. There was but a step from individual to National hatred—hatred of the country which nourished and protected them. It was fitting that such people should be represented here.

"And I know of no man so fitted to speak for them as the Senator from South Dakota," said Mr. Wolcott, turning his eyes upon Mr. Pettigrew, who sat close to him, and who steadily returned the gaze of his assailant.

"During all the years I have known him," continued Mr. Wolcott pitilessly, "I never knew him to say a kind or friendly word about a single person or a single cause. It is not only valuable that such persons as I have mentioned should be represented here, that their views should be aired, but it is of great importance that these views may serve as a warning and a deterrent to the young men who are growing to manhood and upon whom eventually the responsibility of government will fall. They should see how important it is that they should cultivate a good digestion, a hopeful heart, and a cheerful mind."

Mr. Wolcott said he did not share the opinion that utterances here had any influence upon the insurgents. If Aguinaldo had his ear to the ground he must know how utterly trifling is the captious cavilling that goes on here. There was not an honest Democrat who did not admit that if his party were in power the first thing to be done would be to crush the insurrection.

"If our soldiers in Manila will take care of Aguinaldo and his sympathizers as they are doing," said he, "our people at home will take care of Aguinaldo's sympathizers in the Senate and the country."

GOADS MR. PETTIGREW.

Mr. Wolcott recalled Mr. Pettigrew's statement that if he (Pettigrew) were a Filipino he would fight until he was gray against the aggressions of the United States.

"I have no doubt he would fight," remarked Mr. Wolcott sarcastically, "if he was a Tagal. It is possible they might take him by adoption. I can picture him now, clad principally in the genial, pleasant smile for which he is noted, [laughter,] blazing away with his blunderbuss against every one in sight. A suggestion that the Senator and Aguinaldo inaugurate an exchange might, for the purpose of experiment, not be without its attraction. If the exchange should take place and if Aguinaldo, brave, loyal, and patriotic, stood here representing the State of South Dakota, whose sons had bled and died in defense of the flag, he would not be found traducing the President of the United States and slandering and maligning the soldiers at the front, charging them with being swindlers and defrauders."

The resolutions to which Mr. Pettigrew had been speaking, Mr. Wolcott declared, were of no importance because they were smothered and engulfed in the broader resolution that called for all information in the possession of the Executive. They were simply petty carpings which contained the suspicious intimation that there had been crooked and dishonorable conduct. No step had been taken, Mr. Wolcott asserted, that did not reflect honor upon the people of the United States. He read from the President's message the extract about the duty of the Government after the insurrection was over to spare "no effort to build up the waste places," "to open schools and churches," "to foster trade and industry," and concluded with the words that it was "their liberty, not our power, which we are seeking to enhance."

"That," said Mr. Wolcott, "is the last public utterance of the President whose treatment of the Filipinos is described by the Senator from South Dakota as 'brutal' and 'cruel.'

"There might be something worse in store for the savages of the islands," Mr. Wolcott said, "than asking them to take pot luck with American laws and American Government and the proud destiny of the American Republic."

CAUSE OF THE WAR.

Turning to the other view of the case, Mr. Wolcott said that, while the utterances of Mr. Pettigrew were deplorable, he was still unable to acquiesce in the utterances of the extremists on the other side. We had taken the Philippines, he said, not as a conquest, but as one of the highest duties we owed the human race. We had entered into the war with Spain because we could not listen to the cries of distress that came from Cuba. We had girded up our loins for the fray with the assertion that we were not entering upon a war of aggression. When we inaugurated the war no one dreamed of the Philippines, but when it closed so quickly and so victoriously we found 5,000,000 people suffering from oppression and cruelty, Spain defeated and bankrupt, and the Philippine Islands a floating derelict. We had taken them because to have allowed them to drift helplessly into the power of another would have raised international complications. We would have been compelled to take them had they even been as bleak and barren as the Desert of Sahara. Mr. Wolcott said we might be compelled to keep the islands indefinitely.

He then directed his attention to the speech delivered by Mr. Beveridge last week. He did not approve of the resolution of Mr. Beveridge. The Senator from Indiana had told of nuggets of gold, of a mountain of gold, of coffee, of hemp, of corn, of the rich and tempting Valley of Luzon, and he had said our commerce by the retention of the islands would be richly rewarded.

"Mr. President," said Senator Wolcott, "the argument of the Senator from Indiana is base and sordid. This war, if we consider first our duty to the people of the islands, is the noblest ever fought, but if our purpose in retaining them is that they are rich, the war will go down as miserable and degraded a one as ever disgraced the history of the middle ages."

There was a disposition, he continued, referring again to Mr. Beveridge's speech, to treat the questions involved with a sentimentality somewhat maudlin. There were too many references to Almighty God. History had taught him that God usually fights on the side of the heaviest battalions. It was possible, he said, that we were a chosen people, as Mr. Beveridge had said, whom God Almighty had made a trustee for the civilization of the world. But, if so, we would need to treble our fleet of war vessels, we would have to join England and Germany in the partition of China, we must needs seize Madagascar and Port Arthur.

"My own idea of the mission of America," said the Senator, "is that it is the last hope of republics; that our broad, large, fertile area will gradually fill up by the admission of the foreigners and oppressed of other lands, and that in days of peace we will work out the noblest and highest social problems. We will say to the rulers of the Old World: 'You may hold your thrones as long as the people will permit, but this continent shall forever be devoted to liberty; you shall not step your foot upon it.' That is our destiny. I believe it is idle to talk of our being God's chosen people."

Mr. Wolcott said he was startled by Mr. Beveridge's statement that charity did not begin at home, but was filtered in from the outside. With the municipal corruption that all admitted existed it was ridiculous to talk of appointing a lot of Indiana politicians in the Philippines and letting the reflected glory of our Republic shine across the seas to make their administration pure and holy. If that was so then the islands would be worth millions though they only consisted of lava beds, the craters of dead volcanoes. But, Mr. Wolcott said, we were bound to make many mistakes, and before we finished we might believe we had taken over from Spain a home for incorrigibles.

"But," concluded Mr. Wolcott, "in the closing year of the century, when the world is growing more beneficent, when the rich are growing richer and the poor richer, too, the time will come, if we do our duty, when the sun which now shines so brightly over our own country will shed its refulgent rays upon far-distant seas."

BRIEF REPLY RENDERED.

Mr. Pettigrew replied briefly to Mr. Wolcott. The latter had stated, he said, that he had never had a kind word for his associates in the Senate. Yet Mr. Pettigrew said his relations with his colleagues had been most pleasant. The Senate could not hide behind the large personality of the Senator from Colorado.

"I have not spent much time," said Mr. Pettigrew, "in lauding him, although I am ready to confess he has a large voice."

He said he did not think the Senator's attack upon himself was worthy of reply. He did marvel, however, at the division in the ranks of the imperialists.

The Senator from Indiana (Beveridge) had said the motive of expansion was "greed"; the Senator from Colorado (Wolcott) said it was "philanthropy." The latter was the motive which actuated Spain in her conquest of the Western World. Her pretext was civilization and religious zeal. Those were the motives of Pizarro, who butchered people right and left. Proceeding, Mr. Pettigrew pointed out the names of many illustrious men who had opposed the policy of their home Governments, of aggressions abroad, notably Fox and Pitt, who had denounced the course of King George against the American colonies.

"It was these champions of freedom," said he, "who dared to denounce the course of their Governments."

At the conclusion of Mr. Pettigrew's statement an order was made, at the request of Mr. Lodge, that the resolutions under consideration go over until to-morrow, without losing their place.

THE CUBAN CABLE BILL.

Representatives of Commercial Cable Company of Cuba Argue Before House Insular Committee.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The Insular Committee of the House gave a hearing to-day to representatives of the Commercial Cable Company of Cuba, on the bill granting them the right to land a cable in Cuba. The representation included Gen. M. C. Butler, Thomas Ochiltree, and W. W. Cook, general counsel of the company.

Gen. Butler summed up the advantages of cable communication with the island, until now hampered by the exclusive rights held by one company. He maintained that the Spanish franchise, by virtue of which the present rights were operated, was irregular, and therefore null and void. The alleged advantages of a competing line to the Government and the public were set forth at length. Gen. Butler argued that the spirit of the Foraker amendment was to prevent the setting up of monopolies, and not to continue them, and in this view Gen. Butler said he was supported by Senator Foraker, the mover of the amendment. He referred to Gen. Greely and Col. Dunwoody as among those most familiar with the cable needs of Cuba who favored an extension of the present system. The new line, it was stated, would leave the United States by way of Pensacola.

Mr. Cook presented the legal and international aspect of the subject. It appeared from this that Secretary Alger had revoked authority to lay the cable to Cuba. Mr. Cook said that Secretary Root had stated that the subject was not for the executive branch to deal with, but for Congress. Thereupon the company had written to Secretary Root stating that it was presumed this disposed of Secretary Alger's ruling, but no reply to the letter had been received.

The hearing was continued at an afternoon session. The committee fixed Jan. 26 to hear the Western Union Telegraph Company in reply and in opposition to some of the views advocated to-day by the representatives of the Commercial Cable Company.

URGENCY APPROPRIATIONS ASKED.

Bill Reported Carries Items Aggregating $56,127,841.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The Urgent Deficiency Appropriation bill, the first of the important supply bills for the Government, was reported to the House by Chairman Cannon to-day. It carries $56,127,841, of which $47,602,332 is reappropriations for the military and naval establishments and $8,525,509 direct appropriations. The more important direct appropriations are: Treasury Department, $2,069,624; War Department, $190,617; naval establishment, $2,750,000; Postal Service, $290,327; Paris Exposition, $169,500; printing and binding, $270,000; judgments, Indian depredation claims, $242,112; judgments, Court of Claims, $2,128,92

The war and naval items were given in detail when the deficiency estimates were submitted. The main changes are in adding $1,000,000 to the Commissary General's allowance and in providing $750,000 for transporting the Spanish prisoners in the Philippines to their homes.

Mr. Cannon (Rep., Ill.,) gave notice that he would call up the bill for consideration to-morrow.

To-day's session of the House was devoted chiefly to consideration of business pertaining to the District of Columbia.

Representative June W. Gayle of Kentucky, who succeeds the late Evan Settle, was sworn in.

McCOMAS BEATS WELLINGTON.

Nomination of S. D. Warfield as Baltimore's Postmaster Is Confirmed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The Senate in executive session to-day confirmed the nomination of S. Davies Warfield to be Postmaster of Baltimore. This ends a long fight in which Senator Wellington opposed and Senator McComas favored confirmation.

ALASKA MAY BE CUT IN TWO.

Suggestion Is Made to Create the Territory of Seward.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The Senate Committee on Territories to-day considered a bill creating three judicial districts for Alaska and for a revision of the laws of the United States applying to the Territory. A number of Alaska men were present with the committee.

They were asked if there was any sentiment in favor of dividing the Territory at Mt. St. Elias, making the southeastern portion the Territory of Seward. The reply was that the people believed such a division would be necessary at some future time.

ASSAILS THE CURRENCY BILL.

Senator Rawlins of Utah Criticises the Republican Policy.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Mr. Rawlins (Dem., Utah,) addressed the Senate to-day in opposition to the Financial bill, which, he intimated, was one of the objects of those who favored imperialism. He denounced the bill as sanctified by Wall Street and blessed by the British financial promoters. He declared the efforts of the Republican Party to bring about bimetallism had been perfidious and treacherous, and that there was no example in history of greater duplicity.

He devoted his chief attention to the House bill, for which the Senate measure is a substitute, pointing out what he regarded as serious defects. He said it was astonishing that on the eve of a financial crash, due to an arrested money supply, a proposition should be made in Congress that, in his opinion, would multiply the imminent dangers.

Senator Butler gave notice of a substitute he will offer for the Financial bill. It provides for the manufacture or coinage of money out of gold, silver, paper, and copper. The bill provides that no piece of money shall be of a greater denomination than $20, and it makes gold, silver, or paper money legal tender for any sum. It makes provision for the free coinage of both gold and silver.

WOULD CURB THE RAILROADS.

Inter-State Commerce Commission Calls Attention to the Growing Danger of Combinations.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The Inter-State Commerce Commission to-day made public its thirteenth annual report. The feature of the report is the strongest plea made that Congress uphold the hands of the commission by amendments making the Inter-State Commerce law more effective. The report says that in vital respects the present law has proved defective and inadequate, and that until further legislation is provided the best efforts at regulations must be feeble and disappointing. The requests of the commission for needful amendments have been supported by petitions and memorials from agricultural, manufacturing, and commercial interests throughout the country; yet, says the report, not a line of the statute has been changed, and none of the burdensome conditions which call for relief has been removed or modified.

The existing situation and the developments of the past year, it is added, render more imperative than ever before the necessity for speedy and suitable legislation. Nine-tenths of the people know that any railroad company can charge for its service whatever it pleases, and as much as it pleases, without any real power in this commission, or any other tribunal or court, to limit the amount of such charge for the future when complaint is made by an aggrieved shipper, and they are substantially of one mind in desiring that this and other defects in the statute be promptly remedied. Shippers generally also have been practically unanimous in favor of a single classification of freights, one that will be uniform for all roads and all sections of the country, and reasonably stable when established.

Continuing, it adds:

"It is a matter of common knowledge that vast schemes of railway control are now in process of consummation, and that the competition of rival lines is to be restrained by these combinations. While this movement has not yet found full expression in the actual consolidation of railroad corporations, enough has transpired to disclose a unification of financial interests which will dominate the management and harmonize the operations of lines heretofore independent and competitive. This is today the most noticeable and important feature of the railway situation. If the plans already matured or shadowed are brought to effective results and others of similar scope are carried to execution there will be a vast centralization of railroad properties, with all the power involved in such far-reaching combinations yet uncontrolled by any public authority which can be efficiently exerted. The restraints of competition upon excessive and unjust rates will in this way be avoided, and whatever evils may result will be remediless under existing laws.

"Coincident with these schemes of unified control, and while this exceptional movement of traffic continues, the carriers operating throughout an extensive and important territory have recently made substantial and in many cases very large increases in their scale of charges. These advances in rates have been mainly effected by concerted and agreed changes in the classification of freight articles. The fact that such extensive increases have been brought about must be of significant import and furnish a weighty argument in favor of measures which will be effective to secure compliance with the primary requirements of the act."

During the year 1899 there were 199 employes killed and 5,339 injured upon eighty-nine roads, against 209 killed and 5,484 injured in 1898, a result attributed to the more general equipments of the roads with safety appliances.

NEW BILLS IN CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Representative Needham (Rep., Cal.,) has introduced a bill for the inspection under the direction of the Secretary of Agriculture of trees, fruits, plants, bulbs, nursery stock, &c., imported into the United States.

Other bills introduced in the House were:

By Mr. Bingham (Rep., Penn.,) for the payment of import duties in gold.

By Mr. Marsh (Rep., Ill.,) for promoting the efficiency of the militia.

By Mr. Mercer (Rep., Neb.,) for a commission to secure from artists and architects designs for a memorial or statue of Gen. U. S. Grant, to be erected in Washington.

By Mr. Sperry (Rep., Conn.,) for a revenue tax on insurance companies in lieu of stamps of 8 cents per year for each $100 on life insurance policies, and one-half of 1 per cent. per year on the gross premium receipts of fire, marine, and other insurance companies.

Among the bills introduced in the Senate to-day were:

By Mr. Pettus (Dem., Ala.,) to create a commission of five to adjudicate the claims of citizens of the United States in connection with the war in Cuba.

Mr. Hawley (Rep., Conn.,) providing for a special tax on insurance companies instead of the stamp tax provided by the war revenue law.

Mr. Mason (Rep., Ill.,) to prevent the adulteration of foods and drugs. It creates a bureau of chemistry in the Agricultural Department and provides for food inspection by that department.

By Mr. Platt, (Rep., N. Y.,) joint resolution requiring the Secretary of War to contract for the improvement of Harlem Kills, N. Y., by the construction of a canal 300 feet wide and 15 feet deep to connect with lower Harlem River, the cost not to exceed $1,594,400.

Tea Importer Loses Appeal.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—In the case of W. J. Cruikshank versus George R. Bidwell, Collector of Customs at New York, the decree of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York was affirmed to-day by the Supreme Court. Cruikshank is an importer of teas, and he attacked the constitutionality of the provision of the tea inspection law authorizing the destruction of condemned tea. The decision of the Circuit Court was adverse to his contention, and the Supreme Court adopted this view:

Fly Hurts Europe's Olive Crop.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Consul Skinner, at Marseilles, reports to the State Department that the olive crop in Italy, France, and Spain is practically a failure, and will hardly reach 30 per cent. of the average. The failure has been caused by a fly, and the Consul says that the people make no effort to counteract the pest, but accept its operations as a dispensation of Providence.

Lodge Immigration Bill Reported.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Senator Penrose to-day reported from the Committee on Immigration the bill introduced by Senator Lodge restricting immigration. The bill is the same as that which passed the Senate at the last Congress, with Section 3, which allowed free immigration from Cuba, stricken out, as the conditions in Cuba make it no longer necessary to have such a provision.

National Suffrage Asked for Women.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Senator Pettigrew presented to the Senate a petition to-day from the Woman's Suffrage Association of South Dakota asking for a sixteenth amendment to the Constitution affording women the right to vote and providing that the women of Puerto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippines also be allowed to vote.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Senator McComas of Maryland to-day introduced a joint resolution tendering the thanks of Congress to Rear Admirals Sampson and Schley and the officers and men of the fleet for services during the Spanish war and destruction of the Spanish fleet off Santiago.

VICTORY FOR UNION OFFICIAL.

Judge Orders Release of J. P. Reese, Convicted of Contempt of Court in Addressing Kansas Strikers.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 15.—Judge Thayer in the United States Court of Appeals to-day granted an application for a writ of habeas corpus, and ordered the release of John P. Reese, a member of the Executive Board of the United Mine Workers of America, who was found guilty of contempt of court in violating an injunction of the United States District Court of Kansas.

Last October, when a strike was in progress in the mines of the Western Coal Company, in Kansas, a suit was brought enjoining any one from interfering with the men at work therein. Reese went to the scene of the strike from his home in Iowa, and was arrested for addressing a body of miners. He was convicted of contempt of court, and committed to jail. He then made application for the writ of habeas corpus, which was granted to-day.

Judge Thayer ruled that, while a court many punish for any act that might be construed as an obstruction to the execution of laws, it has no right to impose a penalty where independent or individual rights are involved.

It was contended by counsel for the defendant that, as the injunction did not include any save those who were citizens of Kansas, he could not be held amenable to it. It was chiefly on this point of non-jurisdiction that the case was submitted.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 15.—National Board Member John P. Reese was at the Occidental Hotel to-day when notified that Judge Thayer had passed upon his case.

"I am glad of it," declared Reese. "I expected this news, however. Judge Thayer impressed me as being a fair-minded man. My plea was that the temporary injunction made by Judge Williams of Fort Scott did not include me. It applied to citizens of Kansas only, and my home is in Iowa. Then, I held that I had not been served with the papers granting the temporary injunction. Only citizens of Kansas were cited. The usual methods of Williams and other Judges is to name certain men and then include 'all other persons' of a certain State or States. I hope Judge Thayer's ruling will be a precedent on this point. I suppose the decision will have the effect of making Judge Williams more specific in future citations. Our whole fight and claim was that he had no jurisdiction and we won."

NORWALK MAN DISAPPEARS.

Friends of George W. Palmer Fear He Has Committed Suicide.

Special to The New York Times.

NORWALK, Conn., Jan. 15.—George W. Palmer, a patternmaker, employed at the Norwalk Iron Works, who disappeared on Wednesday afternoon, has not been found. His friends have almost given up hope of finding him alive, and have turned to the harbor in the expectation of there finding his body. Mr. Palmer was a prominent member of Old Well Hook and Ladder Company, and a leader in political circles.

To-day the firemen of the town organized a dredging party and dragged the river near the Iron Works dock, while other parties scoured the woods. The searchers returned at nightfall, and will continue the task to-morrow. They say that Palmer was very melancholy at times, and they fear he has made away with himself.

Guests Poisoned at Wedding Dinner.

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—Nearly a hundred guests who assembled at 569 Canal Street to witness the marriage of Morris Pollack and Annie Schwan were poisoned at the wedding dinner. In less than half an hour nearly every one in the hall was in a helpless condition. The general belief is that the chicken, which had been prepared in a copper kettle, contained the poison. So far no deaths have been reported, but many are seriously ill, including the bride and bridegroom.

Other large sums are expected by the committee to whom has been committed the continuation of the educational institutions founded by the evangelist. The name of the donor of $50,000 has not been made public.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN.

There seems to be a veritable craze for some sort of "physical culture" this Winter. Possibly Gov. Roosevelt's introduction of a professional trainer into the Executive Mansion has had something to do with it, but probably the very general advice of physicians nowadays, "You need exercise, not medicine," is more responsible. Whatever the cause, the "professors" who agree to make weak men strong and build up impaired constitutions have all they care to do. At the two big athletic clubs here there are classes in boxing and wrestling that are larger than any ever before organized, and the members who do not go in for either of those rather violent exercises are on the lists of those who take a milder sort in the gymnasium. Private gymnasia have all the pupils they can well care for both day and evening, and the number of men and women who are daily taking walking exercise under the direction of a physician runs well into the thousands. Golf has had much to do with the latter sort of exercise, say some of the walkers, who go to the parks in the early morning for a "constitutional" as a means of getting the exercise out of doors that they were wont to have when playing at the Scotch game. One of the "professors" who has come to the city within the past few days to take advantage of this craze for physical culture has established himself at one of the ultra-fashionable hotels up town and sends his circulars from there to men and women whose names appear in the Social Register and the Club List. He counts upon securing enough patrons for his scheme to convert them into society Sandows to furnish him with funds to take him to Europe this Summer.

"Has the war in the Transvaal benefited your business materially?" the representative of one of the large Broadway houses dealing in ammunition was asked yesterday, after his acknowledgment that the works he represented were being run day and night in what is generally the dull season of the year. He started as if stung, for that sort of question from a stranger is always unwelcome to people in his line of business. "You see, there is a revival of trap shooting all over the country, and pigeon shooting has never had the vogue it has at the present time. It is positively marvelous this demand for sporting materials in our line," was the way in which he dodged the issue. Really, he knew very little about the sort of arms and ammunition that were used by the Boers, and he really didn't think that America made the sort of stuff that the Boers were using against the British. Guns and ammunition made by his concern were in great demand just now, it was true, but pigeon shooting was the only use to which he believed they could be put. Nevertheless, the fact remains that a half dozen of the largest houses in the ammunition line in this country are being pushed as they have not been in some time. These houses do not ask where the goods they make are going when they deliver an order, and the mere fact that they are packed in cases marked "groceries" or "canned goods," or that they are ordered shipped in barrels as "flour" or in hogsheads as "molasses," does not suggest to them that they are intended for the use of the Boers. Just the same, that is the ultimate destination of these mysterious packages that are quietly shipped, mainly from New Haven, Bridgeport, and New London, on tramp steamers or fast sailing vessels. "We never trace our goods to their destination, and whether they fetch up in the Klondike or in Delagoa Bay is a matter of perfect indifference to us, so long as we get our money for them. We don't even know at our works officially that there is a war in progress in any part of the globe," was the final disposition of the matter.

Savings bank people say they have never had so steady a patronage from depositors as during the first two weeks of January. That rush is practically ended now, as the rush was made so that depositors could get the benefit of interest from the first day of January, which they could do if the deposits were made on or before Jan. 10. At most of the institutions deposits of large amounts were refused, as the banks say they have more funds on hand than they can invest to good advantage with money so cheap as it is now, and new depositors with sums exceeding $500 had to divide their deposits between several banks.

Members of the New York Historical Society would be delighted if they could be assured that they could celebrate the centenary of their organization in 1904 in a new home on the land they own at Seventy-sixth Street and Central Park West. But there seems little chance that their desire may be realized. "There was an attempt made a year ago," said Robert H. Kelby, Librarian at the old house at Second Avenue and Eleventh Street, "to raise a fund for the permanent home for the society, but the result was the addition of but $16,000 to the amount already in hand, and the outlook is not particularly promising for a material increase. We are rather out of the way for people who wish to use the material we have at hand away down here, and so our treasures are hidden. Few people know that we have a library of over 100,000 volumes and a vast collection of curious things, as well as quite a valuable collection of paintings and prints that would be of material use to writers and students were we in a more favorable locality. So strange an idea have some of the people as to this part of the city that even some of our members tell me they are almost afraid to come down here to the regular monthly evening meetings. When the society located here in 1858 we were right in the fashionable section of the city, and many of the people who took an active part in the work of the society lived within pistol-shot of the building. Now they have gone to other parts of the town, and the character of the residents hereabout has changed very materially. Yet we are by no means surrounded by dangerous characters, as some people seem to think, and the locality is safe enough. But it is unquestionably out of the way for the major part of the community that would like to avail itself of the treasures we have in our building. These treasures must be safely housed somewhere, and, as there is a scarcity of room here, a new house is imperative. It will come in time of course, but we should all be delighted if we could be in the new home when the one hundredth anniversary of our organization comes around."

One of the Smith Brothers, the big oyster growers and packers, says that the present season has been one of particular benefit to the oyster farmer. Last season's set of oysters in the Long Island Sound beds was one of the largest known, and the young bivalves have had an exceptional chance to get a start in life because the temperature of the water has been away above the normal, and so has helped rather than retarded the growth, the latter being usually the case during the Winter. As a result the sets are twice the size they usually are at this time of the year, which means that the young will have a better chance to survive the cold water and weather which are bound to come later in the Winter. While this favors the growers, there has been an unusually early appearance of the starfish, that pest of the oystermen, and its ravages on the beds of "plants" have already become annoying. So far nothing but dredging has been discovered as a means of killing off the the starfish that is not equally as fatal to the oyster.

"Perhaps the most remarkable thing I saw in our line while abroad," remarked a buyer for a woolen house who has recently returned from a trip through England, Germany, and France, "was a machine that shrinks, presses, and finishes cloth simultaneously. It makes superfluous the sponging process and does away entirely with the necessity for flat pressing. It is the latest invention of the men who have carried the textile processes the nearest to perfection of any people on the face of the globe, and seems to be the very last thing needed in our line of manufacture. German inventive faculty seems to be best shown in the textile line, and the people who devote themselves to it are away ahead of even the experts of our own country, whose bent seems in other directions. The new machines are in use in Germany, England, and Austria, and the work they were devised to do seems to be done with rare perfection. It means quite a saving in the manufacture of the fine grades of cloth, but it will have no effect on prices that the consumer will feel the benefit of."

TEXAS WINS A LAWSUIT.

United States Supreme Court Dismisses the New Orleans Case.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The United States Supreme Court to-day dismissed the suit of the State of Louisiana versus the State of Texas and its Health Officer, involving the right of the latter State to quarantine so rigorously against the former as was done during the recent prevalence of yellow fever in New Orleans. Justice Fuller handed down the opinion of the court, holding that no direct issue between the States is presented in the controversy.

The bill in the case filed in the State of Texas alleged that the Texas quarantine was so strict as to "place an embargo on all inter-State commerce between the City of New Orleans and the State of Texas," and to benefit the commerce of Galveston and other Texas cities at the expense of New Orleans, and was in violation of the Constitution of the United States. The bill asked for an enjoining order.

The case was heard on a demurrer, claiming that the Supreme Court had no jurisdiction in the case. This demurrer was sustained by Chief Justice Fuller. He said that "in order to maintain jurisdiction of this bill it must appear that the controversy is one arising directly between the State of Louisiana and the State of Texas, and not a controversy in relation of the grievances of particular individuals."

Justices Harlan and Brown concurred in the result, but not in the grounds upon which the decision was reached.

CHARGES AGAINST GARBAGE MEN

Complaints that Tribute Is Levied on Citizens to be Investigated.

Complaints that have been made to the Department of Street Cleaning regarding the levying of tribute by removers of ashes and garbage upon householders will result in a thorough investigation, according to Deputy Commissioner Gibson. Capt. Gibson said yesterday that he has not heard of many instances where extortion has been practiced, and he could see no way to prevent it unless aggrieved persons would file charges.

One complaint that has been made is that of Mrs. M. C. Lane, Superintendent of the Wetmore Home, who charges John Mulcay, an ash remover, with demanding 50 cents from her for removing the contents of an ash can and refusing to do the work unless paid. Capt. Gibson will give the accused man a hearing to-day.

During Col. Waring's administration of the department there were a number of men detailed as Inspectors whose duty it was to investigate charges of extortion and to see that the men performed their work without receiving pay from householders. Under the new civil service law no provision was made for the employment of this class of Inspectors.

Owing to a hitch in the certification of the pay rolls of the Department of Education for the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx, the rolls, which have been prepared under the supervision of the Commissioners of Accounts, were not sent yesterday to the office of the City Paymaster, and in consequence the teachers were not paid off. It was said at the Controller's office that the trouble would be settled to-day, and that the teachers would receive their money to-morrow.

A PERILOUS SITUATION IN KENTUCKY.

The people of Kentucky ought to see that under the impulse of political passions at Frankfort they are drifting pretty rapidly into a situation threatening civil strife and bloodshed.

A committee made up of members of the Legislature drawn by lot is sitting as a Board of Contest to hear the evidence in the contest of GOEBEL for the seat to which Gov. TAYLOR was elected and which he holds. It consists of ten Democrats and one Republican. A similar committee, also drawn by lot, consisting of nine Democrats and one Republican, is taking testimony in the Lieutenant Governorship contest. Last week the Legislature elected BLACKBURN to the United States Senate. On account of some doubt about the legal date for the election the vote is to be repeated this week. Ex-Gov. BRADLEY, Republican candidate for the Senate, has announced his purpose to contest BLACKBURN'S seat on the ground that Democrats and Blackburn men were elected to the Legislature by fraud.

During the reconstruction period there were serious disturbances and fighting growing out of contests of this nature in Louisiana and Arkansas. United States troops were called in to quell the disorder. Already there is talk of calling out the militia and even of Federal interference at Frankfort.

There is evident need of coolness, caution, and wisdom at Kentucky's capital. Unfortunately the Goebel contestants are reckless men. Their leader is one of the most unscrupulous and desperate political gamblers in the country. He made the canvass for the Governorship under the provisions of a vicious election law that he himself had devised to secure his own election. The people of Kentucky rejected him because of his thoroughly bad character. TAYLOR was elected by a plurality of 2,383, and was seated by the decision of the Canvassing Board. If his lawful election had not been a clearly ascertained fact he would have been counted out by the unscrupulous men who would have profited by his defeat. It is hardly imaginable that there can be any reasonable grounds for a contest now. Certainly the Goebel Democrats, who have been engaged for years in systematically suppressing the negro vote, are in no position to set up the plea of frauds on the ballot.

There is grave danger that a board of contest, made up of ten Democrats and one Republican, will be only too ready to find a pretext for declaring GOEBEL entitled to the Governorship. If that misfortune should befall the State, greater misfortunes will almost certainly follow in its wake. It is not to be expected that Gov. TAYLOR will give up his seat, to which he appears from all the evidence to have been fairly elected, without an appeal to the courts. He may even appeal to force against the conspiracy to unseat him. The whole undertaking of the contestants is revolutionary and endangers the peace of the State.

If there are sober-minded men at Frankfort, men whose minds are not possessed by hot political passions and the craving for triumph and power, they can do a patriotic service by urging the Board of Contest to conduct its inquiry with all publicity and with perfect judicial fairness. Any attempt to get GOEBEL into office by a dark-lantern investigation and on evidence that does not carry full conviction will be fraught with the gravest peril.

SENATOR HOAR'S SPEECH AND THE FILIPINOS.

The statement made by Mr. JOHN BARRETT in his speech at Chicago on Saturday evening is interesting chiefly as showing the resources of the Filipino insurgents and the quite modern and civilized use they made of them.

According to Mr. BARRETT, the speech of Senator HOAR delivered in the Senate on the 9th of January last year was cabled to Hongkong at a cost of $4,000 and "was the culminating influence that brought about the insurrection against this Government by AGUINALDO and his followers." The substantial portions of this speech were republished in THE TIMES yesterday. In the eyes of a shrewd popular leader of the Filipinos or his agents, some passages in it were of a character to stimulate the sentiment on which AGUINALDO depended for support. They were calculated to show that a strong element in the party of the President was opposed to the acquisition of the Philippines, denied the Constitutional power of the Government to accomplish it or to put down by force any resistance that might be offered, and condemned the policy even more strongly on moral than on legal grounds. Obviously this fact, if it were a fact, was in the highest degree encouraging to AGUINALDO, and it was well worth all that it cost him to spread the evidence of it among the people whom he was seeking to enlist in his plans. The effect may have been as decisive as Mr. BARRETT thinks that it was. On the other hand, it may well be that while the speech helped AGUINALDO, he would have gone on with his plans all the same had it not been made and circulated.

It would be easy to exaggerate the direct responsibility of Senator HOAR for the effect of the use that was made of his speech. He could hardly have foreseen either the use or its effect at the time. The treaty with Spain had not been ratified, and it was not certain that it would be. Assuming that it would be ratified, no definite policy had been formulated by the President to be applied to the Philippines, none had at any rate been recommended to Congress, and it was still open to discussion whether the policy finally adopted would not be the one that had been declared as to Cuba, which was the one urged by the Senator. Nevertheless it cannot be very pleasant for Mr. HOAR to contemplate his speech in the light of what is now known and to realize the influence that it doubtless exerted on the course of subsequent events.

The underlying difficulty with men of Mr. HOAR'S temperament and habit of mind in dealing with affairs of wide scope and complex nature, is that they tend to substitute logic for reason. Logic has to do with inferences from premises, but reason has to do with the ascertainment of the premises. If error exists in these, the rigidity of the logic only intensifies the error. And the one thing that is absolutely certain about the premises for a political conclusion is that to some extent they must be uncertain. In Mr. HOAR'S case the trouble is the worse because the premises from which he makes his deductions are very general and abstract propositions in political philosophy. To him these are as the laws of nature and of GOD. They are right, they are wholly and eternally right; anything that is in accordance with them or, rather, with his interpretation of them, is right and all else is wrong. It is related of him that he once remarked to a lifelong friend with whom he had been intimately associated in the anti-slavery contest, but who had felt himself forced by conscience to support Mr. CLEVELAND in 1884: "I am deeply pained. It had been one of the cherished hopes of my life that we should meet in heaven!" That was half a generation ago. He is as uncompromisingly logical as ever and no more reasonable.

PAYN.

Mr. LOUIS F. PAYN'S loan at the State Trust Company appears to have been abundantly secured. He got it by making a pitiful, pathetic appeal for assistance to one of the officers of the company, who helped him to the loan and guaranteed it.

But PAYN'S fitness to continue in the office of Superintendent of Insurance is not guaranteed, and he can give no security for a faithful performance of his duties. The fact that he is around going down on his knees for large loans proves him unworthy and unfit to hold an office which requires him to see to it that others are financially honest and prudent. An Insurance Superintendent who is in such sore need of funds is liable at any moment to be insulted with an offer of assistance from some wrecker of insurance companies who would like him to look the other way for a time while he pursues his merry vocation unwatched and unmolested.

What a spectacle of political turpitude it would be if Mr. PLATT'S Senate should refuse to confirm Gov. ROOSEVELT'S appointment of a successor to PAYN!

THE BRITISH ADVANCE.

The general advance of Gen. BULLER'S army seems without doubt to have been begun. In that case, it is not to be stopped except by a series of decisive defeats or repulses. We may accordingly expect that the campaign, if not the war, will be decided within the next few days or weeks.

There are several things necessary to be borne in mind in estimating the probabilities of this attack. There are, of course, the military considerations in favor of the Boers which everybody knows and recalls. They at least imagine themselves to be fighting for their homes, for their national existence. This is a feeling that every private in the Boer Army is capable of appreciating to the full, as an incentive for doing his best. On the other side, the British side, the corresponding plea is that the British Army is fighting for the spread and advantage of civilization. But this is comparatively an abstract idea. It appeals strongly to philosophers in their closets. It appeals strongly to holders of the stock of the South Africa Company. But it is not to be supposed that it appeals very strongly to "Tommy Atkins." That every Boer feels himself to be in the right, and that only educated Britons feel themselves to be in the right, makes a distinct difference in the incentives to war of the forces actually engaged. Then also the Boers have the advantage of the "interior lines," of greater facility in retreat, of a far greater facility in reinforcing a point suddenly discovered to need reinforcement. A correspondent of ours has insisted that this advantage of itself offsets the superiority in numbers of the invaders, or the would-be invaders, for the British troops have not yet been able to invade. We are inclined to believe that our correspondent is in the right.

Doubtless these are great advantages. But there is still another advantage, which may at once account for the British advance and tend to show that it is a measure of desperation rather than the result of an exclusively military computation of chances. The main tactical advantage of the Boers is the fact that, in a political as well as in a military sense, they are on the defensive. They were satisfied with the "status quo" at the outbreak of the war. Nothing has occurred to modify this sentiment on their part. They did not announce the intention of doing anything to the British any more than they were already doing to those of the Outlanders who happened to be British. It was the British who were dissatisfied and who had announced their intention to change the situation and to coerce the Boers into doing the things which the British demanded to have done. Just what this was has not been made known, because the Boers grew weary of waiting for the British to "formulate their proposals," and delivered their own ultimatum while the British ultimatum was still preparing. But the result is the same. The "status quo" being satisfactory to the Boers and not to the British, it has been and is the business of the British to change it. They have not yet succeeded, but there is an increasing political pressure from home upon the Generals in the field to "do something." There is no such pressure from what may pass for public opinion in the two South African republics. The Boers may be supposed to be very well satisfied with the military situation. They may be particularly well satisfied since, if nothing is done, they expect Ladysmith and its garrison and Kimberley and its garrison to fall into their hands without the necessity on their part of firing a shot. To prevent these calamities, on the other hand, it is clearly necessary for the British to do something. And that seems to be the explanation of the advance of Gen. BULLER'S force.

It seems, however, that in this advance the British are making a more circumspect use than they have made before of their superiority in numbers. They seem to be using it for the purpose of enveloping both flanks of the Boer position in their front, and thus of disabling the Boers from concentrating their whole force, as they have heretofore been able to do, at a single critical point. The chances of success for these new tactics remain to be established. They depend upon a great many considerations which are immeasurably better known to the British commander than they can be known to any remote critic who relies upon a map for his whole information. Such criticisms, from London or from any other remote capital, a General in the field can afford to disregard. But, though the British General knows more about the circumstances of his operations than can be known at a distance, he does not know more or as much as the Boer commanders who are also on the spot. And nobody can forget that the judgment of these commanders upon the circumstances has thus far proved more accurate than that of the British commanders. The advance has pretty clearly been dictated by the pressure of an absolute necessity, partly military, having in view the urgency of the case at Ladysmith, and also in part political. Whatever results it may have, it seems probable that they will be decisive of the campaign, if not of the war.

THE PALISADES.

It is by no means proof of a lack of public appreciation of the Palisades that nothing has thus far been done to the purpose toward preserving them. The difficulty mainly is that the people who are outraged by their destruction, because it is brought to their notice, are inhabitants of New York, while the Palisades themselves are in New Jersey.

Gov. ROOSEVELT'S message shows that the Governor is fully in sympathy with the citizens who have been agitating to prevent the further destruction or defacement of these unique cliffs. The report upon which the Governor's recommendation was founded recognizes and proposes to circumvent the difficulties which would not arise if they were situated in New York or if they were visible in New Jersey. It is only the General Government which can deal adequately with the various questions involved. The General Government might be induced to take charge of any funds subscribed by the two States concerned or by their citizens. It would spend its own money, and indeed would be justified in spending its own money, only in case a National employment of the Palisades were suggested or proposed, which would also entitle it to exercise its own right of eminent domain.

Such a use of the Palisades has been suggested, in the conversion of the plateau which they carry into a National camp and rendezvous for troops, such as the Secretary of War has urged the establishment of in his report. The advantage of this plateau for such a purpose is obvious, or at least evident as soon as it is stated. It is doubtful whether anywhere else on the Atlantic Coast a place in all respects so convenient for a camp of instruction and preparation could be found. It is also worth while to point out that the preservation of the Palisades is by no means incompatible with the fullest commercial use of their water front, which some day will be of very great value. In fact, all that is needed seems to be a more general belief in the desirableness of preserving them. Such a belief, when it had once been attained about Niagara Falls, overcame far greater difficulties than any in the way of this project. It brought about concurrent action between the State of New York and a foreign Government.

MR. QUAY'S CASE.

Reports differ as to the probable course of the Senate upon the claim of Mr. QUAY to a seat in that body, but on the whole the chances are against him. It is a pity that the question must be decided on the interpretation of a clause in the Constitution, and cannot turn on the moral issues involved. It is, of course, of the highest importance that the law of the land shall be applied impartially to the just and to the unjust and that the legal rights of the veriest scamp shall be as secure as those of the most honest of men. That is the fundamental principle on which the safety and the progress of the English-speaking people on both sides of the Atlantic depend, for if there were inequality in the laws it is the unjust that would profit by it, and the others that would suffer. It is entirely best that whatever rights the unspeakable claimant from Pennsylvania really has to a seat in the Senate, in consequence of the action of his creature, the Governor of the State, shall be fully accorded to him. But decent men may regret that his claim to a seat cannot be determined by an impartial inquiry into his immoral character.

Since this may not be, there is some comfort in the fact that the purely Constitutional arguments that have been submitted to the committee are strongly against his claim. They all turn on the meaning of the word "happen" as used in the Constitution. The language of that instrument is: "If vacancies happen by resignation or otherwise during the recess of the Legislature of any State, the Executive thereof may make temporary appointments until the next meeting of the Legislature, which shall then fill such vacancies." The claim of QUAY is that the word "happen" in this clause is equivalent to the phrase "happen to exist," and that to the Executive of any State authority is thus given to fill any vacancy during a recess of the Legislature, though it may have occurred during the session of the Legislature or could have been clearly foreseen before the adjournment of that body. That is a forced construction of the language, and fortunately this fact is reinforced by the fact that a clause distinctly admitting of this construction was proposed in the convention and rejected in favor of the one now in force. Otherwise the Constitution would have provided that any dead-lock in the Legislature could be met by adjournment, leaving the power of appointment in the hands of the Governor. As one Governor may be cheaper than a majority in a Legislature, this idea would suit a man of QUAY'S thrifty habit. But the Constitution leaves no real ground for such an interpretation.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—No end of worry was caused in France recently by a report, coming apparently direct from the officials of the National Observatory, that it had been decided henceforth to number the hours of the day from one to twenty-four instead of twice from one to twelve. There seems to have been a quite general assumption that this action would make necessary an immediate abandonment of the old system by everybody, and the people, as numerous in France as elsewhere, who can see in any change of established custom only its incidental annoyance and confusion, began to lament almost as bitterly as the same class of New Yorkers did when our street signs were rearranged in intelligent accord with the new conditions of municipal life. The anxiety was needless, or at least premature, for the only basis of the rumor was a determination on the part of the Bureau of Latitudes, which has charge of the national almanac and certain matters interesting only to sailors and astronomers, to adopt the twenty-four hour plan for its own uses. The bureau, it was explained, had no authority to impose its chronometric opinions and methods upon the country at large. The advisability of extending to ordinary life the system the merits of which were long ago recognized and utilized by all professional astronomers has been discussed several times in the French Chamber, and it has even been proposed to go so far as to divide the day into twenty hours of a hundred minutes to the hour and a hundred seconds to the minute. This would undoubtedly facilitate the labors of computation, but to change the lengths of hours and minutes would be a revolution mighty indeed, and whoever attempts it will find his work cut out for him.

—We notice with several emotions, most of them pleasurable, that The Public Ledger of Philadelphia, or, to give its more familiar name, The Philadelphia Ledger, is using, in the advertisement of its own merits, the line, "Prints all the news that is fit to print." The likeness of that sentence to one which THE NEW YORK TIMES has for many months used as the declaration of its own journalistic policy is so close as to be complimentary, and the slight divergence from our way of expressing the idea, though of course it implies criticism of the correctness of the older formula, only puts forward a grammatical opinion, and nobody is going to get excited over that. The Ledger is an eminently respectable paper, and while in the past some of its peculiarities have not been of the kind to inspire universal imitation, still they were always highly interesting and scrupulously as well as perfectly harmless. But while admitting that "Prints all the news that is fit to print" is an excellent expression of an excellent rule, we are not going to confess that it is any better than, or even as good as, our own "All the news that's fit to print." Two or three readers have questioned the correctness of "fit to print," but they were fussy people who forgot that they talk daily of things "fit to eat" or "fit to wear," and that in language, though not in morals, what is is always right. That our estimable Philadelphian contemporary likes better the longer form is not surprising. Time is abundant over there, according to the ever-veracious humorists. Absolute propriety can be attained under the one motto as under the other, and that, after all, is the only important point. The more papers that use our phrase in one form or another the better we shall be pleased. Perhaps in time all the good papers in the country will use it, and so it will come to be a mark of distinction most helpful to the hesitant and would-be subscriber.

—Though Mr. FREDERIC HARRISON is one of the most consistent and earnest opponents of imperialistic ideas in England, he not only fails to see any cause for rejoicing when British troops engaged in the work of expanding the empire meet with serious reverses, but he even reprehends with much vigor the haste with which his political foes have confessed the superior military prowess of the Boers. At a recent meeting in London of the Positivist Community, of which Mr. HARRISON is the leader, he protested against these admissions with some emphasis. He said that, while things had not been going well in South Africa, the English arms had not yet been defeated. "Our armies," he continued, "were broken up into fragments to suit colonial ends, on political, personal, and material grounds, which made signal victory impossible on all sound rules of war. Being so helplessly split up, our gallant soldiers fought several stiff battles, but while the checks they had met might be called reverses, they were certainly not routs, nor were they defeats. An army is defeated when it is driven back from its positions disorganized and demoralized. Nothing of the kind has occurred in any single engagement, unless it was in the small affair at Stormberg. The gallant Boers have been many times driven from their positions, the British forces never once. The heroic devotion of the British soldier and his officers has been proved on a dozen bloody fields. The total loss, sad as it is, has really been very moderate. In the general result, if the campaign has hitherto been a failure and a cruel disappointment, it has not been inglorious and has not been calamitous." This is a view of the situation which some more distant observers may regard as unduly optimistic, but it illustrates an interesting difference between Mr. HARRISON and some of our own opponents of expansion.

—Capt. MCCALLA of the Newark sends from Guam the cheering news that when the remarkable LEARY rides through the streets of Agana, every native face turned to him is wreathed with smiles. This is most reassuring. We had been in some anxiety as to how the people of Guam would take their new Governor. It seems that they have the saving grace of humorous appreciation, and that in consequence they are enjoying themselves under a form of government that to a sulky folk might have seemed the very worst form of tyranny. It is at once heroic and virtuous to see the merit of jokes perpetrated by one in absolute authority, and this the residents of Guam's capital have been able to do. Instead of raging over the overturn of all their customs and the issuance of proclamations without precedent in all the literature of statesmanship and diplomacy, these amiable beings only laugh at the form of their good fortune, and in their serious moments count up the practical advantages which Gov. LEARY is bestowing upon them. These are many and important, and his jokes are only thrown in for good measure. Evidently it is a case of the right man in the right place. And such cases are not too frequent. Let's see—WOOD, LEARY, and there, for the moment, the list, so far as our colonial possessions go, begins to grow tenuous.

THE G. A. R. AND CHARITY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A few days ago the Board of Estimate struck from the budget the sum of $12,000 for the use of a most worthy charity—a maternity hospital, giving comfort yearly to thousands of mothers. No money for this, but plenty where votes can be caught. Here is a case in point:

The Grand Army of the Republic keeps on reaching out in all directions, with its arms like that of the octopus, grasping in all directions for more money from any and every available source—willfully and without shame pauperizing themselves. All this impecunious body seems to care for is to keep up a steady and increasing regard for money without earning it. One great advantage resulting therefrom, in addition to the partial support of this begging organization, is the enabling its members to pay increase of dues, hire brass bands, buy brass buttons for their local show days and conventions, and paying transportation thereto.

The latest dip into the City Treasury is a bill passed by the last Legislature to amend existing poor laws, empowering commanders of this eleemosynary organized society to make further raids on the city taxation. Unlimited drafts for the benefit of this charity can be drawn on the Controller by post commanders—production of receipts from the paupers not a necessary concomitant; an explanation by the Relief Committee suffices. The amount this year may reach $20,000 or more.

Let me say right here that it is rather galling on veterans of the civil war (outside of G. A. R. posts) to think that they may be classed with the paupers of that body. The general public is not aware that probably the larger mass of veterans are outside of the pale of the new Grand Army of the Republic poor law, relative to outside relief.

Look for a moment at the craftiness displayed in this last piece of legislation; the bill recites that it is for the benefit of all veterans of the civil war—to keep same from becoming inmates of poorhouses, substituting a system of outdoor relief as a means. But look you here what follows: Post commanders are made the judges of who are to be the recipients of the charity, viz., members of all posts. Any veteran outside of the organization cannot share, however needy, in this benefit. Although ostensibly for the good of all poor deserving soldiers, the distribution is vested solely in posts, which place it where it will do the most political good.

Why should public money for charity not be administered by some public functionary commissioned for that purpose? G. A. R. posts are supposed to give in return for the many favors conferred upon them by National, State, and City Governments, is to boast of their loyalty in loud-mouthed talk. An example of this may be illustrated by their very latest attack on a Government officer of high rank and character because he stoutly refused to allow the Pension Bureau to be again looted.

Patriotism as defined by Grand Army men is "that they did the country a great service, and ought to be paid liberally for it." Let me just add, pensioners used to be dubbed "National paupers"; now they have rightfully earned the name, and may be further designated and known as city paupers in addition thereto.

HOW LABOR IS DELUDED.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Merely a sojourner in your peerless city, I read with much interest the communications in last Sunday's TIMES sharply antagonizing your statement, in effect, that wealth might be fairly judged by its uses. While I admit that wealth does not rightfully condone any method of getting it, I failed to see where these millionaire censors pointed out any specific wrongdoing in Mr. Carnegie's plan of "dollar culture." Most of the critics seem to be men with a bias or a grievance, and therefore disqualified as competent jurors. The trouble with most of this class is that they do not dispassionately study the genus "millionaire." I do not agree with Mr. Carnegie on many public questions on which men may honestly differ. I think he is preposterously wrong in his opposition, for instance, to trusts, especially when it is considered that his co-partner, Mr. Frick, operated his coke interests identically on trust lines long before the present era of trusts. On the other hand, I opine, he is clearly right in his theory of anti-imperialism. Peradventure this is neither here nor there, except is indicating, in what I am about to state, that I am no Carnegie "hero worshipper."

Some of these critics would have us believe that Mr. Carnegie made a great mistake in accumulating the millions which he is now lavishly bestowing. Others object, queerly enough, to trusts and competition in the same breath. Another pleads for equitable wages, forgetting that there is no such thing, and one hints that the Scotch ironmaster should divide up "with less fortunate fellow-citizens, who are, so to speak, 'up against' hard propositions." If they had their way Mr. Carnegie might in his old age have been a supernumerated railway clerk instead of making 25,000 men happy by employment at good wages.

Without setting up any special rebuttal, I might say that most of these so-called arguments answer themselves. On their own showing the man who makes two blades of grass grow where but one grew before is a benefactor of his species, but the man who gives employment to ten men where but one was formerly employed does not get even a credit mark in labor's column. With these people the "gospel of getting along" is the rankest kind of "red pottage." If they would only read Charles Reade's novel, "Put Yourself in His Place," the films would fall from their eyes. Their great objection to Mr. Carnegie is as an "accumulator," forgetting that most of these "accumulations" flow back yearly to their original sources. If Mr. Carnegie had not "accumulated" some surplus during the boom period when steel rails sold at $150 per ton, he would have been unable to meet his immense pay roll in the panic periods when iron was sold below cost. Had he, like many iron men, gone into the "balloon" instead of the "accumulation" business, Cooper Institute would not to-day be rejoicing at his benefactions. I happen to know something of Mr. Carnegie and his methods, and enter my protest against the harsh insinuations of his New York querulous critics. Many Pittsburgers not older than myself can recall the time when Carnegie's mother took in washing for a living in "Barefoot Square," Allegheny, Penn., and when young Andrew toiled as a Western Union messenger boy at the unostentatious salary of $3.50 a week.

While Mr. Carnegie is a man of large brain and organizing ability, and has Napoleon's happy faculty of selecting ideal "field marshals," he is largely a man of "opportunities"—a "child of circumstances." His first check was an Adams Express Company stock dividend, but this was small "mustard seed." The "real thing" grew out of a chance oil speculation. President Tom Scott of the Pennsylvania Railroad gave the Stewart boys and Tom and Andrew Carnegie a block of Columbia oil stock at a time when no wise man would have bought pools on the Story Farm prospects. The young men gave Scott their unindorsed notes. And lo! the next year the Columbia Oil Company produced 640,000 barrels of oil, worth $1.50 per barrel. It was the unexpected which happened—as much so as the dravload of Spanish silver dollars which one morning rolled into the elder Astor's vaults as a result of a chance East India charter venture.

With his new-made fortune Carnegie bought for half price the Kloman Mill in Lawrenceville at a time when the old Frenchman was thoroughly sick of it. The war came on, steel prices went up, up, up, and Carnegie made more millions. He was an "opportunist," like Caesar. "He came, he saw, he conquered," and he has continued the conquests, while other good people with apparently similar opportunities joined anti-poverty societies or "set up the ward for Jones."

Another critical period in his career I may recall to the attention of fair-minded tellers. I refer to the Homestead riots in 1892. I happened to be a candidate for Congress in the Pittsburg district that year, and was in a position to know real existing conditions. The strike was mainly engineered by men who were earning good wages—better in most instances than they have ever earned since, despite the later "booms." It was plainly an attempt by misguided labor leaders to "stand no" a great manufacturing plant in the midst of a semi-panic period and compel it to pay wages the market would not justify. Mr. Carnegie pleaded that to pay more than his competitors, the Illinois Steel Company, meant business suicide and the stoppage of the works. But the voice of reason was hushed, and the "comedy of errors" went on. The strike failed, and, aside from the loss of life, Allegheny County paid millions in indemnity bonds. I refer to this, as one of your correspondents seeks to cloud the issue by references to "Pinkerton hirelings." Seven years rolled by, and in 1899, when the market did justify the increase of wages, Mr. Carnegie voluntarily raised his employes' wages on an average 25 per cent. He gave the laborer a "slice of his prosperity."

Now, let me invite the attention of these Carnegie critics to another picture. What did these laborers do with this practically 25 per cent. donation? Did they take one penny of it and say to the other army of outside laborers and poor shopkeepers in the labor districts: "Mr. Carnegie has given us unexpectedly a 25 per cent. wage increase. We have contended that a surplus ought to be divided, and as you have carried, our families during many trying periods, we have concluded to divide up this surplus with you." Did they do this? "Not for your life," as Terry McGovern would say. On the contrary, instead of buying their necessaries from these other laborers in the vineyard at ordinary market rates, they hied away with their "surplus" and their patronage to the department store sweatshops and gave "our brother laborer" the coldest kind of a cold shake. They went into the market and bargained hard for the last farthing. There was no voluntary "giving up," as Mr. Carnegie had done. These are fair samples of the men who rail at wealth and of the ignorant, inconsistent ingrates who stand in the forum of public opinion pleading falsely in the name of labor against trusts and millionaires.

The same elements practically that denounce Carnegie as a millionaire, denounce, in the name of reform, associated wealth under the form of trusts. I think I may say, with parsimonious moderation, that hell, from its fiery pavement to its blazing dome, is crowded with such reformers. Quite notoriously trusts have raised the wages of labor, and yet, under muddled or mercenary leadership, nearly every labor organization in the country is denouncing trusts. What is to be thought of people who will accept increased wages and favors from trusts, and then go around the corner and denounce them as "enemies of labor"? Is it not a case of the adder stinging the bosom that warms it? It is not labor that protests, but perverted leadership. What kind of "dopery" is it that induces labor not only to look the gift horse in the mouth, but aim to put poison on its palate? The very factor which creates benefits to labor is arraigned as "a monopoly," and it "challenges success and prosperity."

When wages were low capital was denounced. When wages are high capital is denounced. What do they want? Possibly a lotus land where it is "always afternoon"—high wages and no toil. Hence no part of the Bible is more true than that which declares that a (laboring) man's enemies shall be of his own household. "The white man's burden" in this country is not as Kipling put it, nor yet tariffs, or trusts, or "open doors," or protocols, but real downright, bald-headed, square-toed ignorance; and this, too, with schools in every district and newspapers on every man's table. And the political evangel of this class goes about proclaiming from the housetops that "trusts"—that is, the ideal condition of modern business—"must be destroyed." If such destruction were possible, we might well write, in circus-poster type, over the door of enterprise and progress, Dante's label on the gates of the inferno:

"All hope abandon, ye who enter here."

If labor is to "cut any ice" in the twentieth century, there must be a radical reawakening from these economic and Socialistic delusions and an emancipation of white slaves as well as black ones. At present it is much easier to denounce millionaires and to "loaf around the throne" than to be real laborers, like Hewitt and Havemeyer, Carnegie and Frick, Armour and Harry Oliver, Russell Sage and Pierpont Morgan.

TAKES ISSUE WITH MR. RHEAD.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The reply of Mr. Louis Rhead to the Rev. Thomas P. McLaughlin in your issue of Saturday on the subject of the comparative civilization of Ireland and the other portions of the British Isles is the most extraordinary "Comedy of Errors" I have ever seen in a public print. In his only too apparent want of knowledge of the subject, he concedes points to the other side which its advocates do not claim and makes the most amusing statements.

For instance, he says that there are none of "the beautiful manuscripts of complicated ornamentation done by the monks" now in existence executed before the second century. There was neither a monk nor a manuscript of the class to which Mr. Rhead refers in existence in Ireland before the fifth century, and Mr. Rhead cannot point to one Irish scholar who claims that any of the works of art in existence was executed prior to the eighth century. The statement that the Romans, who retired to the Continent at the beginning of the fifth century, destroyed art, monasteries, &c., which did not come into being for at least three centuries afterward, is peculiar, to say the least.

The assertion that Father Tom Burke was doubtless the most famous Irish scholar would make the great orator laugh heartily had he heard it. He was a cultured man with great oratorical gifts, but he never had any pretensions to being a great Irish scholar. The foremost Irish scholar is Dr. Whitely Stokes, while in the next rank come such men as Dr. Douglas Hyde, President of the Gaelic League, and Dr. Henbery of the Catholic University, Washington. But the great centres for the study of the Irish language and history are the German universities since the inception of the movement of Celtic research commenced by Zeuss about fifty years ago. I can assure Mr. Rhead, however, that the testimony of all these scholars, German and Irish, together with French, and even some English authorities, is unanimously and strongly against Mr. Rhead's assertions. As I cannot ask for space to combat all of Mr. Rhead's misstatements, I will refer him to the following writers and philologists, who have given abundant evidence of the great superiority of Irish civilization from the fifth to the eleventh century to that of England or of the Continent of Europe.

Montalembert, ("Monks of the West,") M. D'Arbois de Jubainville, Dr. Heather Bigmer, ("The Irish Element in Mediæval Culture,") the Venerable Bede, the great Anglo-Saxon chronicler, and "A Literary History of Ireland," by Dr. Douglas Hyde, all of which he will, I am sure, find in the Astor Library. They will convince him that not only were the Irish of that age more civilized, but that they laid the foundations of civilization among the Saxons and also the peoples of Western Continental Europe. I hope Mr. Rhead will read these before he writes on the subject again.

The Care of Inebriates.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your correspondent "I. W. K." has not quite grasped the purposes of the Church Temperance Society with regard to inebriates.

In the City of New York there were 46,170 arrests for drunkenness in the year ended Dec. 31, 1898. Of these 35,581 were men and 10,589 women. The usual sentence is a small fine or short imprisonment. The incidence of punishment is unfair, because it is unequal. The man of means pays his ten-dollar fine and goes free; the poor man can't pay, loses his job, and goes to prison.

The joint committee appointed by the Church Temperance Society has drafted a bill appointing a probation officer for each Magistrate's court, whose business it will be to inquire into the circumstances of the drunken delinquent, and giving the Magistrate power to give the prisoner time in which to pay the fine. Failing to do this, he can re-arrested.

The second bill, now in the hands of the Drafting Committee, deals with the long-sentence cases. The State of New York received during the year 1899 nearly $12,000,000 by taxation of the liquor trade, and it seems to us legitimate that in dealing with the small army of men and women coming before our courts for drunkenness regard should be had to reformation as well as punishment.

We ask that report be made of an eligible tract of land of from twenty to fifty acres, conveniently situated within the State, and on which should be erected a suitable building to house the inmates of the "Farm Colony," the institution to be under the supervision of a competent medical man. Constant employment in the open air and on the land is, in our opinion, one of the most effective remedies, and with this institution we would have made one sane and intelligent attempt at dealing with inebriates.

Of course the political factor is omnipresent, but it ought not to be an impossibility to keep such an institution in clean hands, and to rest its control in a body of men who are above suspicion, and we have endeavored to solve that part of the problem.

The Street Signs Again.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am much surprised that you can so coolly assume that "everybody has become familiar with the new arrangement of street signs and I thoroughly reconciled to it." I have had to become familiar with the abomination, but I have never become reconciled to it. I have talked with a great many of my friends about it, and have never found one who approved of the change. It is disgusting to me as I walk the streets to be assured at every corner that I have not strayed off upon some unknown way, which is all that the signs now tell me, unless I step out of the path, and usually into the gutter, to see the other side. It is not much better when riding in the street cars to see the name of a street too late to get off there. It was a welcome relief to find myself a few days ago in another city where common sense still prevailed.

SONG OF THE ARTISAN.

Folger McKinsey in Baltimore News.

The work that he wanted to do the most
That he knew he could do the best,
"Some day!" exclaimed the Artisan, "when
I have earned my rest,
I will take the thing and through the thing,
to the honor of my name,
I will win the goal that hails my soul unto the peaks of fame!"

They bowed him down to the toil they liked, to the thing they'd have him do;
They chained his heart to the wheel that grinds till its grinds the heart in two;
They led him out to his task at morn, and he trod in the mill of strife;
"There is bread to win," was his thought through the din, "the bitter bread of life!"

The light still burned in his eyes, he held his deathless truce with hope;
And never an inch or ell were cut for him
from the future's scope;
"The day will come and the hour will dawn and I shall see the gleam
Of the open way and the stated day and the far light of my dream!"

There were mouths to feed, and he held it law of love to feed them well;
They racked his bones and paved with stones his way like a road in hell;
They barred him out of the leave to breathe
the breath of the hillside air;
Instead—the roar of the mill and mart were round him everywhere:

He did not know that his face grew pale,
that his slender hands grew thin;
The voice of his care sang sweet, sang fair through all the clash and din;
He longed for the heights he could not reach, he trusted through it all;
His ears were deaf to the things that roar,
but not to the things that call.

He gnashed his teeth and he held his tears,
the tasks of alien taste;
From day to day drew him away as the years made haste, made haste;
The things that he thought he ought to do
as a duty to his kind,
He did them first, and he held his thirst,
and he learned to never mind.

He did them first and he did them last; he took them as they came,
From the hand of Fate that bade him wait till he knew for the cup of Fame.
They bent him back and beat him down,
they made him a machine,
And he grew aware how not to care for the hopes he could not glean.

The art he knew, and the part he knew, and the curbed and cramped desire;
The peaks of thought where he might have wrought by Song's immortal fire.
He laid them down without a frown—his masters in their glee
Grew warm with mirth to watch the birth of his humility!

A King to sit in the place of Kings, he kissed the rod and served;
He had not talked, he had not balked, he had not paused or swerved;
He fed the mouths that asked for food; all things he did, did well—
And this is true of me and you, as true as song can tell.

The work that we want to do the most,
that we know we can do the best,
Some day, we cry, when we have earned the right to sit and rest,
We'll take the thing and through the thing
—Ah! why so far the flame?
And why so deep the vales that sweep between us and our fame?

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL

Mrs. Langtry in "The Degenerates" at the Garden Theatre.

"DIE WALKURE" REPEATED

Grundy's Comedy of Decadence Draws a Crowd—Other New Bills—Gossip of the Stage.

The first performance of "The Degenerates," at the Garden Theatre, last evening, turned out, as might have been expected, to be largely a personal exhibition of Mrs. Langtry in gorgeous and daring attire—Mrs. Langtry in flesh-colored satin with sapphires, Mrs. Langtry in pale-blue satin with diamonds in dazzling array, Mrs. Langtry in white with pearls. Mrs. Langtry, after the trying first act, almost as handsome as ever; Mrs. Langtry amiable, rattling, purposeful, triumphant, and astonishingly, alarmingly décolleté.

Besides Mrs. Lahgtry, only one noteworthy and competent actor, Mr. Frederick Kerr, is concerned in the performance of Mr. Sydney Grundy's imitation of the manner and the morals of Wycherley in a modern environment. Mr. Kerr acts his rôle, which is almost the same rôle as that acted by Mr. Mason in "Wheels Within Wheels," with his accustomed tact.

The Duke of Orme, though he may be an "ass," as Mrs. Trevelyan unkindly suggests, or a "fool," as he himself is inclined to fear, is nevertheless a well-bred man of the world of fashion, and Mr. Kerr carries the part with the easy bearing and the undefinable grace of such a man. The rôle is, in fact, very slender and rather dry, but the actor lends to it dignity, humor, and a saving touch of sentiment.

Mrs. Langtry, with all her eighteen years of stage experience, has yet not become so adroit and resourceful an actor as her present vis-a-vis, but she always had a taking personality, she has a clear understanding of her limitations, she has appreciation and a fine sense of pictorial effect.

Her deficiencies were most in evidence in the first act of the new piece, in which, too, her costume, in spite of its splendor, was not becoming to her, and her audacious display of a large area of her surface quite uncovered produced so much amazement among the spectators that she was, so to speak, handicapped. Grundy is at his worst, dramatically, in this first act, and only an actress with the brilliant style belonging to comedy of intrigue could make this division of his drama interesting.

Thereafter, in more becoming clothes, if not in more of them, Mrs. Langtry's personal comeliness was found to be still a factor to be reckoned with, while in the quieter and more effective scenes the intelligence of her acting told. She reached no great height, but there was none to reach. She might have spoken with a larger variety of expression, her face might have mirrored a few more shades of emotion, but what she did was all satisfactory enough.

She was received by an audience that completely filled the theatre and there was considerable applause that was evidently bestowed on the play and the actress in good faith. At the close there were calls for the usual superfluous speech and most of the audience waited for the response.

Yet it cannot be said truthfully that "The Degenerates" made any sort of a hit. People who went expecting something extraordinarily wicked were doubtless disappointed. Mr. Grundy's imitation of Wycherley is, indeed, Wycherley and water, and for the water we must be thankful.

The play is undeniably a fairly smart thing of its poor kind. The scène à faire—the tricky penultimate climax—is so old and worn that it seems odd a dramatist of Grundy's sense of humor should have employed it. The discovery of the wrong lady in the locked room was in "Lady Windemere's Fan," and has been in a hundred other plays. The article that gives the clue to the deception is here a glove instead of a fan.

And that, with the unexpected entrance into a room full of the objectionable riff-raff that we are asked to believe compose the bulk of London fashionable society in this hour, of a pure girl of sixteen years, fresh from a convent school, makes up the dramatic content of "The Degenerates."

If one could believe in the play for a minute it would be much more objectionable than it is. But it is not to be taken seriously. It is all obviously artificial and false. It is not informed with a true artistic purpose.

Much of the dialogue is amusing, though it is never up to the level of its author's best. There are some bits of repartee, like the Duke's reply to the baffled adventurer, who declares he is the devil himself—"In that case, we'll meet again"—which exactly hit the mark. There is some conversation in which symptoms of the strumous diathesis that affects the play are very noticeable.

Of course, an obvious thing for the reviewer to do would be to dwell on the nastiness of the piece, to moralize upon its picture of social depravity and its glorification of a female creature who is little better, on her own confession, than a "thing of naught." But the readers of this newspaper will be spared that futile sort of preaching this morning.

The company Mrs. Langtry has employed, excepting Mr. Kerr, is generally of a poor quality. Miss Lucie Milner seemed to make a great hit with some frantic folks in the audience in the grateful and showy little rôle of the daughter of Mrs. Trevelyan, whose return to her home is supposed to be the means of the mother's salvation.

Her performance was unaffected, and of some sort of negative merit, but it revealed no particular charm of personality or skill of expression. Really the credit for the success of the episode belongs to Grundy.

The other three ladies in the troupe are simply incompetent, and some of the men are not much better. Harcourt Beatty presents a consistent picture in the wholly repulsive rôle of a cynical invalid, and George Osbourne (one of our own actors) burlesques a burlesque as a vulgar and impossible Hebrew. The two sons of George Grossmith, who play small parts, are youngsters who have a great deal to learn yet.

"The Degenerates" is well mounted though, and the performance is all as smooth and swift moving as need be. One merit of the piece is its comparative brevity.

IN THE AUDIENCE.

The audience was large but not very brilliant socially, although there were here and there some fashionable people. Mr. and Mrs. Lester del Garcia had one stage box. With them were Mr. and Mrs. Courtlandt Van Rensselaer and Mr. Richard Fay of Boston. Mrs. del Garcia was in gray and Mrs. Van Rensselaer in red and white brocade.

In the other proscenium were Dr. and Mrs. William T. Bull, (Mrs. Mary Nevins Blaine.) Mrs. Bull wore a white satin gown cut in the Grecian mode, and her hair worn around her forehead bound with a fillet of gold.

A representative party consisted of Mrs. Gouverneur Kortright and Mr. Harry Lehr, Mrs. Elisha Dyer, Jr., Mr. Craig Wadsworth, and Mr. Stevens Ulman. Among others were Mrs. Gillig, Mr. Goureaud, Mr. and Mrs. Thorley, Mr. and Mrs. Ritzeman de Grove, Mr. Woodbury Kane, Baron Rosenkrantz, Mr. Emil Tweyefort, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus B. Cowing, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Flannery.

"DIE WALKURE" AT THE OPERA.

Mme. Eames Comes Forward as the Bride of the Volsung.

Wagner's "Die Walküre," having been once presented to a Friday night audience at the Metropolitan Opera House, was last night performed a second time, and on this occasion for the delectation of the Monday night patrons. Persons who subscribe for both nights are naturally presumed to be of the order of those who are glad to hear "Die Walküre" twice. There was nothing in last night's performance of a novel nature, except that Mme. Eames came forward for the first time as Sieglinde, the "braütliche schwester" of Siegmund, the Volsung. This added materially to the musical beauty of the repetition, for it will readily be conceded that the loveliness of Mme. Eames's voice is much greater than that of the voice of Miss Susan Strong, who last sang the part.

Dramatically, Mme. Eames has learned to create in Sieglinde a finer illusion of sincerity than in most of her other parts. Her personal grace and beauty are thoroughly in place, and she shows an intelligent grasp of the meaning of her music and of her relation to the other personages in the drama. People who go to the opera just to hear the sounds of voices are naturally more pleased with Mme. Eames's Sieglinde than with that of her predecessor.

The other personages in the drama were the same as heretofore. They were Mme. Nordica as Brünnhilde, Mme. Schumann-Heink as Fricka, Mr. Van Dyck as Sigmund, Mr. Van Rooy as Wotan, and Mr. Pringle as Hunding. With such an array of artists the most touching of the Nibelung dramas could not fail to exercise a potent charm upon the large audience which heard it. The enlightened stage management continued to project Valkyrs down a toboggan slide in the clouds at sporadic intervals without regard to the announcements of their approach by their sisters on the stage; but we must bear such things. Mr. Paur conducted with sympathy and the orchestra was efficient.

"MARTHA" AT THE AMERICAN.

Flotow's Tuneful Opera Warmly Greeted by a Big Audience.

Patrons of the American Theatre have demonstrated their preference for Flotow's "Martha." It was sung again last night by the Castle Square Opera Company. New costumes and scenery added a further reason for the enjoyment of those persons who had heard the opera before at this house. The audience was large and much spontaneous applause followed the most conspicuous features, particularly after the second act.

The part of Martha was well sung and acted by Miss Adelaide Norwood, who made a success of the rôle last year; that of Nancy, her gay waiting maid, was sung by Miss Maude Lambert. The rôles of Plunkett and Lionel were sung by W. G. Stewart and Reginald Roberts, respectively. "The Last Rose of Summer" was sung by Miss Norwood and Mr. Roberts with much expression and called forth prolonged applause.

Schweighofer's Last Week.

Felix Schweighofer entered upon the final week of his engagement at the Irving Place Theatre last night, when he acted the title rôle in Blumenthal and Bernstein's comedy entitled "Mathias Gollinger." Mathias is a wealthy rural brewer, who goes to Berlin with a view to building there a "beer palace" in partnership with a city capitalist. His daughter is courted by the capitalist's son, but Gollinger's amiable gaucheries lead to an estrangement.

Of course, nothing could be much more commonplace than the dramatic situation thus suggested. But people who expected the Austrian comedian to present himself in other than commonplace plays have learned their mistake. In each play of his repertory Schweighofer is very nearly "the whole show." The dexterity, sympathy, and drollery of all his portrayals, however, are delightful.

The rôle of old Gollinger gives him an excellent opportunity. The cast includes that favorite of local German playgoers, Anna Braga, as well as Wilhelmine Schlueter, Anna Leonardi, and Rudolph Senius.

Theatres and Music Halls.

HARLEM OPERA HOUSE.—Richard Mansfield began his week's engagement at this house last evening with "Cyrano de Bergerac."

EDEN MUSEE.—New moving pictures from South Africa on the war were shown last evening and will continue to be shown every afternoon and evening of the week.

THEATRE COMIQUE.—An interesting burlesque is again offered this week by the Tammany Tigers Burlesque Company, an organization which has its quota of variety folks.

DEWEY THEATRE.—"Wine, Woman and Song" is the burlesque offered by the management this week; appearing in the olio are the Burke Brothers, the Jenny Eddy Trio, the Russian midgets Itaski and Philoski, Mazuz and Mazett, the Three Racketts, and many others.

HUBER'S MUSEUM.—Col. Schults's troupe of Great Danes shared the honors with Zip and Mohammed and Lelilla Ben Jamin. A number of freaks and specialty acts in the curio hall increased the interest in that part of the establishment. An excellent vaudeville organization appeared in the theatre.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE.—"Ned" Harrigan was favorably received upon his return yesterday. He was seen in "McSorley's Inflation." Duncan's collies, a troupe of trained animals, were a novelty. Others were Dr. Sato, juggling comedian; Ed Lasell, musical comedian; Harding and Ah Sid, comedy acrobats; Tyson Sisters, Leslie Palmer, and the Biglow Twins.

PROCTOR'S PALACE.—An entertaining programme of specialties was given yesterday. The Nawns appeared in their laughable character sketch. "A Touch of Nature." Joe Welch gave Hebrew impersonations, the Moullere sisters performed on the triple-bar, Pauline Moran, Leo Dervalto, Cyr and Hill, Keno and Welch, Melrose and the kalatechnoscope made up the rest of the bill.

HURTIG & SEAMON'S MUSIC HALL.—A good vaudeville programme was given at this house. Minnie Palmer and her company presented a one-act sketch called "Rose Pompon." Watson, Hutchinson, and Edward were seen in a sketch entitled "The Dramatic Agent." Lewis and Ryan, Mark Sullivan, Dick and Alice, Jessie Millar, the Tennis trio, and Florence were also in the bill.

KEITH'S UNION SQUARE THEATRE.—Minnie Seligman made her reappearance, after a long absence, in a sketch called "Comedy and Tragedy," assisted by a competent company. They earned large quantities of well-deserved applause. The remaining part of the bill contained George Wilson, a musical comedian; Miss Louise Gunning, who sang Scotch ballads, the De Foreests, who executed many difficult dances, and others.

KOSTER & BIAL'S MUSIC HALL.—A good all-around vaudeville programme drew a good-sized audience last night. Vernona Jarbeau continued her engagement, giving in addition to her repertory of last week an imitation of Mme. Calvé as Carmen, which was cleverly done. Others who were interesting were the Holleway Trio, Frederick Hallen and Mollie Fuller, Solaret, Goldin, Max Unger, Eva Mudge, Hall and Stanley, and Tim Cronin.

THE MURRAY HILL THEATRE.

"An Enemy to the King" Successfully Revived.

As this week's offering Manager Henry V. Donnelly at the Murray Hill Theatre revived Robert N. Stephens's drama, "An Enemy to the King," which proved an excellent attraction for his patrons, judging from the afternoon and evening audiences. The same good taste was displayed in the mounting of the play, and very nearly the full strength of the stock company was brought forward in giving the piece, which was played with dash and smoothness.

Ralph Stuart was the Ernanton de Launay, and Hannah May Ingham as Julia de Varion acquitted herself admirably. Thomas L. Coleman was the Claude le Chatre, the Jeannotte of Miss Dorothy Donnelly was convincing and true to life, and Charles D. Waldron was successful in the rôle of Guillaume Montignac. Others in the cast were Walter Allen, A. B. Gillam, Georgia Welles, and Mrs. Thomas Barry.

Next week Maurice Desvallieres's and Anthony Mars's play "Never Again" will be given.

TOLEDO SUNDAY CRUSADE.

TOLEDO, Jan. 15.—Members of Hoyt's "A Black Sheep" and of the "Wicked London" companies, and the managers of the theatres in which they appeared last night, were all arrested this afternoon charged with violating the State law by giving Sunday performances.

The costs of the prosecution were guaranteed by a local clergyman. The cases will be tried in the police court to-morrow morning.

JULIA ARTHUR WANTS DAMAGES.

Sues Al Hayman and W. J. Davis of Chicago for $25,000.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—Julia Arthur has filed a damage suit against Al Hayman and Will J. Davis, managers of the Columbia Theatre, for $25,000, for their refusal to allow her to appear last April in "A Lady of Quality" at the theatre. Last January Miss Arthur was undecided whether to stage this play or to substitute other plays, when the managers canceled her engagement.

The attorneys for Messrs. Hayman and Davis say Justice Stover's refusal to grant an injunction restraining the managers from other bookings settled the case in their favor, and that there is no way to measure damages.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The springlike atmosphere of yesterday made it difficult to believe that it was the Monday which marked the height of the season, on the calendar at least, in the society world. The second of the Bagby Musical Mornings of the second series of this season and the one hundred and second of the mornings since they first began, drew the usual large throng of society women to the Astoria ballroom, many of whom afterward lunched in the Waldorf-Palm Garden. There were in the afternoon several "at homes," and the evening brought Miss Josephine Drexel's large dinner at Delmonico's, Mr. and Mrs. Paul G. Thebaud's tin wedding dinner and reception, several other dinners, including a "hen" dinner given by Mrs. William Tailer at 14 East Seventy-second Street, and a farewell dinner for Mrs. William F. Burden, who will sail for Europe on Jan. 24, and the opera, where "Die Walküre" drew a large and brilliant house.

To-day will bring the second meeting of the sewing class of the Lying-In Hospital at the residence of Mrs. James A. Burden, a reception to be given by Mrs. Charles A. Van Rensselaer, (Miss Fitzgerald,) who was married last month in Boston, and the third of the informal Tuesday evening musicales at Miss Callender and Miss De Forest's, in the Tiffany Building. There will be a concert at the Astoria given by Mr. David Bispham and Mr. Henry K. Hadley and an orchestra of sixty pieces, under fashionable patronage. Among the patronesses are Miss De Forest and Miss Callender, Mrs. Henry Marquand, Mrs. John E. Cowdin, Mrs. Henry W. Poor, Miss Sarah Hewitt, Mrs. Thomas B. Clarke, and Mrs. George Hoffman.

The artists who appeared at the Bagby Musical Morning yesterday were Miss Marguerite Hall, Miss Anna Otten, and Signor Scotti. The Kaltenborn String Quartet also played, and Miss Clara Otten and Mr. Isadore Luckstone were at the piano. The Kaltenborn Quartet played Haydn's Quartet, Opus 64, No. 5; the "Shepherd's Dance" from "Henry VIII.," an adagietto by Bizet, "The Butterfly" by Razek, and a saltarello from Opus 27 by Grieg. Miss Hall sang Henschel's Morning Hymn, M. V. White's "How Do I Love Thee," Sullivan's "Here the Bee Sucks," and Tosti's "Les Filles de Cadix," and for an encore Gounod's "Ave Maria," with a violin obbligato by Miss Anna Otten. Signor Scotti delighted his audience with the prologue from "Pagliacci" and two selections from "De Leva." He also responded to two encores. Miss Anna Otten rendered charmingly on the violin a romanza by Sarasate, and a Hungarian selection by Hubay. Among those present were Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Jr., Miss Callender, Miss De Forest, Miss Le Roy, Mrs. Wilbur Bloodgood, Mrs. Burnett, Mrs. James Struthers, Mrs. George Burroughs Torrey, Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Hillhouse, Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Winslow, Miss Van Tassell, Mrs. S. Untemeyer, Mrs. de Cordova, Mrs. Cameron, Miss Helen Gould, Miss Amy Townsend, Miss Bertha Bartlett, Mrs. Ormo Wilson, Mrs. James A. Burden, Mrs. Belmont Tiffany, Mrs. Edmund L. Baylies, Mrs. Frederic Bronson, Mrs. George Crocker, Mrs. Burke-Roche, Mrs. Samuel Thorne, Mrs. George Bird, Miss Edith Clapp, Miss May Field, Miss Elsa Bronson, Miss Emma Stone, and Miss Leila Vanderbilt Sloane.

Mrs. Bradish Johnson will give a dance in the Metropolitan Club Annex on Saturday evening next. Mention has already been made in this column of the dance to be given by Mrs. R. Fulton Cutting at her residence, 24 East Sixty-seventh Street, on Tuesday evening next. This will follow the dance to be given on Monday evening by Mrs. Ogden Mills. Mrs. George Crocker will give a dance early in February.

The second meeting of Mrs. Schuyler Quackenbush's dancing class, otherwise known as the "Five Cotillions," which will be held at Sherry's on Friday evening next, will be a bal poudre. Fancy dress will not be obligatory, but the committee insists that the girls shall have their hair powdered. On Thursday evening the third dance of the Bachelors and Spinsters will be held at Delmonico's.

Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer, who will sail on the St. Paul on Wednesday, will proceed at once to Rome to join her daughter, Mrs. John Mayer, who is spending the Winter there with Mr. Mayer, who has been here on a short visit, and who will return with Mrs. Havemeyer. The Etruria, which did not land her passengers until Sunday, brought, among others, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Allen, Miss Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bruce and the Misses Bruce, Mr. B. Harrison and Miss Harrison, and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Robinson. Mr. Francisco Terry and Francisco Terry, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Colgate, Franklin Frear, the artist; Mr. and Mrs. W. R. George, H. H. Harjes, Roderick Terry Hughes, Mrs. Cooper-Hewitt, George Inness, the artist; John La Farge, the artist; Chevalier François Pangaert d'Optorp, the Hon. R. Clere Parsons, Edward C. Moffat, John Russell Pope, Count A. Tatnoski, Secretary of the Austrian Legation at Washington, and C. W. P. Waddington were among those who arrived on the St. Paul.

Mr. Eastman Johnson, the artist, is reported to be seriously ill at his residence, in this city, with pleurisy. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were to have been among the guests at Miss Drexel's dinner last night, but Mr. Johnson's illness prevented. Mrs. E. J. Cook of Macon, Ga., a sister of Mrs. R. T. Wilson of this city and an aunt of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., who was injured several weeks ago in a railway accident at Macon, underwent yesterday an operation, and her recovery is doubtful.

The death of the Countess de Suzannet, who was Miss Virginia French, a daughter of the late Abel French of Albany and a cousin of Mrs. Samuel Penniman and Mr. Benjamin Knower, which occurred in Paris on Sunday, will be greatly regretted by numbers of friends in this city. The Countess, as Miss French, was well known in New York society twenty years ago.

There have been no details cabled concerning the last sad hours of the deathbed of Lady Alice Montague. It would seem, however, that her brother, the Duke of Manchester, did not arrive at Davos Platz in time, as a letter of date Jan. 1 from London describes the Duke as having a very merry time at the Savoy Hotel there and waiting for Miss Edna May to sail for America. "On the Steward Christmas voyage of the Oceanic," says the same correspondent, "the Duke of Manchester responded to the singing in the smoking room of 'God Save the Queen' by chanting 'The Star-Spangled Banner,' and as an encore gave a song from 'The Belle of New York,' the sentiment of which was that the dear old Union Jack and Old Glory will stand and fall together." Some friends of the Duke have stated, however, that they had a cable message from him at Davos. The same correspondent speaks of the departure from London of Mr. Adelbert Hay—"Little Breeches," as he is known by his friends—for Pretoria, and the dinner given to him by the Plum Pudding Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul G. Thébaud (Miss Reynal) gave a dinner at their residence, 158 Madison Avenue, last night, to celebrate their tin wedding. They were married in St. Francis Xavier's Church, in this city, on Jan. 15, 1890. The dinner was a small one of ten covers, and the guests were the best man and ushers at the wedding and some young women friends of Mrs. Thébaud's who assisted in receiving at her wedding reception in 1890. She had no bridesmaids. It has been Mrs. Thébaud's custom to give a dinner to these same guests on the yearly anniversary of her wedding, who are Nathaniel C. Reynal, who was Mr. Thébaud's best man; Ernest Adee, F. F. Carey, E. L. Dale, Richard T. Wainwright, William S. Scott, E. G. Schermerhorn, J. Henry Carson, and E. A. Le Roy, Jr., and Mrs. John Boyd, Mrs. F. Kingsbury Curtis, Miss Oddie, Miss Pierson, Miss Coudert, and Mrs. John R. Townsend. An orchestra played during the dinner. The decorations of the table were red, pink, and white roses, and these flowers were placed in tin loving cups on the table and other tin dishes about the room. The dinner was served on tin dishes made especially for the occasion, and numerous wedding presents of tin were used to decorate the table and the room.

Lord and Lady Craven's large house party at Coombe Abbey disbanded on Jan. 2. Arabassador Choate and Mrs. Choate returned to London. The abbey is described as a fine old place, but rather damp and depressing. The house lies low and is surrounded by woods. The Cravens pass a great deal of their time with Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Martin.

The possible visit of the Count and Countess de Castellane to this city is something of a surprise, and, although the cable reports that they have sailed from Havre, many people have doubts as to the accuracy of the news. Their advent here, however, will not be a social event of any importance. Miss Anna Gould was not very well known in society, and the Count de Castellane was not a frequent guest at any of the very fashionable houses in New York, although he went everywhere at Newport. But the recent interest taken by Mr. and Mrs. George Gould in society and the interest taken by society in Mr. and Mrs. George Gould will possibly make a difference. There will no doubt be some handsome entertainments given in honor of the young couple. Just now, when the season is slack, society is longing for a novelty, and the Castellanes may supply this want.

Another bit of information by cable is that Mr. Thomas Pearsall Thorn gave a musicale recently at his new home in Paris. Mr. Thorn is a composer, and is devoted to music. He has purchased a hotel in Paris, and has added to it a theatre. He gives weekly soirées, at which he intends to present the works of new American and foreign composers. Among his guests at his last entertainment were many members of the American colony, including the Castellanes and the venerable Countess de Trobriand. Among the artistes who sang was Mrs. Rosalba Beecher Collins, the wife of Mr. Clarence Collins of this city. Mrs. Collins was formerly Miss Rosalba Beecher of the Casino. When her stepdaughter, Miss Edith Collins, now the wife of Rechid Bey, went abroad, after her own mother's death, Mrs. Collins went with her. She devoted herself to operatic and musical studies, and there were rumors that she was going to return to the stage, but these rumors have always been denied. Mr. Collins lives in New York, and Mrs. Collins has taken up her residence in Paris.

An engagement of interest announced is that of Miss Carolyn Hunter Kane, the eldest daughter of Mrs. Walter Langdon Kane, and Edgar Morris Phelps, the eldest son of Henry Delafield Phelps of Davenport's Neck, New Rochelle. Miss Kane is a débutante of last Winter. Her mother was a Miss Hunter of Newport, and a half-sister of Miss Augusta and Miss Bessie Hunter and Mrs. Shafter Howard of Oakland, Cal. She is also a niece of Col. Delancey Astor Kane. Mr. Phelps is a brother of Mrs. Robert F. Emmet of New Rochelle, a descendant of the famous Lewis Morris, and a graduate of Princeton University.

Mrs. Wilbur Bloodgood has been giving a series of charming luncheons at her residence, 49 East Thirty-fourth Street, on Monday afternoons after the Bagby musicales. Among her guests have been Mrs. de Neuville, Mrs. Henry Barclay, Mrs. George Hoffman, Mrs. William Fanshawe, Mrs. Walden Pell Anderson, Mrs. Lindley Hoffman Chapin, Mrs. J. Todhunter Thompson, Miss Pierson, Mrs. J. Ellis Roosevelt, and Miss Emily Hoffman.

Mr. Max Agassiz has been cruising in the Southern Pacific seas. He was recently at Tahiti. The Fithian party which started in August for an extended cruise of the South Seas, has broken up, and one of the members of it, a young woman well known in society, who went out as the guest of Mrs. Fithian, returned on the schooner Sea Bird to San Francisco, on Christmas Day, much to the surprise of her family and friends.

Cannes continues to fill up very slowly. Among the late arrivals there are the Count and Countess de Pourtales (Miss Barbey) and Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Seligman. Mrs. Henry White is at Grasse. The Duchess of Marlborough may join her sister-in-law at Nice, in case the Duke persists in going to South Africa. She has given up for the present all social engagements. Her mother is with her at Blenheim. Lady Lansdowne insists, however, that at her charity performance the Duchess will recite.

The prices for stalls at the tableaux arranged by Mrs. Arthur Paget, in London, are now quoted at 10 guineas each, and £100 for a box. The Queen has taken twelve stalls, and the Prince and Princess of Wales will be present.

Malta is becoming quite popular as a watering place. Lady Charles Beresford will pass the Winter there, and there are many other Englishwomen of fashion who will be at the same place.

MISS DREXEL'S DINNER DANCE.

Miss Josephine Drexel gave last night at Delmonico's a large and handsome dinner dance. Miss Drexel reserved for her entertainment the entire second floor, and the fourth floor was used for dressing rooms. The dinner, which was one of 100 covers, was served in the large ballroom, and the guests were received by Miss Drexel and Mrs. George R. Schieffelin, Mrs. Edwin Parsons, and Miss Leary, in the small ballroom. Miss Drexel wore a gown of spangled black net over black satin, Miss Leary was also in black, and Mrs. Schieffelin wore a gown of gray satin heavily spangled with steel. The dinner was served at twelve small tables, Miss Drexel's table, the centre one, was larger than the others, and was placed in the centre of the room. All the tables were decorated with pink bridesmaid roses laid in wreath form about the centrepiece, which on the eleven smaller tables was a candy basket piece, and on Miss Drexel's a mound of pink roses and white hyacinths. At each of the women's plates was laid a bunch of violets with a pink rose in its centre and tied with violet ribbons, while boutonnières of white carnations were laid at each man's plate. Many Cottages Robbed at Jamestown.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Jan. 15.—In the course of the past three months many of the Summer cottages at Jamestown have been broken into, and furniture and other valuables stolen. Rewards have been offered for the arrest of the culprits, but hitherto without result. This afternoon the police arrested two Italians employed on the new fortifications at Fort Greble, who are held as suspects. Property worth thousands of dollars is said to have been stolen since the cottages were closed.

PROF. EGLESTON DEAD.

Founder of the Columbia School of Mines—His Fight Against the Tweed Ring.

Prof. Thomas Egleston, LL. D., founder of the School of Mines of Columbia University, and for thirty-three years Professor of Mineralogy and Metallurgy in the School of Mines, died yesterday morning at his home, 35 Washington Square. His death was not unexpected, as he had been suffering for several weeks with a complication of diseases. He died in the house in which he had lived for thirty years. His wife died in 1895, and he had no children. The funeral services will be held at Trinity Church Thursday. The burial will be in the Mc-Vickar vault in Trinity churchyard.

Prof. Egleston was of New England stock. His ancestors were among the first settlers of Dorchester, Mass., in 1635. The family afterward moved to Connecticut, and then to New York. Prof. Egleston was born in New York Dec. 9, 1832. He took a course in chemistry at Yale and was graduated in 1854. He afterward went abroad, and attended lectures on geology and chemistry in Paris. He determined to go through the regular course at the French School of Mines, and was graduated from that institution with honor in 1860. His attachment to the school resulted in two gifts to the institution of $5,000 each.

He returned to this country in 1861, and shortly after was appointed Director of the mineralogical collections and laboratory of the Smithsonian Institution at Washington. After spending two years in Washington, he conceived the idea of a School of Mines in New York. There was then no institution in this country in which mining and metallurgy were taught as the main subjects. Prof. Egleston's plan aroused the interest of the President of Columbia, the late Dr. Charles King, and a majority of the Board of Trustees. Arrangements were made to begin the school a year later in the old college building in Forty-ninth Street. Prof. Egleston was made Professor of Mineralogy and Metallurgy in the school, which had at first not more than twenty students. The history of the school has been one of steady growth, and its influence has been felt in all parts of the country.

Prof. Egleston was also one of the founders of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, and was at one time its President. He was one of the founders of the American Meteorological Society, and of the Societies of Mechanical Engineers and of Electrical Engineers. He was a member of the Society of Civil Engineers and of the Iron and Steel Institute of Great Britain. He was also active in many other scientific societies. In 1868 Prof. Egleston was appointed a United States Commissioner to examine the fortifications of the coast, and in 1873 he was one of the jurors of the International Exposition at Vienna. The degrees of Ph. D. and LL. D. were conferred upon him in 1874 by Princeton and Trinity Colleges respectively. The Government of France made him a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1890, and gave him the rank of "Officier" in 1895. Prof. Egleston published a great number of books and pamphlets on scientific subjects. Two years ago he withdrew from active work in the School of Mines and was made professor emeritus.

Prof. Egleston's efforts in saving Washington Square from obliteration during the Tweed régime were made the subject of much favorable comment. He received much of the credit for the defeat of a bill introduced at Albany to build an armory at the western end of the park, and to otherwise destroy its beauty.

Prof. Egleston was a member of Trinity Corporation. He became President of the Bible and Comon Prayer Book Society in 1871, and was Vice President of the Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society from 1870 to 1877. He was also a Trustee of the General Theological Seminary. In memory of his wife, Mrs. Augusta McVickar Egleston, who, as stated, died in 1895, he presented to Trinity Church a jeweled chalice of rare beauty, studded with 180 gems.

REPORT ON STATE CANALS

Superintendent John N. Partridge Reviews the Year.

HOW A SAVING WAS EFFECTED

Recommended that Remaining Contracts Under the Nine-Million-Dollar Law Be Terminated.

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—Col. John N. Partridge, Superintendent of Public Works, to-night transmitted to the Legislature his first annual report on the canals. In discussing the finances of the department, which he says were in a depleted condition when he took charge of the canals on Jan. 18 last, Col. Partridge has this to say:

"On Feb. 1 it appeared that the balance of the ordinary repair fund available for the last eight months of the fiscal year was $127,000 less than for the corresponding period of the year before, and that there was a large number of outstanding bills overdue, aggregating upward of $25,000. With this limited cash balance, an unusually large sum was called for by the General Inspector for the repairs absolutely necessary to make possible an early opening of navigation, and to insure it against interruption from breaks and other accidents. Instead of asking the Legislature for a deficiency appropriation, I sought to meet the situation by practicing economy in the administration of the business of all the sub-divisions of the department.

"I at once cut the force of employes down to the minimum consistent with efficient service, and later increased the force during navigation season by the employment of only so many as were clearly shown to be needed, and by the appointment of only such as were physically and by experience best fitted for the work to which they were to be assigned. The results obtained were the earliest opening of navigation, a small number of interruptions to navigation, a balance of $2,061.76 on hand at the end of the year, and no unpaid bills in the office, with the exception of several in dispute aggregating $776.64."

Col. Partridge touches upon the subject of the contracts hanging over under the nine-million-dollar act, and which the Canal Board under which it is, by the Legislature of 1899 have been giving much time to, briefly. There were, he says, forty outstanding contracts entered into under the nine-million-dollar act, work under which had been commenced, but not completed. The engineers of the investigating commission had estimated that it would require $4,000,000 to complete the unfinished work on these contracts.

Col. Partridge continues:

"The Legislature at its last session passed an act, Chapter 544, Laws of 1899, which permitted any of the parties holding these contracts (those under the nine-million-dollar law) to apply within sixty days to the Canal Board for the termination of their contracts and payment of such amounts as the Canal Board should find and determine were properly due." Twenty-nine contracts were submitted to the Canal Board. The contracts, specifications, agreements for extra work, and the engineers' estimates were carefully considered by the board. The evidence given before the investigating commission was studied attentively."

Col. Partridge states that twenty-eight contracts were terminated as a result of these studies, and that the amounts "found properly due" aggregated $857,215.26, or $25,989 less than appeared upon the last estimates. The total amount of the contracts upon which action was taken was $2,400,000. There still remain "outstanding" contracts which were not brought under the provisions of the above act, for the completion of which it has been estimated $1,460,000 will be needed.

Col. Partridge expresses it as his belief that it would be for the best interest of the State and of the contractors that these contracts be terminated without unnecessary delay, either by extending the provision of Chapter 544, Laws of 1899, so as to cover them or by appropriating a sufficient amount for their completion and ordering the work to be finished.

Col. Partridge discusses the eight-hour law passed by the last Legislature somewhat at length, and criticises it in so far as it has been made to apply to laborers and bricklayers under the Department of Public Works. He asks that so far as this latter class of employes is concerned, the law be amended.

Under the head of "Recommendations," Col. Partridge has this to say:

"Unless some legislative action is taken at this session looking toward the enlarging and improving of the canals in the near future the annual appropriation for extraordinary repairs should be increased from $350,000 to $700,000 in order to properly strengthen banks, bridges, walls, &c. Should provision be made for general improvement the usual appropriation of $350,000 for ordinary repairs will probably be sufficient to keep the canals in as good condition as at present until such new work can be progressed. Thus the necessity for a larger appropriation may be avoided."

EDUCATION IN THIS STATE.

The Board of Regents Reports on Number of Institutions and Average Cost Per Student.

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—The annual report of the State Board of Regents shows that there were 31,409 students in 1899 in New York colleges, professional, technical, and other special schools, as compared with 69,776 in New York high schools and academies. The report says that "there has been during the past year a decided advance in the standards of business education in New York State, and largely on account of the movement in this State there has been also a distinct increase in the interest taken in business education in other States.

"The better class of business schools in New York and in many other States are urging the necessity of longer and more thorough courses than they have heretofore advocated."

Beginning with 1901, business examinations will be held in January and June each year.

The report of the High School Department shows the number of high schools to be 541 and the number of academies 134, an increase of 3 academies and 27 high schools during the past year.

The average salary of high school teachers has increased from $615.11 to $637.01 in 1899, while at the same time the average salary in academies has decreased from $606.61 to $595.27.

In 1898 500 high schools expended $2,239,226.45, or $43.91 for each student instructed; in 1899 the amount expended by the 541 high schools was $3,708,195.53, or an average of $62.10 for each student. The average expenditure per student in the academies was $149.73 in 1899, an increase of $18.14 over that of 1898. The total expenditure for secondary education in the State in 1899 was $5,226,824.63, of which $3,212,155.36, or 59.13 per cent., was from local sources and $391,843.65, or only 10.37 per cent., was contributed by the State.

During the past year the university granted to the secondary schools $233,587.41, of which $56,700 was for the $100 quota under the Horton law, $59,299.83 for attendance, $32,222.53 for books and apparatus, and $95,365 for credentials.

NEW SCHOOL BILL INTRODUCED

Mr. Gale Wants All Salaries in Queens Paid and the Acts of the School Board Legalized.

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—Mr. Gale of Queens County entered the School bill arena to-night with a bill to provide for the payment of the salaries of the Principals, teachers, and other employes of the public schools in the Borough of Queens, City of New York, and to legalize the action of the School Board thereof and the appointment of the teachers. The bill says:

"The acts and by-laws of the School Board of the Borough of Queens fixing the amounts of the salaries of the borough and associate Superintendents, Principals, teachers, and other members of the supervising and teaching staff, janitors, truant officers, and other employes of the School Board for the year 1899, are hereby legalized, ratified, confirmed, and made valid, adequate, and effectual to establish the amount of the same as a good, valid, and subsisting claim against the City of New York, in favor of each of such borough and associate Superintendents, Principals, teachers, and other members of the Supervising and teaching staff, janitors, truant officers, and other persons so employed by the said School Board of the Borough of Queens during the whole or part of the year 1899, and the unpaid salaries and balances of such salaries of said borough and associate Superintendents, Principals, teachers, and other members of the supervising and teaching staff, janitors, truant officers, and other employes of the School Board are hereby ratified, legalized, confirmed, and established as valid and subsisting claims against the City of New York in favor of such borough and associate Superintendents, Principals, teachers, and other members of the supervising and teaching staff, janitors, truant officers, and other employes of the School Board, respectively.

"The nominations and assignments to service of all teachers made by the Borough Board of Superintendents in the year 1899 are hereby legalized and confirmed and made valid, and such salaries as the grade of work, experience, qualifications, and assignment to service of the said teachers would entitle them to respectively, under any provision of law or schedule existing at the time of said nomination and assignment to service are hereby established, legalized, confirmed, and made valid and subsisting claims against the City of New York in favor of such teachers.

"The Controller of the City of New York, for the purpose of providing funds to carry out the provisions of this act, is hereby directed and required to transfer and apply from and out of the fund from and out of which judgments against said city are paid an amount sufficient to pay all of the unpaid salaries and balances of salaries aforesaid."

THE TAX COMMITTEE'S BILL.

Joint Report Is Submitted and Measure to Tax Trust Company and Bank Stock Introduced.

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—The report of the joint Committee on Taxation, which was published in THE NEW YORK TIMES Jan. 12, was submitted in both houses to-night. In the Senate, Senator Stranahan, after commenting on the report, introduced a bill carrying out the recommendations of the committee and providing for a tax of 1 per cent. on the value of all shares of stock in trust companies and banks and a tax of 5 mills on mortgages.

In presenting the report to the Assembly, the leader of the majority said the committee approached the consideration of this subject with the feeling that it was one which was bound to be considered by us as citizens and lawmakers of the Empire State rather than as partisans looking for political advantage, and this report and this bill are presented to this Legislature as the joint result of the best thought and best effort which could be given by the individual men composing the joint committee.

"It is not a Republican measure; it is not a Democratic measure; it is a measure presented by the seven men who make up the committee as one which they believe will impose no undue burden upon personal property, which will relieve the present undue burden upon real estate, which will be a distinct advantage to the borrower and not of serious disadvantage to the lender.

"Bonds will be taxed in exactly the same way as the security which is termed a mortgage is to be taxed and those who criticise this scheme have utterly lost sight of the fact that the stock of all domestic corporations and that portion of the capital stock of foreign corporations which is employed in this State are to-day taxed are taxed for State purposes only, and are exempt from local taxation just as bonds and mortgages will be if the bill which accompanies this report is enacted into a law."

The report was referred to the Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment.

WANTS NEW CIVIL SERVICE LAW.

Assemblyman J. E. Smith Desires Non-Competitive Examinations.

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—Assemblyman James E. Smith of New York to-night introduced a bill for the absolute repeal of the White civil service law of last year, known as "Chapter 370 of the Laws of 1899, an act in relation to the civil service of the State of New York, and the cities and civil divisions thereof."

Mr. Smith says that he intends later to introduce a substitute bill for the White law, whose basic principle shall be a non-competitive examination. Mr. Smith says frankly that he does not believe in the White law, as it is administered. He says its effect is to build up an aristocracy of office holders. He is a firm believer in the principle "to the victors belong the spoils." He says that the purpose of his bill will be to give the offices to the party which wins at the polls.

The White law was passed last year as a substitute to what was familiarly known as the "Black stareblese law," and is founded upon the principle of competitive examinations. It embodied the recommendations of Gov. Roosevelt in his first annual message, and its passage was indorsed and urged by the Governor.

LIFE INSURANCE PROFITS.

Bill Requires that Policy Holders Receive Dividends Annually.

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—Assemblyman Demarest of Rockland to-night introduced an insurance bill, which provides that any life insurance corporation in the State, and those of other States, and also foreign life insurance companies doing business in this State, which hereafter issues a policy on the life of any person, who at the time was a resident of this State, must declare and pay annually to such policy holder, in cash, the dividend or profit accruing to said policy holder from said policy, and that the payment of the first dividend must be made within a period of two years from the date of the issuance of said policy, and that the payments of these dividends shall be made annually.

BILLS PASSED IN THE SENATE.

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—Senator Thornton's bill conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to dispose of the alleged claim of Sarah M. Holcom against the State for damages alleged to have been sustained by her was passed without opposition.

A special emergency bill urging a special election in the Thirty-first Assembly District of New York on Jan. 23 was also passed.

AGAINST THE GERRY SOCIETY.

Mr. Harburger Asks that a Committee Investigate Its Affairs.

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—In the Assembly to-night Mr. Harburger of New York introduced the following resolution:

Whereas, The New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, commonly known as the Gerry Society, receives successively each year $80,000 from the City of New York, provided for by the charter of Greater New York, and this amount is given on the assumption that the society is a charitable one; and,

Whereas, The highest court of the State having declared that it is not a charitable association, and since no authentic information can be received as to the financial standing of the institution, be it

Resolved, That a committee of five members of this body shall be appointed who reside within the boundaries of the Greater New York, to investigate the affairs of the society, and to report back to this Legislature before its adjournment, and that this committee shall do its work without compensation.

Mr. Harburger desired to debate his resolution, but on objection it went over for one week, under the rules.

The same order was taken on another resolution of Mr. Harburger's, condemning the State Excise Department and urging the Assembly to wipe the Raines excise law off the statute books.

ANOTHER LINE TO BROOKLYN?

New York and Brooklyn Union Transportation Company Incorporated.

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—The New York and Brooklyn Union Transportation Company was incorporated to-day. It proposes to construct and operate a railway of ordinary gauge by either compressed air or electricity between the Boroughs of Manhattan and Brooklyn in the City of New York.

The length of the road will be four miles, but the certificate of incorporation does not state by what means the road is to cross the East River. The capital stock is $40,000, divided into 400 shares of the par value of $100 each. The Directors are George E. Wilson, Adrian H. Muller, A. N. Glover, L. F. W. Wallace, and William A. Armstrong of New York City; Frank N. Glover and Charles L. Downes of Mount Vernon; John Laburt of Jamaica, and Alta L. Foulk of Brooklyn.

Adrian H. Muller, when seen yesterday, declined to say anything about the plans of the New York and Brooklyn Union Transportation Company. It was reported that it intends to build a four-mile broad gauge road between Manhattan and Brooklyn over the Brooklyn Bridge. Mr. Muller refused to confirm or deny this report.

SENATOR COFFEY'S TRIAL.

Democratic Leaders in Brooklyn to be Asked to Testify.

Senator Michael J. Coffey's counsel announced yesterday that they intended to call all the Brooklyn Democratic leaders, including Hugh McLaughlin, to testify before the special committee of the County Executive Committee which is hearing the charges of political heresy against the Senator.

Isaac M. Kapper of Mr. Coffey's counsel made an effort late yesterday afternoon to obtain subpoenas for some of the leaders, but was unable to see John Maguire, the Chairman of the committee. Application for the subpoenas will probably be made to-day. The committee will resume the hearing Friday evening.

Several of the district leaders said yesterday that they were ready to appear before the committee if called upon. As to Mr. McLaughlin, however, it is not believed that he will pay no attention to an invitation to testify, as he has made arrangements to go to Florida.

CHILDREN DROWNED IN A POOL.

Ice that Had Formed Gave Way Beneath Their Weight.

Two children of Paul Haff were drowned yesterday afternoon in a pool of rainwater near their father's home at Maple Hill, Queens. They were Annie, nine years old, and Joseph, aged six years.

The heavy rain last week formed the pool of water in a hollow. It was about 15 feet deep at one point, and the surface became covered with ice. The children were skating on the ice when it gave way under them. A child who saw them go down ran to their home and gave the alarm. Mr. Haff hastened to the pool but the children had disappeared. The bodies were recovered by the police.

LIFE CRUSHED OUT BY WAGON.

Mother Refused to Let Dying Child Be Taken to a Hospital.

Hyman Roman, two-and-a-half years old, was run over by a wagon at Stanton and Suffolk Streets at noon yesterday. He died from his injuries a few minutes later. The child was with its mother at the time of the accident. They were on their way to their home at 168 Suffolk Street. When an ambulance from Gouverneur Hospital arrived, Mrs. Roman clung to the child and refused to allow it to be taken to the hospital. One of the front wheels of the wagon had passed over the child's neck and shoulders.

Jacob Ockelman, the driver of the wagon, was arrested later in the day, and taken before Coroner Zucca, who admitted him to bail in the sum of $1,000, pending the inquest.

HOLDS SOAP A NECESSITY.

Magistrate Releases Man Arrested for Selling It Sunday.

Samuel Seebol, a grocer, of 109 Forsyth Street, was arraigned before Magistrate Flammer, in the Essex Market Court, yesterday, to answer a charge of violating the Sunday law.

"He sold soap," said the complaining policeman.

"Soap!" exclaimed the Court. "Soap. Why, the man ought to be commended for it. In my opinion, it would not harm the people on this side of the city if they used more soap and used it more freely. Soap in this case, in my opinion, was sold as a necessity, and on that ground the prisoner is discharged."

Memorial Meeting for Dr. McGlynn.

A meeting of the friends, clerical and lay, of the late Rev. Dr. Edward McGlynn will be held this evening at 220 East Twenty-fourth Street, at which arrangements will be perfected for the holding of a memorial meeting in the near future. The Rev. Dr. Richard L. Burtsell has accepted the position of treasurer of the committee organized to raise a fund to pay off the obligations left by the dead priest.

Cut His Throat in a Bathtub.

Joseph Luthin, fifty-four years old, of 512 Washington Street, Hoboken, yesterday committed suicide by cutting his throat in a bathtub which he had filled with water. His sight had been failing for some time and he feared that he would soon become blind. He kept a stationery shop for many years, and established the first circulating library in Hoboken.

Donation for Missionary Work.

The receipt of $20 from "E. D." for the missionary work of the American Sunday School Union has been acknowledged by Edward P. Bancroft, District Secretary of the union, to THE NEW YORK TIMES, as requested by the donor.

REPUBLICAN CLUB ELECTION.

John Sabine Smith Chosen a Member of the Executive Committee, but He Declines to Serve.

The friends of John Sabine Smith outwitted his opponents at the annual election last night of the Republican Club. On the ticket submitted by the nominating committee and posted by the club the name of John Sabine Smith was included in the five candidates for members of the Executive Committee.

Subsequently, in accordance with a constitutional right, twenty-seven members signed a notice naming J. F. Hitchcock against Mr. Smith. This act was charged to the influence of Wilbur F. Wakeman, Appraiser of the Port of New York, but he denies responsibility. The action, however, caused some friction and a good deal of comment that threatened serious dissension. In the interest of harmony both Mr. Smith and Mr. Hitchcock withdrew from the race. No one was named for the vacancy.

In the absence of President Chauncey M. Depew, Vice President Robert N. Kenyon presided. More than 100 votes were cast, and when the ballots were counted the name of John Sabine Smith was on one of them. His friends, led by John Proctor Clarke, insisted that Mr. Smith had been legally elected.

The opposition under the leadership of Mr. Wakeman contended that Mr. Smith having withdrawn and his withdrawal having been posted, he could not be chosen. Col. Charles A. Dennison stated that no matter what the legal rule might be in the case, Mr. Smith, if declared elected, could decline to serve.

Acting President Kenyon decided that any member of the club was entitled to vote for any candidate he wanted, and that the vote must be counted. He therefore declared Mr. Smith regularly elected, but asked that an appeal be taken from his decision.

James P. Foster appealed, and a vote being taken, the chair was sustained, 52 to 24, Mr. Smith's friends heartily applauding. Mr. Smith then arose and declined to serve as a member of the Executive Committee.

The following was the ticket chosen:

President—Chauncey M. Depew; Vice Presidents—First, Louis Stern; Second, Charles H. Treat; Third, P. C. Costello; Recording Secretary, Pratt A. Brown; Corresponding Secretary—Alfred R. Conkling; Treasurer—J. Edgar Leaycraft.

Executive Committee—To serve until January, 1905; William M. K. Olcott, Robert N. Kenyon, William Leary, James L. Wandling, John Sabine Smith; to serve until January, 1904, Robert C. Morris; to serve until January, 1902, Edward C. Jones; to serve until January, 1901, William Einstein.

Committee on Membership—To serve until January, 1903, J. P. Marshall, Henry C. Piercy, Donald McLean.

Committee on Library and Publication—Herbert H. Gibbs, Alfred L. M. Bullowa, Henry Melville, Edward W. Harris, James T. Nicoll, Henry A. Uterhart, Judah L. Talntor, Edward F. Brush, I. Albert Englehart.

Committee on Finance—Lyman G. Bloomingdale, Thomas H. Hubbard, Seth M. Milliken, Louis Marshall, Albert R. Shattuck.

WEARY OF NEW YORK QUARRELS

Henry C. Payne Says Party Bickerings Here May Send the Vice Presidential Nomination West.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 15.—Henry C. Payne of Wisconsin, a member of the subcommittee of the National Republican Committee having in charge the arrangements for the holding of the National Convention in this city in June, left to-day for Washington. Before leaving he spoke of the question of the Vice Presidency:

"It has been conceded that President McKinley will be renominated at this convention by a unanimous vote, but when it comes to the second place on the ticket all the indications at this time point out that there will likely be a large field of candidates. To name the candidate now is an impossibility. The name of Cornelius Bliss of New York would be acceptable to the people of many of the States, both East and West, but Mr. Bliss has said that under no consideration must his name be used for the nomination. I have heard the name of Attorney General Griggs spoken of for the place, but it is not at all likely that he would accept it.

"For some time past the West has been perfectly willing to allow the Vice Presidential nomination to go to New York, but the multiplicity of candidates in that State of late made the statesmen of the Middle West look at the situation in a different light. If New York wants the nomination she must stop quarreling or the Mississippi Valley will present a candidate with a strong backing. It has been a long time since the West has had a Vice President, and unless there is some decided stand taken by the Eastern statesmen, the West will do just what she was ready to do in the last Presidential campaign. It was only the great popularity and friendship entertained for the late Garret A. Hobart which prevented the West from pushing her own candidate."

NEW JERSEY LEGISLATURE.

Justice Lippincott's Nomination Confirmed—New Bills.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 15.—The two houses of the Legislature were each in session about an hour to-night. The Senate confirmed the nomination of Job Lippincott for Supreme Court Justice, and the Governor sent in the name of J. Frank Fort for reappointment as Common Pleas Judge of Essex County.

Among the bills introduced in the House to-night were these:

By Mr. Abbett, taxing franchise values as property; also, providing that all taxes paid by railroads shall be for local uses.

By Mr. Mallon, an anti-trust bill.

By Mr. Cooper, a 5 per cent. interest bill.

THE GOEBEL HEARING IS BEGUN.

Time of First Session Taken Up by a Wrangle Among Attorneys.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 15.—The contest boards in the Governor and Lieutenant Governorship cases met to-day. Every member of both boards answered to roll call. The attorneys occupying the seats on the Taylor-Marshall side were ex-Gov. Bradley, W. H. Yost, T. L. Delman, and Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge; those on the Goebel side, Louis McQuown, Zack Phelps, Aaron Kahn, and James Andrew Scott.

Taylor's attorneys filed a protest against the board sitting in the case. The protest is based on the ground that the charges filed by Taylor several days ago alleging that several members are disqualified from serving, were overruled without investigation; that the charges, if investigated would relieve these members from serving, and that the committee would then be without a quorum. Exceptions were also filed as to many important parts of Goebel's and Breckham's notices of contest.

This was followed by a long wrangle among the attorneys, at the close of which the examination of witnesses began.

Alleged Bribers Are Indicted.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 15.—The Franklin County Grand Jury to-day returned indictments against John H. Whallen and Charles H. Ryan, charging them with unlawfully conspiring to bribe a member of the General Assembly, to-wit, Senator S. B. Harrell. Bench warrants were at once issued for Whallen and Ryan, bond being placed at $1,000 in each case. The cases were set for trial on Thursday, the 25th inst.

To Investigate Gov. Taylor's Charges.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 15.—Dense crowds packed the lobbies and galleries in the legislative branches. In the Senate, Senator Howard (Rep.) introduced a resolution that a committee be appointed to investigate the charge of Gov. Taylor as to Senators Frazier, Crenshaw, and Allen, the Senate members of the contest committee. The resolution was referred to the Judiciary Committee with instructions to report to-morrow at noon.

Girl Charged with Poisoning Lover.

COFFINS TO GO TO MANILA.

One of Them Contains the Mislaid Body of a Soldier.

SANTIAGO, DE CUBA, Jan. 15.—The next United States transport to leave Santiago will carry 1,000 coffins, which will go to Manila. Unfortunately, one of these contains the body of a soldier. As it was not marked, the coffin was mislaid, and it is now impossible to discover which one it is, as each box contains three caskets.

MOVEMENTS OF TRANSPORTS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Telegrams were received by Quartermaster General Ludington to-day announcing that the transports Olympia and Pennsylvania have arrived at San Francisco from Manila and that the transports Sheridan and Port Albert will leave Seattle on the 17th and 19th instants respectively for Manila. The Sheridan will take forage and will proceed direct to Manila, stopping at Nagasaki only in case of necessity.

The Port Albert will take horses and mules and will touch at Hilo, Hawaii, en route. The usual stop at Honolulu will be omitted because of the existence there of the plague.

The Buffalo to Sail for Manila.

The naval transport Buffalo, formerly an auxiliary cruiser, has been ordered to sail from the Brooklyn Navy Yard for Manila on Feb. 11. She will carry to the Philippines the families of officers on duty there, and will probably also take a company of marines to Manila. The Buffalo, which was at one time the Brazilian cruiser Nictheroy, has been remodeled at the Brooklyn Navy Yard and fitted up for transport service. The ship has been fitted with steel partitions and all modern conveniences. Special quarters have been provided for the wives of army and navy officers, who desire to go to Manila on the vessel.

SHAFTER'S FOOD COMING HOME.

SANTIAGO, Cuba, Jan. 15.—The transport McClelland, which leaves to-day, will carry back forty tons of commissary supplies, principally canned goods.

These stores have been here since the surrender of the town.

Would Preserve Cuba's Trees.

HAVANA, Jan. 15.—Gen. Rius Rivera, Secretary of Agriculture, Industry, and Commerce, has addressed a communication to Gen. Wood advising that steps be taken immediately to protect Cuban forests belonging to the public domain. He urges that he be empowered to appoint six inspectors, at a salary of $2,000 each, with instructions to locate public property and to consult with the officers of the rural guard in the various provinces as to the best methods of preserving the trees, which are now being used at the pleasure of the first person who desires to cut them.

Ex-Mayor of Santiago Dead.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, Jan. 15.—Rafael Salsado, who was Mayor of Santiago at the time of the capitulation, died last night from heart failure. He was a prominent Cuban patriot, and there was a great popular demonstration at his funeral to-day.

THE PRIZE MONEY QUESTION.

Attorney General Asks that Cases Be Referred to a Commissioner.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Attorney General Griggs has filed an answer in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia in the proceedings for prize money for captures at Manila Bay by the fleet under Admiral Dewey. The Attorney General asks that the cause be referred to a Commissioner, and that Admiral Dewey, his officers and crew, and also the United States, may have leave to take testimony.

The Attorney General concedes that a state of war existed, but denies that the squadron under Dewey's command captured the Spanish cruisers Isla de Cuba, Isla de Luzon, and Don Juan de Austria. These vessels, he says, were sunk during the engagement. He asks for fuller information in regard to other points, and says that, although some captures of property were made, its condemnation as prize to Dewey and his men is not authorized.

The Attorney General has also filed a similar answer in the case of Admiral Sampson with regard to the destruction of Cervera's fleet.

NEWFOUNDLAND'S OWNERS WIN.

Supreme Court Reverses Decision as to Captured Vessel.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The United States Supreme Court to-day decided another of the naval prize money cases growing out of the capture of vessels during the blockade of Havana in the war with Spain.

The case was appealed from the decision of the Circuit Court of South Carolina, the vessel involved being the Newfoundland. The decision of the lower court was reversed, the Supreme Court holding that the actions of the Newfoundland were suspicious enough to justify its seizure, but not to warrant forfeiture.

The restoration of the vessel to its owners was therefore ordered, but without damage or costs. The Newfoundland is owned in Halifax.

A Survivor of the Monitor.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Lieut. Howard, who has just died in Washington, and who was pilot of the Monitor during her brief but famous career, was not the sole survivor of the company of that vessel of war. There is still in the active service of the Revenue Marine a former officer of higher rank than Lieut. Howard, Capt. Louis N. Stodder of the Revenue Cutter Service, who was master's mate of the Monitor when she sank, off Hatteras, on the night of Dec 31, 1862. He is now in command of the anchorage service in New York Harbor.

Riot by Soldiers in Phoebus, Va.

Special to The New York Times.

PHOEBUS, Va., Jan. 15.—There was a small riot here to-night by soldiers from Fort Monroe. It grew out of an effort on the part of the soldiers to clean out the Dewey House, one of the unsavory resorts of Phoebus. One of the soldiers was shot and killed by a negro. The soldiers then ran through the streets, firing their pistols promiscuously and yelling like Indians. A second contingent from the fort was hurried to the scene, and the rioters were dispersed without further fatalities.

Will Bring the Albany Home.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Capt. Craig has been ordered to go to England to bring the cruiser Albany to the United States. It will cost about $5,000 to send a crew and officers to Newcastle-on-Tyne, where the Albany is now lying.

MR. RYAN LOSES HIS SUIT.

Judge Waddill, at Norfolk, Refuses to Grant an Injunction Against the Seaboard Consolidation.

NORFOLK, Va., Jan. 15.—United States District Judge Waddill this afternoon refused the injunction prayed for by Thomas F. Ryan of New York against the consolidation of the Seaboard and Roanoke Railroad with the other roads of the Seaboard Air Line system, the Florida Central and Peninsular and the Georgia and Alabama Railways. Upon the request of counsel for the complainant Thursday next was set as the day for the issuance of the formal order.

After reviewing the contentions of either side, Judge Waddill says:

Upon the whole case, my conclusion is that the circumstances do not justify granting the injunction asked, that the probability of irreparable damage to the complainant from a failure to award the injunction is at least no greater than the injury likely to result to the defendants if awarded, if indeed so great. To the present time the complainant does not appear to have been seriously damaged, and I doubt not that his rights can and will be fully protected.

The rights of the other persons interested in the litigation should not be overlooked, and especially is this true in case in which a minority stockholder is insisting upon a course to secure his rights, believed by practically all of his co-stockholders to be inimical to and utterly destructive of theirs. The complainant's stock, according to the present market value, is worth $200 per share, the par value being $100, that is $491,200; whereas that of the other stockholders who oppose what complainant wishes, is worth $2,285,000. This refers, of course, only to holdings in the Seaboard and Roanoke Company. When the interests of those that may be seriously affected by the injunction in the other roads of the Seaboard Air Line system, of the Georgia and Alabama Railway Company, and the Florida Central and Peninsular Railroad Company, proposed to be consolidated with, are taken into account the amount reaches to many millions of dollars.

The other stockholders in the Seaboard and Roanoke Company who believe that $200 is an excellent price, have the right to expect the Court to cautiously exercise the discretion asked in an effort to protect a stockholder owning less than one-fifth in amount of the company's stock, when by so doing others might be seriously affected.

The preliminary injunction prayed for will be refused.

Soldier Murderer a Suicide.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Jan. 15.—Louis August, the Fort Monroe soldier who was convicted in Hampton on Saturday of the murder of Annie Benedict and sentenced to eighteen years' imprisonment, hanged himself with a towel in his cell last night. He was found this morning after he had been dead several hours. August said on Saturday that he would commit suicide rather than go to the penitentiary, but little attention was paid to this threat.

A Year's Gifts to Harvard.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 15.—The statement of the Treasurer of Harvard University, which will soon be issued, shows that gifts which were made to the university from Aug. 1, 1898, to July 31, 1899, aggregated $1,544,829. Of this

BURGLAR UNDER HOTEL BED

P. M. Shahnon, a Waldorf-Astoria Guest, Finds One in His Room.

The Uninvited Visitor Hands a Letter to His Host, Signed "A Discouraged Youth."

An original burglar was found by P. M. Shannon, a wealthy oil producer, of Pittsburg, Penn., in his room at the Waldorf-Astoria last night. When Mr. Shannon returned from the theatre and asked the clerk for the key to his room, No. 332, it was found missing from his box.

"You must have taken it with you, Mr. Shannon," suggested the clerk.

Mr. Shannon felt in his pockets, but could not find the key.

"Perhaps I did," he replied "But I have lost it."

A duplicate key was produced, and Mr. Shannon let himself into his room. After reading a newspaper for a while he prepared to retire, but before turning in for the night felt a hitherto inexperienced impulse to look under his bed. To his surprise there was a man concealed in the shadow near the wall. Mr. Shannon jumped back toward the electric call and was about to press it when the man under the bed stuck out his head. His face was blanched, and in a hoarse voice he whispered:

"Don't for God's sake, don't ring the bell." He started to move from under the bed.

"Don't move or I'll kill you," commanded Mr. Shannon, and the man slunk back. He threw a wallet out from his hiding place and asked Mr. Shannon to open it.

"There is a letter which will explain all," he gasped.

"Oh, no," replied Mr. Shannon. "You don't get the drop on me like that." He had by this time rung the call bell, and to the boy who had instantly responded he shouted to call the house detectives. In the meantime the man under the bed was shaking with sobs.

"Read the letter," he pleaded.

Mr. Shannon's curiosity got the better of him, and seating himself in a chair on the further side of the room, from the bed, and placing a heavy walking stick across his knees, he began to read. He was thus engaged when House Detectives West and Lenman arrived. The letter was written in a bold, clear hand. It read:

"New York, Jan. 10, 1900.

"To whom it may concern:

"Had I not believed in my arrest I would not have written this. This, my first crime, has been deliberately planned. I did not come to New York with the intention, where I pawned a little jewelry, as the pledge coupons will show. My object in coming here was to qualify myself for a profession, but for the education necessary I lacked funds, and was therefore compelled to abandon my desire and seek employment.

"Notwithstanding the many want ads. which appear daily in the newspapers, I was unable to procure the same. My recent funds have been consumed for food. I was obliged to pledge everything that had value. I am sane and do not plead for mercy, though I suppose the penitentiary awaits me.

(Signed) "A DISCOURAGED YOUTH."

The man was dragged from under the bed by the two detectives. While Mr. Shannon was dressing he had a talk with the man, who said he is H. A. Lordon, salesman of Summit Home, Texas. Mr. Shannon asked him about people he knew in Summit Home, and that neighborhood, and discovered the prisoner knew many of his old friends intimately.

Lordon said he came of a good family. His wallet contained a dozen pawn tickets, one of which was for a diamond ring upon which he had secured $30. The others were for jewelry and for lesser sums.

The man said he had grown desperate and had planned to rob Mr. Shannon. He had loitered in the hotel corridor and had not been molested, as he was well dressed and had the appearance of one who might have business there.

When Mr. Shannon had handed in his key before leaving the hotel Lordon learned its number. He waited until certain that Mr. Shannon had left the hotel and then boldly ascending, informed the clerk he desired to get his key. He asked the clerk to give him the key of his room. "It's No. 332," he said quietly.

The clerk suspecting nothing wrong handed over the key. Lordon went up to the room, and secreted himself under the bed intending to wait until the guest in the room slept and then rob him of whatever he could find.

Lordon's story was so plausible and he made such a favorable impression on Mr. Shannon that when the latter, with Detective Lehman, reached the West Thirty-th Street Station House, he did not want to make any charge. He consented, however, to do so, saying he will appear in the Jefferson Market Court this morning and decide whether or not he will press the case.

When he got back to the hotel, Mr. Shannon telegraphed to Texas, and when he appears in court he will probably have either verified or disproved Lordon's tale. If he finds the young man's story true, it is believed he will not prosecute the case.

Although Lordon declared that he was a gentleman, in his pocket the detective found a card bearing the following inscription:

"A. Lordon, Feats of Imaginary Strength. Season of 1899-1900."

His card, he explained, was his. He had given some exhibitions of "imaginary strength," which consisted of illusory tests, the breaking of chains and similar tricks that any one could perform.

DINNER FOR W. J. BRYAN.

To Be Given at the Democratic Club by Commissioner Keller.

Comissioner John W. Keller of the Department of Charities, who is the President of the Democratic Club, yesterday sent a letter to William Jennings Bryan inviting him to be present at a dinner which Mr. Keller desires to give in his honor at the Democratic Clubhouse at any time during his intern visit that may suit his convenience. Mr. Keller said last night that the invitation was a personal one and that it was not to be construed in any way as representing the wishes of the club or of the Tammany Hall organization.

At the dinner, besides Mr. Bryan, there will be a number of Mr. Keller's friends, most of them Democrats of prominence. Until Mr. Bryan's reply is received Mr. Keller will be unable to say when the affair will take place or whom he will invite. On the evening the dinner is held, Mr. Keller says many members of the club as wish to meet Mr. Bryan will be presented to him. He expects to entertain about fifty men.

Mr. Bryan, it is expected, will reach the city next Monday afternoon. He will be the guest of Dr. John H. Girdner, who also intends to give a small dinner in his honor. Mr. Bryan will remain in the city or its vicinity for about a week.

BIKER FOUND UNCONSCIOUS.

Chiles H. Simms in Roosevelt Suffering from Opium Poisoning.

Chiles H. Simms of the firm of M. Farris & Co., Custom House brokers at 13 Williamstreet, is in Roosevelt Hospital suffering from opium poisoning. He is being closely watched by the physicians, and it is probable that he will recover.

Mr Simms came to the hospital under peculiar circumstances. Patrolman Brady of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station found him yesterday afternoon sitting on thesteps in front of the Empire Hotel, at Sixty-third Street and Broadway. Some cabmen told Brady that the man had come up Broadway seemingly intoxicated and wold have fallen if they had not placed his there. Brady tried in vain to rouse the man, and then telephoned to Roosevelt for an ambulance. There was no ambulance to be had at that moment, and when hetelephoned for the patrol wagon he found that it was busy. He got an express wagon inthe neighborhood and took Mr. Simms to the hospital in that.

The patient's identity was established by papers in his possession. He had a two-ounce vial which had contained tincture of opium, but as he was unconscious nothing could be learned as to the circumstances under which he got into the condition in which he was found. He was well dressed, wore diamond stud and buttons, three diamond rings, and had $55 in his pockets.

Mr. Simms lives at the home of his partner, Matthew Farris, at 140 West Seventy-ninth Street. He has an aunt, Mrs. Mary Burns, who lives at 537 Lexington Avenue. The police went to work on the case when the man was brought in because of the fact that he appeared to have been drugged somewhere.

CAPT. PRICE FOR MORE MEN.

New Head of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau Intends to Make Some Radical Changes.

The transfer of Capt. James K. Price from the Tenderloin Precinct to the Brooklyn Detective Bureau has greatly disturbed the usual serenity of things in the police circles of that borough. The local headquarters is rife with rumors, and every man is apparently speculating as to what the advent of the Tenderloin's commander portends. Capt. Price declares the force of detectives is not adequate to the requirements of a big place like Brooklyn, and one of the first moves he will make will be to ask for more men.

Not more than forty men are at present engaged in the work of the bureau. Capt. Price says he will ask to have this force increased to 100. It is also his purpose to secure better quarters for the bureau. He expressed himself in unmeasured terms yesterday with reference to the cramped and poorly equipped quarters at present occupied by the detectives.

"This is a junk shop," he declared to the reporters who called upon him in the detectives' headquarters in the Municipal Building. "Look at that basin over there. Just one for the use of forty men. Then look at this floor. I've just asked the Street Cleaning Department to send a corps of men with a hose and brooms and mops to clean it. This is no fit place for any man to be in."

Capt. Price had a long talk with his men yesterday. He told them he had been sent over to Brooklyn to do police work; that he intended to do his duty, and expected every man under him to do his. He assured them that every man would receive fair treatment at his hands and that each would be judged by his ability alone.

"I have been sent over here to run the Detective Bureau," said Capt. Price later. "I will do the best I can to make it effective. I have not come to pound or hound anybody. I have no favorites and will have none. I intend to introduce common sense methods here. We should have 100 men to do the work of this bureau, and I intend to ask for them. We have less than forty men to cover a territory containing over 1,000,000 inhabitants to cover."

Capt. Price intimated that it was his intention to introduce Manhattan methods in running the bureau. It is expected he will make many radical changes in the bureau as soon as he gets settled. He made a change last night as a beginner.

The Captain was much astonished yesterday when he learned that Sergt. Henry Metcalf was the only Sergeant attached to the bureau, and that he had to do nearly all the desk work. Capt. Price asked Metcalf about his hours of duty.

"I come here in the morning at 7 o'clock," said the Sergeant, "and attend to the records. I remain on duty until 6 o'clock. I generally drop in at night to see how things are running, and I usually find something to do then. You see, I am the Sergeant."

"You also appear to be the doorman and a lot of other things," said the Captain.

As a result of this talk with Metcalf, Capt. Price last evening ordered Roundsmen Harrington and Vachris to alternate with Metcalf in doing desk duty, each to be on for eight hours a day.

HOSPITAL PHYSICIANS OUSTED.

Commissioner of Charities John W. Keller yesterday discharged the twelve physicians resident in the Metropolitan Hospital on Blackwell's Island as the result of an investigation by the Visiting Board of Physicians of an occurrence at the hospital on Saturday. The physicians dismissed from the service are: House Surgeons Clark, Clements, King, and Durrin; Junior Surgeons Post, Birdsall, Meyers, and Reynolds, and Senior Surgeons Rogers, Allen, Brumbach, and Bornman.

The physicians had some disagreement with the Superintendent, George T. Stewart, and on one occasion the Superintendent complained of his staff. Superintendent Stewart went into the Morgue at the hospital Saturday and found suspended from the ceiling by the leg of a man who had recently died. Pinned on the body was a placard bearing an uncomplimentary reference to the Superintendent.

WANTS AUTOMOBILE AMBULANCE

Annual Report of the New York Post Graduate Hospital.

In the fifteenth annual report of the Directors of the New York Post-Graduate Hospital the urgent need of the hospital for an ambulance service is set forth with some emphasis.

Owing to the generosity of Mrs. Percy R. Pyne the hospital has a sufficient sum of money for the purchase of an ordinary ambulance, but the Directors have decided that it shall have an automobile ambulance.

The Treasurer's report for the year ended Oct. 1, 1899, shows a deficit of $3,780.26, while the reports from the various wards show that 2,668 patients were treated in the hospital during the past year. Of these 1,354 were discharged as cured, 520 were improved in condition when discharged, 152 were discharged unimproved, 148 were transferred to other hospitals, and 320 died.

TENNIS AT TUXEDO PARK.

Special to The New York Times.

TUXEDO PARK, N. Y., Jan. 15.—The first day of the Tuxedo tennis and racquet tourney at the new club was taken up by an exhibition match between T. Suffern Taller, amateur champion of the Tuxedo Tennis Club, and Alfred Tompkins, professional champion of the New York Racquet and Tennis Club of New York. The result was a draw, two sets all. The professional allowed Taller a half fifteen handicap.

The first set went to Taller by a score of 6 to 4, after reaching 5 to 1. Tompkins got well forward in the court and struggled up to 4 to 5; then he lost the next game, but, improving as he went on, he won the next set by 6 to 3. Taller braced up, and by great volleying took the next by 6 to 3. The last set was an even fight, Taller keeping the lead till he had reached 5 to 4, when Tompkins by lengthy strokes well played took three games, winning the set by 7 to 5. Darkness came on before another set could be played, so the match was decided a draw.

Tompkins played very gracefully, showing skill and adaptability to a strange court. Taller also played a good game.

On Tuesday Lawrence Stockton, amateur champion of America, plays Peter Latham, professional champion of the world. This will be a fine exhibition match, and very interesting. Latham will concede half thirty to Stockton.

Dr. Harsha's Place Is Filled.

Edgar Tilton, who has been the associate pastor of the First Collegiate Reformed Church, at One Hundred and Twenty-first Street and Third Avenue, has been appointed to the pastorate of the Second Collegiate Reformed Church, at One Hundred and Twenty-third Street and Lexington Avenue, made vacant some weeks ago by the resignation of the Rev. Dr. William J. Harsha. Mr. Tilton will assume charge of his new parish on Feb. 1, the formal installation being fixed for the first Sunday in February. He is about thirty-five years of age and a graduate of New York University and of the theological seminary at New Brunswick, N. J.

Picture of Collis's Zouaves.

While in Europe Gen. Charles H. T. Collis, having obtained the consent of Emperor William of Germany, commissioned Carl Rohmin, the Court painter, to make an oil painting of the charge of the One Hundred and Fourteenth Pennsylvania Regiment (Collis's Zouaves) going to the relief of a Rhode Island battery at Fredericksburg in December, 1862. The picture, which contains over 500 figures, will be on exhibition to-day and to-morrow at 204 Fifth Avenue.

Unconscious Man Found in Hallway.

An unknown man about forty-five years old, was found unconscious in the hallway of the house at 415 Second Avenue yesterday morning. He was fairly well dressed, but there was no property or any letters on him that would tend to indicate his identity. An ambulance surgeon from Bellevue Hospital said the man was suffering from concussion of the brain and that his condition was dangerous. There were wounds over both eyes and other injuries to the head. The man was taken to the hospital.

The second game, between the Corinthians and Chippewas, proved the most interesting. The Chippewas lost through careless spare bowling, four of the team missing easy chances to score spares. MARKET CONDITIONS.

The security market showed much disturbance at the opening of business yesterday. Many quotations fell materially and pessimistic views seemed to prevail.

To some extent reports of British progress in South Africa exerted helpful effect, but traders on the New York Stock Exchange paid less than ordinary attention to the Transvaal; there seemed to be more provocative subjects closer home.

Foreign transactions in the New York market were insignificant. London and Berlin both bought slightly at the opening, but later seemed to be letting go what had been taken earlier. The European disposition toward our stocks seems at present to be much more largely influenced by current European events than by reason of anything coming to pass in the affairs of our properties themselves.

Bear speculators were, of course, aggressive in yesterday's market. They made much of the view that the buying power of the public, and especially the speculative public, is so reduced that there can be no expectation of activity and absorption in the market at present. The bear idea is summarized tersely into this proposition: They who can buy won't, and they who would buy can't.

The short interest in the market is undeniably large; most of the little traders in the Street are in the list of shorts. Were there no dribbling out of stocks by actual holders this very short interest would of itself be sufficient to bring about a sharp rally.

A covering movement showed yesterday, buying orders being executed at recessions for a variety of stocks in comparatively large volume.

Meanwhile there is no change in the tenor of counsels from conservative authorities—the reiterated advice of trustworthy observers being that this is a good time for patient inactivity.

THE PROPOSED BANK AND TRUST COMPANY TAX.

[From a Special Contributor.]

The proposal of the joint committee of the Legislature to impose a State tax of 1 per cent. upon the capital of banks and trust companies alike meets the general approval of the bank men. They consider the rate rather high, but in this city, if not throughout the State, the burden on the banks would be lightened, and they are willing to accept the rate, so long as it is applied to trust companies also.

Among the trust companies there cannot be said to be a consensus of opinion on the subject. Some of the officers declare that they do not object to this settlement of an annoying dispute, even if it cost a little more than they have to pay now. The fact is, that trust companies now differ widely in the amount of tax they pay in proportion to their assets. Their capital has to be invested in real estate mortgages and certain securities that are exempt from taxation, but the investment of their surplus is not so restricted, and some maintain their assets in a form that subjects them to a heavy tax, while others manage to secure exemption from nearly everything except their franchise and real estate. At least one institution in this city, according to the statement of its officers, would pay a less tax under the law proposed than it has been accustomed to pay.

There are trust company men who still contend that a uniform tax upon trust companies and banks would be unfair to the former, because of the restriction upon the investment of their capital. This is tied up at a low rate of interest, and cannot be used to any better advantage, whatever the demand or the prevailing rate for loans. The low rate is due to the exemption from tax, and investment in these public securities is equivalent to an indirect payment of taxes. Originally this requirement as to the investment of capital was intended as a safeguard for trust funds, like the corresponding restriction upon savings bank investments, but a large part of the trust company business nowadays is more profitable and more venturesome than the custody of trust funds. Bank officers, and even some trust company officers, regard the restriction upon investments as corresponding to the requirement of a reserve for the banks and not pertinent to the question of taxation. While for the security of their deposits the trust companies are required to hold their capital invested in certain prescribed forms, the banks are required to keep a certain percentage of theirs on hand in cash.

On account of the restrictions of the National law in relation to the taxation of National banks by State authority, the proposed tax is nominally imposed upon the "shares," but their value is to be determined by adding the amount of capital stock, surplus, and undivided profits, and deducting the valuation of real estate, which would continue to be assessed locally.

Considering the advantages trust companies have in investing their capital, in purchasing securities of various kinds, in executing trusts, and promoting enterprises, and in doing practically any kind of banking business, it is difficult to discern any real hardship in this scheme for subjecting them to the same taxation as banks.

In spite of the arguments still urged in their behalf, there is no sign of serious opposition on the part of the trust companies, and it looks as though they were disposed to acquiesce in this settlement of the question for the sake of peace. It would not add seriously to their burdens; it would be a substantial relief to the banks; it would aid in raising the State revenue without resorting to local assessment of property, thereby getting rid of the equalization iniquity, and clearing the way for local option in the assessment of real and personal estate. In short, it is a simple and direct way of settling a number of incidental questions in taxation. The banks are in favor of it, the trust companies are evidently not disposed to fight against it, and there is no obvious reason for opposition from any other quarter. A. K. F.
New York, Jan. 15, 1900.

BALTIMORE AND OHIO.

Baltimore and Ohio stocks were sold yesterday on the belief that if the company purposed to spend $25,000,000 in improvements and betterments, the prospects for the talked-of dividends on both common and preferred were not as hopeful as they had appeared to be.

The annual meeting of the company, twice postponed, is to be held at Baltimore to-morrow, and much interest as to the outcome is manifested, especially as to changes, if any, in the Directorate.

In this connection it was said yesterday that the recent purchases of Baltimore and Ohio stock for A. J. Cassatt of the Pennsylvania were made through the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. of this city. At their offices yesterday a member of the firm declined to discuss the matter.

SUGAR'S FLUCTUATIONS.

American Sugar yesterday was as high as 117⅜ and as low as 113⅝, with the close at 116⅜—exactly the same as Saturday's final figure. As on recent days, there was considerable dealing in the stock, over 70,000 shares changing hands.

The stock was weak until late in the afternoon, when profit-taking and short-covering forced the price up. During the day houses said to be close to the Havemeyer interests were sellers of the stock, and Mr. Havemeyer was quoted as saying that it was unreasonable for stockholders to expect dividends out of surpluses.

METROPOLITAN'S DECLINE.

The weakness of Metropolitan yesterday was on further liquidation by Philadelphia houses, and on the belief that for some reason or other the affairs of the company were not in an altogether satisfactory state.

Opening at 164, the stock in less than an hour fell to 159½, but later rallied when it was reported that the bidders for the underground road were said to be in sympathy with the Metropolitan people. The final figure showed a net loss for the day of 1¾ points.

LARGE DEBIT BALANCE.

As evidence of what, barring untoward circumstances, the bank statement this week will show, it is worth noting that yesterday the Sub-Treasury was a debtor for the day to the Clearing House of something over two millions of dollars; and apparently—inasmuch as the payments on Post Office accounts are not all yet completed—there will be large debit balances for the next few days at least. In addition, the banks are receiving considerable money from the interior by mail and express, and the indications are that their condition at the end of the week will be greatly improved.

STRONG INTERESTS LACKING.

It was a remarkable fact that yesterday in the local market little or no attention was given to reports from London to the effect that the siege of Ladysmith might be relieved at any time, and that a British victory was among the strong possibilities. The truth is, there seemed to be no strong interests in the market prepared to give it the necessary support, and for the most part the traders had things much as they wanted them.

NORTHERN PACIFIC STOCK.

Northern Pacific stock was but little traded in yesterday, though the statement of earnings of the company showed for the first week of January an increase of $42,580 over the same week last year. From July 1 the earnings have been $17,429,900 and the increase $1,629,900.

In this connection it is said that the new branch roads of the company in the Canadian Northwest, extending from Portage La Prairie, are now practically completed. The country through which these extensions run is very rich agriculturally.

AMERICAN TIN PLATE.

The annual meeting of the American Tin Plate Company is to be held to-day, when it is understood the detailed figures for the fiscal year will be presented. Though there still is some talk of changes in the management of the company, in well-informed circles it is declared there will probably be no change.

On the report that action on the dividend would be deferred till a future meeting, the stock of the company yesterday fell off 1⅝ points.

STRIKE AFFECTS A STOCK.

The weakness of American Steel and Wire stock yesterday was due to the report from Cleveland, Ohio, that a strike in all the four mills of the company in that city had been ordered, and that there was danger that it might spread to the other establishments of the company elsewhere.

AMERICAN TOBACCO.

Persistent reports of new and certain competition by strong interests who were said to have perfected plans of considerable magnitude were chiefly responsible for the decline in American Tobacco yesterday, while it was also said that the company's earnings were not as favorable as they had been lately.

MAY REDUCE GAS PRICES.

People's Gas was prejudicially affected by the report that there was disaffection among inside interests, and that a bill was shortly to be introduced in the Illinois Legislature to reduce the price of gas.

SELLING WITHOUT REASON.

The lack of sound reason not infrequently evident in the market was conspicuous yesterday when traders deliberately sold down Federal Steel, Tennessee Coal and Iron, and some other steel stocks on the assumption that those companies would be hurt by the strike ordered in the shops of the American Steel and Wire Company at Cleveland.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC RUMOR.

It was reported on the Street yesterday that the Galveston, Houston and Northern will shortly become Huntington property, connecting the Southern Pacific system with Galveston. At the offices of the Southern Pacific here it was said nothing was known of the matter, nor had there been any inspection of the Galveston line on Friday, as had been stated.

NO PURCHASE OF ORE LANDS.

In reference to the dispatch from Pueblo, Col., that the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company had purchased or leased some newly discovered iron ore lands in the southern part of Utah, it is said by officers of the company here that that is not the case. The lands are said to be too far from railroads to be available at present, and no purchase or lease has been made.

NEWS OF THE EXCHANGES.

The Coffee Exchange had a good day yesterday, though the trading—35,000 bags—was not nearly as large as on Thursday and Friday last week. The market opened strong, 5 to 15 points up, and it advanced steadily, closing at the best, with a net gain of 10 to 20 points. Havre and Hamburg prices were both a little better, successive cables indicating that they had promptly responded to the strength of the New York market. This has in fact been the condition for some days past, and has led to the conjecture that Europe does not regard the presence of bubonic plague in Rio Janeiro (a fact which was officially confirmed yesterday in a cable dispatch from the Rio Janeiro Health Board to Hard & Rand, coffee importers of 107 Wall Street,) with as much alarm as it has occasioned in the trade here.

Certainly the plague report was largely responsible for the strength of coffee on the New York Exchange yesterday. Those operators who do not personally believe coffee likely to carry the infection to this port seem to assume that the trade will suffer interference anyway, because of action that may be taken by the New York Health Board.

Cotton was somewhat irregular yesterday. Some 300,000 bales were traded in. The market sold off at the opening on less favorable Liverpool prices than on Saturday, and rallied 5 or 6 points later, closing with a small net loss. The Consolidated Exchange market was active. It closed irregular. Sugar was the feature of the day's trading, scoring a small advance after a somewhat erratic course.

Wheat was weak on the Produce Exchange, unfavorable Liverpool advices and the good movement in Spring wheat serving to depress prices at the opening. The drop led to increased selling, and the market closed without recovery, after some 150,000 bushels has been taken for export. Corn declined somewhat in sympathy. The export sales amounted to 260,000 bushels. Oats enjoyed fair trading and were firm.

MR. SAGE AND STANDARD GAS.

Russell Sage declined yesterday to comment on the recent action of Standard Gas Light Company Directors in issuing a circular designed to control the stock of the concern and prevent all shareholders from disposing of their stock without first offering it at the market price to the committee which sent out the letter.

B. B. McAlpin, counsel for the committee, said he had received some replies to the circular, and thought many more would be received this week. It is understood the committee has been promised the support of very nearly a controlling interest of the stock.

Wall Street reports say that Mr. Sage received 140 for his common Standard stock and 170 for his preferred. These are quoted on the curb at 95 and 125 bid respectively.

NEW BANK OF COMMERCE.

There was some talk yesterday about the position of the future Bank of Commerce (to be formed by the union of the Bank of Commerce and the National Union Bank) in reference to shareholders' liability. It is well known that the Bank of Commerce, besides having the peculiarity of a self-perpetuating Directorate, enjoys, along with the American Exchange Bank, the distinction of being a National banking institution whose shareholders are liable for debts of the concern only to the amount of the par value of their holdings, instead of double that sum, as is the case with other National banks. The surmise yesterday was as to whether the consolidated Bank of

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

In the market for outside securities the week opened very inactive. In most groups of stocks trading was at a standstill, while the few issues in which transactions were made, with one or two exceptions, furnished only a few hundred shares. More disposition to sell stocks was shown than appeared at the beginning of last week, and in some cases this pressure brought about considerable net losses. The majority of stocks were quoted at the close at about Saturday's prices, but in many cases quotations were purely nominal, as for many issues there was no active demand.

GENERAL CARRIAGE was traded in to a limited amount in the neighborhood of 7½, and it closed at 7¼ bid, three-eighths of a point recession from Saturday's final figure. No further announcements were had in regard to the company's plans, which are said to be still under consideration in the matter of details. The first of a number of vehicles to be put in operation this week was run yesterday, and the company expects to add daily to the number of cabs ready for actual service, but owing to the delays of manufacture it is said it will probably be some time before any large number of vehicles will be regularly operated.

CAST IRON PIPE, which until quite recently was not traded in at all on the curb, was the most active of the industrials. Sales of the preferred stock were made at 43½, and the common stock, to the extent of 1000 shares or more, sold at 8½. The latter closed unchanged at 8 bid, and the preferred showed a half point decline, ending the day at 42½ bid.

ELECTRIC VEHICLE and the stocks of several of its subsidiary companies were weak and closed with a net loss, which was largest in the case of the stock of the parent company. Vehicle common, from 65 was offered down to 55 without a sale being effected and without calling out any better bid than 50 for a full lot, though 47½ was bid for 50 shares. No special reason appeared for the decline, and the offering of the stock so much below the last sale, which was made around 65, was attributed to a forced effort at liquidation.

NEW YORK TRANSPORTATION was forced down early in the day by a bear attack from 10¾ to 9¾, but it soon rallied a half point, and the last sale was made at 10¼. It closed at 9¾ bid, a net decline of three-quarters of a point. Transactions were limited to about 500 shares.

ELECTRIC AXLE sold down to 4⅞, and closed at 4¾ bid, a net loss of half a point. Bids of 10 were made all day for the stock "all assessments paid," it being expected that the plan to make the stock full paid upon the payment of the second call of $5, due Feb. 15, will be approved by the stockholders. Stock of this class was offered at 10½, but, as far as reported, no trades were made. Transactions in the stock, "$5 paid," were made to the extent of only a few hundred shares.

AMALGAMATED COPPER sold at the opening at 84¾, but it quickly declined to 84, and it remained offered at this figure, closed at 83½ bid, a half point loss for the day.

DISTILLING OF AMERICA common sold at 6⅞. It suffered a small net loss, closing at 6¾ bid, against 6⅞ bid on Saturday. Offerings of the preferred stock were made at 27, and no better bid than 23 was had.

NEW AMSTERDAM Gas bonds were much firmer. They sold at an advance of 1 point, at 96, and ended the day at 95½ bid, a net gain of half a point.

Run on a North Tonawanda Bank.

NORTH TONAWANDA, N. Y., Jan. 15.—A run began on the State Bank last Friday and continued to-day. Cashier Benjamin L. Rand said this morning that there was no danger of the bank closing owing to the rush. "I am confident," he said, "that we can withstand any demand that may be made on the bank. Bank Examiner Clark visited the State Bank last week and found it in satisfactory condition." Mr. Rand said the run was started through baseless rumors as to the condition of the bank. More money, he added, had been deposited up to noon than had been withdrawn.

H. Walter Webb Goes South.

H. Walter Webb, formerly Third Vice President of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad, has given up the house at 25 East Sixty-ninth Street leased by him from Elihu Root, and has gone to his cottage at Thomasville, Ga. He will remain there till Spring.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

New Building at Broadway and Walker Street—Dealings by Brokers and at Auction.

The southwest corner of Broadway and Walker Street is to be the site of a new fifteen-story building, to be erected by Henry Corn. The plot includes 395 to 399 Broadway, 50 by 100, and 61 Walker Street, adjoining at the rear; about 25 by 100. Robert Maynicke is the architect of the new structure, and work upon it will be begun on Feb. 1.

This property, which is now occupied by old buildings, was bought only recently by Mr. Corn from Peter J. Merrick, through Frederick Southack & Co., and title will pass in about two weeks. Yesterday a building loan on the property for $400,000 made by Mr. Merrick with Mr. Corn was placed on record.

Berry & Trenholm have sold for Mary Steers to a client, for about $70,000, the five-story flat at the southwest corner of Amsterdam Avenue and Eighty-second Street; also, for Joseph F. Stier, for about $47,000, the three four-story single flats 426, 428, and 430 West Fifty-eighth Street.

Kahn & Baumann have sold for William H. Hall, Jr., for $20,000, the five-story double flat 63 West One Hundred and Fifteenth Street, 25 by 100. The flat 58 East One Hundred and Thirteenth Street, 19.6 by 100, taken by Mr. Hall in part payment, has been resold by him for cash.

Edward Polak has sold for the Northern Improvement Company to G. C. Pepe the dwelling 1,447 Park Avenue, near One Hundred and Eighty-second Street.

According to a deed recorded yesterday, Bird M. Robinson and another are the buyers of the Hartley apartment house, at the southwest corner of Central Park West and One Hundred and Ninth Street, sold recently by Haliahan & Ahearn. The consideration is stated as $375,000.

William Wetterer transferred yesterday to Gibson Putzel the property 538 Broadway, 25.3 by 124.10.

H. McK. TWOMBLY SELLS LOTS.

Disposition of Old St. Luke's Property Satisfies Adjoining Owners.

The action of certain property owners in West Fifty-fifth Street against H. McK. Twombly and St. Luke's Hospital has been amicably settled, it is reported, by the sale of the property purchased by Mr. Twombly from the hospital to John S. Kennedy. It is understood that Mr. Kennedy will build a modern fire-proof dormitory on the lots. It will conform generally in style of architecture to the other buildings on the south side of the street. It will be used by the pupils and teachers of a girls' school.

This change is said to be satisfactory to the residents near by. When Mr. Twombly purchased the two lots early last Summer it was reported that he contemplated building a large private stable on them. The property owners adjoining protested, and then went into court. Van Schaick, Norton & Quinby were retained as counsel, and an action was commenced in the Supreme Court against Mr. Twombly and the Trustees of the hospital. It was alleged that when the property was divided into lots the Trustees had agreed to restrict the class of buildings which should be erected on them. Stores and stables were especially barred.

Mr. Kennedy, it is understood, paid $100,000 for the two lots, and the attorneys for the plaintiffs in the above-mentioned action are the authority for the statement that Mr. Kennedy has signed an agreement not to erect either stables or stores on the lots. They further say that he will erect the dormitory on the lots some time during the Spring.

Mr. Kennedy, in answer to an inquiry yesterday, replied: "I know nothing about the previous controversy over the lots. It is true that I have purchased them, and I may erect dwelling houses on them."

CARRIERS AS POST OFFICES

New Plan for Registering Letters Goes Into Effect.

Postmen Can Be Held Up in the Streets or at Houses, but the Mail Must Be Ready for Them.

The new Post Office arrangement by which persons living above Fifty-ninth Street in Manhattan, in the Bronx, and in the residential sections of Brooklyn may have letters registered by letter carriers went into effect yesterday. The scheme is being tried by the Post Office Department in various large cities with the hope of increasing the postal revenue and accommodating the public. The idea of thus making each letter carrier a sort of walking branch Post Office or sub-station has been awaited with considerable interest, especially by the carriers, who see in the innovation the necessity of putting an extra pocket in their already much subdivided uniforms and an addition to their duties, which they assert are already sufficiently onerous.

Carriers are required to accept letters for registering when delivering mail or when hailed in passing. Thus if a man in walking along the street suddenly becomes possessed of a burning desire to register a letter he may hold up a passing carrier, and the two may effect a registry on the spot, providing the hailer resides within the limits of that particular carrier's route. The system was not designed for this particular highway contingency, however, but was designed to appeal to the citizen at home.

The carrier, however, is protected in many ways from the effects of an abuse of the new system. He may be hailed, waylaid, held up, or otherwise detained by would-be senders of registered letters, but not for long. His schedule over his route, under the new conditions, resembles somewhat that of a limited express train in that the stops are to be for the smallest fraction of time. He is forbidden to make oral explanation of the new system, to indulge in any discussion whatever with patrons in regard to registration in general, to register letters free, advance money or stamps to pay postage, or to make change.

The letter must be ready in every respect when the carrier appears, for he is forbidden on pain of dismissal to wait even the fraction of a minute longer than is necessary to write the receipt. This latter act it is believed will consume quite enough time, especially in cold weather.

The carriers of all the up-town Post Offices went out on their rounds in the morning each heavily armed with the tools for registering letters on the highways and byways. These consisted, in the first place, of a book about the size of a bankbook, containing printed forms. On these forms are spaces for the number of the letter, the date, name, and address of sender, and the person to whom the letter is addressed, the carrier's name and number, and the trip number. These blanks must be made out in triplicate by means of carbon paper. Each carrier was further provided with a large stock of cards explaining fully the new system, one to be handed to any applicant who happened to be inclined to discuss the question.

The open-air registration of the first day was extremely light. The honor of receiving the first letter, it is believed, belongs to Carrier Patrick Coffee of Branch Station I, at Columbus Avenue and One Hundred and Fifth Street. Coffee started on his rounds at 6:15 o'clock and had just reached Ninetieth Street when he was surprised to see an elderly woman standing on a stoop waving a letter at him. Coffee suspected registration at once and pulled up in front of the woman with a jerk as if he was already behind time and hadn't a moment to wait. The applicant was ready for him, however, and her letter fulfilled all requirements. Coffee slowly and painfully unslung his satchel, removed his gloves, and drawing his blankbook began his outdoor office work. He got through with the job and just as the woman was about to discuss registration in general she was startled to see him gather headway and proceed on down the street at a brisk pace. When Coffee turned his duplicate blank into the office the address expert had to be called to decipher his hurried handwriting and signature.

A good many people stopped letter carriers in the streets and inquired vaguely about registering letters. The carriers, without slackening speed, gave out the card of explanation, which read as follows:

Post Office Department,
Washington, D. C.

To the Public:

In giving to residents of cities the advantage of having their letters registered at their own door, the provisions of the "eight-hour law," as applied to carriers, make it necessary for the department to exact certain requirements, which, though easy of fulfillment, are, nevertheless, imperative.

1. Only letters can be registered; and they must be ready in every respect when the carrier calls, for he is forbidden, on pain of dismissal, to wait even a fraction of a minute longer than is necessary to write the receipt.

2. Every letter must be inclosed in an envelope strong enough to safely carry contents, and be in perfect condition. The envelope must bear name and address of sender, name of addressee and his Post Office address, and have the postage and registry fee prepaid, either with stamps attached or in money, the exact amount to be paid to the carrier. The writing on envelope must be plain and legible.

If you have failed to comply with any of these requirements, the carrier is obliged to refuse your letter and hand you this card. If it be properly prepared, he will register the letter on his next trip.

Your receipt will be written by him and show the amount of money paid him for postage and fee when stamps are not attached to your letter. If there be a surplus, it will be returned from the Post Office.

Carriers are forbidden to make oral explanations or engage in discussions with patrons, to register letters free, to advance money or stamps to pay postage, or to make change. This card shows plainly their duty in every case, and the rules laid down in it must be strictly complied with.

If it be found that your letter is unmailable for any cause when it reaches the Post Office, you will be notified direct.

The registry fee for letters, foreign and domestic, is 8 cents in addition to full postage.

POSTAGE RATES.

Domestic letter rate, 2 cents for each ounce or fraction thereof. This rate applies to the United States, Canada, Mexico, and Puerto Rico.

Foreign letter rate, 5 cents for each half ounce or fraction thereof. This rate applies to letters for Cuba and Hawaii; but letters addressed to persons in the service of the United States at those places, which show the branch of the service to which the addressee is attached, require the domestic letter postage only.

A cable-car gripman had some difficulty in avoiding running down two men on Columbus Avenue late yesterday afternoon. The men proved to be a citizen in plain clothes and a letter carrier. They were standing in the middle of the street, the postman wildly endeavoring to write out a registration blank on his knee.

TO HELP EAST SIDE POOR.

Capt. F. Norton Goddard to Distribute Coal and Flour.

At the annual meeting of the East Side Republican Club of the Twentieth Assembly District, held in the clubhouse at 217 East Thirty-fourth Street last night, Capt. F. Norton Goddard, the district leader, who presided, announced his intention of distributing coal and flour to the needy poor of the district, beginning to-day and continuing throughout the Winter.

Capt. Goddard said that, while times were good, there were some who had not shared in the general prosperity. To those he purposes distributing certain necessaries, he said, and while he intends to defray all the incidental expenses himself, he said that he would need the assistance of the district Captains to successfully carry out the scheme.

Capt. Goddard will give to each of the election district Captains a number of tickets bearing coupons, part of which will be for flour and the remainder for coal. Persons in need of aid will apply to the Captains, who will investigate the applications. If the applicants are worthy tickets for what they need will be given to them. The tickets will be in the form of orders on dealers with whom contracts have been made.

The expenditures amounted to $59,087.09, of which $38,624.89 went for salaries of teachers, lecturers, and other expenses immediately connected with the educational work, and the remainder was used in the maintenance of the building. The permanent endowment fund was increased by $300,000 from Andrew Carnegie and $50,000 from John E. Parsons.

THE CITY'S NON-CHURCHGOERS

Miss Helen F. Clark Says If People Knew the Growth of Anarchy in the Slums They Would Tremble.

Miss Helen F. Clark, Director of the mission at 21 Mott Street, was the speaker yesterday at the Methodist preachers' meeting at 150 Fifth Avenue. Her theme was "The Religious Condition of New York City." She said in part:

"On Manhattan Island there are nearly 5,500 people to every Protestant church. Only about 7 per cent. of the population are members of Protestant churches, and that is a loss of about 1 per cent. since the census of 1890. There has not been an actual loss in numbers, but the difference in percentage is due to the steady stream of foreigners who keep rushing in.

"In Greater New York there are 1,300,000 persons without any religious affiliation at all. That is 100,000 greater than the population of Tokio, the second largest heathen city in the world.

"In one ward in Brooklyn there is a population of 25,000, and not a single Protestant church or mission. In our east side Jewish quarter in a population of more than 200,000, only nine-tenths of 1 per cent. are members of Protestant churches.

"In the Dakotas the Protestant Church membership is 18 per cent. of the population, in Texas it is 29, and in South Carolina, the highest in the country, the percentage is but 43. There are more non-Christians in New York City than in the entire western half of the country. And the absence of the Gospel lays open the way for Anarchists. If the people knew the advance anarchy is making in the slums they would tremble.

"And the situation is worse now than it was three years ago. Under Tammany rule there is more crime every month, and the Anarchists gain more converts."

Miss Clark declared more church buildings would do no good. She placed most reliance on out-door preaching.

Dr. F. M. North, one of the Secretaries of the New York City Church Extension and Mission Society, said: "I would criticise only one thing in Miss Clark's statements. The means of salvation should not be considered as limited to the Protestant churches. If this city is going to be saved, if America is going to be saved, it will be with the assistance of a reformed Catholicism. If we raised our children as the Catholics do, or even as the Lutherans do, there would be no such showing of a falling off in Church membership."

Religious Revival in Brooklyn.

Another big religious revival will be begun in Brooklyn to-morrow in the hall of the Young Men's Christian Association, 502 Fulton Street. The Rev. Dr. Len G. Broughton of Atlanta, Ga., and the Rev. Dr. A. T. Pierson will be the speakers. The Rev. F. H. Jacobs, who was long connected with Mr. Moody in evangelistic work, will sing. Noonday meetings will be held in this hall every day for the remainder of the week.

LEGAL NOTES.

QUESTION OF MARKETABLE TITLE.—A judgment was recovered at Special Term by Ida Seidelbach and another requiring the specific performance by Robert L. Knaggs, the defendant, of a contract for the sale of land by them to him. At the time of closing the contract the defendant had refused to make the required payment, claiming the plaintiffs had not a title in fee to the premises. A deed made in 1875, under which the plaintiffs claimed title, described the grantee as "George Henry Thaule, as trustee of Ida Thaule and Alveine Thaule, sometimes heretofore improperly designated 'administrator' for said persons of the second part." The habendum clause was "to have and to hold all and singular the premises * * * unto the said party of the second part and assigns, to his and their only proper use, benefit, and behoof." Judgment given below in favor of the plaintiffs was affirmed by the First Appellate Division, which held Justice Ruimsey giving the prevailing opinion, that as the habendum clause imposed no duties on the person mentioned as trustee, the deed vested, under the statute of uses, the legal and equitable title to the premises in fee simple in the persons mentioned as beneficiaries, and a deed from the beneficiaries conveyed a marketable title which a purchaser would be required to accept. Justice McLaughlin gave a dissenting opinion, which was concurred in by Presiding Justice Van Brunt, holding that the burden was upon the plaintiff to show that Thaule, as trustee, did not at the time the contract was made or at the time of the trial have any interest in the land contracted to be conveyed; and they having failed to negative that possibility, the title was not a marketable one.

THE AGREEMENT WAS NOT USURIOUS.—Catherine Donovan, in February, 1888, by sealed instrument gave Bridget McCabe, who had been many years in her employ, a ten-thousand-dollar interest in her business. This $10,000 was to remain in the business so long as Catherine Donovan should carry it on, and at its termination that sum was to be paid Bridget McCabe from the business. Catherine was to pay Bridget 25 per cent. on this money in quarterly payments, which interest was to be in full satisfaction of all the earnings and interest on the $10,000, and if Bridget left Catherine's employment the 25 per cent. interest should cease. After Bridget's death, Edward Brennan, as Catherine's assignee, brought suit against Michael Glennon and Henry Hoyt, Bridget's executors, upon an account claimed to have been stated between Catherine and Mr. Hoyt. Hoyt had been Catherine's attorney, and still had in his hands some matters in reference to an old judgment, but for some time he had done no new business for her. She knew that in the matter of the claim he represented the estate, and not her. The First Appellate Division has reversed judgment given for the plaintiff, holding it was error not to allow Hoyt to testify as to his conversation with Catherine in respect to the claim. Presiding Justice Van Brunt, giving the opinion, said it was perfectly clear that if the silence of the executor was to bind the estate, his mouth could not be shut when he would speak by the claim that the relation of attorney and client existed between him and the claimant, against the estate which he was bound to represent. The court decided also that it was error to hold that the agreement between Catherine and Bridget was usurious, it being clear that the 25 per cent. interest on the $10,000 was intended as a compensation for the services of the employe, in addition to compensation for the use of the money.

ACCIDENT IN A NARROW DRIVEWAY.—Mary Jordan sued the City of New York to recover damages resulting from the death of her husband, William Jordan, from an accident which occurred on the 28th of February, 1898. It appeared from the opening of plaintiff's counsel on the trial that the city maintained on Eleventh Avenue, at Seventeenth Street, a driveway across the sidewalk, to the premises of the Consolidated Gas Company, which driveway was paved with cobblestones, and was 8 feet 1 inch wide. On the right side of the driveway, at the point where it crossed the sidewalk, was a pile of stones, a few of which projected some inches over it. At the end of the driveway, on the left boundary line, was a hubstone, projecting about 18 inches above the sidewalk. Jordan, who was familiar with the situation, and was driving a truck 7 feet wide from the outside rim of one wheel to the outside rim of the other, attempted to drive over the driveway to the street, when the left forward wheel struck the hubstone and he was thrown from his wagon and killed. A judgment on dismissal of the complaint by direction of the Court, on counsel's opening, has been affirmed by the First Appellate Division, in an opinion by Justice Rumsey. The Court held that judicial cognizance might be taken of the fact that the ordinary width of carriages is 4 feet ½ inch, and that the municipal corporation, building and maintaining the driveway, was only bound to provide for carriages of the ordinary width. The Court also held that, upon the facts stated, the city was not guilty of negligence, and that the intestate accepted the risk incident to driving over the driveway. Justice Barrett gave a dissenting opinion, holding that the attorney's statement showed that Jordan was using all necessary care and was rightfully on the premises. At the most there could only then be a question of fact as to whether or not an ordinarily prudent man, under all the circumstances, including that of the unusual width of the truck, would have been justified in using the driveway as he used it.

DR. M'GIFFERT ACCUSED

Charges of Heresy Formally Preferred by Dr. Birch.

Defendant Cited to Appear Before the New York Presbytery Feb. 12—Five Counts Specified.

Charges of heresy against the Rev. Dr. Arthur C. McGiffert were formally presented before an adjourned meeting of the New York Presbytery, at the Old First Presbyterian Church, yesterday afternoon, by the Rev. Dr. George W. F. Birch, stated clerk. Dr. McGiffert was cited to appear before the body on Feb. 12. While the Presbytery may vote to drop the charges, the present status of the case renders it certain that if this is done, it will be carried up either to the next meeting of the General Assembly or to the Synod of the State of New York.

There was a full attendance at yesterday's meeting. The Moderator, the Rev. Dr. Howard Duffield, warned Dr. Birch that if he failed to show probable cause for his charges he would be liable to censure. Dr. Birch then read his charges. Two hours were consumed in the reading, and there were several interruptions by members who wanted to have details of the alleged heresies omitted. A motion to adjourn made by the Rev. Dr. Francis Brown, who is also a professor in the Union Theological Seminary, was lost.

The following is a summary of the charges:

That Dr. McGiffert publicly denied the fundamental doctrine of immediate inspiration by God and the truthfulness and authority of Holy Scripture as set forth in the Confession of Faith and the Scripture itself; that he publicly denies the fundamental doctrine of the Confession of Faith and Holy Scripture concerning Christ the Mediator by teaching that the Lord Jesus Christ during His earthly life was liable to err and did err. That he publicly denies the fundamental doctrine of the Lord's Supper as said doctrine is set forth in the Confession of Faith and Holy Scripture; that he publicly denies the fundamental doctrine of the Confession of Faith and Holy Scripture concerning the justification of the believer before God; that he has violated his ordination vow in that he has not been zealous and faithful in maintaining the truths of the Gospel and the purity and peace of the Church.

Dr. Birch offered in evidence Dr. McGiffert's book, "The History of Christianity in the Apostolic Age," and several other published statements.

It was then moved that the proper citations be issued to Dr. McGiffert, and the Rev. Dr. Howard A. Johnston presented the following substitute resolution:

"Whereas, Charges having been presented this day against the Rev. Arthur C. McGiffert, D. D., by a member of this body because of certain teachings in his book entitled 'The History of Christianity in the Apostolic Age,' and whereas this Presbytery has recently considered the whole subject of Dr. McGiffert's teachings in connection with the reference of the same from the General Assembly of 1899, and after clearly stating the attitude toward the said teachings by a vote of 78 to 27 expressed its earnest and deliberate judgment that a judicial process at this time ought not to be entered upon, therefore be it

"Resolved, That this Presbytery cannot consistently enter upon further consideration of said charges, and hereby declines to further consider the same on the ground of its action taken Monday, Dec. 18, 1899."

Dr. Duffield declared this out of order, and an appeal being taken, the Moderator was sustained by a vote of 63 to 40. The original motion was then carried.

Many persons left the meeting before adjournment, among them being the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, whose only comment was, "It made us all very tired."

NO DIVORCE FOR MRS. HAIGHT.

Decision in the Deaf-Mute Trial for the Defendant.

Mrs. Mary L. Haight lost her action for a separation against her husband, Henry Jansen Haight, yesterday, when Justice Giegerich, in the Supreme Court, handed down a decision in favor of the defendant.

Mr. Haight and his wife are deaf-mutes. Mr. Haight is a millionaire. Mrs. Haight claimed he abandoned her for Miss Essie Spanton, another deaf-mute. She also said he refused to allow her, since 1895, more than $125 a month, which sum was totally inadequate to maintain her and her family in the style they had been accustomed to prior to that time.

TRIED DRESS ON IN COURT.

Mrs. Reinhart Lost Suit, However, as Did Her Friend Who Refused.

A number of fashionably dressed women appeared in the Yorkville Civil District Court yesterday afternoon to hear the suits against their friends Mrs. Sylvan A. Hamerslough of 225 West Seventy-ninth Street and Mrs. E. L. Reinhart of the same address, brought by Haas Brothers, dressmakers.

The complainants declared that an imported model gown to cost $135 had been made for Mrs. Hammerslough and one of the same kind to cost $128 had been made for Mrs. Reinhart. The women refused to accept them, saying the garments did not fit.

Justice Joseph declared that the gowns should be put on in court, so that it might be judged whether they fitted or not, but Mrs. Hammerslough objected. The case was thereupon declared against her and judgment given for the plaintiff.

Mrs. Reinhart, however, put her dress on in the Justice's private room. She then came out to let the dress be seen. She turned around a number of times on the bridge, and everybody kept silent while the dress was scrutinized by all eyes. Justice Joseph at last remarked there was a wrinkle in the back.

"Oh, that can be remedied very easily," said one of the complainants' tailors, who was present. Justice Joseph thought that would do, and he said he would have to give judgment for the plaintiff in this case also.

Mr. Sherer's Example Followed.

A financial necessity of the Harlem Club, to meet the expense of repairing and refurnishing it last Spring, was the issuing of a third mortgage bond for $5,000. The certificates were taken up by members. At the annual election of the club on Saturday the retiring President, William Sherer, who is manager of the Bank Clearing House, made the end of his official term memorable by surrendering his certificate of the issue for $100. The example was so quickly followed that the third mortgage indebtedness was almost wiped out.

FUNERAL OF FELIX MORRIS.

Eulogy of the Rev. Mr. Savage—Very Simple Services.

Very simple services characterized the funeral of Felix Morris, the actor, at All Souls' Unitarian Church, Fourth Avenue and Twentieth Street, yesterday morning. There was no music. Scripture reading and brief addresses by the Revs. Minot J. Savage and Thomas R. Slicer, followed by a prayer and benediction, formed the entire church service.

The Rev. Minot J. Savage, in his address, said:

"It is no easy task for me to stand here and speak these few and simple words. I loved Felix Morris, and would rather sit with those who are mourning his loss. If all actors were like him, the supposed gulf between the stage and Church would be so narrow that the feeblest foot could step across. There has never been a time since I knew him that I would not have welcomed him to speak in my place. He was not only an actor, but also a noble, true gentleman. He had a grand sense of personal honor. Like Mark Twain, he realized that honor was even above law.

"He never advertised himself by any scandal touching his private or professional life. In public and private he was a sweet, noble, true man."

Dr. Slicer, in his address, spoke of his friendly relations with Mr. Morris and of the dead actor's interest in church work.

There were no pall bearers. The mourners were his widow, Mrs. Florence Morris; his daughters, Mildred and Felice; Mrs. W. R. Page of Chicago, a sister of Mrs. Morris, and Mr. Leighton Baker of the Borough of Brooklyn.

Among those who attended the funeral were E. W. Morgan, Alfred Becks, Charles Walcott, James L. Carhart, Howard Kyle, Charles Butler, and John Magonigle, Superintendent of The Players.

A number of beautiful floral tributes were sent by the actor's former friends.

The body was taken to Greenwood Cemetery, where it was placed in the receiving vault.

Assistant Surgeon Bill Indorsed.

The New York County Medical Association at its stated meeting last night indorsed Senate Bill 1,782, which was introduced in the United States Senate by Senator Thomas C. Platt last month, for the purpose of giving the same status to Acting Assistant Surgeons of the United States Army that is given to the Acting Assistant Surgeons of the Navy. Resolutions were adopted requesting the delegates to the American Medical Association and the State Medical Association, when selected, to present the bill to these associations and inform them of the action of the New York County Medical Association.

Charges Against a Policeman.

Charges have been preferred against Policeman Bernard Connolly of the arson department of the District Attorney's office of having an interest in the resort at 46 West Twenty-eighth Street, known as the Arcadia, and of having acted as manager of the place. They will be investigated by Inspector Brooks of the Charles Street Police Station, to which Connolly is nominally attached. Connolly says the establishment is owned and managed by his brother-in-law, William McKenna, and that he had visited the place occasionally solely for the purpose of collecting money owned to him by McKenna.

Jersey City Clubhouse Burned.

The Jersey City Yacht Clubhouse, on the bay shore at Phillips Street, near Communipaw Avenue, Jersey City, took fire at 7 o'clock last night and was completely destroyed. It was a two-story frame building. The lower floor was filled with sails of dismantled yachts laid up for the Winter. The total loss is about $5,000.

FATHER AND SON BURIED.

Last Honors to John Gustav and Gustav F. Perrenoud.

Side by side father and son were laid at rest in the Greenwood Cemetery yesterday afternoon. The father was John Gustav Perrenoud, ninety-one years of age, who died in Denver, Col., on Jan. 3. Gustav F. Perrenoud, the son, was killed in an accident on Dec. 30, at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street and Seventh Avenue. The latter was fifty-four years old and a partner of George D. Bayaud, a distiller's agent at 58 New Street. He was a member of the Army and Navy Club.

The funeral service over the body of the son took place at noon yesterday, in Trinity Church. They were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Gallaudet, assisted by the Rev. A. W. Wilson, a curate of Trinity. The casket was covered by a large American flag and a profusion of magnificent floral offerings. There were present at the church about 300 persons, including a number of Mr. Perrenoud's business associates and members of the Army and Navy Club. The immediate mourners were Mrs. J. I. B. Bayaud, an aunt, and three sisters of the deceased man.

The pall bearers were Col. C. N. Swift, Col. C. E. Heuberer, Judge William C. Holbrook, Paymaster G. De Forrest Barton, United States Navy; Capt. G. N. Whistler, United States Army; Capt. John Golding, Col. John Lookwood, Chief Engineer Loring, United States Navy; Capt. F. O. Von Fritsch, Lieut. G. Nickels, United States Navy; Dr. Matt Chalmers, and George Dorrance.

Services over the body of the elder Mr. Perrenoud were held in Denver. The body arrived here Friday, and was taken to Greenwood. There was a short service conducted by the Rev. Dr. Gallaudet at Greenwood, where both bodies were lowered into the ground.

Another Automobile Permit Granted.

President Clausen of the Park Board, who some time ago revoked the permit for an automobile of Jefferson Seligman of 11 East Sixty-seventh Street, yesterday granted another permit to Mr. Seligman. The new permit is for a victoria, stanhope style, and is the first permit that has been granted for this style of vehicle.

NEW YORK LEGISLATURE.—The proceedings in both houses were very brief, and no business of importance was transacted other than the introduction of a large number of bills. Among the more important of these was one for a State hospital for consumptives, and another to regulate transportation on the street railways of New York. The Governor signed two bills.—Page 7.

In the House a spirited debate took place over the Deficiency Appropriation bill. President Griscom of the American Line urged the Senate Commerce Committee to report favorably the Shipping Subsidy bill. The Senate yesterday ratified the Samoan treaty.—Page 6.

The German press continues its attacks on the British Government over the seizures of steamers. Earl Manvers is dead in London. The Duke of Argyll is seriously ill. MR. M'DONALD GETS RAPID TRANSIT WORK

Contract Unanimously Awarded to the Tammany Bidder.

TO BEGIN WITHIN A MONTH

Commissioners Deny that Politics Had Anything to Do with the Decision.

The contract to build the rapid transit road was awarded yesterday afternoon by the Board of Rapid Transit Commissioners to John B. McDonald, the Tammany contractor, whose bid was $35,000,000. Mr. McDonald has signified his readiness to go ahead with the work and has said he expects to begin actual construction within thirty days.

Based on the remark made by a member of the board on Monday, that the city had always been "flimflammed" where extra compensation had been offered in enterprises of a public character, although in no way reflecting upon the bid presented by Andrew Onderdonk, the board's action yesterday was in a large degree foreshadowed. The explanation offered by one member of the Rapid Transit Commission yesterday for giving the contract to Mr. McDonald was that the "commission in its wisdom decided that Mr. McDonald offers the more advantageous terms." Leaving out of consideration the speculative bonus offered by Mr. Onderdonk, the city's debt limit, by the acceptance of the thirty-five-million-dollar bid, will at once benefit relatively by $4,300,000 more margin.

The special committee, comprising Controller Coler, as Chairman, and Commissioners Jesup and Rives, together with William Barclay Parsons and Messrs. Boardman and Shepard, counsel of the board, met in the Controller's office during the morning, and adjourned after an hour's consultation among themselves and separately with Messrs. Onderdonk and McDonald. The full board convened in the afternoon at 3 o'clock, at 320 Broadway, in executive session.

Pending the decision, a good-sized crowd gathered outside the committee room and speculated on the result. Arthur C. Hume, who represents an unsuccessful speculative pool, was among the crowd, and evinced a desire to "do" something to block the progress of the road, but went away without even an audience before the Commissioners.

AWARDING OF THE CONTRACT.

The announcement was made that Mr. McDonald was the successful bidder at 4:30 o'clock. The proceedings included the special committee's report favoring Mr. McDonald and the passage of the following resolution, presented by John H. Starin, one of the Democratic members of the board, and seconded by Mayor Van Wyck:

"Resolved, That the contract for the construction and operation of the Rapid Transit Road pursuant to the invitation to contractors issued by this board and dated the 13th day of November, 1899, and the proposal made by John B. McDonald dated the 15th day of January, 1900, be, and the same is hereby, awarded to the said John B. McDonald; provided, however, that he shall within ten days after notice from the board, or such extension as the board shall grant, as provided in the said invitation, duly execute the contract, make a deposit of $1,000,000, give the two bonds, (being $5,000,000 for construction and equipment and the continuing bond,) and in all respects comply with the terms of his bid.

"Resolved further, That the President of the board be requested to give the said John B. McDonald such ten days' notice, and that the President be authorized in his discretion to extend such period for not more than ten days.

"Resolved further, That immediately after the making of such contract, the President shall in due form in the name and behalf of the board exercise the option reserved to the city by the contract for the construction and operation of Sections 2, 3, and 4 of the proposed rapid transit route."

The resolution, which was passed without a dissenting voice, brings the rapid transit problem to a close, and means that the city is under obligation, in accordance with the decision arrived at on Monday, to issue the necessary bonds to build all sections of the road at once.

STATEMENT OF A COMMISSIONER.

A member of the commission, who would not allow his name to be used, made this statement:

"We decided upon a close consideration of the relative value to the city of the bids, that Mr. McDonald's was by far the better to accept. There was no divergence of opinion on this score. The vote was therefore unanimous. We have several men on this commission experienced in railroad matters, and without going into a detailed reasoning, I will say that Mr. Onderdonk's bid, with its offer of 5 per cent. on the first million after $5,000,000 of gross receipts and 2½ per cent. for each added million thereafter up to a maximum of 15 per cent., did not appeal to them.

"What has made this contract possible is the passage of the Constitutional amendment separating the old county debts from the city debt. That gave us the needed debt-incurring capacity to spend the $35,000,000 all at once. The road, however, will probably not cost the contractor more than $30,000,000, the difference being represented in the expected premium on the bonds, so that probably not over $30,000,000 will be issued on the basis of 3½ per cent. securities.

"The issue of these bonds will not compel any citizen who is a taxpayer to pay one dollar of extra taxes. As to what the contractor will pay the city there has been some misapprehension which should be corrected. The first lien on the road will be the bond interest of probably 3½ per cent. and 1 per cent. for the Sinking Fund, or 4½ per cent. on $30,000,000, amounting to $1,350,000. This amount must come out of the earnings of the road annually for fifty years before the management of the road can pay any other obligation."

THE PROBABLE RECEIPTS.

In speaking of the probable receipts of the road, this official cited the Manhattan Railway as a basis for comparison and said: "The Manhattan operates eight tracks, and earns about $10,000,000 yearly. The tunnel road will have four tracks, but it does not follow that its earnings will be but one-half that sum. For the first year of operation the tunnel may not do as well as might be expected, but in the succeeding years the carrying business will grow tremendously.

"Competition will not, to my mind, hurt the elevated road or the surface lines. When the Fourth Avenue line was finished the prediction was made that it would hurt the Broadway line. It did not. One has only to see the choked traffic conditions to understand the necessity for more facilities. This is only the beginning of underground rapid transit. We are going to have it to Brooklyn and New Jersey before many years. The work on the tunnel will begin within thirty days."

The theory was put forward that politics had something to do with the award of the contract, notwithstanding that the Republicans on the board number five, as against three Democrats; and also that other considerations being equal, the board fearing opposition in the building of the road unless the Tammany contractor received the contract, decided to so award it. This view of the award caused a derisive smile when presented to two of the Commissioners. "Absurd," said Mr. Orr. "Politics has had no consideration in this matter. The board in its wisdom decided that Mr. McDonald's proposal was the better. That's all there is to it. I cannot go into details."

"Politics," said Controller Coler. "Such a proposition is not worth a denial."

F. W. Whitridge, who was interested in Mr. McDonald's bid, refused to make any comment upon the Rapid Transit Board's action, although he asked numerous questions about the decision. When it was suggested that now that the matter is settled, he might say what interests were behind Mr. Onderdonk, he simply said: "There are no interests now. Have you found out what interests are behind Mr. McDonald?"

John B. McDonald declined to see reporters last night. He dined at the Hotel Savoy, and from there went to his apartments in the Dakota flats.

GREAT FIRE AT DAWSON.

Part of the Business Portion of the City Destroyed—Great Suffering Likely to Follow.

SEATTLE, Washington, Jan. 16.—The steamer Danube at Victoria, from Skagway, brings news that a large part of the business portion of Dawson was wiped out by fire on the night of Wednesday last.

A dispatch was received at Skagway on the same night. The loss will exceed $500,000. There are no names of the buildings or list of losses.

The Skagway operator says that great suffering will undoubtedly follow the fire, as the temperature at Dawson was 40 degrees below zero, with the wind blowing. The city is without a water supply.

NEW HOTEL FOR NEW YORK.

Chicago Architect at Work on Plans for Twenty-Story Structure to Replace the Brunswick.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 16.—New York, Philadelphia, Boston, and Chicago capitalists are interested in an immense hotel structure, which is to be erected in New York City on the site now occupied by the old Hotel Brunswick.

Ex-Senator Leon O. Bailey of Indianapolis is the prime mover for this mammoth structure and has had plans started for the building by Architect Henry Ives Cobb of Chicago. It will be twenty stories high, with a basement, fireproof in every detail, and will be the handsomest hotel in the world. The furnishings alone will cost millions. In all probability the old name will be retained.

The hotel will occupy all the ground from Twenty-sixth to Twenty-seventh Street, on Fifth Avenue, and will extend to Madison Avenue, having a 157 foot frontage on that avenue. The entire amount of capital involved will be about $10,000,000.

Philadelphians will be greatly interested in this, not only for the amount of Philadelphia capital which is likely to be invested, but for the materials and equipment which will be taken from all parts of this country, and which will be figured upon in this city as well as in New York.

REMOVAL OF STAMP TAXES.

Ways and Means Committee May Recommend Repeal of These on Express Receipts and Telegrams.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—In view of the excess of revenue over expenditures, and the probability that receipts will be larger next year than now, and that the Treasury will not need the money for current expenses, the attention of the Ways and Means Committee has been directed to the subject of the internal revenue, with the idea of amending the law if reduction of taxes is favored.

Several propositions have been mooted, among them being the demand of the brewers to have the beer tax cut in half. This suggestion has been taken under consideration by a sub-committee consisting of Messrs. Payne, Steel, and Dalzell, and it is understood to be their opinion that if any of the taxes are soon dispensed with the first to be taken up will be those on express receipts and telegraph messages, both of which are added to the cost of carrying.

The committee is not ready to cut the two-dollar beer tax, but it may try to repeal the stamp taxes on receipts and messages, which do not amount to much in the aggregate, but are irritating to the public. To cut the beer tax would be to drop half of $68,000,000, which was about the revenue from fermented liquors during the last year.

As receipts are footing up, those from internal revenue will reach about $300,000,000 for the year. There will be no difficulty in getting a reduction bill through the House, and the assumption is that such a bill would receive a unanimous vote. The hesitation, if there be any, will be provoked by the admonition of the Treasury Department that it will be well to defer any great reduction until later, after it has been found that prosperous business conditions are to remain.

PAPER MILL TO SHUT DOWN.

Action of the Trust Causes Mourning in a Michigan Town.

Special to The New York Times.

WATERVLIET, Mich., Jan. 16.—The Watervliet Paper Mill is to be shut down by the trust, which recently absorbed it. The machinery is to be moved away and the plant abolished. When the mill was first spoken of, the people of the town came forward with a bonus of $12,000 for its establishment. They are now indignant. They see no way to keep the works here and are bemoaning the benevolent assimilation not only of the town's industry, but of their cash as well.

THREATS BY GRAIN HANDLERS.

DETROIT, Jan. 16.—Probably the most important thing to come before the Lake Carriers' Association, whose convention opens here to-morrow, is the question of the contract for unloading grain. The grain handlers are opposed to either Contractor Connors or Contractor Kennedy getting the job of unloading vessels for the year, and threaten to tie up lake traffic if either of these men is given the contract.

The grain handlers made a lot of trouble last year, and claim to be stronger for a struggle next Spring.

BALTIMORE SOCIETY AROUSED.

Statues to be Erected in Washington Cause the Trouble.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 16.—Social Baltimore, or at least that portion of it that lives in the reminiscences of the past, is stirred to its depths over the question of what two renowned Marylanders shall be honored by the erection of statues to their memory in Statuary Hall in Washington.

The Statuary Commission appointed by the Governor two years ago decided that Charles Carroll of Carrollton, a Maryland signer of the Declaration of Independence, and John Hanson, a distinguished citizen of his day, should be the two men thus honored. The Hereditary and Revolutionary Societies of Baltimore, inspired by the Maryland Society of the Colonial Dames of America, held a meeting this afternoon and protested against one of the statues being devoted to John Hanson. They adopted a memorial which will be presented to the Legislature, in which they appeal to the General Assembly to revoke the decision of the Statuary Commission. They claim that a military hero should occupy one of the positions in Statuary Hall, and ask that the name of Col. John Eager Howard shall be substituted for that of John Hanson.

Mrs. John J. Jackson, Recording Secretary of the Colonial Dames, presided at the meeting this afternoon, and committees were present from the Daughters and Sons of the American Revolution, the Society of the War of 1812, and other patriotic organizations.

There are numerous descendants of both John Hanson and Col. Howard living in this city and State, and the factional feeling between them has already become intense. It is probable that the dissension will cause a coolness between the members of dozens of families whose social and personal relations have heretofore been very intimate.

CUMMINGS OUSTED BY RUPPERT

The Latter Is Selected to Represent New York on the Congressional Committee.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Representative A. J. Cummings, who has been for several years the member of the Democratic Congressional Committee from New York, will be succeeded by Representative Jacob Ruppert, Jr., upon the nomination of ten members out of eighteen. Mr. Cummings is deeply chagrined at the method adopted by those opposed to him in getting him out of the place he has held so long and which he expected to retain.

It is customary, in selecting a member of the delegation, for the Congressional Committee to call a caucus and choose the member. Instead of doing this, Mr. Wilson of Brooklyn suggested the propriety of naming a younger member of the New York delegation for the place, and, as Mr. Ruppert was disposed to consider the suggestion favorably, it was decided to attempt to put him on the committee. Mr. Wilson's reasons were complimentary to Mr. Ruppert, but were regarded by the friends of Mr. Cummings as an unwarrantable reflection upon his activity and his efficiency.

The friends of Mr. Ruppert, who disclaim any ill-feeling in the matter, and who considered the nomination open to any one who cared to seek it, made sure of success by securing signatures to a paper to be presented to Representative Hay of Virginia, Chairman of the Democratic caucus, informing him that a majority of the New York delegation had selected Mr. Ruppert to be the New York member of the Congressional Committee.

Some suggestions were thrown out to Mr. Cummings to-day that it was desirable that the nomination of Mr. Ruppert should be made unanimous. Mr. Cummings is reported as having said, in response to that suggestion, when offered by Mr. Ruppert himself, that under the circumstance he could not comply with it. If he had been informed before the demand was framed and could have known the disposition of the delegation, he would cheerfully have yielded to Mr. Ruppert or to any other member of the delegation who desired to obtain the position. As the victim of a conspiracy he was not prepared to make the attempt unanimous.

A friend of Mr. Cummings in the delegation says that it is not improbable that Mr. Ruppert will find his position on the committee irksome in consequence of the fact that he voted for the gold standard bill and that about all the members of the Congressional committee are free-coinage men.

OBJECTS TO REV. MR. STEWART.

Whitestone Resident Will Oppose His Marriage to His Daughter.

There is some gossip in Whitestone over the announcement of George Trapp, a well-known resident, that he will oppose the marriage of his daughter, and if she is married he and his wife will cease to consider her one of their children. The bride-to-be is Miss Nellie Trapp, who is twenty nine years of age.

According to present plans, Miss Trapp is to be married in a Manhattan church to the Rev. C. S. M. Stewart, until a short time ago the pastor of the Grace Episcopal Church, at Whitestone, of which Mr. Trapp and his family are members. Mr. Stewart resigned from the church some time ago, as a result of a disagreement. He is about twice the age of Miss Trapp. This, it is thought, may be the reason Mr. Trapp opposes the match.

Mr. Trapp refuses to talk, as does Miss Trapp. Mr. Stewart is at present in Providence, R. I.

PATENT FILED AFTER 60 YEARS.

Deed Covering Valuable Chicago Property Put on Record.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—A Government patent covering a quarter of a section of valuable North Side property, and which was signed by President Martin Van Buren in favor of Archibald Clybourn in 1839, was filed for record with the County Recorder Monday.

The property covered by the patent has been conveyed and reconveyed an innumerable number of times. The purpose of filing the instrument, which has remained in Washington over half a century, was to clear up the abstract of the property at 650 Elston Avenue, which has been purchased by the Gates Iron Works. Many lawyers and real estate men have since called to examine it.

CHICAGO BROKER WINS A POINT.

Stock Exchange Must Furnish Quotations to Ware & Leland.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—Edward F. Leland of the firm of Ware & Leland, stock brokers, won a temporary victory over the Board of Governors of the Chicago Stock Exchange to-day when Judge Gibbons overruled the demurrer of the latter to an injunction restraining them from removing the wires of Ware & Leland from the Stock Exchange and interfering with the business of the firm. The injunction was continued in force until the final hearing of the case, and the Governors were required to answer within thirty days.

Mr. Leland was charged by the Governors some weeks ago with "bucket shopping" in stocks. After a protracted hearing he was expelled from membership in the Exchange.

DISPUTE CLOSES A SCHOOL.

Trustees Claim Teacher Is Deaf and Nail Fast the Door.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Jan. 16.—The children of Brookside, a village near Morristown, are enjoying a holiday and the door of the schoolhouse is securely fastened with nails. The school is not likely to open for some time, and meanwhile the courts will be appealed to.

At the beginning of the present school year the Trustees engaged Miss Annabell McCall as teacher. No question has been raised as to her educational abilities, but some of the Trustees claim she is hard of hearing, which makes her incapable.

Efforts were made by the Trustees to dismiss her or get her to resign, but these have proved unsuccessful. Then one of the Trustees nailed fast the schoolhouse door and thus prevented the entrance of the schoolteacher, as well as the pupils.

Miss McCall has engaged a lawyer to look after her interests and bring suit for breach of contract. The taxpayers of the district threaten to appeal to the State authorities.

JOHNS HOPKINS NEEDS MONEY.

University Asks the State of Maryland for $100,000.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Jan. 16.—Ex-Mayor Latrobe of Baltimore presented in the House today a memorial from the Johns Hopkins University asking an appropriation of $50,000 a year for two years. The memorial says that the appropriation which was made by the last Assembly for the support of the Johns Hopkins University, with gifts of a still larger amount from individual citizens of Baltimore, enabled the university to continue its work with vigor and success. The serious embarrassments which threatened its life were thus for a time avoided, and the Trustees and Faculty were strengthened in their effort to maintain the university on the high plane which it has held since its foundation.

The need of pecuniary support is as great now as it was two years ago. The litigation in which the university was then involved was settled by a virtual compromise which has left the endowment seriously impaired. Unless it is greatly enlarged the university must relinquish the position which it now holds among the educational institutions of this country.

Marvelous Champagne Figures.

109,303 cases of G. H. Mumm's Extra Dry were imported in 1899, being 72,495 cases more than any other brand. Carrying an immense stock of choicest wines, its quality will always be maintained. Its 1895 vintage, now being imported, is exceptionally fine.—Adv.

PAYN'S APPEAL FOR MONEY

Letter to Mr. Whitney in Connection with State Trust Loan.

COULD NOT LEAVE DYING WIFE

Ruin Was on Him, So $100,000 Check Was Made Out—Company's Deposits Increase.

Interest in the State Trust Company's affairs still centred yesterday about the $435,000 loan made to Superintendent of Insurance Payn. A letter was made public last night through President Johnston of the company in which Mr. Payn asked W. C. Whitney for financial aid, his funds for margin having run short. President Johnston said so much inaccurate speculation had been printed with regard to the letter that it had been suggested to Mr. Payn that it be published. Mr. Payn had replied that he had no objection. The letter, which explains the check for $100,000, made by the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, is as follows:

State of New York,
Insurance Department,
Sept. 18th, 1899.

The Hon. W. C. Whitney:

My Dear Mr. Whitney: The bearer, Mr. Henry D. Appleton, is my chief deputy. He goes to see you at my request. I do not know whether you will be able to aid me or not. Last Winter I bought a lot of Electric Storage, eight or nine hundred shares, for friends, and less amount for myself. I put up a margin on the whole, and from time to time have added additional margin until my funds are exhausted. I also hold, or my brokers do for me, over one thousand shares of Metropolitan Street Railway, five hundred United States Express.

If I could get away from home for forty-eight hours I could convert some things I have and thereby save myself, but my poor wife is lying at the point of death, and I could not leave her for a day to save myself from bankruptcy. My broker has promised not to close me out until Wednesday. My doctor informs me that my wife will last more than a week or ten days. Hoping you are in good health, I am, very truly yours,

LOUIS F. PAYN.

P. S. Of course I know I have no right to ask so great a favor as this of you, but I assure you that no financial loss shall come to you because of this if I have to sell everything I own to meet any loss you may sustain. PAYN.

Mr. Johnston added: "This letter tells its own story, and there is no other story to be told. Mr. Whitney was under no obligations to Mr. Payn, as the letter frankly states. So far as the trust company was concerned, the loan was well secured and was taken at the proper rates. For whatever personal risk Mr. Whitney chose to take in guaranteeing the loan the letter is the only explanation. There was and is no other."

Avery D. Andrews, who made the first investigation, said yesterday that copies of his report were in the hands of Gov. Roosevelt and Mr. Kilburn. He refused to admit that the Governor had appointed him, thus going over Mr. Kilburn's head, or to discuss the details of the report. He stated, however, that the Payn loan had absolutely nothing to do with the report.

Abram Kling, at whose request the investigation into the company's affairs was made, said: "My motive in making this fight is not due to a personal grudge. It is simply due to my desire to protect my property. I have a considerable sum invested in this company, and I don't want to see its funds loaned out on cats and dogs."

"Do you not think that what you have done may injure the value of your own securities?" he was asked.

"No," said he. "I want those loans recalled. I want the money back in the treasury of the company, so that it will be on a safe basis, and that is my object in taking action. It is not right that trust funds should be loaned out on securities of doubtful value. Who knows what Electric Storage would bring if you went out on the curb and tried to sell it?"

Mr. Kling also commented on the attitude of Mr. Kilburn respecting the State Trust Company. "Why does he want to screen this concern?" said he. "He made haste to rush to its aid and come out with a statement declaring it sound before he had seen Gen. Andrews's report and without knowing what that report contained."

Mr. Judson, Superintendent Kilburn's associate, who is in charge of the branch office of the State Banking Department, replied to this charge as follows: "Mr. Kilburn based his statement as to the company's solvency not upon Gen Andrews's investigation, but upon his own. He personally examined its books and found every loan amply secured and a surplus of over $1,200,000. The only ones which were in the slightest degree questionable were some small ones made by the previous administration of the company, when Mr. Decker was in. These are in process of liquidation.

Mr. Judson admitted that the list of securities deposited as collateral for Mr. Payn's loan had been correctly given by Mr. Bacon, Mr. Kling's attorney. He declared, however, that Mr. Bacon had undervalued them. Those collateral securities are now worth $350,625," he added, "and not merely $334,418, as Mr. Bacon said. Since they were deposited Mr. Payn has paid $25,000 on his loan, thus reducing it to $310,470.48. Electric Storage common and preferred are each worth about 80, and not 75 and 77, respectively, as Mr. Bacon alleged."

At the offices of the State Trust Company it was said that the concern had had a most gratifying day. The deposits had increased instead of falling off, the surplus by Mr. Kilburn's latest examination was found to be $1,250,000, and every loan was absolutely secured. The few loans made by the old administration, it was said, had been so marked down by the present one as to be perfectly safe.

ATTORNEY GENERAL MAY ACT.

Gov. Roosevelt Sees Him About the State Trust Company—Supt. Payn's Defeat Predicted.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 16.—Superintendent Kilburn of the State Banking Department had a long talk to-day with Gov. Roosevelt over the report made by ex-Adjt. Gen. Avery D. Andrews regarding the State Trust Company. Neither the Governor nor Mr. Kilburn would discuss what had passed between them. Mr. Kilburn has not made a written report to the Governor on the case, but it is expected he will do so.

It is understood that Attorney General Davies will make a thorough investigation of the case with a view of ascertaining if there have been any irregularities among officials such as would call for prosecution. The Governor declared this evening that he had conferred with the Attorney General in reference to the matter.

The revelation that Louis F. Payn, State Superintendent of Insurance, was a heavy borrower from the company together with the probable effect that Mr. Payn's dealings with the company will have upon his contest to retain his place at the head of the Insurance Department, continues to be the principal topic of conversation among members of the Legislature and officials in the various State Departments.

Chairman Odell of the Republican State Committee, Superintendent Payn, and Railroad Commissioner Dunn held a long conference late to-night at the Hotel Ten Eyck. None of those present would say anything about the matter, but it is known that their talk concerned the Insurance Superintendency. Well-informed Republicans said no nomination would be sent to the Senate this week, and that when the Governor did send in a name it would not be that of Judge Saxton.

John R. Hazel, Republican leader in Erie County, whose name has been prominently mentioned in connection with the place, is here to-night, accompanied by a large number of Buffalonians, Judge Saxton is also in town, but will not talk about the Insurance Superintendency.

It is regarded as significant that many Republicans who have been declaring Superintendent Payn would defeat the Governor in the present fight have changed front to-night and predict that the Governor will be able to have his nominee confirmed.

Much comment has been heard that the State Trust investigation was conducted by Gen. Andrews, in view of the fact that he retired from official life, giving as his reason that his private business would not permit him to longer serve as a public official. Gov. Roosevelt and Gen. Andrews are close personal friends, and it is known that the former has absolute confidence in the latter's ability.

Some of Gen. Andrews's friends say he believed it to be his duty to sacrifice his personal interests in order to be of assistance to the Governor. Mr. Payn's supporters assert that the request made by the Governor that Gen. Andrews should continue the investigation was a direct insult to Superintendent Kilburn, who is said to be personally friendly with Mr. Payn.

It is said to-night that the Senate will at an early day call for all the papers in the investigation. Much speculation is being intimated as to the Senator who will take the initiative in the matter. The names of various Senators have been mentioned, but no one can be found who knows who will call for the papers, although it is the general belief that it will be done.

A. VAN WYCK FOR PRESIDENT.

Commercial Travelers and Hotel Men Boom the New Yorker on an Anti-Trust Platform.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—Correspondence and circulars received at the National Democratic Campaign Headquarters indicate that ex-Justice Augustus Van Wyck of New York City is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President.

The Commercial Travelers and Hotel Men's Anti-Trust League, which was incorporated in New York a few weeks ago, and the headquarters of which are in New York City, has issued circular letters to all Democratic editors in the United States announcing their "election as members of the Publicity Committee" of the league and soliciting their co-operation in the creation of public sentiment against trusts and incidentally inviting them to act upon the committee. Accompanying this circular is this printed slip:

"Anti-trust is a great issue. No great economic issue grew more rapidly and has taken a firmer hold upon the minds of the people all over the country than that of anti-trusts. The issue was first formally presented to the country on April 10, 1899, by Augustus Van Wyck in a speech entitled 'Anti-Trust, Tariff Reform, Equal Opportunity for All,' delivered before the Democratic Club at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York.

"This was followed by the now famous Fourth of July speech of Joseph J. Willet, President of the Alabama Bar Association, of which a large part was devoted to the effects of trusts upon commercial travelers and hotel men. There is every likelihood that the trust issue will be the most important in the next Presidential campaign."

The words "first" and "Augustus Van Wyck" appear in heavy-faced type.

WRECK IS THE HELGOLAND.

Identity of Ship Lost in St. Mary's Bay Learned from Her Boat and Company's House Flag.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Jan. 16.—Everything goes to show that the wrecked steamer sunk in St. Mary's Bay is the Helgoland, the property of the Dutch-American Petroleum Company. Among a number of flags picked up this evening near Holyrood was one with the colors blue, white, and red, with the letter "R" in the centre. This is the house flag of that company. Taken with the finding of the boat, with the name Helgoland painted on it, off Cape Pine, it seems to leave no doubt as to the identity of the vessel. A life buoy was also picked up with the name of the steamer painted on it, but the lettering was partly illegible from fire and water.

Other flags found were a German ensign, a dark-red flag with a yellow cross and the letter "R," a pennant of white and red with the letter "I" in the centre and the letter "G," and another red and white pennant with the letter "O" in the centre and the letter "F." There are rumors of other finds, like buckets and oars, but these are not yet confirmed.

In other respects, however, the day's operations by the steamers and fishermen were disappointing. The former had to abandon work, owing to the heavy sea, as they could not approach the wreck, and the shore boats found the task equally difficult, and were obliged to abandon it early. Landsmen were unable to get down to the beach, and therefore unable to recover the bodies, which have been lying there exposed five days and nights. Seven bodies are now ashore, and can be reached when the sea becomes smooth. There are five others in the wreckage near the ship. Others still were seen driving south to-day. The wind is now veering landward again, and will probably drive them all ashore to-morrow, but it will keep a big cross-sea on.

Philip Ruprecht, agent of the German-American Petroleum Company, which is controlled by the Standard Oil Company, said yesterday that a dispatch was received at the Maritime Exchange stating that the wreck was the Helgoland, commanded by Capt. Von Rittern. She had a crew of thirty men, all Germans, who had been shipped on the other side.

The Helgoland left Philadelphia for Bergen, Norway, on Jan. 5, with a cargo of refined petroleum, and valued at $80,000. The Helgoland had a capacity of 3,200 tons, and was valued at $150,000. She was built in Newcastle in 1890. Her register was 2,381 tons gross and 2,510 tons net. She was 294 feet long, 37½ feet beam, and 26½ feet depth of hold. She had triple expansion engines and twelve compartments.

Mr. Ruprecht said there were no women aboard the Helgoland.

SCHLEY'S FRIENDS ANNOYED.

The McComas Resolution in the Senate Is Not Approved by Them—Meant for a "Test."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Not a friend of Rear Admiral Schley can be found who approves the resolution introduced in the Senate by Senator McComas to give the thanks of Congress to Rear Admiral Sampson and Commodore Schley for their services at Santiago. Senator McComas admits that he offered it without consultation with Schley's friends, who say that Rear Admiral Schley did not desire to have the controversy revived, as he now stands ahead of Rear Admiral Sampson, just where he would have stood if the Spanish war had never occurred. The resolution is distasteful to them.

To get Congress to thank Sampson first and then to thank Schley, after which both are to be made Vice Admirals with a life tenure, with Sampson first and Schley to follow in the programme. If the resolution is passed, which is doubtful, Schley will obtain better rank, but will lose his superior position.

Mr. McComas says that he merely wishes to "test" the sense of the Senate. The impression at the Navy Department is that if the test should prove the desire of the Senate to thank Sampson first, the nomination of Sampson and Schley in that order for Vice Admirals with a recommendation from the President that they be thanked and then promoted, would be forthcoming. The friends of Rear Admiral Schley say that the Admiral went away satisfied to remain in his present position.

NEW ROCKEFELLER RESERVOIR.

One Being Built at Tarrytown to Cost About $50,000.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Jan. 16.—John D. Rockefeller will spend about $50,000 upon a new reservoir for his place here and a small army of men and teams are already at work. The reservoir will be situated on the Ward-Wheeler property, which Mr. Rockefeller recently acquired.

The village of North Tarrytown wants Mr. Rockefeller to supply it with water. It is not known as yet whether he will agree to do this or not.

cants to be examined. The Daily Chronicle asserts that the committee was goaded into this statement by the reports that there was no hope of getting the full number.

The War Office has wired to countermand the departure from Egypt of a number of officers who were previously ordered to South Africa. The Daily Chronicle, commenting upon this and upon other news related to it, says:

"There are some curious reports in circulation—apparently with some authority behind them—which point to the stoppage of the dispatch of further reinforcements when the troops now mobilized shall have embarked. The new cavalry brigade is not to leave England at present."

KRUEGER MEANS TO ESCAPE?

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The Durban correspondent of The Standard to-day mentions an extraordinary story with reference to a recent journey of President Krüger's son-in-law, Kloff, to Delagoa Bay in a German warship. According to this, Kloff has been making arrangements for President Krüger's escape through German Damaraland in the event of the capture of Pretoria.

GUNS LANDED AT DELAGOA BAY.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The Pietermaritzburg correspondent of The Times, telegraphing Tuesday, Jan. 16, says:

"The Delagoa Bay correspondent of The Natal Times asserts that six big Creusot guns and fifty tons of shells were landed from the French steamer Gironde about the middle of last month under the noses of two British warships and were dispatched to Pretoria, causing much rejoicing at the ease with which contraband of war can run the blockade."

NATIVES PLOT WITH THE BOERS.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The Pietermaritzburg correspondent of The Times says:

"The Swazi Queen mother, since the death of King Bunu, has killed all the chiefs who were ever in England or Cape Town, and is now plotting with the Boers. The situation may fairly be considered grave, and it would be well to send regiments of Gurkhas to Swaziland immediately."

Refugees from Swaziland, living in the Lebombo district, recently brought news to Lorenzo Marques that the Queen of Swaziland was dead. Her death, following so soon upon that of King Bunu, was looked upon with suspicion. According to their story, however, not the Queen mother, but Necoco, Bunu's brother, was acting as head of the Swazi nation, and he, in conjunction with Tecuba, Umbandine's old Prime Minister, was carrying on a reign of terror, killing off whole kraals all over the country.

PEACE ADVOCATES ORGANIZED.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The South African Conciliation Committee, quietly formed to represent the Peace Minority, announces itself to the country to-day and asks for support. Among the members are Lord and Lady Coleridge, Herbert Spencer, Sir Robert Threshie Reid, George John Shaw-Lefevre, Frederic Harrison, Stephen Gladstone, the Countess of Carlisle, and other notable persons. Mr. Leonard Courtney, Unionist member of Parliament for the Bodmin Division of Cornwall, is President of the Committee.

This movement should be distinguished from the "Stop-the-War" group of Extremists, of which Mr. William T. Stead is the most active member. Its programme, summarized, is to wait until a proper opportunity arises for some peaceable settlement. Meanwhile it will gather and distribute correct information and sound views. The manifesto affirms that "as the war was begun amid misunderstandings on both sides a pacific settlement is possible."

There is no indication that such an arrangement would be tolerated by any considerable portion of the public. National emotion is now in a state of disquietude over the reverses to British arms; dissatisfaction with the conduct of military business is intense, and there is an almost universal determination to see the thing through.

MULES MUST BE VACCINATED.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 16.—The American mule must be vaccinated before he can be enlisted in the British Army service in South Africa in the future. The Admiralty has passed upon his case, and the decree is final. Seventy-five or a hundred, possibly more, of the mules died of glanders or a kindred disease after they were landed on African soil.

The animals are separated, temperature taken, and virus injected. If the animal is infected the theory is that by the use of this special virus there will be a quick rise in the temperature, thus denoting that the disease, glanders, has found lodgment in the system of the beast, although it may not have shown itself for days or weeks if the virus had not been used.

The vaccination of the mules is what has caused the delay in loading the transport Corinthia.

Mafeking Still Holding Out.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The correspondent of The Times at Lorenzo Marques, telegraphing Monday, Jan. 15, says: "I am informed on the best authority that six days ago Mafeking was holding out as pluckily as ever. There was then no likelihood of capitulation. The garrison had plenty of cattle and tinned meats.

Canadians Subscribe to the War Fund.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Jan. 16.—Some large amounts are being subscribed to the Canadian patriotic fund for the South African soldiers. The Canadian Pacific Railway today donated $15,000 to the fund, while the Bank of Commerce and the Bank of British North America have sent $5,000 each. The fund started by The Toronto Globe a week ago has already reached the neighborhood of $10,000.

Portugal Will Retain Her Colonies.

LISBON, Jan. 16.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Senhor Veiga Beirao, repeated his recent statement with reference to the Anglo-German agreement, and added that Portugal would neither sell, cede, nor lease any portion of her colonies.

GERMAN PRESS STILL BITTER.

BERLIN, Jan. 16.—In the Reichstag today an interpellation signed by Herr Moeller, National Liberal, and all the members of the Reichstag except the Social Democrats and Independents, was introduced. It was as follows:

"What steps have the Federal Government taken in regard to the seizure of German ships by agents of the English Government?"

In view of the excited state of public opinion concerning the seizures, the interpellation will probably be speedily answered. Press comment on the subject continues bitter.

The Hamburger Nachrichten advises German reprisals against Great Britain and expresses its belief that a coalition of neutral powers is feasible. It goes so far as to suggest that Germany should head such a coalition.

The Munich Allgemeine Zeitung advises Great Britain to use more moderation toward Germany unless she wishes "unpleasant consequences."

The Berliner Tageblatt says:

"We believe the Salisbury Cabinet purposely delays giving Germany satisfaction because it wishes to leave this as an embarrassing legacy to its successors."

The Vossische Zeitung, which indorses the views of the Kölnische Zeitung, already cabled, respecting the course England should take if she desires to preserve Germany's friendship, adds:

"The longer England delays the more will she lose in German public opinion."

Several reports are in circulation that Emperor William has been asked by Russia, Holland, and Belgium to join in an intervention movement. While these rumors are not entirely without foundation, the Emperor remains convinced that Great Britain would not accept mediation at this stage, and, on political and personal grounds, he holds aloof from any such plan.

It was asserted to-day, however, by a high authority that if England much longer delays the satisfaction which Germany demands the Emperor would participate in a coalition movement to compel her to respect the commercial rights of neutrals at sea.

HOLLIS DEFENDS THE BOERS.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 16.—George F. Hollis, who was United States Consul at Cape Town under President Harrison, has written a letter to the committee in charge of the meeting to be held in Faneuil Hall tomorrow evening in support of the Boers in which he says:

"I accept with great pleasure your invitation to speak to the people of Boston in Faneuil Hall on Wednesday evening, Jan. 17, on the subject of England in the Transvaal, believing, as I do, that for several years the attempt has been deliberately made to mislead the minds, not only of our own people, but of the people of England, on this question.

"I have long held the belief that the United States and England were to have a large and honorable share in advancing the civilization of the world, and I am grieved beyond measure that England has become involved in what I consider to be an unrighteous war.

"The position of President Krüger and his relations to the Outlanders was very peculiar. He had, in the first place, to listen to the demands of this great inrush of people, and in the meantime to bring his people, who had little knowledge of modern appliances, somewhat into sympathy with what the time required.

"To do this required time, patience, and tact, all of which President Krüger possesses in large measure. Had the English representatives met him in the spirit of good will and fairness, all their just demands and claims would have been amicably met.

"But, because of the arrogant and reckless spirit displayed by these people an animosity was created in the minds of the Dutch burghers which retarded all the efforts of the radical and progressive party in the republic to advance matters as they desired."

CARBOLIC ACID PRICE SOARS.

Doubles in One Day on a Report that the British Government Has Prohibited Exports.

The price of carbolic acid was doubled yesterday. This skyrocket flight in the price of the drug was caused by a report circulated among dealers to the effect that a firm in this city which is a large importer of the acid had received a cablegram from London saying that the British Government had forbidden any exports of the acid until further notice. The reason assigned for this was that all the carbolic acid on hand and all that could be manufactured for some time to come, would be needed for the manufacture of lyddite.

John McKesson, Jr., of the drug firm of McKesson & Robbins, who are probably the heaviest importers of carbolic acid in this country, was seen last night at his residence, 247 Fifth Avenue, and asked as to the situation. "It is a fact," said Mr. McKesson, "that the reported stopping of the exportation of carbolic acid from England had the effect of doubling the price in this city. As the United States gets practically all its carbolic acid from England, it is but natural that the report should greatly affect the market here.

"We know nothing definite as yet. We have cabled the English house from which we get most of our carbolic acid, and expect a reply to-morrow. I can hardly think that the British Government would take the very radical step of stopping the exportation of carbolic acid, when it seems to me that it could go into the open market and buy all it needed. Still, the need of it over there may be greater than I know. If the exportation has been stopped, it will be impossible to fill orders now on hand. In fact, it will be an impossibility to obtain carbolic acid in large quantities at all, and the price of smaller quantities will advance enormously."

TREES IN PHILADELPHIA.

The Willow Grew from Cuttings of a Wicker Basket.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 16.—At the meeting of the Civic Clubs to-day Miss Ethel Austin Shrigley read a paper on "Historic Trees of Philadelphia." She remarked that nearly all of the trees that made history before 1840 have "succumbed to the march of civilization, if not of age."

"The largest tree recorded is the big oak which stood in the almshouse grounds, and in 1837 was 240 years old. It was about 50 feet in height, and its limbs extended for nearly the same distance in all directions. On the site of the Custom House grew the first yellow willows. The introduction of the tree was an accident. Dr. Franklin found a wicker basket sprouting either in Dock Street or in a boat on the creek. He gave some of the cuttings from it to Charles Norris, who planted them on his property.

Miss Shrigley described the proposed oak grove that has been begun in Fairmount Park, and will be known as Michaux Grove. The Civic Club will use its efforts to realize the desire of Mayor Ashbridge for a double row of trees in Broad Street from Germantown Avenue to League Island.

CHICAGO ELEVATED WAR.

The Northwestern Accepts the Amended Extension Ordinance.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—At a meeting of the Directory of the Northwestern Elevated Company to-day the amended extension ordinance passed by the City Council last night was accepted. The company's bond was scheduled and was filed with the City Clerk. When informed of this action Mayor Harrison announced that as soon as the official formalities had been observed he would sign the ordinance, and the permits to resume work on the elevated structure will be issued.

ing out of the provision prohibiting steam railway cars on the structure, and making the words "successors, lessees, and assigns" apply to the Northwestern Elevated alone.

THE WEATHER.

LOCAL FORECAST.—Fair; fresh northwesterly winds.

No marked changes in the weather have occurred during the past twenty-four hours. Abnormally high temperatures continue in the Missouri and Upper Mississippi Valleys, Havre reporting 34 degrees above normal, Williston 32 degrees, and Bismarck 27 degrees. It has grown slightly cooler in the Red River of the South, Mississippi, and Ohio Valleys, and the temperature has remained nearly stationary elsewhere, except a slight rise in the Middle Atlantic States. Light rain or snow has fallen in the lake regions; New England, and the Middle Missouri Valley, and light rain in the Ohio Valley, on the Middle and North Pacific Coast, and in the northern plateau. A storm appears to be developing in the West Gulf, but its probable intensity and direction of movement it is impossible to determine at present. The prospects are favorable for showers in the Middle Gulf States by to-night. The weather will continue threatening in the Ohio Valley and lake regions, and it will be generally fair in the Atlantic States. Increasing cloudiness may be expected in the Missouri and Red River of the North Valleys. The temperature will fall slightly in Northeastern Texas, Arkansas, Tennessee, in the interior of the Middle States, and in New England. Brisk northeasterly winds will prevail on the North Atlantic Coast, light to fresh northerly winds on the Middle Atlantic Coast, and variable winds on the South Atlantic Coast.

The water supply situation in Brooklyn was further improved yesterday by an additional gain of 3,000,000 gallons in the amount of water in storage at Ridgewood. Several houses were cut off from the supply yesterday because of reckless waste of water on the part of the occupants. Warnings to other wasteful householders were sent out.

ONE KENTUCKIAN KILLS THREE MEN

Another May Die as the Result of Bullet Wounds.

BATTLE IN A HOTEL LOBBY

All Those Dead Were Shot by ex-Congressman Colson.

Principal Victim a Nephew of ex-Gov. Bradley — Affray Grew Out of an Old Feud—Slayer Under Arrest.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 16.—A shooting affair in which the lives of three prominent men were sacrificed, and that of a fourth hangs by a slender thread, while others miraculously escaped with painful injuries, occurred here to-day. The principals in the tragedy were ex-Congressman David G. Colson of Middlebrough, and Lieut. Ethelbert Scott of Somerset. Scott was shot six times by Colson, and almost instantly killed.

Luther W. De Marre, Assistant Postmaster at Shelbyville, an innocent bystander, was shot three times and died instantly. Charles Julian, another bystander, was shot, and died a half hour later, and Capt. B. B. Golden of Barboursville, Commonwealth Attorney of the Twenty-seventh Judicial District, was shot in the back, and is not expected to survive the night. Col. Colson himself was shot twice in the arm. Harry McEwing of Louisville was shot in the foot, and W. O. Ridpatch of Chicago sustained a broken leg by the lifeless form of Scott falling against him as it rolled down the stairway.

The killing occurred in the lobby of the Capitol Hotel, the principal hostelry of the State capital, the room being well filled at the time with politicians and others, who are here attending the contests for State offices before the Legislature.

Col. Colson is in jail to-night charged with murder, but he claims self-defense.

The witnesses to the affair were taken so much by surprise when the shooting began that most of them were almost panic-stricken, and there are many conflicting stories as to how the fight began.

THE SHOOTING BEGINS.

Col. Colson and a party of friends, among whom was De Marre, were sitting in the lobby engaged in conversation as Scott and Capt. Golden came up the stairs from the barrom. When they had advanced about half way across the room, walking in the direction of Colson, the latter, it is said, half rising from his chair, fired at Scott, who instantly returned the fire. The shooting then became general, and bystanders are at variance as to the number engaged in it. De Marre was standing slightly in front of Colson, and young Scott is said to have crouched behind him to escape bullets from Colson's revolver. In an instant De Marre fell dead, pierced by three bullets.

Capt. Golden, who accompanied Scott, reeled to one side, falling into the arms of ex-Gov. James B. McCreary, exclaiming: "I am shot!"

The smoke in the locality of the antagonists became dense, but Colson continued to press Scott, who retreated backward. As he moved Colson emptied the chambers of one revolver and quickly thought another into action. Scott by this time had been shot several times, and as he staggered back and fell down the stairway, Colson, who was within a few feet of him, continued to fire until the form of Scott rolled over and showed life was extinct.

The battle was terrific, and bullets fairly rained through the lobby of the hotel, several of which went wild, pierced window glass or imbedded themselves in the walls and furniture of the hotel. It was not discovered for several minutes afterward that Julian, who died later, had been shot, and at first his wound was thought to be only trifling. After the killing, Col. Colson ran out of the hotel and hurried to the residence of Chief of Police Williams, where he surrendered. He was almost exhausted, and as he entered the house, gasped:

"I am sorry. He would not let me alone. There were three of them shooting at me."

Meantime the wildest excitement prevailed in the hotel lobby, where the killing occurred, and in the dining room near by, where about 300 guests were seated at dinner when the fusillade began. Men fell over each other in frantic efforts to get to places of safety, women fainted, and it was several minutes before the awful scope of the tragedy was fully known. The dead were left lying in pools of blood and messengers were dispatched in every direction for physicians and nurses to care for the wounded.

Julian, who was shot in the leg, died shortly after reaching a room, death being due to loss of blood and the shocks to his nervous system. Capt. Golden was removed to a room and made a statement that Colson was the aggressor.

The death of Julian is most remarkable. He walked to his room unaided; his cousin, Judge Ira Julian, examined the wound and congratulated him on his escape. Doctors were busy with the dying, and Julian waited. He was bleeding to death, however, and when the doctors turned attention to him he was past recovery. Capt. Golden was alive at a late hour.

DEADLINESS OF THE AIM.

When it is remembered that, so far as known only three revolvers played a part in the duel, it can be seen that aim was for the most part accurate. Colson's shots were true, but this detracts nothing from the noted skill of Scott, because he emptied his revolver after several bullets had lodged in him.

Following is the record of the marksmen: Scott, a bullet in temple, one in throat, two in lungs, two in back. De Marre, two in heart; Julian, bullet in calf of right leg. Capt. Golden, two bullets in spine; Colson, bullet splintered left arm from wrist to elbow. Bullets tore his cuffs and sleeves to shreds.

Colson remained at the residence of Chief Williams while the surgeons dressed his shattered arm, and he was not taken to jail until 5 o'clock. He begged to be allowed to give bail.

The Grand Jury is in session, and an indictment will probably be returned against him to-morrow. Coroner Meagher will also hold an inquest to-morrow morning.

Colson to-night still declined to talk. He is in a highly nervous state, and appeared to have been weeping when a reporter called. He suffered a partial stroke of paralysis after he was shot by Scott at Anniston, and had never fully recovered from it.

Col. David G. Colson was born April 1, 1861, at Yellow Creek, (now Middlesborough,) Ky. He resided on a farm until twenty years old. During a portion of this time he attended the common schools and for two years attended college. He took the junior law course in the law department of Kentucky University, at Louisville.

In 1882 he went to Washington to accept a position in the Interior Department, where he remained two years, and in 1884 was appointed special examiner for the Pension Bureau, in which capacity he served two years, during which time he traveled, with headquarters at Knoxville, Tenn.

In 1887 he returned to Bell County, and was elected to the Kentucky Legislature. In 1889 he was the Republican nominee for State Treasurer. In 1893 he was elected Mayor of Middlesborough, Ky., which position he resigned in December, 1895, to accept a seat in Congress, to which he was elected in November, 1894. In 1896 he was re-elected to Congress. During his service he vacated his seat to accept a commission as Colonel of the Fourth Kentucky Regiment for service in the war with Spain.

Scott was a Lieutenant and Golden was Captain of a company in Colson's regiment, and the trouble which led to the tragedy to-day began then.

A feud sprang up between Colson and Scott while the troops were in camp at Anniston, Ala., and in which it is said by Colson's friends that Capt. Golden was a warm partisan of Scott. The trouble between them at that time culminated in a meeting between them in a restaurant, which resulted in Colson being shot by Scott. The regiment was shortly afterward mustered out of the service, as a result of the feud between the officers and the serious charges and counter-charges which they had made at Washington against each other as officers. Since then the parties had not met until to-day, and it has generally been believed that blood would be spilled should they meet, as each was understood to be looking for the other.

Scott was a young lawyer of Somerset and a nephew of ex-Gov. W. O. Bradley, his mother being a sister of the ex-Governor. He was about thirty years of age. Julian was one of the wealthiest farmers of the county and was active in local politics, being a Democrat. His family are among the best known people in Kentucky. One brother, Henry, is a lawyer at Kansas City; another, Alexander, is a wealthy shoe merchant of Cincinnati, and a cousin, Judge Ira A. Julian of this city, is now a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this district. De Marre was about thirty-two years of age, and in addition to being Assistant Postmaster at Shelbyville, was a large real estate owner. Capt. Golden is one of the best-known lawyers in the southeastern part of the State, and has long been a leading Republican politician in his section. Both Colson and Scott were regarded as dead game.

SHERIFF'S JURY AT DINNER.

Second Panel Entertains Prominent Men at Delmonico's—Mr. Keller Makes a Patriotic Speech.

More than 200 diners sat around the rose-decked tables at the annual dinner of the second panel of the Sheriff's Jury given at Delmonico's last night. William H. McElvoy presided, and with him at the guest table were Sheriff William F. Grell, James M. Beck, Justice C. H. Van Brunt, Justice William Rumsey, Justice Morgan J. O'Brien, Commissioner of Charities John W. Keller, Justice Chester B. McLaughlin, John S. Wise, Justice James Fitzgerald, Justice David McAdam, Justice David Leventritt, Justice J. M. Fitzsimons, Justice Henry Bischoff, Jr., Justice Giddersleeve, Justice J. A. O'Gorman, and Seymour D. Thompson. Others present included ex-Sheriff Thomas J. Dunn, John H. Starin, H. H. Vreeland, District Attorney Asa Bird Gardiner, Herman Ridder, Park Commissioner August Moebus, Judge E. F. O'Dwyer, ex-Justice Joseph F. Daly, Justice H. W. Bookstaver, W. H. Gelshanan, and Corporation Counsel John Whalen.

Mr. McElvoy, in opening the speechmaking, observed that it must be a great consolation to the jury to realize that they were cutting amicable relations with their Sheriff, for, as they were well aware, no man could make himself so disagreeable in his official capacity as a Sheriff, and in fact the more attachments he had the more unpopular he became. The citizens of this city, he said, might be divided into those who did their jury duty and those who shirked it. "You, however," he continued, amid much laughter, "do your duty faithfully. From rosy morn to dewy eve for 365 days you are all in your shirt sleeves hard at it, and well earn the dinners which you annually meet to enjoy." He concluded by proposing a toast to Sheriff Grell, who briefly returned thanks.

In introducing Commissioner Keller, Mr. McElroy said he had read with gladness that Mr. Keller had invited W. J. Bryan to dine with him at the Democratic Club, for he felt sure that such would be the grace and generosity of Mr. Keller's hospitality that Col. Bryan would be fain to declare that the East is not the enemy's country, but a land flowing with milk and honey.

Commissioner Keller said he was astonished at the interest the toastmaster seemed to take in an invitation extended by one gentleman to another, and he begged to be permitted to say that if Col. Bryan did accept, he would extend an invitation to all the members of the Sheriff's jury, whether Democrats or Republicans, to meet the free-silver champion after the repast.

After alluding to the Boer war, which he said had been barred as a subject for speechmaking, Commissioner Keller said: "We have heard much about hands across the sea. I shall say something about the hands stretched across the sea, but not the hands that Washington compelled to release their grip upon the throat of the American colonies, not the hands whose fingers and knuckles were bruised at New Orleans, but the hands of America, that at the cry of distress have ever been stretched across the sea to succor and to save; the hands that never have drawn the sabre or grasped the musket save in humanity's cause. Lately they were stretched across the sea with sabre and musket to help a downtrodden people in Cuba. To-night our hands are stretched across the sea to the Philippines. I will split hairs with no man as to their right to be there; but I do know that the men fighting there are my countrymen, that they are wearing my country's uniform and are battling under my country's flag, and my prayer is that they shall succeed and come home safely to the wives and families awaiting them." Enthusiastic applause greeted this sentiment.

Job E. Hedges, John S. Wise, and Seymour D. Thompson also spoke.

CHICAGO'S NEW RAILWAY LAW.

Council Passes an Act Directed Against the Pennsylvania Road.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—Important traction legislation was passed by the City Council last night. Among several ordinances was one which requires all Pennsylvania Railway trains to stop at street crossings. A big fight is expected as a result.

The reason for passing the act was the fact that while the West Indiana accepted the ordinance for the elevation of the Fort Wayne and Western Indiana tracks where they parallel each other from Eighteenth to West Fifty-third Street, the Pennsylvania failed to accept it. The retaliatory measure was introduced by Alderman Martin and he received such strong support that it passed by a vote of 54 to 6.

The name of the company is not mentioned in the measure, merely the locality, as it is said the ordinance would be illegal if directed against one specified company. The engines will have to stop at eight crossings until they are signaled to move. A penalty is provided if they fail to stop.

Several Aldermen assert that over a thousand deaths have been caused at the various crossings since the track elevation ordinance was first proposed four years ago.

TAYLOR LOSES A POINT.

Kentucky Court of Appeals Ousts His Appointees.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 16.—The Court of Appeals to-day rendered a decision nullifying Gov. Taylor's appointments of W. H. Mackey and A. M. C. Cochran as Election Commissioners, and enjoining them from acting, thus sustaining the Democratic Commissioners Boyntz, Fulton, and Yontz. These Commissioners will try the contests in the cases of minor State officers.

The decision was made on a strictly party vote, Judges Guffy, Burnam, and Durlie dissenting.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 16.—The election of J. C. S. The proceedings and vote were practically the same as those on the former ballot.

MOLINEUX MURDER TRIAL

Joseph Koch, the Letter-Box Man, Gives His Evidence.

RECORDER REBUKES COUNSEL

Promises to Deal Severely with the Two Lawyers Unless They Cease Wrangling.

The feature of the proceedings yesterday at the Molineux trial was the evidence of Joseph Koch, the letter-box man of 1,620 Broadway, who testified that Molineux had called upon him in the week of Dec. 12, 1898, to inquire regarding arrangements for renting a box. It was a friend who wanted the box, Molineux had said, according to this evidence, one who would not receive much mail. A week later some one else called and rented a box in the name of H. Cornish. It was not Cornish. He was a man described as having a light mustache, parted in the middle, and turned up at the ends.

The witness said that he had seen a man with a similar mustache in the July Grand Jury room. The name of this man did not come out. Mr. Osborne, when asked afterward who it was, smiled and said: "I decline to answer." No opinion as to who it was could be obtained from the counsel for the defense, though it was intimated by one interested in the case of the defense that the description fitted a man who was not a friend of Molineux.

As it was not shown that Molineux had actually hired a letter-box, the bearing of the evidence of his having visited the place was considered as being important only in connection with letters signed "H. Cornish," sent to patent medicine firms and giving the address 1,620 Broadway, which have been declared by the writing experts for the people to have been written by Molineux.

The most exciting incident of the day was a tilt between the lawyers, Mr. Weeks and Assistant District Attorney Osborne, as an outcome of efforts made by Mr. Osborne to bring in further evidence relating to Barnet's alleged visits to Miss Chesebrough. Mr. Osborne desired to put in evidence Barnet's card as bearing the name of the man who, the colored woman servant on the stand the day before had testified, had called at the West End Avenue house. This squabbling between the lawyers resulted in a severe reprimand from the Recorder and an admonition that if there was a recurrence of such scenes he would deal severely with them.

Recorder Goff, after having ruled out evidence on the lines referred to as having no relevancy to the Adams case, permitted Mr. Osborne to bring out the fact that the name on a card which he produced bore which bore the name of Barnet was the same as that on a card which had been presented to the servant by the caller on Miss Chesebrough.

WRITING EXPERT'S EVIDENCE.

The knowledge that the case of the prosecution is drawing near a close attracted a large attendance at the trial yesterday. Gen. Molineux, as usual, sat beside his son, who appeared in cheerful mood. His father handed to him the customary batch of letters, and after he had read these he devoted his attention to the evidence.

The writing expert, Albert S. Osborn of Rochester, was called as the first witness, for cross-examination by Mr. Weeks. This and the redirect examination occupied all the morning and part of the afternoon session. The first part of the cross-examination was devoted to ascertaining how much time the expert had given to the examination of the writing he was called to pass upon before giving it as his opinion at the Coroner's inquest that Molineux wrote the letters in dispute. It developed that the witness had come to the city by request of the District Attorney's office on Saturday, Feb. 25, and testified the following Monday. He had received $50 a day.

Mr. Weeks examined him as to previous experience in giving expert testimony, and the witness, answering a question as to whether he could be mistaken, said: "I might be in some cases under certain circumstances." He was asked if he had not testified in one case that a certain person had not written a certain signature, when three witnesses had testified to seeing that person write the signature. He said that he had.

The cross-examination then became a technical inquiry as to the elements of various letters. Most attention was devoted to Exhibit 19, a copy made by Cornish of the so-called Harpster letter, in which, at the request of the District Attorney, he had endeavored to conform to the style of the original. The expert contended that the same characteristics were not shown.

Mr. Osborne on re-direct examination said: "Mr. Weeks has been talking a good deal here about the Cornish letter. Now I want you to go ahead and give all the reasons for thinking that Cornish could not have written the address on the poison package." Recess interrupted the proceedings here. On the reopening of court the expert took up this question and again went through the matter of the formation of letters, to show the lack of similar pen habits. He contended that a writer could not disguise his writing for the reason that unless he had made a special study of the subject peculiarities would come out without his being aware of it.

GOODS ORDERED BY MOLINEUX.

Andre Bustanoby, Superintendent of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club, who had been on the stand before, was called next. Mr. Osborne handed several bills to him, which were for goods which he said Molineux had asked him to purchase for him and send to the address 251 West Seventy-fifth Street, at which, on the preceding day, Rachel Greene, a colored servant, had testified that Blanche Chesebrough had lived as the wife of Molineux. The goods were charged to the association which owned the Knickerbocker Club, and by it charged to Molineux, the testimony showing that he had paid the bills. The bills were not permitted to be placed in evidence, and after a discussion as to their admissibility it was ordered that the club's books be produced to-day. Mr. Osborne arrived at his object in another way, however.

"State," said he, "what Mr. Molineux gave to you." The witness said that he had been directed to have certain goods which he was to buy sent to 251 West Seventy-fifth Street. Mr. Osborne then held up a small glass with a gold band about it. He had shown this same glass to Rachel Greene the day before and asked her if she had not seen a similar one in Mr. and Mrs. Chesebrough's room. This had been ruled out. Bustanoby was asked to say if the glass was not like some used at the club, and he said it was. This evidence was explained to be corroborative of what Rachel Greene had said as to Molineux having lived with Miss Chesebrough at the address mentioned. The glass was marked for identification.

The witness then examined the exhibits of writing lettered M, N, O, and P—the new Barnet series, so called. He said that they were in Molineux's hand. He said he had seen some of the defendant's writing which was slanted backward. He had had in his possession for some time a letter of Molineux's addressed to John D. Adams, the club's Secretary, which was written that way.

It was during the testimony of the next witness, Minnie Betts, the colored woman, who the day before testified that a man other than Molineux had called on Miss Chesebrough at Mrs. Bellinger's, at 257 West End Avenue, that the monotonous character of the day's proceedings was relieved by the wrangle between counsel.

Mr. Osborne asked the witness: "When this nice-looking man called on Miss Chesebrough, did he give you a card?"

"Yes," she replied.

"Was his name Barnet?"

Mr. Weeks objected, and the Recorder sustained him.

Mr. Osborne asked: "Did you ever hear the name mentioned?"

Mr. Weeks objected and was sustained.

IDENTITY OF THE CALLER.

Mr. Osborne tried in various ways to get in the testimony as to the identity of the caller, which he had failed to do the day before.

Mr. Weeks said to the Court: "I think you have ruled two of three times on this, and the Public Prosecutor certainly should know better after your Honor's ruling than to continue examining the witness on these lines."

Mr. Osborne retorted: "It is hard enough to have the light closed out of this case without being criticised."

Resuming with the witness, he asked: "Did you ever hear the name mentioned?"

As the witness said "No," Mr. Weeks objected and was sustained.

Mr. Osborne then held out a photograph of Barnet to the witness as he had the day before. "Have you looked at this photograph since you were on the stand yesterday?" he asked.

"Yes," she replied.

"As near as you can remember, is that the man?"

An objection was made and sustained.

Mr. Osborne—Is this a picture of the man who presented the card?

There was another objection, which was sustained.

Mr. Osborne said to the witness: "I show you a picture. Take it in your hand. It won't hurt you." The witness took it. "Now, what is that you have in your hand?"

Mr. Weeks arose, saying: "We object and further demand to place on record—"

The Recorder—There is nothing necessary to go on record for you other than the statement of your objection."

Mr. Weeks—But, your Honor, the defendant desires to place on the records—"

The Recorder—I'll not permit you to state anything more than your objection.

Mr. Weeks—May we state our objections?

The Recorder—No, you may not.

Mr. Osborne to the Witness—What is that you have in your hand?

Mr. Weeks—I object.

The Recorder—The witness has not stated whether or not she knew the person who called.

Mr. Osborne—How in the world can I identify any human being? How can I identify Mr. Weeks as Mr. Weeks, except I know that he is a man who has from time to time permitted me to address him as Mr. Weeks? How can I identify anybody? How can I identify a man who is dead, if I cannot identify him by his actions? I claim that it is part of the transaction when a man calls on a lady to give a visiting card, and that the name is itself proof that he went by the name on that card.

The Recorder—What proof have we that the man who presented the card went by that name? Strike out all of the record.

Mr. Weeks—We want it kept on the record.

THE RECORDER'S REBUKE.

The Recorder—We have ruled, Mr. Weeks. If this case cannot be carried on with propriety and quiet you might just as well close the doors of justice.

Mr. Weeks—I object to your Honor's remarks.

The Recorder—I will have you suppressed. I will not permit this wrangling. I would have meted out to each of you long before this such treatment as you deserve were it not for the defendant's interests.

Mr. Weeks—May we take an exception?

The Recorder—No, you may not. It is becoming very indelicate and improper. You are degenerating this trial into a farce for the exploitation of Mr. Osborne and Mr. Weeks.

Mr. Osborne—Yes, yes; just what I said, Your Honor.

The Recorder—Now, Mr. Osborne, I have heard enough, and when the Court has said that it has had enough, it has had enough. The questions which have entered into this trial have been perplexing enough to tax the ability of any Judge on earth, without all this acrimonious discussion. This man is on trial for the murder—the death—of Mrs. Adams. This question of the visits of some man to the house of Miss Chesebrough, even were he the person you refer to, cannot be relevant to the question at issue. I want to say that the object of a court of justice is to administer justice, but this does not regard as relevant what the motive was in the Barnet case. In regard to this Barnet case there have developed certain questions which were relevant to the issue and which the Court allowed, but in this instance there is nothing relevant to the issue, because the motive in the Barnet case cannot show motive with regard to Cornish. Motive and action are two very different things. I instruct the jury to disregard all that this witness has said on this point.

Mr. Osborne—Before the Court finally disposes of this matter I would like to present certain authorities.

The Recorder—I am willing to hear any argument that you may present, as I have already told you. You have studied this case more than I, and the Court is entitled to lean on counsel. I have given great latitude, but every time it has degenerated to a personal wrangle degrading to both you and to the dignity of the Court. If I have to call your attention to it again, I will show you that I will not let it go.

OSBORNE GAINS HIS POINT.

Mr. Osborne then turned his attention again to the witness, and finally got in his question in this wise: "Is the name the same as was on the card given by that man?" There was an objection, which was overruled, and an exception was taken. The witness answered "Yes." She was then excused.

The letter-box man, Koch, was then called. The first part of his testimony related to a letter which he had received from Molineux asking for a sample copy of The Studio, a publication in which the witness was then interested. The evidence developed that Koch had sent to Molineux, besides the sample copy requested, some circulars, one of them calling attention to his letter boxes for rent. It was his custom to send these circulars to any address which came to his notice in correspondence. The letter from Molineux was placed in evidence, as was the envelope. It bore date of Jan. 3, 1898, and was sent from Molineux's business address in Newark.

Mr. Osborne then asked the witness: "Did you ever see the defendant?"

"Yes," he replied.

"Could you point him out?"

"Yes."

"When did you first see him?"

"At my place of business, 1,620 Broadway, in December, 1898."

"About what date?"

"Between Dec. 12 and Dec. 17."

"Any conversation with him?"

The witness replied by saying that Molineux came no further than the door. It was in the forenoon. It was explained to him that the business was conducted so as not to infringe the United States postal laws. Molineux said that he only wanted to make inquiry about arrangements for a box for a friend, who would not receive much mail. Then he went away.

"Did anybody call later?" asked Mr. Osborne.

"Yes."

"Who was it?"

"I don't know."

"Was it the defendant?"

"No."

"Describe him."

DESCRIPTION OF "H. CORNISH."

"He was a man about the size of Detective McCafferty. I was at the bookkeeper's desk. It was between 5:45 and 6 P. M. There was a drop light between us. We spoke through a small window. I asked him the usual questions, and then told him that he could rent a box."

"What name did he give?"

"H. Cornish."

Mr. Osborne, turning around, singled out Cornish, who had come into court in the afternoon, and said: "Cornish, stand up."

Cornish obeyed, and Mr. Osborne asked: "Is that the man?"

"No, that is not the man."

The witness said that he had observed that the man had a light mustache, parted in the centre and curled up at the ends. He had seen a man who looked like that in the July Grand Jury room.

The witness further testified that there had been received for "H. Cornish" two little packages, one of the Kutnow powder and one of Von Mohl's remedy, and two letters. One of the letters had come some days before Jan. 14, 1899, when he had looked into the box and found it gone. What became of it he did not know. It was from the Stearns Company. Mr. Osborne remarked that a copy had since been obtained from that company. The other letter, Koch said, was from Von Mohl. The packages had been put into the wrong box by mistake, and he found them on Jan. 14. The next day he called on Capt. McClusky and gave them to a detective at Police Headquarters.

The witness said that he thought at that time that suspicion was being unjustly directed toward Molineux, and therefore sought out Mr. Weeks and had a talk with him. The second time he saw Molineux was on Feb. 27. He then told of getting $500 from one newspaper and $250 from another for telling them about the boxes coming to his place and of Molineux having been there.

Court adjourned at 4:30 o'clock until 10:30 this morning.

MOLINEUX CASE IN NEWARK.

Detectives Said to be at Work on a New Poison Clue.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 16.—The belief prevails here that Assistant District Attorney Osborne is playing for time in the Molineux trial to give the detectives a chance to work out a clue. A bottle of cyanide of mercury purchased in this city shortly before the poisoning of Mrs. Adams is said to be the subject of investigation. New York detectives have been working night and day in this city, and have employed a woman detective to assist them.

Besides working on the poison feature of the case, efforts are being made to get Miss Katherine Kane and Archibald Arnold, employes in Hartdegen's jewelry store, to testify, but all efforts in this line thus far have failed. It is desired to prove by them that the bottle holder was purchased from Miss Miller not long before Molineux is said to have been met by Detective Joseph Farrell on Market Street on Dec. 21, instead of late in the afternoon, as Miss Miller testified.

Detective Christie of this city was called up on the telephone this afternoon by Assistant District Attorney Osborne, who wanted him to testify to-morrow. For some reason which is not given out the detective was unable to respond, but he will be present on Thursday. Detective Christie had Molineux under surveillance for several weeks before he was arrested.

FREE TRADE FOR PUERTO RICO.

It Is Feared Protectionists May Block Congressional Action for Relief of the Island.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The pressure upon members of the House, and particularly upon those members who are regarded as the strongest protectionists, to prevent the adoption of the President's recommendation that free trade advantages be extended to Puerto Rico is admitted to be increasing. There is some danger that, in order to sustain the protection theory and policy, and to satisfy a few interests that may be affected by free trade with Puerto Rico, the distressed condition of that island, brought on greatly through American occupation, will be continued.

Enough is learned of the character of the discussions to justify the statement that the status of Puerto Rico may be determined by a decision as to whether certain phrases of the Constitution are applicable to our new possessions. The dominant idea is that the Constitution permits the application of different tariffs to these new possessions and that free trade or approximate free trade may be accorded to Puerto Rico and a full or modified tariff fixed for Cuba and the Philippines.

The President and the Secretary of War do not wish to have any discrimination made against Puerto Rico. While both are protectionists, they consider the question of policy the one that should govern in this matter, and that Congress is bound to do for Puerto Rico as quickly as possible the thing that evidently is needed to lift the island out of the depression in which it is floundering, according to Gen. Davis and others who have made full reports of the conditions prevailing there.

The patience of the Puerto Ricans, under the circumstances, is taken as a good indication of their confidence that they will eventually receive fair treatment by the United States.

The principal subject of discussion at to-day's Cabinet meeting was the present unsatisfactory status of the island. The President and the members of the Cabinet are very much in earnest in their advocacy of action by Congress.

PUERTO RICANS ARRIVE.

Among the passengers who arrived yesterday on the steamer Philadelphia from Ponce and San Juan was a delegation of Puerto Rican merchants and citizens, who are going to Washington to consult with President McKinley and to present to Congress the needs of that island. The delegates are strongly in favor of Puerto Rico being made a Territory of the United States.

Among the delegates are George I. Finlay, a sugar planter, who is Chairman of the delegation; Manuel Fernandez Juncos, Secretary; J. D. H. Luce, banker; Charles Armstrong of the Puerto Rican Chamber of Commerce, Arturo Bravo of Mayaguez, and Lucas Amadeo and E. Gonzalez, who represent the Coffee Planters' Association of Puerto Rico.

Delegate Luce said the mission of the delegation was a purely commercial one, and had no political significance. They wanted Puerto Rico to have free trade with the United States, and to be put on the same basis in regard to trade as the States and Territories.

Mr. Armstrong remarked that the island now produces about 55,000 tons of sugar a year. If the duty were removed, the Puerto Rican planters would be able to produce 90,000 tons yearly, and the plantain and cocoanut trade would be stimulated in proportion.

YORK COMMANDERY'S BALL.

Few greater throngs have ever assembled in Madison Square Garden than that which attended the reception and ball commemorating the twenty-seventh anniversary of York Commandery, Knights Templars, last night. Eleven commanderies were on the floor under their own banners, and representatives of more than as many more joined with the various organizations. A conservative estimate is that there were at least 1,200 uniformed men on the floor during the opening ceremonies.

Eminent Sir Knight William J. McDonald of York Commandery was the Grand Marshal. After the impressive reception of officers a drill was given by the Detroit Commandery, which had come from Michigan about sixty strong to take part in the celebration.

This organization has the honor of never having failed to get first prize in any competitive drill into which it has entered, whether against civil or military bodies, and the wonderful evolutions were cheered until the walls trembled. Among those who watched them was Mayor William C. Maybury of Detroit.

The commanderies on the floor were Columbian, No. 1; Morton, No. 4; Palestine, No. 18, and Coeur de Leon of New York; Clinton, No. 14, Brooklyn; Pilgrim, Hoboken; William Parkman, Boston; Trinity, Plainfield; Hamilton, Bridgeport; Bethlehem, Mount Vernon, and the Yonkers Commandery.

SCHOOL TEACHERS MUST WAIT.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 16.—New York's school teachers will probably have to wait until March 1 before they receive their arrears of salary as a result of the failure of the Senate Cities Committee to agree on a bill to hasten the payment of back pay. At to-day's meeting Senators Elsberg, Grady, McCarren, and Ford each spoke in favor of the bill he had introduced, but could not be induced to make any sort of compromise.

Senator Stranahan, Chairman of the committee, said that he was not in position to form an opinion, as he had been so engaged with the taxation problem that he had been unable to give the school question the consideration it deserved. Thomas J. Cramer, who appeared for the Corporation Counsel's office in New York, urged that the committee report favorably the Grady bill, which he said was approved by Mayor Van Wyck, Controller Coler, and other New York officials. Mr. Cramer told the committee that Brooklyn not only wanted its own Borough Board, but also wanted to control its own finances. He added that Brooklyn paid $15,000,000 into the general tax fund and that this was but $1,000,000 more than it would cost to defray the expenses of the school system of New York City for the present year.

Senator Grady wanted a hearing on the bill at an early date. Three of the six bills which have been introduced, those of Senators Grady, McCarren, and Ford, are emergency measures, and the date for their hearing was fixed for Jan. 23 at 2 P. M. Senator Elsberg's Centralization bill, Senator Marshall's decentralization measure, and Senator Ford's financial measure will be given a hearing Jan. 30 at 2 P. M.

GOOD PICTURES AT AUCTION.

The first of three evenings' sale of a collection of some 259 paintings, including a number of old portraits by unknown or known artists, and which with the exception of the portraits are owned by Mr. George E. Tewkesbury and Mrs. Henry Burton, will take place at the Fifth Avenue Auction Rooms, 238 Fifth Avenue, this evening. The succeeding sales will be held to-morrow and Friday evenings. It is a pleasure to be able to say that these canvases number among them some excellent examples of well-known American and foreign brushes, and some few examples that are more than ordinarily good. The lovers of the smooth and finished art of Plot will find a good example of this artist in "The Brunette," and there is a very fair example hung near by, of Sir Peter Lely, a "Portrait of the Duchess of Richmond," which was brought here by the late Henry S. Van Gigch, and which was sold at the sale of his effects on March 15, 1898, at the Ortgies gallery. There is also an extremely interesting and good example of Isabey, "A Coast Scene," with a number of figures and all his characteristics; a fair Escosura, "Painting the Portrait of a Child;" a landscape attributed to Bargue, which is certainly strong and rich in color; a fair Cazin, an important and more than ordinarily pleasing Courbet, a good Delpy, and examples of Grolleron, L'Hermitte, Lerolle, Michel, Richet, Harpignies, and Verboeckhoven, which may be commended to the art lover and buyer. In American pictures there are four examples of Inness, two especially good, and representative examples of Bricher, Bruce Crane, Cropsey, Sandford Gifford, Edward Gay, an early William Hart, four charming little David Johnsons, a fair Ochtman, a good McEntee, a fair Quartley, a fair Wyant, and a well-known little coast scene by Kensett, "Newport Cliffs," which ought to go into the collection of some buyer of American pictures, who for sentiment's sake likes to possess pictures of a past day. In saying this it is not meant to criticise adversely this little canvas, which is soft and charming in color and very joyous in light and atmosphere.

AGUINALDO'S TRUE POSITION DEFINED

WAS ALWAYS AN ENEMY

The President Will Offer Proof that He Plotted with Spaniards to Attack American Forces.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—In advance of the reply that it is expected the President will make to the Senate resolution calling for information concerning the part Aguinaldo played in prolonging the war in the Philippines, it is rumored, evidently upon a knowledge of the facts, that the correspondence to be produced will disclose the fact that Aguinaldo, instead of being inclined to a friendly co-operation with the United States from the first, was really disloyal to the United States as far back as the time Admiral Dewey was trying to keep the Spanish within Manila, and was depending to some extent upon the assistance of the Filipinos to accomplish that object.

During that critical period, Aguinaldo, according to the information derived from papers captured, while in the possession of members of Aguinaldo's Cabinet, when Dewey was trying to pen the Spaniards, was sending his emissaries, including Buencamino, Secretary of State, to treat with the officers of the Spanish army for an arrangement against the American forces.

This effort went so far that Buencamino went several times into Manila under a flag of truce, held interviews with Gen. Agustin, the commandant, and went back to Cavite with the agreement in his pocket. The timely arrival of a transport with additional American troops, deterred the Filipinos from attempting their attack with Spanish help, and Aguinaldo wrote a long letter to Gen. Augustine to excuse himself for breaking his word and postponing the joint effort to overthrow the Americans. Aguinaldo published this letter.

The proof of the other incidents is said to be found in the same papers.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Surgeon General Wyman of the Marine Hospital Service has received a cablegram dated to-day from Passed Assistant Surgeon Perry, who arrived at Manila Jan. 12. Surgeon Perry is at present in charge of the Marine Hospital Service at Manila.

PHILIPPINE REPORT READY SOON.

Congress Will Have the First Volume Within a Week.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The Philippine Commission to-day completed its report and dispatched it to the Public Printer. Proofs of the first section are expected to-morrow, and there is every reason to believe that the first volume at least can be laid before Congress within a week. Because of the pendency of the Philippine question just now before Congress it is regarded as desirable by the commission that this material be submitted at the earliest possible moment.

The first volume, which is to be brought out immediately, is devoted entirely to the political issues involved in the acquisition of the Philippines. It contains chapters on various subjects—government, currency, the Chinese question, naval requisites, &c. Of these subjects the one treated at by far the greatest length is that of government, and that section of the work, with its exhibits, will occupy from one-half to two-thirds of the volume.

The second volume will be devoted to the resources of the islands. Other volumes will follow containing the great mass of testimony taken by the commission in pursuance of the President's instructions.

Exports from Iloilo.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—A statement was issued by the War Department to-day giving the value of merchandise imported and exported at the customs port of Iloilo, Philippine Islands, for the months of February, March, and April, 1899. It shows that the total exports for the months named were valued at $549,387, while the total value of imports for the same period was only $157,269. The excess of exports over imports was $392,118.

Spanish Prisoners Reach Barcelona.

BARCELONA, Jan. 16.—The Spanish transatlantic steamer Leon XIII. has arrived here from the Philippine Islands with former Spanish prisoners and their families. A majority of them are in a lamentable plight. The town authorities and Red Cross agents met them and gave assistance to the sufferers.

PAY FOR DAMAGED CABLE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The President to-day sent to the Senate papers in the claim of the Eastern Extension Australian and China Telegraph Company for compensation on account of expenses incurred in repairing its cables between Manila and Hongkong, and Manila and Cadiz, which were cut by order of Admiral Dewey during the war with Spain.

The President recommends "that as an act of equity and comity provision be made by the Congress for reimbursement to the company of the actual expenses incurred by it in the repair of the cables."

The expenses of making the repairs were about £912 sterling. These do not include loss of business, which is estimated at £11,000.

The Buffalo Not Ordered to Manila.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The Navy Department is in receipt of inquiries from relatives of naval officers stationed at Manila respecting a report that the department intended to send the Buffalo to Manila and allow the ladies an opportunity to take passage. The Buffalo is not under orders for the Philippines.

MISS GOULD GIVES $50,000.

Makes Possible New Home for the Naval Branch of the Y. M. C. A.

A new home for the naval branch of the Young Men's Christian Association is to be built on Sands Street, Brooklyn. The three-story brick building at 167 Sands Street, at present used by the branch, as well as the two adjoining properties, have been purchased, and on this site will be erected a $50,000 structure. The property was purchased by the International Committee of the naval branch work of the association. Miss Helen M. Gould made the purchase of the site possible by contributing $50,000. Others have also been liberal contributors. Miss Gould has been greatly interested in the branch since its organization.

The new building will be five stories in height, of brick, with stone trimmings. It will be provided with all modern conveniences, including a swimming pool, gymnasium, reading and reception rooms, and a large number of sleeping rooms. It will be within a few blocks of the navy yard, and will be convenient to the men on the warships which lay up there.

A meeting in the interest of the naval branch work will be held in the Chamber of Commerce Building to-morrow afternoon. Rear Admiral John W. Philip will preside.

W. J. O'LEARY DIES SUDDENLY.

William J. O'Leary, forty-four years old, of 327 West Fifty-fifth Street, died suddenly yesterday in the Circle Hotel, at Fifty-eighth Street and Eighth Avenue. He was a lawyer employed as examiner in the law department of the Mutual Life Insurance Company.

Mr. O'Leary was found in the rear of the saloon part of the hotel. He was not dead when discovered, and a bicycle policeman outside was notified. He sent to Roosevelt Hospital for an ambulance, and one soon reached the hotel with Dr. Hartshorn, who pronounced Mr. O'Leary dead. Dr. Hamilton Williams, Coroner's physician, who viewed the body, declared Mr. O'Leary died from heart disease.

Mr. O'Leary, who was the son of William K. O'Leary, a prosperous contractor, was graduated from the New York University and the Columbia Law School. He moved to Newark, N. J., two years ago, and only recently returned to this city.

Mr. O'Leary eight years ago married Miss Sarah McGrane, the daughter of John McGrane, a wealthy contractor, and a relative of the late Dr. McGlynn. Mrs. O'Leary and three children survive him.

Mr. O'Leary was a member of Tammany Hall, the Democratic and Narragansett Clubs, and the Society of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick.

LIVE-STOCK MEN IN SESSION.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Jan. 16.—The third annual convention of the National Live-stock Association of the United States began here to-day with a good attendance of delegates.

After several addresses of welcome, the annual address of the President was delivered by John W. Springer of Colorado. Mr. Springer referred to the growing necessity for a share in the markets of the world, adding:

"The electric chariot of progress is sending its throbing pulsations of activity up and down the commercial highways of the earth and, my friends, if you cannot keep up with the procession you will be rapidly relegated to that circle of 'has-beens,' whose objections, criticisms and predictions of dire and awful calamities should have written over their chaotic domains, 'Abandon Hope—Progress—all ye who enter here.'"

At the conclusion of the President's address Secretary Martin read the annual report of the Executive Committee.

Robert H. West, ex-President of the Cincinnati Commercial Club, introduced a resolution asking for a modification of quarantine restrictions and asked that a committee be appointed to lay the matter before the Secretary of Agriculture.

The Executive Committee laid on the table a letter and resolutions from Susan B. Anthony bearing on woman's suffrage.

The attendance was estimated to be nearly 5,000.

Six Cents for Husband's Affections.

Mrs. Marie Kuhn recovered yesterday in the Supreme Court a verdict for 6 cents for the alienation of her husband's affections. The suit was tried before Justice Truax and a jury. Mrs. Kuhn alleged that Friedhold and Barbara Hemmens, the defendants, had paid her passage to Europe so as to get rid of her. While she was in Europe her husband, Charles Kuhn, who was cashier at the Central Opera House, married Elsa Hemmens, the daughter of the defendants. The defendants asserted that they were informed by Kuhn that he had obtained a divorce from his wife in Chicago, and that they thought he had a right to marry their daughter. This was the second trial of the case, the verdict on the former trial having been in favor of the defendants.

Jewelers' League Meeting.

The Jewelers' League of New York held its twenty-third annual meeting last night in Masonic Hall. The members dined at Mouquin's, Twenty-eighth Street and Sixth Avenue, before the meeting. Smith members of the Executive Committee; S. H. Levy, C. C. Offerman, and W. A. Wightman, Advisory Committee. The constitution was amended to provide for an increase in the Advisory and Executive Committees.

Successor for a New Jersey Pastor.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Jan. 16.—The Presbytery of Morris and Orange met for its Winter session here to-day. The only matter of importance brought up was the request of the Elmwood Presbyterian Church of East Orange to have the selection of the Rev. Charles Bullard to succeed the Rev. Samuel J. McClenaghan as pastor of the church formally approved. The congregation asked that the resignation of their pastor be accepted, owing to a secret marriage which he failed to make public, resulting in a scandal. The selection of Mr. Bullard was approved.

Talk of a Gravel Trust.

NORTHPORT, L. I., Jan. 16.—Boatmen and baymen are interested in a report that a gravel trust has been formed in New York for the purpose of shipping gravel from this section of Long Island to New York and other Eastern cities. It is said to be a part of the scheme to establish a big screening plant in this neighborhood and to ship the gravel in steam canalboats. At present local boatmen ship the gravel in sailing vessels.

River Steamer Sinks in a Race.

GALLIPOLIS, Ohio, Jan. 16.—The passenger steamer Lexington, owned by the Carr Line of Charleston, West Va., while racing with the opposition packet Argand, struck the lock wall near Scary, breaking in twain and sinking immediately. The Argand went to the rescue and took off the passengers and crew. The steamer will probably be a total wreck.

Burmah's Large Rice Crop.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The Calcutta correspondent of The Times says: "The Burmese rice crop has broken the record. Over 2,620,000 tons will be available for export to foreign countries. Burmah is also able to supply a practically unlimited quantity to the Indian famine districts."

ROAD COMMISSIONS CENSURED.

Negligence and Illegal Procedure Charged Against Supreme Court Boards at White Plains.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Jan. 16.—The special committee of the Board of Supervisors of Westchester County appointed to examine into the affairs and conduct of the Commissioners appointed by the Supreme Court to open and construct Warburton Avenue, in the town of Greenburgh, issued its report to-day. The report severely criticises the original board, composed of John M. Peene, James J. Treanor, and John Besson. The report also declares that the present commission, substituted in December, 1896, has been negligent of the interests of the county in permitting the execution of the contracts made for the bridges by the original Commissioners, without having attempted to correct the abuses.

The original Commissioners for the construction of Warburton Avenue were appointed in May, 1892. At the time of their removal in December, 1896, only a portion of the work on the highway had been finished, and there were no funds on hand to carry out the remainder. Bonds of the town of Greenburgh had been issued to the amount of $149,000 for the work, and had been sold by the Commissioners to the firm of Coffin & Stanton, $49,000 in cash having been given in exchange, the balance to be paid in ten monthly installments, secured by bonds deposited with a safe deposit company as collateral. Coffin & Stanton, it was said, later refused to pay the monthly installments, thereby causing the suspension of the work.

Regarding the sale of the bonds, the report says: "Your committee is satisfied that nothing could have been more lax and unbusinesslike than the conduct of this important transaction. The Commissioners all admit that no examination or investigation as to the rightful ownership of the bonds deposited as collateral was made. Neither was any such examination or investigation made as to the legality of their issue or their marketable value. There can be no question that the sale of the bonds on the terms stated was clearly in violation of the statute."

The original Commissioners are also censured for awarding and paying excessive damages for the land confiscated for the highway, and for "constructing a highway unwarrantably extravagant in cost and of a character which is in violation of both the spirit and the letter of the law."

SEEK EVIDENCE IN A GRAVE.

The Body of Alleged Murdered Man Will Be Exhumed.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Jan. 16.—John C. R. Taylor, attorney for Dr. William T. Jones of Pine Bush, who is now in Goshen Jail, charged with killing Charles Lewis, his colored coachman, will have the body exhumed and a search made for powder marks and burns about a wound in the head.

The defense claims that Lewis shot himself because of despondency over a drubbing received in a fight with a companion on the day of his death, but physicians who performed the autopsy report that no powder marks were visible.

MRS. POOLE MAY GO TO JAIL.

Held in Contempt by Justice Fitzgerald for Collecting Rent.

Mrs. Angelina M. Poole, for her persistence in collecting the rents of the house at 109 East Twenty-sixth Street, owned by her husband, may go to jail. She was enjoined from collecting the rents a month ago, but Sydney G. Poole, her husband, alleges that a week ago she collected $5 from one of the lodgers. He appealed to the Supreme Court to commit her for contempt, and Justice Fitzgerald yesterday held that she was guilty of contempt of court and directed her to pay a fine of $50 or go to jail until the fine is paid

More News of Muslin Underwear

The makers of the stocks would gladly buy all we have at a profit on the prices agreed upon; one asks us to take a money consideration and let him off from further deliveries.

If you knew the stocks as well as they do, the store couldn't hold the throngs who'd come to get a share of the garments. As it is, the lots are disappearing. Is this fair warning? It's meant to be.

Muslin Petticoats with cambric ruffle, 35c. Not more than 3 to a buyer, else a few would take the lot.
Same with these Muslin Drawers at 10c. Deep hem and three plaits.
And the Night Gowns at 38c. High neck, cluster plaits and insertion; lawn ruffle at neck and sleeves.
Chemises, neck and armholes finished with cotton torchon lace, 18c. Guess we'd better not sell more than 3 of these to any one buyer.

And there is more than muslin here. For instance—

Black Mohair Waists, at $2 instead of $2.75 and $3.75.
Velveteen Waists, solid colors, $3 instead of $4.50 and $6.50.
Flannelette Sacques, solid colors, light and pretty, 50c.
Elderdown Robes, $3.50 instead of $5.
Flannelette Wrappers, $1 instead of $1.75 and $2.
Black Sateen Wrappers, at $2 instead of $3.75.

And still fair choosing among the French Silk Waists and Tea Gowns and Dressing Sacques. Some are half price.
Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Men's Sack Suits to Order Some piece goods here that should not be in the piece. We wish to make it up quickly into suits. To do so, this incentive: Choose from numerous stylish cheviots and worsteds at $20 for a sack suit to order. There are qualities in the lot from which we made suits at $30—moderate at that.
Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Imported Corsets Reduced to end certain lots. About 400 fine imported corsets, that were $2.50 to $7, are now $1.75 to $4.50. Of coutil and sateen—white, drab and black; short, medium and extra long; bias and straight cut; mostly braced with whalebone. All sizes from 18 to 30, but not in each style. Second floor.

Children's Coats and Bonnets Half Price All that remain of both stocks—some of the finest we had—are to be closed. Prices are halved to make the transaction a quick one.

Handsome coats of various cloths at $6.50 to $16.50; were $13 to $33.
Velvet coats, at $22.50 to $28; were $45 to $56.
Of silk and other fancy materials, in light shades, cream included, at $8 to $26.50; were $16 to $53.

Decorative Lamps---Reduced

Lamps will never lose favor—they help too much in effective furnishing. When electric lights grew into general use, the lamp makers trembled—but the lamp said, "I can hold an electric bulb as well as oil," and the lamp business is bigger than ever.

Just now, to adjust stocks, we are willing to lose a third or more on a hundred lamps. All are complete with central-draft burners and fine globes—

$15 to $25 Lamps at $9 — $8.50 to $13.50 Lamps at $6

Ruby Globes are popular—you may need one for a lamp you have. Here are some at less than you dared hope to find them—8, 10 and 12 in.;

9 in., at $1, though regularly $2. 10 in., at $1.50, regularly $2.50.
12 in., at $2.50, regularly $3.50.

STATE BAR ASSOCIATION

President Logan Advocates a Limit on Inheritances.

HE SUGGESTS $10,000,000

Associate Justice Brown of the United States Supreme Court Discusses "The Liberty of the Press."

ALBANY, Jan. 16.—In opening the session of the State Bar Association President Logan to-day made an address on "The Limitation of Inheritances," in which he said:

"The characteristic of our age and civilization is the presence of mighty fortunes among us; the concentration of immense accumulations, and of the mighty power that follow therefrom, in few hands. The question to which I now ask your attention is whether the State shall so exercise its law-making power as to permit these accumulations and this power to be freely transmitted from father to son and from generation to generation, or whether the law-making power of the State shall be exercised in such a way as to impose limitations upon such transmission."

Mr. Logan then advocated a $10,000,000 limitation, and gave as his reasons for advocating it the following:

"First—There is at the present day no good purpose to be served by giving a man power to transmit more than $10,000,000.

"Second—The great power which great wealth gives cannot be intrusted as safely to those who inherit the wealth as to those who acquire it by their own exertions.

"Third—No vested right would be infringed and no injustice done to any one by the proposed legislation.

"Fourth—A great deal can be done for the amelioration of social conditions, the betterment of the masses of the people, and the enhancement of civilization with the money which would come to the Treasury if the State were the heir of the surplus of every man's fortune above $10,000,000."

At the evening session Mr. Justice Brown of the United States Supreme Court delivered an address on "The Liberty of the Press." He said, in part:

"The right of every man to express his opinions in speech or print is justly esteemed as one of the most sacred prerogatives of a free people. The very first amendment to the Constitution declares that Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of speech or of the press. No clause of the Constitution has been more sacredly cherished and none more carefully upheld by the judicial power.

"Too much cannot be said in praise of our daily press as news gatherers. Their enterprise in this direction is superior to every obstacle. No quarter of the globe is too remote, no expense too great, no difficulties so insurmountable that they cannot be overcome in pursuit of the latest and most authentic intelligence. Relays of reporters are kept within call, ready to be dispatched to the most distant city; steam vessels are chartered to meet incoming steamers, to watch naval manoeuvres, or to reach places inaccessible by land; telegraph wires are burdened with messages passing to and from the offices of publication, and special trains are hired for the prompt dissemination of their several editions. If their editorials do not always equal in ability those of the leading English journals—and I am not prepared to admit even this—their news columns are a refreshing contrast to the deadly dullness of the Continental papers.

"All this, however, does not blind us to the fact that many of these papers are guilty of a grave abuse of their privileges. Indeed, the sins of the press have been a fruitful subject of discussion ever since the foundation of the Government.

"Ugly stories, too, are told—with how much truth I know not—of the methods resorted to to create a sensation, or to advertise a paper; of correspondents sent to Washington with instructions to blacken the characters of particular men, regardless of the actual facts; of debates in secret session of the Senate, published in defiance of privilege; of opinions of Courts surreptitiously obtained before delivery and published without a sense of shame; of editorial space sold for so much a line; of messages stolen from the wires; of watches put upon houses to unearth domestic scandals, or upon the steps of public men to ferret out political secrets; of respectable women detailed to walk the streets of a great city at night, get themselves arrested as disreputable, and spend a night in prison for the sake of a startling article upon the infamous persecution of workingwomen, but all with the understanding that, if they were not arrested, they would be discharged for incompetency; of another sent to England to take return passage in an emigrant ship, with instructions to write up the horrors of a steerage passage and the accompanying moral ruin, which, of course, she never saw; of various other contrivances by which reporters are sent, not to investigate facts, but to make a case by hook or crook against some prominent official. For the credit of humanity, not to say for the honor of a great profession, let us hope these stories are untrue; but there is something tiresome in their iteration.

"The next step in their downward career was the illustration, and such illustrations! Pictures of current events, battles, murders, and sudden deaths, sometimes copied from photographs, oftener drawn from the imagination—portraits of persons of more or less conspicuity, from the President of the United States to the latest baseball team, with the wrong name often appended. An enterprising editor never allows the trivial fact that he has no photograph of a particular individual to prevent his publishing one. All these extravagances culminate in the weekly horror of the Sunday morning edition, which in all the colors of the painter's palette disport themselves in lurid imaginings, that suggest nothing so much as those representations of the infernal regions wherein the mediaeval German painters used to delight in setting forth the tortures of the damned. If there can be anything worse than these, the mind of man hath not hitherto conceived them.

"Probably no law could be framed which would cover such cases, since matters of taste are beyond the pale of the law; but it is to be regretted that the great mass of the American people are so imperfectly educated as to take pleasure in these abortions of the engraver's art.

"But it is in assaults upon private character that the press is guilty of its greatest cruelties, for no other word in the English language will adequately express the nature of these attacks.

"With regard to officials and candidates for public office, a different rule applies from that which holds good as to private individuals. The public has the right to know not only the qualifications, but the private character of candidates for their suffrages, and as in a great majority of cases they cannot possibly know them by acquaintance, or by private inquiry, they must necessarily rely upon the press for information. The law is justly liberal in this regard.

"It is exceedingly doubtful if any legislation be practicable which shall tend to restrict the excessive license indulged in by newspapers. Of course, a censorship is not to be thought of in a free country. We can imagine a censorship which, without repressing the freest discussion of political and social questions, and the claims of candidates to the suffrages of the people might repress much that is indecent, coarse, and libelous, but in the practical administration of such a law, the abuses would soon outnumber the advantages.

"But notwithstanding the idiosyncrasies of our daily press, if an account were struck between the good and the evil, we should find a large credit to the good. We cannot forget that they are our sole medium of communication with the outer world, and furnish us the latest intelligence in an attractive form, and if they are sometimes sensational, they are at least interesting. That in political crises their voices are generally for honesty and decency; that in moments of public danger their loyalty to the common weal is beyond question, and that no great reform in political or social life can be expected without their co-operation."

The association elected these officers: President—Francis M. Finch of Ithaca; Vice Presidents—First District, Edmund Wetmore of New York City; Second District, Theodore F. Jackson of Brooklyn; Third District, Albert Hessberg of Albany; Fourth District, John I. Gilbert of Malone; Fifth District, Elon R. Brown of Watertown; Sixth District, John P. Grant of Stamford; Seventh District, Demerville Page of Horne.lsville; Eighth District, John G. Milburn of Buffalo; Secretary—Frederick E. Wadhams of Albany; Corresponding Secretary—George Lawyer of Albany; Treasurer—Henry A. Peckham of Albany.

The following members of the Executive Committee were elected from the First and Second Districts: Roger Foster, William E. Wyatt, M. Warley Platzek, Augustus N. Weller, James P. Phillip, and Arthur S. Tompkins.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN.

Women are such innocent creatures. A party of them were inspecting a display of gowns and Summer fabrics at one of the largest stores yesterday, and one of them showed a disposition to purchase then and there a gown that happened to strike her fancy and fit her most becomingly. "Don't do it," whispered one of her companions. "Like as not they will not be in fashion when Summer comes around, and then how you will feel with a gown of last Summer's cut on. They must be last Summer's cut, for how can these people know what the fashion is going to be next Summer right here in midwinter?" That argument was a clincher, and the party left the store thoroughly convinced that they had narrowly escaped being made the victims of one of New York's bunko games. They met their husbands at luncheon time at one of the big hotels, and were telling the escape they had had from being "taken in." Then there was a chorus of laughter from "those horrid men," who, upon demand, made their explanation that even men knew that the fashions for both men and women for next Summer were decided upon a year or so ago, the goods all made up, and the patterns sent broadcast over the world at about the time that women were engaged in buying their Winter outfit, and that now the mills are all engaged in making heavy goods for next Winter's wear. It was altogether too much for the women to believe, and they decided that the husbands were making fun of them, and no statement to the contrary would be believed. Nor were they convinced until one of them who had an acquaintance with the Superintendent of one of the big department stores appeal to him as an authority to settle the question. He of course informed her that her husband was in the right, and pointed out the impossibility of manufacturing cloths and making up gowns on the moment at any time of the year to suit that particular instant. That same Superintendent said there was probably not one woman in a thousand who knew or would believe that all the styles of the Summer of 1900 were prepared in the Spring and Summer of 1899. "Necessities of designing, manufacturing, and getting the goods first into the hands of the jobbers and then of the retailers months in advance of the time of their use, are things that seem beyond the comprehension of womankind," said he, "and if women did know it all right, they would wait until the very last moment before buying what they think they want, so as to get the advantage of the very latest thing. Yet there is not a tailor, dressmaker, or milliner of the fashionable sort but has now in his or her workrooms the patterns for the styles that will be in vogue at Newport, Narragansett Pier, Lenox, or any other fashionable resort the coming Summer and Fall, and many of them could even tell, if they would, what will probably be the style of garments in the Winter of 1900-1901."

Men and women who love the horse will be glad to know that the cruel fashion of the dock-tailed horse is passing, even if it has not already passed. Society made it a fad, but when public cabhorses and livery turnouts appeared so numerously with horses with mutilated tails society frowned on it, and has now gone in for the long-tailed horse, having discovered a beauty in Nature's adornment of their faithful friend that they had not before discerned. Docked-tailed horses are too numerous on delivery and express wagons now to permit leaders of fashion to continue driving such animals. They are too "common."

A fact that is rather surprising and that is yet readily susceptible of proof is that the lower east side printing shops that cater to that trade annually turn out more printed matter in the Yiddish idiom than is published in all the rest of the world put together. A Bohemian who translates popular and scientific works into the idiom says that the output is probably three times as great, and that those who alone read Yiddish are indefatigable readers and buyers of literature in their tongue.

Before skating comes again Park Commissioner Clausen would do a good thing if he would issue an order forbidding the use of those monstrosities known as racing skates on the Park ponds. These things have long, flat runners that stretch out beyond the heels and toes of the wearers, and are dangerous, not only to the wearer—unless he is an expert skater—but to every one else who tries to skate on a pond where there are a lot of boys armed with these things. Their wearers are far more dangerous than were the scorchers on the bicycle, and caused most of the accidents on the ponds during what skating weather there has been. Such skates are all right in their only place, which is in skating races. But the small boy, as soon as he is able to stand alone on the ice seems to think he is not skating unless he has a pair of these things strapped to his feet. Being unable, then, to manage either himself or them, he becomes a terror to everybody who happens to want to enjoy a bit of this healthful exercise. The automobile is comparatively a harmless toy.

For several years Americans have been making a very good showing on the English race courses with the American-bred race horse. The invasion of France has not as yet amounted to much except with the light-harness horse, which, in France, Germany, Austria, and Russia has shown itself able to hold its own against the best bred animals of those countries. This season, however, William K. Vanderbilt will have a considerable string of thoroughbreds from American-bred mares on the French turf, and the stories from the other side are to the effect that his youngsters are a very promising lot. Germany, too, is to be invaded by "Barney" Schreiber, a St. Louis bookmaker, breeder, and racing man, who is to send over a considerable string of horses in a few weeks to try conclusions with the German-bred horses. He will take an American trainer and jockey, who will prepare for races a couple of years hence a lot of yearlings sired by Boundless, winner of the American Derby in the World's Fair year, and by Foul Shot, an Australian-bred stallion, and the son of the great race horse Musket. It is said that in case this venture proves anything like successful, Gottfried Walbaum, erstwhile of Guttenberg, and now of New York and Saratoga, will head a syndicate of Germans in this city who will send over a large stable of the best horses they can pick up.

"It looks as if the Angora goat might be the means of the reclamation of a lot of the abandoned farms of New England," said a woolen man from that section yesterday. "Two carloads of these animals have arrived at one of these farms in the interior of Massachusetts within the week, coming from Texas, I believe. The animals thrive on the rough pastures of hilly lands and if the climate proves suitable, there is a fortune in the wool and skins compared with the returns from other animals and products of even the better grades of New England farms. At all events, some friends of mine have bought a couple of these farms and are going to stock them with the goats and see if the scheme is not a practicable one. You know we will have to do something to counterbalance the stealing of our cotton industry from us by the people of the South."

Possibly the latest thing for the convenience of the female shopper is a corps of attendants at the entrance to a big city store, whose duty it is to relieve the mother of the care of her baby or babies while she goes into the store in search of bargains. These uniformed young men must have been selected after a civil service examination, for they all know how to handle a baby properly, how to quiet it when it is disposed to yowl too energetically, how to apply the quieting nursing bottle, and how, when all other means of quieting the noisy youngsters fail, to toss them up and down in motherly fashion and so keep them in comparative quiet until the mother comes to take care of her own. The attendants, too, are warranted never to mix the babies up and to restore each one to its proper carriage when the mother comes for it. The proprietors who happened on this happy thought find that it is a paying investment, for their shop is situated in a district where babies are numerous and where mothers are not financially able to have a nurse girl to constantly attend their offspring. It is not in Brooklyn, but in the district commonly, but improperly referred to as Harlem.

Hockey, like all other fads, has brought evils in its train. "Shinny" on the streets is the attendant nuisance this time. Given small boys, bent sticks, an asphalt pavement, and there will be lively moments for the pedestrian who tries to pass where they are knocking about either the hard rubber ball or the block of wood they use for a "puck." Parts of West End Avenue and the near-by cross streets are hotbeds of these shinny players after school hours. Accidents caused by the flying missiles are frequent, and inside of a quarter of an hour yesterday one nurse girl had her cheek cut open and a child of perhaps four years was "knocked out" by one of the nasty little balls the boys were knocking about. The policeman does not live who can catch the urchins when they start to run away, nor does there seem to be a janitor spry enough to get within his clutches the lads who break scores of windows, sometimes very costly ones, every week. Only when there is skating are the streets free of these nuisances, who are rather more dangerous to life than to property.

DYING, CRIES "SAVA DA MON."

Nameless Parrot of Banker Bonomolo Shouts a Warning to His Master, Panic-Stricken by Fire.

A thin wooden partition used to divide the Banco Italiano, 247 Elizabeth Street, from the living rooms of its proprietor, Dominico Bonomolo, where dwelt together in happiness the wife of the good Bonomolo, his cousins, his aunts, and a bright green parrot. Now the little partition is down, and when Pedro, who "sella da banan" at the corner, goes in to deposit his day's earnings every detail of the family life of the Bonomolos is made known to him.

The walls, which were always kept neat and clean in the banking end of the establishment, are grotesquely figured with the smoke of an oily combustible. The wife and the cousins and the aunts are nervously shocked and grieved. And the bright green parrot lies, brighter and greener than ever, dead.

They didn't think much of the parrot when he lived. He was only tolerated because he belonged to an old aunt and was supposed to be older than she. Besides, there is a tradition in Little Italy that to kill a parrot is bad luck. But by his death the nameless parrot has earned deathless fame in the annals of the neighborhood and a distinction which the Bonomolos gladly share.

When Banker Bonomolo appeared in his counting room yesterday morning, took down the shutters, opened the safe, and bravely displayed his current capital in the front window to "keepa off da run," Gracia, his wife, filled the stove in the next apartment with wood, and then got the kerosene can. It was very early in the morning, and perhaps she wasn't very wide awake. At any rate, she absently spilled the oil and when she added the lighted match the partition and its hangings blazed up. From the rear rushed cousins and aunts and wife. Bonomolo, in the front room, saw them pass. Then, alarmed at the smoke and fire, he, too, ran for the door.

As he reached it a sound from the parrot made him stop. It may have only been the fancy of a startled mind, the parrot may have been only asking sweetly in Italian for a cracker, but the words Bonomolo says he heard were:

"Sava da mon."

Back he rushed straight to the safe. From it he took a bag. Grabbing a handful of bills from his front window, he thrust them into the bag. The smoke, thicker and blacker, was overcoming him when Pedro, the banana man, pulled him outside.

"Sava da mon," he gasped, as he reeled in the arms of friends. Kind hands held him and rough hands, hardened by shovel and pickaxe, broke the window glass and swept out the remaining bills into pockets and aprons. A few dashes of water and the fire was out.

Bonomolo was in his counting room in the afternoon attending to business as usual, while Little Italy filed into the rear room, where the parrot lay in state. Workmen were busy putting new paper on the walls, and the good Bonomolo told each customer as he made his miniature deposit:

"Anyway, we sava da mon."

ZOOLOGICAL PARK'S PROGRESS.

Board of Managers Elects Officers and Discusses Plans.

The annual meeting of the Board of Managers of the New York Zoological Society was held yesterday afternoon in the rooms of the Down Town Club, in Pine Street.

The Executive Committee reported that the total membership of the society was 736, an increase of about 180 members during the past year. The committee had raised about $50,000, which, added to the amount on hand and the interest, brought the total funds to the amount of $160,779.61. This sum, supplemented by money advanced the society by members of the committee, had been expended on the park. The balance of the Park Improvement Fund remaining to be raised during the present year is $89,779.

The report reviewed in detail the embarrassment caused by the reduction of the maintenance fund by the Board of Estimate, from $60,000 to $30,000. The society has not decided what action it will take in case the maintenance fund is not increased from public funds. The subject has been laid before the Mayor, but so far nothing has been done.

Resolutions were passed asking the State authorities of Colorado, Wyoming, and Montana to prohibit the slaughter of the prong-horned antelope for ten years. Similar protection was bespoken for the brown pelicans in Florida.

Plans of the antelope house, which is to be erected next, along with those of the monkey house and the Administration Building, were exhibited.

The election resulted in the retention in office of the same officers and Executive Committee that served last year.

Those present at the meeting were Levi P. Morton, John L. Cadwalader, John S. Barnes, Madison Grant, W. W. Niles, Jr., Hugh J. Chisholm, William D. Sloane, A. Newbold Morris, Charles A. Peabody, Jr., Percy R. Pyne, George B. Grinnell, Jacob H. Schiff, Edward J. Berwind, William C. Whitney, George C. Clark, Henry F. Osborn, Henry W. Poor, Charles T. Barney, William C. Church, Frank M. Chapman, Lispenard Stewart, Joseph Stickney, H. Casimir De Rham, Hugh A. Auchincloss, Director W. T. Hornaday, and C. Grant La Farge.

OBJECT TO GAYNOR CONTRACTS.

Counsel for the Government Do Not Want the Whole Case Tried Here.

The examination in proceedings against Col. John F. Gaynor, E. H. Gaynor, W. T. Gaynor, and B. W. Greene, who were indicted in Savannah, Ga., last December for alleged conspiracy to defraud the Government in connection with the Savannah River and Cumberland Sound contracts, sanctioned, as alleged, by Capt. Oberlin M. Carter, was continued yesterday before United States Commissioner Shields in the Federal Building.

Lieut. Col. Alexander Mackenzie, a subordinate of Gen. Wilson, Chief of United States Engineers, and John B. McCarthy, a clerk in the office of Gen. Wilson, were placed on the witness stand by the defense for the purpose of producing the contracts and other papers involved in the case. When the Savannah contract, dated Oct. 8, 1898, was offered in evidence, objection was made by Assistant United States District Attorney Baldwin and by United States District Attorney Erwin of Savannah. The objection was sustained. Mr. Baldwin said that if the whole case was to be tried in this district it would have to be over every possible objection that could be raised by the Government.

The same objection was made as to the other papers produced, and the documents were not admitted. Only one of the accused contractors attended the examination.

SUIT AGAINST HAVEMEYERS

Alleged Widow of Thomas J. Wants to Share His Estate.

The Plaintiff, Who Was Anna M. Wright, Says Their Marriage Was Kept Secret Fifteen Years.

PARCEL OF ABOUT 76 ACRES, KNOWN AS a tavern lot, at Throgmorton's Neck, Westchester, part of Abijah Hammond farm; also Whitestone Ferry Dock, adjoining land of Abijah Hammond and Thomas Ash, road leading from Westchester Village to Whitestone Ferry, situate on Throgmorton's Neck, containing about 60 acres; also land under water, Town of Westchester, on west shore of Long Island Sound, two parcels; and land under water in front of and adjacent to lands of Frederick C. Havemeyer, Westchester; Anna M. Havemeyer against Henry O. Havemeyer and others, (action to recover dower, &c.); attorneys, Hays, Greenbaum & Hershfield.

The above uninteresting-looking paragraph, which appears in the lis pendens column this morning, is the first step in a legal fight for several millions of dollars, and the result of a bit of family history hidden for fifteen years from the friends of the man whom it concerns. The fight is being made by the woman referred to in the paragraph as Anna M. Havemeyer to establish herself as the widow of Thomas J. Havemeyer, one of the capitalists of the Sugar Trust, whom the world knew to the day of his death as a bachelor. The case is not unlikely to reach a hearing in court this Spring.

Thomas J. Havemeyer, who had been retired for three years from business after a long connection with the American Sugar Refining Company, died on April 9, 1899, of hemorrhage of the brain, in his fifty-fourth year. It was given out at the time that he had died at his fine country place, Throgg's Neck, Westchester, but the woman who claims to be his widow, and whose maiden name was Anna M. Wright, says that he really died at his bachelor apartments, 116 East Nineteenth Street. She alleges that he maintained at that time another establishment at 154 West Forty-sixth Street, where he lived with her.

They had, in fact, she asserts, lived together for fifteen years, and her contention is that they were married on Sept. 8, 1884. She has accordingly brought an action in the Supreme Court against Henry O. Havemeyer and the other relatives of the dead man who are in possession of the real estate described in the lis pendens, which land is a part of that left by T. J. Havemeyer, for the admeasurement of her dower right. On the result of this suit will be determined whether she shall or shall not receive that share of his large estate which would be due to his widow.

Henry O. Havemeyer, a brother of Thomas J., took possession of his effects shortly after his death, and obtained letters of administration on his estate, on which will was in evidence. Mrs. Sarah L. Jackson, a sister, was made administratrix with him. H. O. Havemeyer valued the personal property at $500,000 and the real property at $200,000. As a matter of fact, the estate is customarily estimated much higher, valuations running from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000 or $6,000,000.

The persons named at the time as next of kin were as follows: Henry O. Havemeyer, Greenwich, Conn., a brother; Frederick C. Havemeyer, 135 West Eighty-fourth Street, a brother; Mrs. Kate B. Belloni, 14 East Sixty-sixth Street, sister; Mrs. Sarah L. Jackson, Westchester, sister; Theodore A. Havemeyer, 244 Madison Avenue, nephew; Natalie Mayer, Mahwah, N. J., niece; Marie H. Tiffany, 244 Madison Avenue, niece; Blanche Duncan, 244 Madison Avenue, niece; Emily Potter, Westchester, niece; Minnie H. Butt, 8 West 52d Street, niece; Theodore A. Havemeyer, Jr., Hempstead, L. I, grandnephew, and Charles F. Havemeyer, who had died by his own hand in the previous year, but whose widow, who has since become Mrs. Frederick O. Beach, was living. The heirs are represented in the suit just begun by Parsons, Shepard & Ogden.

The claim of the woman who says she is Mrs. T. J. Havemeyer was made public in May, 1899. J. W. Ridgway, acting in her behalf, and imbued with the belief that Thomas J. Havemeyer had left a will providing for the woman with whom he lived, as it is alleged he had often promised to do, brought a proceeding in the Supreme Court to determine the existence of this will. The case was heard before Justice Truax. It did not find its way into print. Henry O. Havemeyer was called as a witness, and swore that no will had been found among the effects of his brother. The proceeding was fruitless. No further legal steps were taken till about a week ago, when the summons and complaint were served in the present suit. The answer has not yet been filed.

Thomas J. Havemeyer was the fifth son of the late Frederick C. Havemeyer. He was a mere boy when he first met Anna M. Wright, then a child, in this city. His parents lived at 154 West Forty-seventeenth Street, and her father, Col. Wright, who was once Sheriff of Nevada City, Cal., lived not far away. The children used to meet and play under the trees in Union Square, and began to be fond of each other then, it is said. Young Havemeyer went abroad to Heidelberg to study, but on his return renewed the youthful friendship. Finally, the woman claims, they were married in 1884, deciding to keep the wedding secret in order not to provoke the hostility of his relatives.

According to her story the fact of the marriage was afterward kept secret for the same cause till his death, he always telling her that he would acknowledge her when the obstacles were removed, and she was content to trust him and wait. When his brother, Theodore A. Havemeyer, died on April 26, 1897, she says he came to her and said another obstacle had been removed and she should soon be acknowledged. But she never was.

They lived for a time, she says, at Pleasure Bay, N. J., where Col. Wright owned a hotel called the Riverside. Then her family went to 43 East Thirty-fourth Street, and later to 115 West Thirty-eighth Street. Mr. Havemeyer, she alleges, went with her to these addresses, and afterward supported her at 154 West Forty-sixth Street. He bought her a great many presents, she says, and told her that he had made ample provision for her in case of his death. It was in view of that statement that the proceeding which Justice Truax heard was brought.

Thomas J. Havemeyer was widely known. He lived sometimes at the New York Club and also belonged to the Racquet and Tennis, Country, and New York Yacht Clubs and the Liederkranz.

One of the firm representing the plaintiff said last night: "There is no doubt that our client was Mr. Havemeyer's wife. This suit will give her an opportunity to establish that fact before a jury. If she does so, she will get one-third of his real estate and one-half of his personal property. Cases of this sort have preference on the calendar, and the suit probably will be tried this Spring."

The statement that T. J. Havemeyer married Anna M. Wright is disputed by the Havemeyer family. It will be necessary for her to prove that fact. Her attorney, when asked last night where the marriage took place and by whom it was performed, said that he did not have those data at his fingers' ends at the moment, but that they would be produced.

LITTLE LETTERS

OF MORE WEIGHT than anything we could say about the merits of THE CENTURY DICTIONARY & CYCLOPEDIA & ATLAS are these letters from the thinkers, the readers and the people prominent in the affairs of the country. These printed here have been chosen almost at random, and are but fair samples of the hundreds being received daily from those of our subscribers who have had their books long enough to have acquired the "Century habit." College Presidents, Artisans, Linguists, Mechanics, have here united in praise of the greatest reference work of all time, "the authority of authorities." Each of the classes praises this many-sided working library from its own view-point. Economists, too, have their word to say about the half-price and the little monthly payments—potent factors in this "million dollar sale of 'The Century'" at The Wanamaker Store.

Add your name to this list of Century owners. One day's delay deprives you of that day's services of the most capable helper you can have in your library or your office. It has been well said that "six months of consultation with 'The Century'—if only on the common things of daily life—is a liberal education." Every day brings its own questions—answered instantly with these volumes by your desk-side.

With a dollar to spend and 10c. a day to spare (for awhile), you can own this great work now

I have come to regard my Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia as so indispensable that I would not know how to get on without it.
GROVER CLEVELAND.

The Century has first place on my shelves and is indispensable to me. Formerly it was my last "Court of Appeal" when in doubt, now it is the first and last.
LEW WALLACE,
Author of "Ben Hur."

I find myself continually referring to The Century for information and guidance, but in addition to this I take it up and read it with pleasure and constant entertainment, independent of its bearing on my studies and literary work.
MORGAN DIX,
Rector Trinity Church, N. Y.

In this day of busy activity, when men have little time to investigate, and yet must be certain as to the meaning of words they use and the accuracy of the facts they state, there is nothing in our language which will so fully satisfy the demand for information—accurate, full and complete—as this new work.
DAVID J. BREWER,
Associate Justice U. S. Supreme Court.

Instead of wandering through libraries to find or miss some important fact, or discovery, or discussion or controversy, all you have to do is to turn to The Century, recall the first two or three letters of the subject you are elaborating, and put your hand on the volume that contains all you want to know.
T. DEWITT TALMAGE.

You have made The Century a splendid necessity to many to whom it has hitherto been an impossible luxury.
REV. WILLIAM LLOYD.

The description of machinery and architecture in The Century is most explicit. I have no hesitation in recommending it to any one desirous of purchasing the most comprehensive work on these branches.
C. A. WOODBRIDGE.

The definition of terms used in medicine is so full and complete in The Century, and so many of these are given, that the need for a special book on this subject is practically abolished.
NEIL ROBSON, M.B.L.M.

This sketch shows a complete set of the ten massive volumes in a Century Bookcase—a specially designed cabinet of polished oak,—desk-high—that makes the books doubly usable from its handiness. It rolls easily.

The ten volumes contain over
8,500 pages,
150,000 encyclopedic articles,
500,000 encyclopedic definitions,
300,000 quotations,
200,000 indexed geographical entries,
8,000 superb illustrations,
310 maps in many colors,
$1,500,000 was spent in producing the first set of ten volumes. Nearly $6,000,000 worth at retail sold in this country alone,
$50,000 worth sold in England during the first thirty days of sale.

The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia and Atlas is a masterpiece of condensation. Its constant use has gifted me with a strong sense of the care bestowed to insure accuracy.
JAMES A. BRYCE,
Author of "The American Commonwealth."

In The Century the child, the student, the busy man, the specialist, and, last and best, the mother and hurried housewife find the acme of ready reference. Its arrangement is as simple as the alphabet, and so attractive that not only is it easy to get "the run of the story," but hard to find a stopping place.
W. W. BARTLETT, LL.D.

Constant use of The Century has taught me to value it very highly. In the new edition you have certainly added greatly to its merits.
CHAS. W. ELIOT, LL.D.,
Pres. Harvard University.

Our proofreaders find its vocabulary so extensive and rich, its definitions so full and comprehensive, that it is fast coming to supplant every other work hitherto in vogue with them. The typographical execution of the book is beyond praise, while the presswork is perfect.
JOHN WILSON & SON,
The University Press, Cambridge.

In examination of the articles in other cyclopedias—astronomy for instance—I have constantly had to refer to The Century for its explanation of technical terms, and have found it always most lucid.
HENRY J. MAXWELL.

Besides the literary and philological value of The Century, it is an immense advantage to have in one work such a complete encyclopedia of science and art, particularly of physics, mathematics and mechanics.
ARTHUR GREENWOOD.

I think preachers cannot do better than have The Century beside their study tables, even if only for the sake of the elucidatory quotations which are given in such magnificent profusion.
REV. A. J. EDWARDS.

This combination of dictionary and cyclopedia, gazetteer and atlas and biographical dictionary, &c., has been prepared with so much care and painstaking, by such learned and accurate men, and on such a wise plan, that it will never be superseded by another work.
DANIEL P. GILMAN, LL.D.,
President Johns Hopkins University.

I have not failed to find in The Century every word, phrase or technical expression for which I have looked, while the terse yet complete treatises on scientific nomenclature and processes, in which I am more specially interested, excites my admiration. I have nothing but praise for the work.
AUGUSTUS WHEELER.

The Century is the best universal reference work I know of. The illustrations are invaluable to me, especially in mechanics and natural history. I look upon it as the best book in my library of over twelve thousand volumes.
G. A. BIDDLE.

I have already found The Century of immense value. It is the most costly work I have in my library, yet I have no hesitation in saying it is the cheapest purchase I have ever made.
A. W. CHAPMAN.

I have been much interested in tracing in The Century the history of many words in colloquial use which one does not find—so far as I know—in any other reference work, and so far I have failed to discover the omission of any single word or expression I have looked for.
F. H. HAWKINS.

What has particularly struck me in The Century is the vast number of scientific and technical words and phrases, and the fullness and accuracy of their definition.
CHARLES GRAHAM,
Prof. Chem. and Technol.

The Century contains for me more detailed information than I expected, especially technical terms used in mechanical engineering, the explanations of which I have never met with in any other work.
GEORGE C. WATSON.

The chief purpose for which I purchased The Century was to get the derivations and literary use of important words. So far I have not been disappointed in a single instance.
J. C. NESFIELD, M.A.,
Author of "English Grammar Past and Present."

We have found in The Century longed-for information that we have sought in vain in other reference works. For a study of the development of the language it is a necessity.
G. KEMP ARCHBOLD.

To the romance writers who may be working at periods remote from our own, The Century will be especially useful. In such a case all doubt as to the use, in the mouths of their dramatis personæ, of words of doubtful antiquity will be set at rest by a glance at its pages.
H. M. BATSON.

Now that I possess The Century, the difficulty is to understand how I ever got on without it. What strikes me as most invaluable is the enormous range covered by the quotations cited in support of each shade of meaning of every word. All the dictionaries of the language that ever were published put together do not approach it in value.
H. A. ACWORTH.

I prepared a list of the most unusual words I could think of, and have spent two evenings testing The Century for those that are almost unknown in physics and optics. In every instance I have found fullest information, accurate and concise, accompanied generally by beautifully executed illustrations.
JOHN BROWNING,
Pres. Brit. Opt. Assn.

I am not ashamed to say that for three years I carried in my pocket the memoranda of the lowest cash price and the publishers' address without bringing myself to "the sticking point." I have now acquired the new edition comfortably through your half-price offer, and desire to tender my grateful acknowledgments.
CHARLES QUINN.

How to Secure the Work at Half-Price.

. . . . . If you are familiar with the volumes, as many are nowadays, you will not care to see specimen pages, etc. Then all that is necessary is to mail a dollar to John Wanamaker—entrance fee for membership to the Wanamaker "Century" Club. Each membership secures the prompt delivery of a complete set of the newly-revised edition at half price. The purchase is completed—leisurely—by little monthly payments ($3.00 or more, according to the binding you select). In this way you have the use of the volumes all the time you are paying for them. . . . Those of you who would prefer to see sample pages from the books themselves and receive full details of the half-price offer and the easy terms of payment, description of bindings, etc., can secure all these promptly by tearing off the triangular coupon in the opposite corner and mailing it promptly, filled in with name and address. Or, better still, if you can, call at the Book Store, Ninth Street, we can look the volumes over together. That is far more satisfactory.

DEFICIENCY BILL DEBATED

Congressman Richardson Assails Secretary Gage's Course.

CUSTOM HOUSE SALE CENSURED

Mr. Hopkins of Illinois Defends the Action of the Treasury Department —Rural Delivery Discussed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The Urgent Deficiency Appropriation bill was taken up in the House to-day under an agreement which limited the general debate to to-day. It was the general expectation that it would open up a stormy debate upon the question of expansion in view of the large army and navy items it contains, but the members early became very much engrossed in a discussion of an item of $150,000 for rural free delivery, in which all are personally interested, and the subject of expansion was barely touched upon. The last hour of the debate was enlivened with an attack by Mr. Richardson, the minority leader, upon the Secretary of the Treasury for his course in connection with the sale of the New York Custom House.

When the bill was called up Mr. Cannon, (Rep., Ill.,) Chairman of the Appropriations Committee, opened the debate with a general explanation of the items in the bill. He was asked by Mr. Loud (Rep., Cal.,) about the item of $150,000 for rural free delivery, and replied that it had been found that $300,000 had been appropriated for the present fiscal year. That money had been largely expended, and unless this appropriation was made much of the service now in operation would have to be discontinued. Mr. Cannon frankly confessed that the manner of the expenditure of this money did not meet with his approval. He believed it the duty of the Executive to cut the garment according to the legislative appropriation.

The department had no right to create a condition which necessitated a deficiency appropriation. He should vote for the appropriation, but he should fail in his duty did he not call attention to the maladministration of the department.

During the course of some general remarks by Mr. Bell, (Silver, Col.,) covering a wide range of topics, Mr. Reeder (Rep., Kan.,) raised a laugh by interrupting him.

"The gentleman has a very free delivery and is quite rural," said he, "but it is a great strain to follow him. Will he kindly tell us what he has said has to do with the question before the House?"

Mr. Ball (Dem., Texas,) first introduced in the debate the question of expansion. He had read extracts from the Declaration of Independence, the speeches of James Wilson of Pennsylvania in the Constitutional Convention, and of Abraham Lincoln at Gettysburg. It was a long step, said he, from the conceptions of the Government portrayed in these utterances to the declarations of the spokesmen of the present Administration.

Mr. Davis (Dem., Fla.,) said he deplored the spirit of expansion which had taken possession of a portion of the people. Yet not for all the world would he withhold from our soldiers struggling, bleeding, and dying in the Philippines all the moral and material support they needed. If the war taxes were necessary to support them, he said, let the measure stand. Mr. Davis was applauded by the Republicans.

Mr. Richardson (Rep., Tenn.,) briefly reviewed the appropriations for the military establishment, showing that in time of peace the appropriations for it with the deficiency provided in this bill reached $121,000,000. He then proceeded to criticise the transactions of Secretary Gage in the matter of the sale of the New York Custom House to the National City Bank of New York. It had been charged, said Mr. Richardson, that the Secretary of the Treasury had violated the law, and one of the newspapers had gone so far as to charge that he had been guilty of embezzlement, technically and legally, and was, therefore, subject to impeachment.

Mr. Richardson said he did not go to that length, but the Secretary of the Treasury, he said, had certainly violated the strict letter of the law.

Mr. Richardson described the act of Congress under which the Custom House was sold, calling attention to the language requiring that the proceeds should be covered into the Treasury of the United States. Because the proceeds of the sale had been deposited in the National City Bank, which had purchased the property, some of the papers, he said, had charged that the Secretary was technically guilty of embezzlement and had cited a decision of the Supreme Court made last November.

Mr. Hopkins (Rep., Ill.,) and Mr. Hepburn (Rep., Iowa,) were on their feet denying that the decision cited had any application, and amid the confusion it was some time before Mr. Richardson could make the House understand that he did not agree with this view. In his opinion the decision did not make the Secretary guilty of embezzlement, and moreover he expressed the opinion that he had a perfect right to deposit the money in a Government depository such as the National City Bank then was.

But he desired to go beyond that. The Custom House was sold to the bank July 3, 1899, for $3,365,000. Just before the sale (June 5) the Secretary received a letter from A. B. Hepburn, from which he quoted this extract:

"Of course this bank is very strong, and if you take the pains to look at the list of Directors you will see we have great claims in view of what was done in 1896."

Mr. Richardson then read a list of some Govern deposits in this bank at various times to show that for six months it had the use of an average of $10,000,000 of Government money. Was that due to the contributions made by the Directors to the campaign fund of 1896? he inquired.

Turning again to the sale of the Custom House, he showed how the bank had deposited $3,850,000 in bonds in the Treasury, and then instead of paying the purchase money out of the Treasury had simply transferred the purchase price to the Government's account in the bank. But not the whole purchase price was transferred—only $3,215,000, leaving a pitiful $50,000 unpaid. At the same time it leased the property to the Government at the rate of $136,000 a year. What had the Government got out of the transaction? A paper credit of $3,215,000 and the privilege of paying $136,000 a year rent. What had the bank got, he asked. The rent, the use of the purchase money, which it loaned according to newspaper reports at enormous rates, and by withholding the last $50,000 to prevent the title from passing exemption from taxation upon the property it had purchased.

"I leave it any honest-minded man," said Mr. Richardson, "if that is dealing fairly with the trust money of the United States." [Democratic applause.]

Mr. Hopkins (Rep., Ill.,) quickly challenged Mr. Richardson's statement that the bank was not liable for taxes.

"It is not liable for taxes until the title passes," said Mr. Richardson.

"It became liable," insisted Mr. Hopkins, "when it purchased and took possession of the property. How else could it lease it?"

"If the statement you make is true," retorted Mr. Richardson hotly, "then the Secretary of the Treasury is liable to impeachment by this House and the country because he says he did agree to pay four per cent. of the purchase price from the date of the sale. If what you say is true, he has done something unlawful, and for which he can be impeached."

Mr. Hopkins's reply to Mr. Richardson was brief. The report of the Secretary of the Treasury, he said, not only met frankly and honestly every charge, but it showed business capacity that must receive the intelligent approval of the people of the United States. [Democratic jeers.] He denied Mr. Richardson's contention regarding the exemption of the bank from taxes. "Any man with a thimbleful of sense would understand it, he said. The bank was held for taxes the minute it purchased and took possession of the property. The mere paper deed was only evidence of ownership; the real title passed when it took possession. The report of the Secretary of the Treasury, he continued, exonerated him from every insinuation. He said the National City Bank had been a Government depository long before Gage came into office. It had been selected by a Democratic Secretary of the Treasury because of its well known financial ability. But instead of following the course of his Democratic predecessor in making a few favorite banks depositories, Secretary Gage had selected depositories all over the United States.

The records showed that the proceeds of the sale were not deposited for the use of the National City Bank, but were subject to check day by day, so that the bank had to so conduct its affairs that the money could be withdrawn without warning at any time. Why this outcry? Mr. Hopkins inquired. The money was as safe as it would be in the Treasury of the United States.

"I say," he concluded, "that the Secretary of the Treasury is entitled to the approbation of every honest man. Secretary Gage has made a record that any American ought to praise instead of denounce. [Great Republican applause.] This closed the incident.

The debate on the Deficiency bill was still in progress when the committee rose.

PROBING POLYGAMY CHARGES.

Congressman Lentz of Ohio Asserts that Documents Were Lost at the White House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The House Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads today took up the resolution of inquiry recently referred to it concerning charges that certain Federal appointees in Utah were polygamists. Representative Lentz of Ohio, who introduced the resolution, was present, and considerable excitement was caused by some of the statements made by him. His remark that the resolutions were likely to be "pigeonholed" by the committee brought out a protest from Chairman Loud, who said the committee would not "pigeonhole" any business submitted to it.

Mr. Lentz, proceeding, said that he could produce affidavits that papers had been placed on file alleging that certain Federal appointees were polygamists. These papers were receipted for by Mr. Porter, the President's private secretary. Mr. Lentz said, but the papers could not now be found. Mr. Lentz said Representative Grosvenor of Ohio had said to him that "We have not let the grass grow under our feet," and that as soon as the charges were made the matter had been looked into.

Representative Grosvenor was sent for, but could not be reached. The committee adjourned the hearing until next Friday, when Secretary Porter, the Postmaster General, and Gen. Grosvenor will be invited to appear.

The Postmaster General has sent the following letter to Chairman Loud of the committee:

"On looking into the papers as to the Postmastership at Logan, Utah, I find the facts to be as follows: Orson Smith was appointed Postmaster Nov. 19, 1897, upon the recommendation of the referees, in the usual way. There was nothing in the papers to indicate that he was a polygamist or that any such allegation had been made respecting him—not a word to raise that question in connection with the appointment. He was confirmed by the Senate Jan. 20, 1898.

"After his appointment there was a letter from the Rev. Mr. Clemenson, bearing date Nov. 22, 1897, and addressed to the President, which was sent to the Post Office, and there received Nov. 30. There is nothing to indicate that any attention was attracted to it. The appointment was made and, as thousands of papers come in, it was filed away, apparently without examination. There is no other paper in the case indicating any such allegation until Dec. 21, some weeks after the nomination was in the Senate.

"As to the Provo City case, the facts are that there is no paper in the department of any date making an allegation of polygamy against the incumbent, but that when it became a matter of public report, some time ago, I wrote to the Marshal of the Territory, asking him for any information in his possession, and he replied that a charge had been made in the State Court, and the Postmaster had been held over for trial, which was soon to take place. We decided that we ought not to convict in advance of trial, and reserved action until the judicial determination."

ASKED TO PUNISH LYNCHERS.

Congress Is Petitioned by Colored Men to Protect Their Race from Mob Violence.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—With the opening of to-day's session of the Senate, Mr. Cullom, (Rep., Ill.,) presented a petition handsomely bound and signed by 3,200 colored persons asking for such legislation as will protect colored men of this country from the "barbarous practice of lynching and burning colored men." Mr. Cullom asked that the petition be referred to the Committee on Judiciary, although, he said, it might be desirable to refer it to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Mr. Hoar, (Rep., Mass.,) Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, said he believed every Senator would be glad to have such measures adopted as would suppress this wrongdoing and enable the officials to enforce the laws. No Senator, he thought, would disagree to that. He directed attention to the fact that the State laws take cognizance of the crimes referred to in the petition. By what Constitutional method the United States could take action in this question is a difficult inquiry.

Mr. Chandler, (Rep., N. H.,) Chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, thought it desirable to be perfectly frank.

"There is no power in Congress," said he, "to prevent or to punish crimes committed in the various States. If the States do not punish crimes, for the punishment of which they have enacted laws, no Federal law can take the place of useless State laws."

Mr. Chandler said there was no legal law under which the violator of even the suffrage laws could be punished.

Mr. Spooner, (Rep., Wis.:) "There is such Federal legislation."

Mr. Chandler: "There is not now such legislation. Congress has no Constitutional power to punish such crimes."

Mr. Cullom thought that, inasmuch as it involved new legislation, the petition go to the Committee on Judiciary.

"This subject," Mr. Cullom said, "seems to call for investigation. These people realize they are being badly treated. Such treatment is without authority of law, and it ought to be stopped if possible."

Mr. Tillman, (Dem., S. C.:) "What is the immediate cause of this petition? Does it come from Chicago?"

Mr. Cullom replied that the petition came from Chicago, but that it was signed by people of many States.

Mr. Spooner called attention to sections of the Revised Statutes which provided penalties for violations of Federal election laws.

Mr. Chandler said he stood corrected.

The petition was referred to the Committee on Judiciary.

WILL REPORT SENATE CANAL BILL.

Measure Is Practically the Same as That in the House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The Senate Committee on Inter-Oceanic Canals to-day agreed unanimously to report a bill for the construction of the Nicaraguan Canal.

The bill is the same as that reported favorably in the House by the Committee on Inter-State and Foreign Commerce, with a few verbal amendments.

SAMOAN TREATY IS RATIFIED.

Favorable Action Taken by the Senate Without a Division After a Two Hours' Debate.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The Senate today ratified the Samoan treaty without division. The ratification occurred in executive session and after two hours of debate, which was participated in by a number of Senators. Messrs. Davis, (Rep., Minn.,) Foraker, (Rep., Ohio,) and Spooner, (Rep., Wis.,) advocated, and Senators Bacon, (Dem., Ga.,) Money, (Dem., Miss.,) and Tillman, (Dem. S. C.,) opposed ratification. Senator Bacon made the leading speech in opposition. He based his objection upon the general ground that it was contrary to the spirit of our institutions to attempt to govern any people in opposition to their wishes.

He said that he was not opposed to the new convention because of any partiality felt for the old tripartite agreement, which was repugnant to him. He thought, however, a means might be found to get rid of it without resorting to a subterfuge which was repulsive to American ideas of liberty and independence.

There was no doubt of the intention to annex and exercise sovereignty in place of the protectorate which was the distinguishing feature of the tripartite agreement of 1889. To this proposed change of policy he objected most strenuously. He compared the provisions of the two agreements at some length, showing that the old one made express provision for the approval of the Samoan Government of changes and guaranteed the independence of that Government, whereas the pending instrument annuls all sovereignty of the Samoan Government and partitions the islands between the United States and Germany.

Mr. Bacon said that the friends of the treaty supported it upon the two grounds that it simply divides authority heretofore exercised jointly and that the Samoan people being "only savages," there is no reason why they should not be despoiled of their country. He contended that it was not true that the old arrangement was simply to be continued under a division of authority, and asserted that the declarations that the Samoan people were savages was untenable.

The friends of the treaty repudiated the assertion that the old treaty provisions were annulled. They claimed that this country by the new arrangement retains all the old advantages and avoids the complications liable to grow out of tripartite agreement. They urged that the opportunity should not be lost both to get out of an awkward predicament and to control in our own right the harbor of Pago-Pago.

DISCUSS TRANSPACIFIC CABLE.

Secretary Long and Rear Admiral Bradford Before a Committee.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Secretary Long and Rear Admiral Bradford appeared before the Senate Committee on Naval Affairs to-day in advocacy of the construction of a Pacific cable by the Government. The Secretary's statement was general and related entirely to the feasibility of the plan and its advantage over doing the work by private enterprise.

Rear Admiral Bradford detailed the operations of the collier Nero, which is now engaged in making a preliminary survey of the proposed line west of Honolulu. He said that the survey had been completed, and that the Nero was now on its return, making a zig-zag survey. According to the reports made of the preliminary work, the proposed cable was entirely practicable. It is to run from San Francisco to Honolulu, thence via the Midway Islands and Guam to Dingala Bay, Island of Luzon, with a spur for commercial purposes to Yokohama.

The average depth between Honolulu and Midway is 2,700 fathoms, between Midway and Guam 3,000, and between Guam and Luzon 2,800. He estimated the cost at $1,050 per knot, which, with the amount necessary for steamers, offices, &c., would bring the cost up to $10,000,000. He placed the entire length of the cable at 9,294 knots, which allows 20 per cent. for slack and detours.

In connection with his statement, Admiral Bradford said that he understood the average expenses of the War Department for messages to Manila to be about $1,400 per day, and that the total of the expenditures of the Navy Department had amounted to $26,000.

Census Special Agents Appointed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The following expert Special Agents have been appointed by Director of the Census Merriam:

Mr. Smith has been interested in all movements for the increase and advancement of the merchant marine for many years. These gentlemen will have charge of the subjects mentioned, under the supervision of Mr. S. N. B. North, Chief of the Division of Manufactures.

New Federal District for New York?

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Judge Wallace of the United States Circuit Court of New York and Henry L. Burnett, United States District Attorney for the Southern District of New York, were heard to-day by the Judiciary Committee of the House in favor of the bills establishing a new district in New York and for the appointment of an additional Circuit Judge. The committee took no final action.

English, a son of the former Democratic Vice Presidential candidate from Indiana, and a Captain of volunteers in the war with Spain, has returned to the Treasury a check of $1,172 sent him for pay for his army services with the statement that he would not accept pay for service to his country in time of danger.

Mr. Bynum's Appointment Still Held.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The Senate Committee on Finance again to-day had under consideration the nomination of the Hon. W. D. Bynum to be General Appraiser of Merchandise at New York. The Democratic members of the committee continued their opposition to the nomination, contending that Mr. Bynum is not a Democrat and that his nomination as such is an evasion of the law. Senators Burrows and Spooner and other Republican members of the committee defended the selection as entirely proper. After a general exchange of opinion it was decided that the Democrats should have time to adduce proof of Mr. Bynum's Republicanism.

THE PHILIPPINE DEBATE

Senator Pettigrew's Resolution Is Laid on the Table.

DECISIVE VOTE IS 41 TO 20

Mr. Vest of Missouri Criticises the Policy of the President in Dealing with the New Possessions.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The resolution of Mr. Pettigrew, (Silver Rep., S. D.,) calling for information regarding the conduct of the war in the Philippines, was again laid before the Senate to-day. Mr. Lodge (Rep., Mass.,) moved that the resolution and the one which he had offered as a substitute for it be laid on the table in order that that offered by his colleague, Mr. Hoar, might be adopted. The motion was agreed to.

The resolution introduced by Mr. Hoar was then submitted to the Senate, together with an amendment offered by Mr. Lodge, to which Mr. Hoar had agreed. It was about to be passed when Mr. Pettigrew offered an amendment calling for information as to all the instructions which the President had given the Commissioners who had negotiated the treaty of Paris, together with the correspondence that had passed between the President and the Commissioners.

Mr. Davis, (Rep., Minn.,) Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, and one of the Commissioners, made the point of order against the amendment that it was Executive business.

President Pro Tem. Frye, who was himself one of the Commissioners, overruled the point because he said it was within the discretion of the President whether he should send the information to the Senate or not.

"Then," said Mr. Davis, with much feeling, "I desire to protest in the strongest possible manner to a public discussion of this amendment. I may say that nothing passed between the President and the Commissioners to which I should raise objection to publication, but there are matters which ought not to be made public at this time. I find it difficult, Mr. President, to speak in the open Senate."

Mr. Davis then moved that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business. This was agreed to.

Ten minutes later the Senate resumed business in legislative session. Mr. Davis moved that the amendment offered by Mr. Pettigrew be laid on the table. The motion was carried, 41 to 20. Following is the vote in detail:

Jones, (Dem., Ark.)

After the announcement of the vote Mr. Teller explained that he had voted against the motion because the President had the power to send any communication to the Senate in secret and because he believed that all attempts to keep from the public information of the kind asked for by the resolution were likely to create suspicion.

Mr. Hoar regarded the action of the majority as a most remarkable proceeding.

Mr. Spooner (Rep., Wis.) said: "The President has been perfectly frank with us on this matter and all of us know just what was done in respect to the Paris treaty."

Mr. Hale (Rep., Me.) followed with a brief statement, in which he said: "The result of the negotiations of the Paris treaty was, to my mind, calamitous."

The debate on the resolution was concluded by an earnest but brief speech by Mr. Vest, (Dem., Mo.) He regarded it as very unfortunate that nothing could be said by the opponents of the Administration's policy in the Philippines without calling forth an imputation of improper motives.

"The friends of the President," said Mr. Vest, "and I am not his enemy, assume that any remarks made about the Paris treaty or its negotiations is an attack upon the Administration. This is an unwarranted assumption.

"On his Western tour the President said the whole archipelago had fallen like a ripe apple into our lap, and we were bound to meet our new duties as they were presented to us. Were we to leave them, or were we, as the junior Senator from Indiana (Mr. Beveridge) so eloquently told us the other day, trustees under God to hold them as a part of our mission to regenerate the earth?

"I hardly know how to characterize the imputation that friends of Aguinaldo on this floor are giving aid and comfort to the enemies of this country. I have already said that I consider the discussion of these resolutions as of no consequence. It is like calling in a skilled physician after the patient is dead."

Mr. Vest called attention to the fact that no man could make a stronger statement against the policy of the Administration in the Philippines than the Senator from New Jersey, (Mr. Sewell,) and he took it for granted that nobody would call in question his patriotism and loyalty to his country. He cited a statement of Mr. Sewell in the Senate during the last Congress, in the course of which he said he had gone to the President after the battle of Manila and besought him for God's sake to withdraw Dewey and his squadron and let the Philippines alone.

"What is the position of the President?" inquired Mr. Vest. "He directed the Peace Commission to take one island—Luzon—and afterward abandoned that policy. He has since said the acquisition of the islands was an act of Providence—that we could not leave them as derelicts.

"The fact is, this whole question is in a nebulous and foggy condition.

"I disclaim now any intention that my remarks should reflect upon my country. But I deny the right of any man to muzzle me and restrain my right to express my opinion in my own way. We have the bubonic plague added to leprosy in Hawaii. We have starvation in Puerto Rico; we have unrest and disquiet in Cuba; and we have a war of indefinite length in the Philippines. Is it treason to say this?"

In conclusion, referring to the Paris treaty, Mr. Vest said:

"When that treaty was ratified by the Senate of the United States every Senator knew then, as he knows now, that we were paying $20,000,000 for a war in the archipelago, the end of which might come in a month and might not come in ten years.

"I simply put before the Senate and the country this proposition: Are we to remain silent refraining even from ordinary criticism as to the conduct of the war, for fear that we are to be denounced as allies of Aguinaldo and opposed to the authority of our own country?"

At the conclusion of Mr. Vest's speech the resolution was laid aside.

SUBSIDY A TRADE NECESSITY.

President Griscom of the American Line Warns the Senate of Dangers to Commerce.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Clement A. Griscom, President of the International Navigation Company, which owns the American line of steamers, while discussing the shipping or subsidy bill, told the Senate Commerce Committee to-day that the company's big liners, the New York, St. Louis, St. Paul, and Paris, were run at a serious loss owing to the heavy expenses in Winter. The four fast ships never made the company a dollar, and he figured the net loss to the company at $415,600 annually. The eleven ships under foreign flags supported the other ships. The fast ships, like the fast trains, did not pay.

Mr. Depew here stated that the late Frank Thomson of the Pennsylvania Railroad had made a careful investigation of the subject and had informed the Senator that he had found that the fast trains were run at a loss.

Mr. Griscom continued by saying that the tramp ships and slower freighters would be benefited under this bill, and would maintain the faster ships. He said his company did not propose to go out of fast navigation. They were in and intended to stay.

In the course of his remarks Mr. Griscom said:

"I do not wish to make any statement that may appear like threats, but this service of fast ships cannot be continued under the American flag after the expiration of our present mail contract upon the terms under which it is now running, and all hope of continuing the construction of such ships, which proved so useful to the Government in the Spanish war, will inevitably cease.

"Already our trade is embarrassed because of the ships Great Britain has withdrawn simply as transports in the war with the Transvaal. Suppose her flag on the high seas was threatened. It is amazing that there is a legislator who is so indifferent to the interests of his constituents as to permit this situation to longer continue to menace our export trade. No scheme will remove this point, which constantly threatens our foreign trade, that does not establish and maintain a National mercantile marine."

Mr. Griscom said he thought the amount of the subsidy would accomplish the object for which it was intended. He believed that it would be better to have the amount graduated, as the $9,000,000 could not possibly be earned in the first years of its operation.

Mr. Clyde, in answer to a question by Senator Frye, said that he believed the bill would result in establishing lines to China, Japan, Korea, South Africa, and South America.

AGAINST BOUNTIES ON EXPORTS.

Mr. Edmunds Says Foreign Ships Would Participate in Benefits.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Senator Frye, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Commerce in connection with the hearings on the Shipping bill, has received from ex-Senator Edmunds a letter giving the latter's opinion that the payment of export bounties on goods shipped abroad would be contrary to the treaties existing between the United States and a large number of countries. The letter in part is as follows:

"Agreeable to your request, I have examined all the treaties between the United States and other countries on the subject of the ships of other countries being entitled to bounties on exportations if the United States should grant bounties to its own ships, &c. The list herewith contains the names of countries which, by express provision of our treaties, would be entitled to have their ships receive the same bounties for the exportation of goods from the United States that the United States may grant to its own ships."

The list of countries given is as follows: Argentine Republic, Austria, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rica, Denmark, Great Britain, Greece, Haiti, Hanseatic Republic, Honduras, Italy, Japan, Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Mexico, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Paraguay, Peru, Prussia, Servia, and Sweden, and Norway.

Mr. Edmunds says that under these treaties "it is impossible for the United States to grant export bounties to their own ships without bringing into the benefits of the bounty the ships of nearly all the commercial and maritime competitors of the United States, or else by the abrogation of quite or nearly all the treaties above referred to.

"If a bounty on exports is to be granted," he says, "it must apply to all exports; it must be impartial and universal. A general bounty on exports, if valid, must necessarily be equal, value for value, and if large enough to reach and benefit the original producers and manufacturers, would be startling in amount."

BRING DEAD SOLDIERS HOME.

Transports Carrying Bodies Have Left Cuba and Manila.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Quartermaster Gen. Luddington, is informed that the transport McClelland has left Santiago with the remains of 75 soldiers, who died last Spring from yellow fever, and 375 metallic caskets, bound for New York. All of the unclaimed dead will be brought to Washington and interred in the National Cemetery at Arlington by the side of other victims of the Spanish war in Cuba.

The empty caskets are destined eventually for Manila, where they will be used for bringing home the bodies of soldiers who lost their lives in the Philippines. The transport City of Peking has already left Manila for San Francisco with the bodies of 156 soldiers and others who died in the Philippines. The War Department is as yet uninformed as to what bodies are on the vessel, but expects to receive a complete and accurate list upon the arrival of the vessel at San Francisco.

All of these bodies not claimed by relatives or friends for private interment will be buried in the National Cemetery at the Presidio of San Francisco.

CONSUL REDLOE RESIGNS.

Philadelphia Newspaper Man Named to Succeed Him at Canton.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The President to-day sent to the Senate the name of Robert M. McWade of Pennsylvania to be Consul for the United States at Canton to succeed Dr. Edwin S. Bedloe. Mr. McWade is a resident of Philadelphia, and a member of the Manufacturers' Club. He is a well-known newspaper man, having been connected with The Ledger.

Dr. Bedloe this afternoon received the following letter from Secretary Hay:

Caucus Expected to Recommend a Reorganization.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Representative James S. Sherman's reply to the invitation to become a candidate for Secretary of the Senate is expected to-morrow either by letter or in person. It is believed that he will consent.

The caucus is to meet on Friday, and it is now believed that the result of this meeting will be partial and perhaps complete reorganization of the Senate force of employes, although the committee that is to report to the caucus may meet with some opposition, leading further delay in respect to some of the offices. It is confidently expected that a Secretary will be chosen.

SUES THE WHISKY TRUST.

An Albany Man Objects to the Plan of Absorption.

ALBANY, Jan. 16.—Melville A. Harris of this city, a stockholder in the American Spirits Manufacturing Company, has begun an action against the Distilling Company of America, which has been termed the Whisky Trust. The former company was absorbed by the latter and its stock exchanged on the basis of 25 per cent. of the common stock of the latter company.

Mr. Harris, who has refused to transfer his stock on these conditions, states in his complaint that, while the Distilling Company of America is capitalized at $125,000,000, it has in cash less than $1,500,000; that it has absorbed other companies, in violation of the Federal anti-trust law, and he seeks in the action to prevent the plan of absorption.

EFFECTS OF MORTGAGE TAX

Mortgagors Will Probably Have to Pay It.

RESULT OF BRUNDAGE CLAUSE

Strong Opposition Expected from Builders, Trust Companies, and Savings Banks Here.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY Jan. 16.—Members of the Legislature from Greater New York who are interested, in realty are discussing to-day the 5 mills tax on mortgages which is included in the bill for a new system of taxation which was introduced in the Assembly last night, in company with the report of the legislative committee appointed last Winter to investigate the problem of taxation and make recommendations for legislation.

One of the New York County members is authority for the statement that the builders, trust companies, and savings banks in New York are opposed to the proposed mortgage tax, and also that the makers of mortgages, who, he declares, will have to pay the tax, in the event of the passage of the bill, will make a fight against the measure. In speaking of this clause in the bill, he said:

"If this clause is permitted to become a law it will not only work great hardship to the makers of mortgages but will seriously cripple the building industry in New York. Realty bears a heavy burden of taxation at the present time, and now the advocates of this bill want to increase the load which property holders are compelled to carry. If this bill becomes a law the man who borrows money will be the one who will have to pay the additional tax, as the lender will insert such a clause in the mortgage and the borrower will have to agree to pay it, or he will be unable to secure the money he asks for. He will be taxed twice, as in addition to his mortgage tax he will have to pay his local tax on the assessed valuation of his property.

"The proposed law will fall heavily also upon the savings banks, which are large lenders of money on mortgages. The banks will not find it so easy to place their money under the new tax, which will greatly reduce their earnings and prevent them from paying the present rate of interest on deposits. This will also affect the building and loan associations.

"If this bill is passed it will, in my judgment, cause a real estate panic in New York and put an end to much of the building now under way. I do not think that it is generally known that in every mortgage which has been drawn during the past seven years there has been a clause known to real estate men as the Brundage clause, which provides that in the event of legislation to tax mortgages, the mortgage shall immediately become due, or the borrower shall pay the tax imposed. I have talked with prominent builders and real estate men in New York during the past few weeks, and they all agree that the imposition of such a tax would work great injury to business. I predict that the interests involved will be found solidly arrayed against the enactment of such a law."

The question of taxation promises to be one of the features of the present session, and legislators are giving it careful consideration, as they seem to realize its importance to the business and property interests of the State. The friends of the bill defend the mortgage clause on the ground that the revenue which will be derived from this source will be so great that the general tax rate of the State will be much reduced. They contend that if the bill is passed the amount of tax which Greater New York is called upon to pay to the State will be almost wiped out, and that the total taxation on realty will be less than under the present system.

Very few members can be induced to commit themselves on the bill until they have had an opportunity to study the question thoroughly and learn the wishes of their constituents.

FOR PASSENGERS' SAFETY.

Mr. Minton's Bill Requires that Long Street Cars Shall Carry Three-Men Crews in Rush Hours.

ALBANY, Jan. 16.—Assemblyman Maurice M. Minton will to-morrow introduce a bill "to regulate the transportation and insure the safety of the passengers on cars operated by cable and electric traction companies in the City of New York."

The bill provides that on cars exceeding 30 feet in length there shall be employed during the rush hours of the morning and afternoon three persons—a grip or motor man, a collector of fares, and a conductor. During these hours the conductor shall be stationed on the rear platform, and from the platform he shall give the signal to start and stop the cars. During these hours he shall not collect fares, give or receive transfer tickets, or enter the car to assist in its operation.

Assemblyman Minton said: "The recent introduction of cars once and a half the common length has created a condition pregnant with danger to life and limb. It is apparent to all who have occasion to ride on these swift-running cars, which seat thirty-eight or forty passengers. During rush hours they frequently hold 100 to 120 passengers, who are constantly getting on and getting off. The conductor is charged with many duties. He is supposed to keep accurate records, collect fares, collect and deliver transfer tickets, answer questions, take on and let off passengers. Indeed, if it were not for the assistance of passengers on the rear platform the casualties would be something fearful to reckon. No conductor, however mentally or physically active, could possibly place himself in the right position during rush hours to command a view of the steps to the platform.

"These cars are intended to economize the operating expenses. This economy is at the expense of the patrons of the road. The Legislature wisely abolished the 'bob tail' car with its box for fares by insisting that a conductor should ride on the platform and attend to the needs of the public."

HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

Senate Measure Provides for an Institution in the Adirondacks—Indigent Patients to be Received.

ALBANY, Jan. 16.—Senator G. A. Davis to-day introduced a bill for the establishment of a State Hospital for the treatment of incipient pulmonary tuberculosis in the Adirondacks, which is so earnestly urged by the State medical societies, and in behalf of whose passage a mass meeting of physicians from all over the State is soon to be held in this city.

The bill appropriates $200,000 for the purchase of a site and the erection and equipping of the hospital. It authorizes the Governor to appoint, with the consent of the Senate, a board of nine trustees, two of whom shall be residents of the same judicial district, two shall be physicians, and two shall be women, the term of office of one member to expire each year. The trustees shall receive no compensation, but shall be allowed $600 a year each for traveling expenses. Any trustee may be removed from office at any time by the Governor, with the consent of the Senate.

This Board of Trustees shall take care of the general interests of the hospital and maintain an effective inspection of its affairs and management. At each annual meeting the board shall appoint a visiting committee of two trustees for each month of the year. They shall make a detailed report to the Legislature in January of each year of the results of their visits and inspection, with suggestions and such other matter as may be required of them by the Governor. The board is also required to report annually to the State Board of Charities, and the State Board of Charities shall, in its annual report to the Legislature, certify what appropriations are necessary.

The Trustees are given power to appoint a Superintendent of the hospital who shall be a well-educated physician, not a member of the Board of Trustees. The Superintendent shall appoint all necessary employes and fix their compensation. The Trustees shall also appoint a Treasurer, who shall have custody of all the funds of the institution. Either of these officers may be removed at any time by the Trustees. All medical assistants and examining physicians are to be appointed by the Trustees upon the nomination of the Superintendent.

The Trustees are given power to receive patients who are unable to pay, but no person shall be admitted to the hospital who has not been a citizen of this State for at least one year preceding the date of application. Every person desiring free treatment shall apply to the local authorities of his or her town, city or county having charge of the relief of the poor, who shall thereupon issue a written request to an examining physician in the same city or county for examination. No person shall be admitted as a patient without the certificate of one of the examining physicians certifying that such applicant is suffering from incipient pulmonary tuberculosis. The local authorities having charge of the relief of the poor shall state in writing whether the person is able to pay for his or her care and treatment while at the hospital, which statement shall be attached to the certificate of the examining physician, and filed with the Superintendent of the hospital. Every person who is thus declared to be unable to pay for his or her care or treatment shall be transported to and from the hospital at the expense of the local authorities.

Applicants who are able to pay for their care shall apply in person to one of the examining physicians, but preference shall always be given to indigent persons. The Superintendent is required to furnish to the Controller each month a statement of all the free patients, and the Controller shall collect from the local officials the sums due for their care.

There shall also be placed at every opening in such shafts suitable iron or steel doors, all of which shall be closed and securely fastened whenever the elevator in such shaft shall not be running for the night, and shall remain so closed and securely fastened at all times when said elevator is not in use.

Within sixty days from and after the passage of this act the owner or owners of hotels of the kind mentioned in this act in which an elevator or elevator shaft is now placed or in use shall cause the elevator and elevator shaft to be altered and constructed in compliance with all the provisions of Section 1 of this act.

AGAINST BARKING DOGS.

ALBANY, Jan. 16.—Mr. Graham to-day introduced a bill "to provide a summary remedy against the barking dogs in the cities and villages of the State."

The Counties of New York, Kings, Albany, and Erie are exempt from the terms of the law, which provides that any person may make complaint to any police justice of a dog upon adjacent property which disturbs the peace by barking, and the Magistrate shall issue an order that the nuisance be abated. If within five days the complaint be renewed and be found justifiable, the Magistrate shall issue an order for the killing of the dog.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY BILL.

Railway Companies Are Included with Other Plants.

ALBANY, Jan. 16.—Assemblyman McInery introduced an Employers' Liability bill in the Assembly to-day which is on a more simple plan than the one submitted last year. Under its provisions workmen who may be injured by reason of any defect in the condition of the ways, works, machinery, or plant of their employers, or through the negligence of the Superintendent or foreman, may bring action to recover damages for personal injuries from their employers. Railway companies are also made liable under its provisions.

In case the injuries result in death, the relatives of the deceased employe may bring the action. All contracts made by employers with their employes releasing or relieving the former from liability are declared null and void.

TO PREVENT PREMATURE BURIALS.

ALBANY, Jan. 16.—Assemblyman Gale to-day introduced a bill to prevent premature burial of human beings by compelling undertakers to adopt a device to permit the buried person to notify persons in the vicinity that life still exists. It is as follows:

Section 1.—From and after Sept. 1, 1900, no human body shall be buried in this State without the use of such apparatus or mechanical means as may be approved of by the State Board of Health, which will permit of the person whose body is so interred or buried obtaining assistance from living persons in the event of such person so buried having been in a state of lethargy or coma at the time of the burial.

DANISH WEST INDIES' FUTURE.

Capt. Christmas Goes to Washington to Look After Proposed Sale to the United States.

Capt. W. v. Christmas Dirckinck-Holmfeld of Copenhagen, who has been at the Hotel Manhattan for a few days, left for Washington last night. He is one of the accredited agents of the Danish Government in the pending negotiations looking to the sale to the United States of the Islands of St. Thomas, St. John, and St. Croix, known as the Danish West Indies.

Capt. Christmas said yesterday he believed the negotiations in progress would soon reach a satisfactory termination. The price first demanded was $13,000,000; then it was reduced to $7,500,000, but now the Danish Government is willing to accept $4,000,000, which sum will about enable the authorities of Denmark to pay the colonial indebtedness.

"Denmark," said Capt. Christmas, "cannot afford to be on bad terms with the United States. Several of the European powers want the Danish West Indies, but King Christian prefers they should be the property of the United States. In the event of the construction of the Nicaragua or Panama Canal the islands will be of special value to the American people as a coaling station. I am well acquainted with the Islands of which my grandfather, Admiral Christmas, was the Governor for many years.

"I believe the Islands will prove valuable property for the United States, and just so soon as matters reach a certain stage I shall disappear, and negotiations will be concluded by Constantine Brun, the Danish Minister at Washington. Henry White, a member of the American Legation at London, has made frequent trips to Copenhagen on this matter, and the affair is about closed. If we sell the islands Denmark will still own Greenland, Iceland, and the Foroer Islands."

Capt. Christmas was asked about a report that he had been approached by a Dane residing in New York who declared that if he wanted to consummate a sale he would have to produce $200,000 to be paid to friends close to the Administration at Washington. Capt. Christmas admitted that such overtures had been made, but added that he said to the man who approached him:

"You are a liar. I do not believe for a moment that you are authorized to make any such overtures."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The arrival at New York of an accredited agent of the Danish Government charged with the sale to the United States of the Danish West Indian islands has not been notified to the State Department as yet, except through the newspapers. There is visible reluctance to discuss the subject. It is not admitted that the matter has progressed to the point that a determination has been reached to adopt the project, for such an admission might lead to disagreeable inquiries from other nations, but there is reason to believe that the Administration has given much thought to the advisability of buying the islands.

HANNAH MAY STETSON DEAD.

The Actress Has a Stroke of Paralysis, Following a Rehearsal—Her Professional Career.

Mrs. Hannah May Stetson, the actress known professionally as Hannah May Ingham, died yesterday from a stroke of paralysis at her home at 443 Lexington Avenue.

Mrs. Stetson had been appearing with the Henry V. Donnelly Stock Company at the Murray Hill Theatre in the leading feminine rôle in this week's revival of "An Enemy to the King." She took her part in the performance Monday night, and showed no evidence of unusual fatigue. Her health recently, however, had not been good, and her husband, fearing that she was overtaxing her strength, advised her some time ago to take a rest. She declined to do so, however, believing that her indisposition was of a temporary nature.

Mrs. Stetson yesterday morning attended the rehearsal of the comedy "Never Again," which the company had scheduled for revival next week, and after finishing her work, which was of two hours' duration, returned to her boarding place. A few minutes later, while eating luncheon with her husband and her cousin, Mrs. Jennie Nichols of Lima, Ohio, she became faint, and said she would like to lie down a moment. Before assistance could be given she had fallen from her chair. Dr. Barry of 447 Lexington Avenue was summoned in haste, and restoratives and artificial respiration were resorted to, but without avail.

Mrs. Stetson was a native of California. While she was a child she took part in the performances of a Shakespearean dramatic club. A performance of Ophelia attracted the attention of Mr. Stetson, who was then a prominent actor, and he engaged her for leading parts in his company, she assuming this responsible position at the age of fifteen. In addition to the rôles in Mr. Stetson's "Kentuck" and "Neck and Neck," she played Ophelia, Julia in "Richelieu," and Mare in "The Marble Heart." Then followed a number of years of hard, practical experience, playing a wide range of parts.

Mrs. Stetson came under the observation of New York audiences about four years ago when she originated a part in a play called "A House on the Marsh" at the Fourteenth Street Theatre. She made a pleasing impression. In 1897 she originated a rôle in Jacob Litt's production, "Shall We Forgive Her?" Her next engagement was with Charles Frohman, when she played the part of Edith Varney in "Secret Service" with a road company. She became leading woman with the Donnelly Stock Company last season, when she appeared in thirty different roles. She has been seen this season in very nearly every revival Mr. Donnelly has presented.

Mrs. Stetson was thirty-three years old. Her mother died five years ago from a stroke of paralysis in a theatre in Newark, N. J.

It is probable that the funeral will be held Friday. Out of respect for Mrs. Stetson, no matinée performance was given at the Murray Hill Theatre yesterday.

MAZET COMMITTEE FUNDS

Practically Expended and Counsel Are Not Yet Paid.

FRANK MOSS MAY ASK $10,000

The Non-Resident Members of the Committee Also Have Bills for Hotel and Other Expenses.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 16.—More money is needed to pay the expenses incurred by the Mazet Committee during its investigation of New York City's municipal government. A bill will soon be introduced asking for an additional appropriation for this purpose, as the original appropriation of $50,000 is about exhausted, and there is yet to be paid the fees of Frank Moss, counsel to the committee, and his associates. Mr. Costello of Oswego, who was one of the Republican members of the committee, declared to-night that he was in favor of an additional appropriation being granted, as he believed that the counsel employed by the committee should receive fair compensation for their time. When asked what sum he thought should be paid to Mr. Moss, the chief counsel, he said he could not say until he had talked the matter over with his associates.

Mr. Costello added that Mr. Moss had received $2,000 so far for his services, and that John Proctor Clarke and Francis E. Laimbeer had each been paid $1,000. Mr. Moss, he said, had given his entire time for nine months to the committee, but what his bill will be is not known here. Persons who are familiar with the fees asked from the State by lawyers predict that Mr. Moss's bill will be not less than $10,000. It was learned to-night that up to this time $46,066.86 of the original appropriation had been paid out by the State. There are many minor bills yet to be settled out of the balance.

Another reason, it is said, for making a request for an additional appropriation, is to pay the personal expenses incurred by members of the committee. Those who resided outside of New York have bills for transportation, hotel bills, and incidentals which they want the State to settle.

The eight bills which were appended to the Mazet report, embodying the recommendations of the committee, were referred to the Cities Committee this morning. The most interesting, perhaps, is the one which creates a commission to inquire into the government of New York City and to suggest legislation on that line. All the members here manifested a lively interest in the powers to be conferred upon it.

The commission is authorized to employ counsel and such other help as may be necessary and to fix their compensation, and may hold its meetings at any time and place it sees fit. It may compel the production of any public record or document of the city or any of the departments or offices of the city. It shall possess all the powers conferred by the legislative law upon a committee of the Legislature or by the Code of Civil Procedure upon a board or committee; may invoke the power of any court of record to compel the attendance and testifying of witnesses and the production of books and papers, and any member of the commission shall have power to administer oaths.

Ex-Assemblyman Robert Mazet was not inclined yesterday to say anything in regard to the report of the investigating committee of which he was Chairman, and which was submitted Monday night to the Assembly. "The report speaks for itself," he said, "and, as I am not a member of the present Assembly, it is not necessary that I should appear further in connection with the matter."

Mr. Mazet was asked why no account of the committee's expenditures was included in its report.

"It was unnecessary," he said. "The committee had an appropriation of $50,000 for expenses, and paid for everything as it went along, with the exception of counsel fees, and those have been paid in part. The vouchers for every payment made on account of the committee are on file in the Controller's office at Albany. There is still an unexpended balance of the appropriation, but whether it is sufficient to pay the remainder of the fees of counsel I am unable to say. If an additional appropriation should be required to settle the bills of the lawyers in full, that will be a matter for the present Legislature to consider."

Mr. Mazet declined to say how much had been paid on account to Frank Moss, senior counsel of the committee, or how much was still due him.

It was announced several days ago by Mr. Moss that upon the termination of his relations with the committee he would make public the facts in regard to the sudden ending of its work and the refusal of the Republican members to prosecute certain lines of inquiry, one of which involved the calling of Senator Thomas C. Platt. From Mr. Mazet's statement it appears that the presentation of the majority and minority reports did not really end Mr. Moss's relations with the committee, as a portion of his bill remains to be paid.

LEGISLATIVE PROCEEDINGS.

In the Senate.

ALBANY, Jan. 16.—Senator Grady this morning introduced a resolution in the Senate "that it is the sense of the Senate that it is not expedient or advisable to attempt at this session any change in the constitution or statutes relating to woman suffrage."

Senator Raines characterized the resolution as an attempt on the part of Senator Grady to deprive the people of their rights. Senator Coggeshall also spoke in opposition.

The yeas and nays on the question were called and the resolution was adopted by a vote of 26 to 17, as follows: Yeas—Senators Boyce, Brackett, Brown, Chahoon, Cullen, Ellsworth, Ebberg, Foley, Goodsell, Grady, Havens, Higgins, Laroche, Mackey, Martin, McCarren, Mitchell, Munsinger, Norton, Plunkitt, Ramsberger, Rice, Stranahan, Thornton, Wagner, White, Nays—Senators Ambler, Armstrong, Coggeshall, D. F. Davis, G. A. Davis, Featherston, Feeter, Ford, Graney, Humphrey, Johnson, Marshall, Parsons, Raines, Sherwood, Wilcox, Willis.

The Senate adjourned at 12 o'clock until to-morrow.

In the Assembly.

ALBANY, Jan. 16.—Mr. Gale of Queens, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill prohibiting premature burials, which the Chair referred to the Judiciary Committee. To this reference Mr. Gale strenuously objected, saying as they were dealing with live and not dead ones, he thought the bill should be referred to the Public Health Committee. This change in reference was made.

Senator Ellsworth's bill appropriating $27,500 for contingent expenses of the Legislature was passed.

The Committee on Ways and Means reported favorably Mr. Hill's bill reappropriating the unexpended balance of $10,000 of the funds appropriated for the expenses of the Canal Advisory Commission.

At 11:45 A. M. the Assembly adjourned until Wednesday at 11 A. M.

LI HUNG CHANG IN POWER.

Through Favors Received from the Dowager Empress He Becomes Viceroy at Canton.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 23.—Li Hung Chang was withdrawn from the Tsung li Yamen in 1898 at the demand of Great Britain, but he was not degraded. He continued to hold a higher position as a member of the Grand Secretariat.

Within a year, however, the Dowager Empress has pushed her favorite forward three times. On Nov. 14, 1898, she issued an edict appointing Li a High Commissioner to personally investigate the course of the tumultuous Yellow River and report on its conservation. Li spent the Winter of 1898-99 in this very trying tour, accompanied by a foreign engineer, and by N. J. Pettrick, formerly United States Vice Consul at Tientsin, his private secretary.

The Empress, Nov. 24, 1899, rewarded Li in a special edict, making him "High Commissioner on Commercial Affairs." He was just starting out on a national tour of investigation of the great port cities when, on Dec. 19 last, the Empress issued a special decree making Li Hung Chang Viceroy of the Kwantung and Kwangse Provinces, with his capital at Canton. He is therefore again vested with vice regal power, but his task is a difficult one. He succeeds Viceroy Yan, whom the French have forced out. Li has on his hands the vexatious situation due to the aggression of the French on the southern frontier of China. They have occupied an extent of Chinese territory equal to ten counties or more, and have been ceded a fine harbor in Southern China.

Several score of Chinese have been killed in engagements resisting the French. Marshal Su, who was sent to Canton as a special Commissioner to settle matters, has been removed by the Empress for conceding too much territory. Li Hung Chang, therefore, steps into a nest upholstered with bayonets. The Canton Viceroyalty is one of the most lucrative in China, but to contend successfully with the Chinese factions, with his enemies at Peking, and with the French will puzzle the old statesman.

MEET DEATH IN A CHURCH.

KILLED BY DYNAMITE.

Ten Bodies Taken from Ruins Caused by Explosion Near Turin.

TURIN, Jan. 16.—A dynamite factory at Avigliano, fourteen miles from here, exploded to-day, with the result that five buildings were reduced to ruins, the whole surrounding district was shaken, and many houses were badly damaged. Ten bodies have been recovered from beneath the ruins. In addition, several persons were injured and taken to the hospital.

The detonations were heard as far as this city, whence surgeons were dispatched to the scene of the disaster.

WILL BE BURIED AT HOME.

Body of an American Sailor Killed at Jamaica Is Exhumed.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Jan. 16.—The remains of J. C. Darcey, the American seaman, who was killed during the fleet riots here March 28 last, were exhumed to-day for shipment homeward to-morrow. The attitude of the populace at the ceremony was indicative of the most profound regret at the tragic incident.

Darcey was an oiler on board the United States cruiser Detroit, and died March 31, last year from the effects of wounds received while on shore leave in Kingston, Jamaica, a few days before, during a riot among the crews of the American fleet ashore.

LARGE STRIKE IN BRAZIL.

Twenty Thousand Drivers in Rio de Janeiro Quit Work.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 16.—Over 20,000 drivers of all kinds of vehicles went on strike yesterday. A small faction of Monarchists, headed by Ouro Preto, a brother of Carlos Affonso, and Malvino Reis, attempted to take advantage of the situation. Numerous groups attacked different points, tearing up the street-car rails and destroying cars. Several thousand rioters, in front of the President's palace, raised cries of "Long live the Monarchy!" "Death to the Republic!" A small force of cavalry dispersed the rioters without difficulty.

The city to-day has the appearance of martial law having been proclaimed. The horse cars and other vehicles are partly working. The police during the first hours of the disturbance were extremely weak and inefficient, but were reinforced by regular troops, especially cavalry, and order was re-established.

The elder brother of Capt. Coventry is Viscount Deerhurst, who married Miss Virginia Bonynge of San Francisco.

The bride wore a princess dress of white crepe de chine, embroidered with white and silver. It had a Court train, which was carried by the young son of Lady Barbara Smith and the daughter of Lady Deerhurst. The couple have gone on a honeymoon to Copse Hill, Gloucestershire, which place has been lent to them by Frank Whitehouse.

There was a long list of presents, which included furs, a brougham and a pair of horses from the bride's father, a diamond tiara and brooch from her mother, a painted empire fan from the Prince and Princess Cantacuzene, and a chest of silver plate and a coal scuttle from the Prince and Princess Dhuleep Singh.

The Whitehouse family formerly resided in Chicago.

Undermuslins

This is the only New York retail store that manufactures Muslin Underwear on a large scale. It's the method that means littlest prices. Competition may possess other good points to justify strong talk, but we are content to continue repeating the truth about our underselling. Examine this Underwear carefully. The materials are good and free from starch, loading or sizing; the embroideries and laces show excellence in each stitch and mesh; the sewing and shaping and finishing remind you of tedious and laborious home work.

Bargains in Silverware

If competition, grown desperate, reduces prices to match ours, we meet the exigency by cutting again, and in the end as in the beginning you'll find the Macy rates the lowest. A few specimen values:—

SIXTEEN PAGES.

IN SIGHT.

Improbable as it may seem to the aged and the skeptical, an underground railroad capable of carrying passengers to Harlem in fifteen minutes will very likely be built in this city within the next five years. Years ago the youthful and the sanguine fed and filled their minds with that delusive hope. To Harlem in fifteen minutes became the slogan of the strap-hanger. Many times in his foolish credulousness he said that rapid transit was in sight. He believed it. But there were the courts to reckon with, and Governors, and Legislatures, and abutting property owners, and rivals, insomuch that one after another all the schemes for getting to Harlem in fifteen minutes were kicked into oblivion.

Now at last, with great and incredible labors and against powerful opponents, over all of whom it has so far triumphed, a plan for a rapid-transit underground road has come to the point where the contract for its construction and operation has been awarded to a serious and responsible bidder. Mr. JOHN B. MCDONALD'S capability as a contractor for large work is attested by his construction of the great tunnel under the City of Baltimore. His deposit of a check for $150,000 and the bond he is ready to give as a condition of the award of the contract to him must be regarded as guarantees of the sufficiency of the financial support he can command. He has the contract and must begin the work within thirty days.

We have never got so far as this before. Rapid transit not only is in sight, but it is real rapid transit. The plans of Mr. PARSONS are incomparably the most elaborate and finished of all that have ever been prepared for an underground road in this city or any other. If Mr. MCDONALD and his capitalists demonstrate their capacity to build and operate the road the Rapid Transit Commissioners will have the satisfaction of knowing that they have achieved the greatest public work undertaken in this city since the introduction of Croton water.

THE MAZET REPORTS.

We have at last got to the end of the Mazet committee and its so-called labors. We have a report from the majority which discloses nothing of any importance that was not already known, which discloses nothing whatever as to the part of its own party in the evils that are notorious, and makes no recommendations worthy of serious attention. We have from the minority a mere scolding of the majority, with a sweeping and wholly unwarranted denial of the existence of vices and faults in the City Government and in the men who control it, and an impudent defense of the impudent conduct of some of the Tammany witnesses on the stand. Both the majority and the minority have played a pitiful and disgraceful game of small politics, and have succeeded only in persuading decent men that neither is better than the other and that the committee as a whole is a poor lot.

This is singularly unfortunate for the people of the city and of the State, for there was and is plenty in the management of the affairs of New York that is very bad, that is due to public causes, and that could be remedied. This is shown plainly enough in the majority report. What that report says of the dictatorial rule of the party in power here, of the wretched and corrupting condition of the Police Department, and of the defects in the Tax Department is generally true, and it is both shameful and hurtful in the highest degree. But the majority of the committee has so conducted its inquiry as to discredit the results of it. It is an actual fact that it has thrown around the very evils it has undertaken to expose the only safeguard remaining possible. It has made the public look on the substantially accurate statements of these evils as partisan exaggerations. In this way it has deadened the attention and dissipated the indignation of the public. In so doing it has aided in riveting on the city the rule of Tammany, which it doubtless wished to loosen, and RICHARD CROKER could well afford out of his revenue from politics to pay all the cost of Mr. MAZET'S performances. Of the minority it may be said that its conduct is equally unworthy, but nothing better was expected of it, and at least it does not pretend to be seeking to reform the city.

Are we, then, to conclude that there is no real remedy for the ills we suffer and that we are to be shut up to the choice of party and boss rule first of one kind and then of another as each in its turn seems intolerable? Is there no escape from Tammany except through the Republican machine, none from CROKER except in the arms of PLATT? That is the doctrine of the Mazet report, and it is a natural and logical one. The only hope of the Republican machine is in popular disgust with Tammany or in an alliance with Tammany. When it is not enjoying the advantages of the latter it is engaged in trying to arouse the former. Indeed, the whole Mazet game may well have been intended to discourage in the popular mind the notion that any good can come from any source but the Republican organization, and also to instill in the Tammany mind the notion that an alliance is safer than warfare. But the game has miscarried. The public has been even more disgusted with the Republican organization's part in it than with that which Tammany is seen to be playing. The general comment on all the disclosures of Tammany greed, recklessness, and corruption is that they were to have been expected when Mr. PLATT put up Mr. TRACY and threw the city into the hands of Mr. CROKER. Every new count, every addition to the evidence in the charges against Tammany only increased the responsibility of the Platt machine. And the effect of this on the public mind has been such that PLATT as an alternative to CROKER is more distrusted than ever.

That is the only good the Mazet inquiry has done, and it is considerable. When the people of the city are really convinced that PLATT and CROKER are about the same they will find means to get rid of both. They came very near doing so in 1897. They struck on the right principle and it took a very strong hold. It is not without significance that Mr. MAZET was defeated in his Assembly district by a candidate representing clearly and satisfactorily the ideas and the policy of the Citizens' Union. Those ideas are the hope of decent, just, honest, and progressive government in the city.

THE OPEN DOOR IN CHINA.

We were assured some days ago that favorable answers to our application for an assurance that our treaty rights would not be attacked in China had been received from five out of the six powers to which it had been made. Italy was named as the one power which had not given in its adhesion to the principle involved in our demand. The interest of Italy in the commercial development of China is so small, comparatively, that this announcement seemed equivalent to a favorable answer on the part of all powers concerned. And we have still reason to take that view, even though the dispatch published yesterday had an "official" air, which set forth that it was not one power only out of those to which we had applied, but two, which had failed to return any answer at all.

The principle involved in our demand, we may repeat, was the principle that our commercial treaty rights in China were not to be abrogated by the partition of that monarchy. The advantage of the position taken by Mr. HAY over that taken by the British Government year before last was that we did not undertake to set any limits to the partition of China. Any power which chooses may, according to our contention, maltreat the Chinese as much as it chooses and carve up their inheritance to suit itself. All that we ask is that we shall hereafter be permitted to trade there, as now, on the footing of the most favored nations, which is to say, on the same footing as the conquering and partitioning power. And, of course, that implies that all other powers which have commercial treaties with China will apply for and receive the same privileges which have been promised to us. Under this view, the conquest of a part of China by a European power would simply be the right to police a certain tract at its own expense, and in return to get what any other civilized nation also got in the way of commercial privileges. Evidently such an understanding comes to the same thing as an agreement not to annex at all on the part of a nation which is not sure of doing the bulk of the business on a basis of free competition.

Great Britain has heretofore occupied alone the position of possessing that certainty. It has paid her to subdue savages in quest of new markets which she thereupon proceeded to share with all comers. It seems that our demand for the maintenance of our treaty rights has the same effect as Great Britain's protest against partition, with this additional advantage, that we have carried the point without resort to threats, and without the least diplomatic tension. Mr. HAY is very much to be congratulated.

THE "ARISTOCRATIC" BRITISH ARMY.

We see no reason for doubting the authenticity of the letter which is cabled as having been published in The London Morning Post, and which purports to be the last letter written by Gen. WAUCHOPE, the commander of the Highland Brigade at the battle of Magersfontein. It is precisely in line with all the utterances which have been attributed to its putative author as having been made upon the battlefield on which he met his death.

But we can understand that the actual writing must have made a much more profound impression in England than was made by the report of remarks made by its author in the shadow of death. Gen. WAUCHOPE in effect accuses Lord METHUEN of throwing away his life and the lives of his men in a hopeless attack. And Gen. WAUCHOPE'S judgment is vindicated and Lord METHUEN'S is discredited by the actual event.

In his account of the fatal and futile and foolish and glorious "Charge of the Light Brigade" at Balaklava, KINGLAKE gives some biographical facts about the mad leader of that charge, Lord CARDIGAN, and adds that nobody who had attended to the man's record could have helped being indignant that such a man was allowed to have charge of the lives of British soldiers. Lord METHUEN is by no means the same kind of stupid and headstrong person as Lord CARDIGAN. Lord CARDIGAN was a mere peace-time martinet when the Crimean war broke out. Lord METHUEN, on the other hand, had served, and served with credit and distinction, in a number of the "small wars" which alone England had been waging since the Crimean war, before this present war which has so very unexpectedly turned out to be a big one. It is true he had always served as a subordinate. But he is, just as much as was Lord CARDIGAN, a survival of the aristocratic tradition of the British Army. The Duke of WELLINGTON did very much to prolong this tradition when he advised the Queen, whatever else she gave up, to retain the control of the army. This injunction has been followed, with a literalness which the Duke could not have foreseen, by the keeping of her Majesty's cousin for so many years at the head of the army, with the results, in the way of promotions and selections for high commands, which might have been expected. The frightfully costly collapse of Lord METHUEN as a commander, whatever may be the explanation of it, seems certain to raise a storm against the aristocratic administration which has produced such results.

THE FRIENDLESS WOOL GROWER.

The ship of state yaws, her sails flap in the wind, and she seems to be getting ready to go stern foremost.

President WILLIAM MCKINLEY is accused with circumstance and specification of having deserted the wool growers. They charge that he has adopted the destructive principles of the celebrated free raw materials message of GROVER CLEVELAND sent to Congress in December, 1887. Infinitely more heartless than JOHN RANDOLPH, who averred that he would walk a mile any time to kick a sheep, WILLIAM MCKINLEY has laid the knife to the throat of every one of the 40,000,000 sheep in the United States; for the shepherds say that the reciprocity conventions which he has concluded will destroy utterly the market for American wool.

When wool will not sell the sheep must die. There is no career left to him but to become mutton. He cannot carry burdens or draw the creaking wain. He is not decorative. He is prized only for the chops there are in him, for his saddle, his head, and trotters, and eke his pelt. He goes unwept to the shambles, sacrificed to the pauper sheep of the Argentine.

It is in the columns of our technical contemporary Wool Markets and Sheep that the conduct of the faithless MCKINLEY comes under review. Mr. WILLIAM H. B. THORNTON, that lion-hearted defender of the interests of the wool grower, raises the cry that "a deadly blow has been struck at the sheep husbandry." Mr. CLEVELAND was always dealing deadly blows at sheep husbandry. It was his free-trade nature to. But this is WILLIAM MCKINLEY, once the best friend of the American sheep. He has negotiated reciprocity treaties with France, the Argentine Republic, and other countries. Listen to the daring THORNTON:

> This should be startling news to every producer of wool, for it is a clean-cut stab at protection. It is unmistakably a step backward from the principles which elected the Hon. WILLIAM MCKINLEY to the highest office in the land.
> The message of the President to Congress at this time regarding treaties to be made with foreign countries is not only unjust to the grower, but is unfortunate, and will certainly prove embarrassing to the Chief Executive before he is through with it. Where is "the ample protection" promised to the wool growers of the United States at St. Louis in the Republican platform of 1896? Yes, where? What have the producers of wool received since the present Administration went into power but promises? The "ample protection" promised the wool interest is a Tariff act that is full of fraudulent loopholes, every class of which, in Schedule K, is so framed that deception to the wool grower, and not protection, is the ruling characteristic. * * * The whole wool-growing interest looks upon these treaty negotiations with foreign nations, offering to reduce the duties upon wools as a bait for an outlet for manufactured products, with horror. What does it mean? Has the Administration gone insane? The idea of a treaty of reciprocity with such nations as the Argentine Republic! Has MCKINLEY forgotten that there are other interests at stake in this country besides corporations and manufacturers? Does he not know that the Argentine Republic is one of the largest wool-producing nations in the world, yielding a clip of wool annually very nearly double that of our own? To make a 20 per cent. reduction in duties on wool from that country for the purpose of obtaining a reciprocity treaty with that nation so as to admit manufactured products would be suicidal.

Mr. JOHN A. KASSON, the negotiator of the reciprocity treaties, comes in for his share of Mr. THORNTON'S censure, but KASSON has long been suspected of a secret sympathy with free trade. It is the reprehensible conduct of the President that excites chiefly the surprise, grief, and anger of the sheep husbandmen.

The wool growers are in the same dazed state of mind as the other beneficiaries of protection. They have not had time to get used to WILLIAM MCKINLEY in the rôle of a tariff reformer, as an advocate of tariff legislation for the whole people, for American trade, and not for the favored few. We confess that he still seems a bit new and strange to us in that rôle. But no incident in the gradual transformation of the Republican Party from protectionist to low tariff has seemed quite so weird as the onslaught of the wool growers' organ upon WILLIAM MCKINLEY, once the sheep's best friend, but now, alas, in conspiracy with JOHN A. KASSON to let in the wild wools of the Argentine Republic in a whelming flood before which neither the pampered Merino of Ohio nor the coarse-grade animal of Texas, with his fleece full of strange burrs, can stand for a minute.

The arrival in this country of an accredited agent of the Danish Government to negotiate the sale of the Danish West Indies to the United States ought to indicate that there had already been very nearly a "meeting of minds" between the Government at Washington and the Government at Copenhagen. No doubt we have already caused it to be understood that we would not "view with indifference" the acquisition of the islands by another European power than Denmark, presumably more aggressive than Denmark. The transfer from King Log to a possible King Stork of such a naval base could by no means be a matter of indifference to us. But it would not upon that account be just to accuse us of playing the part of a dog in the manger about the islands, or of desiring to get them at our own price by scaring off other bidders. We are entirely content, for example, that Denmark should keep them. But then it is plain that they are worth more to us than they are to Denmark or to any other power, seeing that we can at any time make them, in conjunction with all the other sugar islands of the West Indies, prosperous by simply putting them within our tariff ring fence. Without doubt it would pay us, or it might be made to pay us, to buy them at their value to Denmark, prospective as well as present. But there is no reason why we should pay a fancy price for them, based upon the estimate of what they may be worth under our rule but certainly will not be worth under any other rule.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Fond as Englishmen are of telling us that their newspapers are different from—they usually say "to"—the newspapers of the United States, not one of them, so far as we have noticed, ever called attention to what is perhaps the most important and certainly the most interesting point of dissimilarity between the journals of the two countries. Here, editors and reporters alike show a marked aversion for "indirect discourse," and practically never use it for more than a single sentence at a time; there, it is avowed quotation that is under the ban, and in every paper, as a result, one can find whole columns of pluperfects and subjunctives—which make hard reading and exceeding dull. So it seems, at least, to those habituated to the swifter and sprightlier motion of the "oratio recta." We hesitate to ascribe this divergence of English and American taste to difference of climate, and resolutely refuse to find its explanation in the superior veracity of our dear cousins. A cast-iron moralist might, indeed, declare that he who does not reproduce in literal exactness the words of another has no right to employ quotation marks, and it is a fact that only in the rarest instances is the newspaper report of a speech or a conversation a mechanical duplication of spoken sentences. For the Britisher's more cautious method, therefore, the shadow of an excuse exists, it being a constant reminder that the printed words are at second hand and in some degree untrustworthy. It is a most clumsy method, however, and as its substitute, while possessing numerous and obvious advantages, deceives nobody who is reasonably sophisticated, there is no harm and much good in perpetuating the American custom.

—Some weeks ago Gov. RICHARDS of Wyoming invited the other trans-Missouri States to meet him to-day in Salt Lake City and take united action expressing approval of the so-called arid land bills now before Congress. These bills permit the leasing of such lands in large quantities, and naturally opinions differ as to the advisability of passing them. Gov. RICHARDS believes in them, but apparently the other Governors do not. At any rate, only the Governor of Colorado made response to his invitation, and he was forced to call the meeting off. This failure of the Wyoming statesman's plan has greatly delighted The Denver News, and it manifests its joy without any regard whatever for the Governor's feelings. He has declared that the other Governors were "missing a golden opportunity." To this The News replies: "The expression is suggestive. There is a 'golden opportunity' to gobble up the public domain and place it in the hands of the syndicates with which Gov. RICHARDS is associated and whose interests and desires control his entire official action. This executive meeting was called for the express purpose of obtaining from trans-Missouri Governors an indorsement of the land-leasing bills now pending in Congress. Gov. RICHARDS is probably the only one among them who is in favor of a measure so destructive to the best interests of the people of the arid region. He is doing the bidding of these land-grabbing syndicates; his contemporaries in the Executive chairs of other States are not. He would drive out the homesteader, the small herd owner, the farmer; they would leave the public domain as it is, invite a continued immigration of home builders, and permit all to enjoy the benefits of a free range." It may or may not be explanatory of the vigor of these remarks that The News is Populistic and Silverite in the highest degree.

—Just why "David Harum" attained a popularity which many a better story misses is one of the mysteries it is practically useless to attack, for at this late day its solution is probably impossible, but an adroit device now in operation for the apparent purpose of again attracting wearied attention to the book is worthy of a little consideration. First there appeared in a Kansas paper a brief paragraph stating that "David Harum" was written by Mr. KIPLING. This grotesque statement was taken up with remarkable promptitude by several Western papers and whole columns of nonsense were published, with the effect of spreading widely a weird tale about a bet that anything written by Mr. KIPLING would sell as well under another name as under his own, and an elaborate plot, including the invention of a non-existent Edward Noyes Westcott, in order that the bet might be settled. As a joke this explanation of the book would do well enough, in the lack of other excuses for smiles, but it really looks as though quite a number of people in various parts of the country were coming to give the yarn a sort of belief. Well, that is a joke, too, but it is not a very funny one, and the element of humiliation in it is altogether too great. "David Harum" is a book containing at least a dozen well-told and remarkably amusing anecdotes, but as a whole its construction is deplorable, and Mr. KIPLING no more would have produced it in its present shape than Mr. WESTCOTT could have produced a story as well made as those of the Anglo-Indian genius.

—Possibly this extension to the mail carriers of the authority to register letters was a mark of enterprise and progressiveness on the part of the Post Office Department, but it is doubtful if the public will be particularly impressed by it. Instead of feeling a wave of gratitude sweep over his soul as he reflects upon this new evidence of Governmental favor, the average citizen is more apt to wonder why the postal officials didn't use their unemployed energy and ingenuity in improving branches of the service already in existence. There are so many things more desirable than the privilege of registering letters at one's door. Most desirable of all is greater promptness in the delivery and collection of the mails, and that the new plan is not calculated to bring about. Indeed, it is sure to cause a certain amount of delay, and, though the amount may be small, it is not to be contemplated with entire composure.

—To some railroad men down in Texas, who had written to Miss HELEN M. GOULD thanking her for some books sent by her to their branch of the Railroad Men's Young Men's Christian Association, she recently replied as follows: "A few days ago I received the kind letter of thanks for my books signed by yourself and many other railroad men. I wish you all to know that I appreciate the attention very much, and, especially, your expressions of friendship for my dear father were very touching. If my books contribute at all to the pleasures of the railroad men, I will be more than gratified." A phrase or two in that letter will excite thought.

THE MARINE SUBSIDY BILL.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Ex-Senator Edmunds is evidently ashamed of the dirty business in which he is engaged, for he wishes it to be distinctly understood that he is simply acting within the lines of his profession as a lawyer. On their part, the shipbuilders are employing him as a phonograph to give out again the words they have talked into him and which they have proclaimed a hundred times before, but which they think that Congress will be more ready to listen to when they come from the lips of one who has had such a high standing as a member of their body. They can well afford to pay him his fee, which under the circumstances we may be sure is not a light one.

The bill under discussion is too complex to be described in detail. It is purposely so. It was never intended that the people at large should understand all its provisions. Its originators and its advocates merely wish it to be understood that it is a patriotic scheme on their part for the revival of the American commercial marine, which they assert has come to grief for want of proper "fostering" and "encouraging" on the part of this Government, such as is contributed by all others to their respective merchant navies. That is their statement, but it is absolutely false. They know it. Ex-Senator Edmunds knows it, and every man who has carefully studied the subject and its history with honest intent knows it as well. Of course there is a foundation, although an unstable one, for their assertions. Foreign nations, especially the most prosperous commercial nation of the world, have paid subsidies for mail purposes and subventions for naval purposes, but Great Britain, which these people are forever holding up as our most prosperous rival, as indeed she is, in all her history never gave a bounty of any kind for the promotion of shipbuilding, and the subsidies and subventions she has paid out have been for value received in the carriage of mails and in adaptation to naval requirements. Moreover, she would have made these contracts as readily if the ships had been built abroad as if they had been built at home. But she has done what we have failed to do, and this failure has been the cause of all our woe. Had she listened to her shipwrights, as we have listened to ours, her mercantile marine might have experienced a similar disaster. When in 1849 she found that our clipper ships were taking away her carrying trade she unconditionally repealed her restrictive navigation laws and thus maintained her maritime prestige. When these conditions were reversed, after 1855, by the superiority of her iron ships, we refused to repeal our law, and consequently our foreign carrying trade became almost annihilated. Even supposing that the British Government had subsidized its mail steamships to their full cost, it would scarcely have influenced this carrying trade, more than nine-tenths of which is done in independent vessels, whose owners have never received or asked for any Government aid whatever.

A great deal is said in the voluminous report of the Commissioner of Navigation about the practices of smaller European nations in regard to subsidies and bounties, but it is in evidence that they have derived no benefit from them, and, moreover, whatever may be their policies in these respects, Mr. Chamberlain forgets to mention that they, in common with all the nations of the world, with the solitary exception of the United States, place no restriction whatever on the purchase of vessels from abroad. This in itself is sufficient argument for free ships. When it is seen that all maritime countries, excepting ours, have vastly increased their carrying trade, while ours has gone out of sight since the introduction of iron shipbuilding, there is scarcely need for further discussion. But I cannot let the Commissioner of Navigation off so easily. When he served under Mr. Cleveland's administration his reports were valuable compendiums and contained solid arguments for free ships. Now that in order to retain his office he has gone over to the enemy, he has become, to say the least, disingenuous.

Germany, as must be admitted on all sides, is the only rival, excepting Great Britain, on the sea with whom we have to contend. When about 1855 the superiority of iron over wood for shipbuilding was fully demonstrated, hampered by no restrictive laws, she at once began to order iron steamships from Scotland and took away all the trade we had before carried on with her in wooden vessels. Ship-owning in Germany speedily led to shipbuilding, and now the German ships are for the most part built in German shipyards. She laid the foundation of her prosperity on the policy of free ships. We might have done the same had not our domestic shipbuilders stood in the way.

Mr. Chamberlain says nothing about this, but he dates the commencement of German steamship-owning from 1881. "When Bismarck began the movement to promote the German merchant marine, which has since contributed to its remarkable development, his memorial led to the adoption in 1885 of the subsidy for the North German Lloyd Company." Now, the truth is, that all the ships of the company from 1857 were built in British shipyards, and the Oder, the first steamship subsidized, was built in Scotland. What protection of domestic shipbuilding was there in that subsidy? So much for our Commissioner's accuracy. Moreover, the greatest profits of the company were made in its early history before this East Indian subsidy was paid. Its dividend in 1884 was 10 per cent.; in 1865, 15 per cent.; in 1866, 20 per cent.; in 1867, 20 per cent.; in 1868, 10 per cent.; in 1869, 16 per cent.; the dividends have constantly fallen off since the subsidized part of the line has been operated. These statements are made to show how unreliable other parts of this report may be and how little it is to be depended upon as a whole. It is evidently cooked up and doctored to suit this Hanna-Payne-Frye bill.

The first free ship bill offered for the consideration of Congress was in 1870-71. It was short but comprehensive. It provided for the admission to American register of all foreign-built vessels of over 3,000 tons. That would have virtually left the coasting trade intact. It was earnestly advocated by Mr. Chandler in the Senate and by Addison. Garfield, S. S. Cox, Brooks, and others in the House. But John Roach opposed it, as his successors have done ever since, and they have substituted for it various measures for their own "relief" till their demands have culminated in the present atrocious project.

Had that early measure been adopted, our mercantile marine would have equaled that of Great Britain to-day, and our shipbuilding would undoubtedly have been as large. Although we cannot recall what we have lost, it would be the best proposition we could adopt now, whereas this infamous demand of the shipbuilders is the worst.

CUBA'S LABOR PROBLEM.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

My attention has been called to a local item in your issue of Sunday in relation to 150 colonists who sailed on Saturday evening for Nuevitas, Cuba, en route to "the new town of La Gloria, which has been founded by the Cuban Land and Steamship Company."

It appears from this item that the abovenamed company claims to have purchased 50,000 acres of land at La Gloria and other places near Nuevitas, and are inducing people to go out there and settle on the land, claiming that they can make large profits from the raising of semi-tropical fruits and vegetables.

The item goes on to state further that some of the colonists returned from Nuevitas last week with stories of the sufferings of their fellow-emigrants, and stating that the land they were sent out to settle upon was, to a large extent, a swamp, and that several of the colonists were in want. Your representative, it appears, interviewed one of the men who left on Saturday last, as appears from the following:

"One of the colonists, J. S. Johnston of Truro, N. S., said before the vessel sailed: 'I carefully investigated the statements of the company from reading its own and other literature, and I found them to be correct. Why, Commissioner Porter, in his report to the Government, said it was a splendid place.'

"When asked whether Mr. Porter had referred to La Gloria in his report, Johnston said: 'No, not about Gloria itself, but Mr. Porter said that the soil of Cuba is excellent and the climate salubrious. The New York Post Office has also indorsed the scheme, you see, for if it had disapproved of it it would not have allowed the prospectuses to go through the mails.'"

The above quotation is enough in itself to show how the people interested in the above project are distorting Mr. Porter's statements. Neither in his report to the Government nor in his book "Industrial Cuba" has Mr. Porter ever referred to La Gloria, for the simple reason that he was not aware that any such place existed. Further, Mr. Porter has never advised Americans of limited means and without capital to emigrate to Cuba, but, on the contrary, has warned them against it. From Pages 78 and 79 of his book, "Industrial Cuba," I quote the following:

"The great problem will be how to obtain labor for the plantations, for the mines, and for agricultural purposes, in order to carry on the work of industrial reconstruction. All sorts of schemes have been suggested, but upon examination of the conditions in Cuba it is feared they will prove impracticable. The life of the laborer, in consequence of the lack of diversified employment, and the fact that labor in Cuba is the severest kind of toil, has few attractions. If the Spanish soldiers are willing to remain and take up peaceful pursuits, it will aid in the solution of the problem. Possibly Italians may be induced to emigrate to Cuba, if assured of a stable government and plenty of work. The opportunity (small allotments and homes) is limited, and the drudgery on large plantations, without family life, is not likely to attract those from Europe who are ever eager to seek homes and broader opportunities in the United States."

Again on Pages 412 and 413 of the same work he says:

"The opportunities for American labor in Cuba are circumscribed. * * * Just as the restless and hopeful population of the Eastern States has migrated westward and to some extent southward in our own country, so it would find its way to Cuba if conditions allowed of extensive settlement and homemaking. In the opinion of the author they do not, and hence the industrial rehabilitation of Cuba must rely upon other sources than the United States for its supply of labor."

Mortgage Tax and Home Building.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Apropos of the proposed change in the manner of raising State taxes through a direct tax of 5 mills on real estate mortgages, it will upon consideration be found that taxation of this nature, instead of falling upon the holders of the mortgages, as it is intended it should, will fall upon the owner of the property. The inevitable result of such taxation will be that the property owner in order to obtain his loan will have to pay a proportionate increase in the interest rate on his mortgage. Thus, far from lightening the burden of taxation on real estate in this city, the proposed change will most unfavorably affect the city's real estate holders. From another point of view the proposed law is unwise because of its tendency to discourage the middle classes from building their own homes in this State. Most, if not all, of these homes are built with a small initial payment, the balance being advanced to the occupant on bond and mortgage at low interest. It is these thrifty people who will have to pay the additional 5 mills taxed on mortgages, and not the mortgagees. In the event of the passage of the proposed act these home builders will no longer be able to obtain loans at the present rates of interest. The lenders of money will naturally increase the interest rate so as to include the increased tax. The consequence will be that this desirable portion of the community will hereafter build their homes in New Jersey, where such burden will not fall upon them.

Perhaps if the tax were to be made 1 mill instead of 5 the objection would be removed. The remaining 4 mills proposed to be levied by this measure could easily and without detrimental effect be raised by taxing transfers of stocks dealt in on the Stock Exchange, just as at present a stamp tax is imposed upon such transfers under the United States revenue laws. A tax of say 4 mills on every dollar's worth of stock at par sold on the Exchange would net a snug sum for the State and would hardly affect the poorer classes. The tax would then be paid by those who could well afford to do so, and who in this manner can no longer evade taxation on their personal property.

The above considerations are presented for what they are worth.

The Quality of Meyerbeer's Music.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The extended reply of your able musical critic in yesterday's TIMES to my published contention in your last Friday's issue that "for originality and grandeur Meyerbeer's coronation march surpasses all other opera marches," compels me to ask the courtesy of sufficient space in your widely read columns to briefly meet the issue.

Pens, ink, and paper patiently submit to all sorts of impressions, and aid in their plausible exploitation, especially of those who diet musically on Wagnerian compositions. Your musical critic quotes from his criticism of last Thursday's issue, "The antique, unchurchly vulgarity of the coronation march, &c.," and that he "cannot take Meyerbeer seriously."

This is sad for Meyerbeer, who for more than fifty years "has been taken seriously" all over the world as one of the master composers of the nineteenth century. It is a matter of record that "The Huguenots," "L'Africaine," "Le Prophète," and "Robert the Devil" "have been taken seriously" by the greatest vocal artists known to the lyric stage, despite your critic's "usual effect upon the artistically sensitive."

Perhaps pious Wagnerites prefer the moral plots and calm nerve-soothing orchestral music of his "Niebelungen" series. Unfortunately Meyerbeer believed that voices were made for melody, to be aided by orchestral accompaniments, while the disciples of the Baireuth apostle reverse that order by subordinating the voices to the instruments.

However, your critic naïvely offers to accept my views if I can name musicians to indorse them. I will suggest a simpler and more direct method: Let that gentleman name an opera march equal in originality and grandeur to the coronation march. If he can I will eat Wagner musical pie.

ANGLO-AMERICAN SITUATION.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

My attention has just been called to your comments on my letter to The London Saturday Review of Dec. 23, 1899, in your issue of Jan. 3, 1900, in "Topics of the Times." Your article suggests the following reflections:

You allude to my matter as "highly original genius from Hoboken," et al., and dodge its main point, namely, that the Revolutionary War was not by itself the decisive blow to British supremacy here. This was illustrated by some examples of territory which Britain might have acquired by more intelligent study and action than was attempted. You said, in conclusion: "But while the Londoners are pondering over Mr. Bates's epistle, they might well ask themselves what we would have been doing while they were acquiring all this land." Very likely, but that phase of the matter in no way affected my argument, and was not, therefore, dealt with. This subject is long, but one simple inquiry will help answer your final query. Suppose Britain had continued the war of 1812-5 after the Napoleonic war (which also ended 1815) for two years or more. Would she not have held Washington, overpowered our navy, captured our seaports, destroyed our commerce, and so weakened us as to compel our surrender of large areas?

The London Saturday Review has provoked much ridicule and even rancor from our papers by its peculiar manner, which has no doubt added much mirth to the fact that its letter alluded to came from Hoboken. It has been cynical about us, it is true, but has it not been equally so about English men and matters?

Whether by the Boer war or no will not be shown here, but it is now noteworthy that the said Review has been converted to a friendly tone toward us, which fact about such a paper is a matter of great significance. No single example argues so well the strength of English good-will at the present day. Even before this it said many excellent things which its too cynical manner prevented from having due notice. Some were as follows, which I quote, in their language as nearly as the writer can remember it:

1. "But what we do condemn, and condemn most vigorously, is the slobbering cant" and "hypocritical blazoning of a double affection" "which has gathered around the rapprochement of the two peoples."

2. That "a durable understanding" (Anglo-American) "must be based upon solid advantages (material.)"

3. That their "sympathies" were "with the Americans" "between the two combatants in the Philippines," where the "frothy talk about liberty" and Filipino republics has seriously hampered us in Luzon.

Is not all of this true? Has not Anglo-Americanism been carried too far at times? Goldwin Smith wrote to the English in The Contemporary Review: "You are the commercial rivals of the American. * * * You are the political rivals of the American on this continent, and nagging between the United States and Canada still goes on." If The Saturday Review has given too much weight to such facts, have not most of us given them too little?

Goldwin Smith is right, and for his alleged nagging across our northern boundary the protectionists, with their McKinleyism, and the labor demagogues, with their alien labor laws, are mainly responsible. The enforcement of such laws along such an irregular frontier line produces conditions which provoke a danger to our relations with the British Empire too little realized, namely, Canadian jingoism. The Saturday Review published a letter from me Dec. 2, 1899, about this difficulty. This letter was meant to show that the true cause of our part of it was a fake political economy, and not want of good-will toward England, as they supposed. This the Canadians do not realize, so, mistaking its true motive, they often act in an unfriendly manner.

Here is much material for serious thought, be it from Hoboken or elsewhere.

The True Utility of Garbage.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It seems a pity that any one who read the letter from Mr. George Westinghouse in your issue of Jan. 10 should entirely miss the point therein clearly stated, and especially that such misapprehensions should be elaborated by way of response, as was done by Mr. Cary T. Hutchinson in Sunday's issue.

The opportunity offered by the present advanced state of the gas engine has led to a great betterment in the apparatus for gas production. It has even been found practicable to convert garbage into a power gas of great value, and it so happens that this same apparatus is equally adapted to the making of power gas from soft coal. It so happens also that salt water is suitable for cooling the cylinders of gas engines.

If, therefore, gas engine plants are located on the water front of the city, the only water required for their operation may be drawn from the river, thus saving to the city some two and one half gallons each hour of pure water for every horse power so developed, besides the cost of such water to the capitalist. The producers which turn soft coal to gas offer incidentally an excellent opportunity for turning all of the garbage of New York City to good account; while this smokeless consumption of coal will relieve the city of the great discharge of smoke from furnaces not provided with stokers.

The merger of these problems is of great significance at the present time. It is taking a wrong point of view to say that 500 tons of garbage daily will supply but 2½ per cent. of the power developed in the city. The point is very different. It is that the capitalist in power enterprises can, by studying the new developments, save money for his stockholders, while incidentally doing a vital service to the health and comfort of the city.

His Family on the Safe Side.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Rev. F. C. Powell, a missionary among the Loingos, Zulus, and Matabeles in South Africa, in a most interesting letter describing the arrival of the Canadian contingent at Cape Town, which has just appeared in some of the Canadian papers, speaks of a trip he recently made in pursuance of his duties, and gives the following very instructive piece of news:

"Then when I reached Swellendam, a tiny village eighteen miles from Cape Town, the birthplace of President Steyn and Secretary Reitz of the Transvaal, who should come to church with horses and chariots but all the Steyn ladies. Here we have a man who deliberately declares war with us, who first takes the precaution to send his wife and family into British territory for safe keeping."

Mr. Brown Made No Motion.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your report of yesterday's meeting of the New York Presbytery represent me as interrupting Dr. Birch in the reading of his charges against Dr. McGiffert by a motion to adjourn. Allow me to say that I made no such motion, nor any other motion, nor did I interrupt the reading of the charges in any way. Such an attempt would have been futile and foolish, most of all on the part of a colleague and friend of Dr. McGiffert. By making this correction you will greatly oblige,

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL

A New English Comedy at the Empire Theatre.

HENRY K. HADLEY'S CONCERT

"Brother Officers" Will Run Well—Yesterday's Music—Gossip of the Stage.

"Brother Officers," a new comedy in four acts by Leo C. Trevor, was presented for the first time in this city at the Empire Theatre last night, and cordially welcomed. The play is of a pleasing quality, if not exactly brilliant, and it contains some exceedingly refreshing and effective scenes. The hero, John Hinds, is a "ranker," an army officer who has risen by promotion from the ranks. Of low birth and deficient education, he nevertheless has that heart of golden worth heroes of plays for the multitude ought to have, and the chief merit of the piece lies in the manner in which the worth of Hinds, his inherent nobility, and unselfishness, are revealed.

As an exposition of devotion and self-sacrifice it touches the heart. Its dramatic fibre is not particularly strong, it is not woven together with remarkable skill, but there is that in it which receives the tribute of sympathetic tears from young and appreciative playgoers, while it also contains an abundance of wholesome humor.

What is more the performance is of uncommon merit. No play this season has had a better-balanced distribution. Every important rôle is exactly fitted to the personality, temperament, and skill of the actor to whom it is intrusted, while the minor parts have been judiciously cast, too.

Mr. Faversham secures another noteworthy triumph, personal and artistic as well, in the character of Hinds. The rôle is an exceptionally good one, and the actor gives it its full value in the performance. In the half-comic, half-pathetic scene of embarrassment of Act. I., in the sentimental scenes wherein the cruel burden love has put upon him must be lightly borne; in the capitally constructed, if conventional, episode of the baiting of the plausible villain, his touch is equally sure.

But Mr. Faversham's is not the only triumph. Mr. Standing, promoted from "heavies" to "leading juvenile," carries his exacting part with distinction and fervor; Mr. Wheelock is highly entertaining as the young nobleman who falls in love with Johnson & Klopstock's Pickles, and marries, while Miss Burton is charming as the aforesaid pickles.

Mrs. Whiffen and Mr. Crompton lend the vitalizing touch of their ripe art to slight sketches of character; Mr. Backus, as a martinet Colonel with a strain of gallantry, is, for once, not too vociferous; and three servants are happily individualized by George Osborne, Jr., G. C. Pearce, and Frank Brownlee.

Margaret Anglin, making her first appearance at the Empire Theatre, invests the titled heroine with certain desirable attributes the author, in his lack of experience, denied her. Sensibility, keen artistic perception, exquisite diction, do much for a rôle none too strong intrinsically, and not involved in the intrigue of the play in the happiest manner. The episode of the pendant, when by her graceful tact Baroness Roydon rescues Hinds from an unpleasant predicament; in the scene in which her lover confesses to her his misdoing, (from the consequences of which Hinds sacrifices himself to save him,) and in her scene of parting with Hinds, Miss Anglin, however, has very good material to work upon; her success with the audience last night was emphatic.

So was Edwin Stevens's in the telling rôle of the plausible rascal whom Hinds outwits. It is not the custom, in these chronicles of theatrical doings, to dwell thus categorically upon the achievements of the actors in any one play, because few contemporary performances are sufficiently meritorious to deserve that sort of treatment. This performance of "Brother Officers" is of quite exceptional excellence. Mr. Leo C. Trevor's fame on this side of the Atlantic will owe much to Mr. Charles Frohman's company. His play will have a long and profitable run.

In view of the wholesomeness of the comedy, its success is a matter for public congratulation. As it gives such good opportunities to good actors, its deficiencies may well be overlooked. With its "asides" and "soliloquies," its easily subdued impostor, and its lucky coincidences, it seems a bit old fashioned, but there is some very clever writing in the dialogue, which is often quite modern and "up to date" in its philosophy and humor.

A YOUNG COMPOSER'S CONCERT.

Works by Henry K. Hadley Performed at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Mr. Henry K. Hadley, professor of music at St. Paul's School, Garden City, gave a concert of his own works last night at the Waldorf-Astoria before a large and brilliant audience. The original compositions on the programme were two movements of the composer's second symphony, entitled "The Four Seasons," the whole of his first symphony, entitled "Youth and Life"; two movements from his excellent ballet suite No. 1, which has been heard here several times, and six songs sung by David Bispham. This made a programme altogether too long to permit either the audience or the reviewers to do Mr. Hadley justice. At the end of the concert those who had staid were tired, for besides the original works they had heard the prelude to "Die Meistersinger" and the variations from Moskowski's suite in F.

Mr. Hadley is a young man and he suffers mostly from the incontinence of youth. He tries to do too much, and that before he has acquired a firm grip on the materials of his art. Not many composers can begin their musical life successfully with programme symphonies. To do this one must at an early period have mastered the entire technics of composition and be so perfect in the use of form that he can say what he wishes to say without the danger of falling into prolixity or obscurity. "Mastery of form," said the wise Schumann, "leads talent to ever-increasing freedom." Mr. Hadley at present seems to be uncertain in his thematic ideas largely because he is attempting to make them means and not ends. It is a good thing for a young composer who is not a genius to write music for music's own sake and to follow the pattern of the older symphonies in which perfect clarity of form and logical development were the chief characteristics. When he is a master of the technics of composition then he may attempt with some hope of sucess the experiment of telling the story of his life in symphonies.

There is not a little that is intensely interesting in the symphonic movements heard last night, and they all showed the possession of valuable talent. But the composer showed a lack of concentration in his treatment and of centralization of ideas in his development. His instrumentation was interesting as much by its mastery of certain departments as by its immaturity in others. For when Mr. Hadley was unskilful in his instrumentation it was chiefly because he had something to express and did not know exactly how to do it. The mood schedule of the first symphony, as explained in a note on the programme, is one eminently suited to musical presentation, and in the exposition of it the composer has done some creditable work. The "Angelus" passage of the second movement is particularly well written, and is very effective, but the "Fate" theme of the same movement is poor and weak. The scoring in the two movements of the second symphony requires a good deal of revision, especially in the wood parts.

Mr. Hadley, who is a violinist, writes admirably for the strings. He does not always treat his horns with consideration, and there are some entrances which should be covered. The songs did not show the young composer at his best. They seemed to lack spontaneity of thought, and the writer showed the familiar fear of the inexperienced to write a plain tune lest he might fall into commonplace. But all cannot be Schuberts. Mr. Hadley conducted his own concert, and showed the results of some experience in this department of his profession. It is to be hoped that this talented young man may push ahead. But he needs to give himself a course of repression, to write less, and to study his own thought more. All composers must beware of a fatal facility.

MISS POTVIN'S PIANO RECITAL.

At the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday afternoon Miss Marie Potvin gave a piano recital before an audience of moderate size and still more moderate enthusiasm. Her programme was composed of the following numbers: Mozart's sonata in A major, Schumann's "Kreisleriana," a nocturne, two preludes, and a waltz of Chopin, Brassin's disarrangement of the "Waldweben," from Wagner's "Siegfried," and a concert étude by McDowell. Miss Potvin had the assistance of Miss Clara Kalisher, who sang Granier's "Aurore," Chadwick's "Allah," and Loewe's "Die Wirthin Töchterlein." A glance at this list will show that the entertainment had at least the merit of brevity. Miss Potvin's most ambitious number was the Schumann composition, given presumably because it is the fashion this Winter to play the longer sets of this composer. If one pianist plays the "Davidsbündler," of course another must play the "Carnival" and a third the "Kreisleriana" or the "Papillons."

Miss Potvin is a pianist to whom one can listen without any great strain on the intellect or the emotions. Her touch is entirely without variety, and she has no suspicion of the possibilities of the pedals. Tone color is something she has not yet acquired, and about all that it is truthful to say in praise of her playing is that she has a facile finger technic. But even the effect of this was marred yesterday by the preponderance of the left hand and the constant blurring of the passage work by the abuse of the sustaining pedal. Of the higher qualities of interpretation the performance gave no revelation. No doubt Miss Potvin is an honest student of the music which she attempts, but the poorness of her technical equipment precludes the possibility of eloquence. Miss Kalisher is an immature singer with a fair voice, some temperament, and a voice production which wears on its face the trade mark "Made in France." She suffers from coup de glotte in the usual French manner, and her attack is consequently bad. Her diction shows the French schooling at its best. It is altogether unwise that she should be before the public in the present state of the development of her vocal technic.

MISS NEWCOMB'S PIANO RECITAL.

Miss Ethel Newcomb gave a piano recital at Mendelssohn Hall last night. She is a young woman, a resident of Jersey City, and has just returned from a course of music study on the other side of the Atlantic. She had not played a dozen bars before she stood advertised as a product of the Leschititzky factory, and it is a fact that she is fresh from the hands of that unique molder of youthful talent. Her programme consisted of Rameau's familiar gavotte and variations, Beethoven's sonata, Opus 31, No. 2; a sicilienne by Bach, a gigue by Mozart, the Brahms intermezzo, Opus 118, No. 2; two intermezzi by Schumann, a nocturne and a fantasy by Chopin, Liszt's D flat étude, Rubinstein's barcarole in F minor, Foldini's impromptu No. 1, Schütt's derangement of passages from "Die Meistersinger," and a tarantelle by her teacher. It was a most unwise programme, made apparently to give her an opportunity to play everything which she had especially prepared under her master. She will learn this part of her profession in time. Wisdom does not always go hand in hand with youth.

Miss Newcomb has some solid merits, and she may hope to accomplish something. Her finger and wrist technics are excellent, and she has plenty of tone. Her touch is not yet fully developed and she has not a great deal of variety in it. Her pedaling, as far as it goes, but of the possibilities of combination of pedaling with variety of touch she has yet only an inkling. Her rhythm is good, and she plays with taste, if not with anything beyond that. Of course, her work is immature, but that is to be expected. With further study and that thoughtful self-development which is the secret of success in all arts she may in the future prove to be a pianist of note.

MUSICAL SALON'S FIRST MEETING

A Good Programme at the Hotel Majestic—Aims of the Society.

The Musical Salon, a new organization started for the purpose of giving non-professional music lovers an opportunity for hearing the new music and artists, held its first meeting in the ballroom of the Hotel Majestic last evening with a large attendance. An excellent programme chiefly of vocal music was given.

Five meetings are to be held during the Winter at which music from different operas will be given. Eventually it is hoped that the salon will become a valuable factor in the musical world, representing high standards in music and giving the benefit of its influence to talented young musicians. An object to be worked for will be a building with auditoriums and music rooms.

The temporary officers of the salon are Frank S. Hastings, Chairman; Mrs. Rollin Harper Lynde, Treasurer, and Miss Maria R. Grosz, Secretary. Among the honorary members are Mrs. Daniel Butterfield, Mrs. Arthur Dyett, Mrs. Charles B. Foote, Mrs. M. F. Grosz, Mrs. Edward M. Knox, Mrs. Joseph Knapp, Mrs. Theodore Sutro, and Mrs. Charles H. Ward.

New Plays for Richard Mansfield.

Richard Mansfield has announced that his new production for next season will be a drama entitled "Henry V." It is not considered likely that Mr. Mansfield will continue throughout the entire season with this play, as it has become known that he has accepted a play written by Herman Merivale, entitled "Don Juan." The English rights for "Don Juan" were purchased by Martin Harvey some time ago, and were shelved temporarily, but upon being informed that Mr. Mansfield had secured the American rights for the play and that he intended to produce it next season, Mr. Harvey immediately set to work preparing the production for the Prince of Wales Theatre, in London. It will be presented in London at about the same time that Mr. Mansfield opens with it in this country.

Laurence Irving's "Bonnie Dundee."

Laurence Irving, Henry Irving's son, who is now in this city, is busily engaged in completing his new romantic play, "Bonnie Dundee," in which Robert Taber will make his début as a star and manager at the Adelphi Theatre, in London. Miss Lena Ashwell has been engaged to play the leading feminine rôle. She supported Miss Olga Nethersole when the latter played in England under Charles Frohman's management. The manuscript in its complete form will be forwarded to Mr. Taber some time this week.

Souvenir Performance of Opera.

Silver violet vases will be the souvenirs of the six hundred and fiftieth performance of opera in English by the Castle Square Opera Company at the American Theatre. This performance will take place next Monday night. The company will present the first production in this city of Niccola Spinelli's three-act opera, "At the Lower Harbour," (A Basso Porto,) and Offenbach's operetta, "The Magic Melody," both operas forming a double bill.

Talent for "The Countess Chiffon."

Manager William A. Brady has engaged S. Miller Kent to play a comedy rôle in the forthcoming production of "The Countess Chiffon," which will be presented at the Fifth Avenue Theatre Feb. 5. Others engaged for the cast are Miss Grace George, who will assume the title rôle, and John Blair, who will play the part of a young artist.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

Yesterday, in its morning hours at least, had again, like Monday, the feeling and the atmosphere of Spring, and the up-town fashionable streets and the Avenue were lively and gay all through the late morning and early afternoon hours. It is interesting and instructive to recall the fact that the same mild weather which has of late blessed the land prevailed for nearly a fortnight at this time last year, and it is also ominous to recall the further fact that the mild weather was followed by a month of intense cold, a blizzard, and a very late Spring. The Winter is not yet ended.

Yesterday brought the third meeting of the sewing class for the Lying-In Hospital at the residence of Mrs. James A. Burden, 908 Fifth Avenue; the second of two "at homes" at the apartment of Mrs. Charles A. Van Rensselaer, (Miss Fitz Gerald,) 55 East Sixty-fifth Street; a concert at the Astoria, given by David Bispham and Henry A. Hadley, with an orchestra of sixty pieces, under fashionable patronage, and the third of Miss De Forest and Miss Callender's "Tuesday nights." This is a rather slim programme for a day at the height of the season, and to-day's programme is about as meagre.

The wedding of Mr. Edward McVickar and Miss Edith Lawrence Speyers will take place at the Church of the Holy Communion at 3:30 this afternoon. The Rev. Dr. Walter Battershall, rector of St. Peter's Church, Albany, will perform the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Henry W. Mottet, rector of the church. Dr. Battershall has been selected to officiate for the reason that he is the minister in charge for most of the Summer of the picturesque little Church of St. Andrew's-by-the-Sea, at Southampton, L. I., where Miss Speyers sings in the choir, and has known her from a child. Miss Speyers will have four bridesmaids—Miss Julia Walsh of Albany, Miss Mabel Jones, Miss Mary Vibbert, and her cousin, Miss Lena Schroeder. Miss Cornelia Van Rensselaer Robb, daughter of Mr. J. Hampden Robb and a cousin of the bride, will be the maid of honor. The bride will be gowned in ivory white satin, trimmed with old lace, which (that dear old story again) has been worn by other brides of the family through many generations. Her lace veil will be fastened by an old family jewel of pink topazes and pearls, which, family tradition states, descended through six generations from Lady Elgin, one of the ancestors of Miss Speyers. Her tulle veil will be fastened to her coiffure by a large diamond crescent, the gift of the bridegroom. The bridesmaids will wear gowns of that shade known from time immemorial as "ashes of roses," with tucked and trained skirts and short veils of white tulle. They will carry bouquets of pink roses. Mr. Charles C. Bull will be the best man, and the ushers will be Messrs. Alexander Harvey, Andrew Bibby, Ralph O. Ives, David Jackson, William N. Beach, James Bayard Speyers, G. Howard Davison, and C. Clive Bayley, the English Consul resident at New York. A reception at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert G. Speyers, 415 West Twenty-third Street, will follow the ceremony.

This afternoon will bring the seventh meeting of Mrs. Dallas B. Pratt's afternoon dancing class at Sherry's, and the first of two receptions at Mrs. Charles H. Coster's (Miss Pell) at 37 East Thirty-seventh Street. The Ladies' Auxiliary of St. Vincent's Hospital will hold their annual reception this evening in the Astoria ball room. The officers of this Ladies' Auxiliary are Mrs. M. B. Brown, President; Mrs. Frederic R. Coudert, Mrs. Charles Phelps, and Mrs. Robert Roosevelt, Vice Presidents; Mrs. Stephen Philbin, Treasurer; Miss Blessing, Secretary, and Mrs. William Cherry, Corresponding Secretary. Among the numerous "at homes" of the afternoon will be those of Mrs. James M. Varnum, 87 Park Avenue; of Mrs. Lewis F. Whitin and Miss Whitin, 9 West Fifty-sixth Street; of Mrs. Alexander T. Van Nest, 31 West Thirty-seventh Street; of Mrs. J. Fred Pierson, 20 West Fifty-second Street, and of Mrs. Henry Parish, Jr., 8 East Seventy-sixth Street.

The wedding of Mr. James M. Brown and Miss Rebecca Patterson Cooper, whose engagement was recently announced, will be celebrated very quietly at the residence of the bride's parents, at Shrewsbury, N. J., on Feb. 5. The wedding of Dr. Thomas Hamilton Burch and Miss Elizabeth Stockwell, only daughter of the late Emerson Stockwell of Worcester, Mass., will be celebrated in Grace Church chantry on Jan. 31.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Drexel will sail for Europe during the first week in March, and will remain abroad until late in July, when they will return for the Newport season. They will go directly to the Riviera, and in May will visit the Paris Exposition. The Sultana will not be sent over, and it is said in Philadelphia that Mr. Drexel has announced his intention of not putting her in commission at all this year.

New York society was very much interested in the cable news yesterday of the wedding of Miss Lily Whitehouse of Newport, R. I., and Capt. the Hon. C. J. Coventry, the second son of the Earl of Coventry and one of Dr. Jameson's raiders, at St. Peter's Church, in Eaton Square, London. The elder brother of Capt. Coventry is the Viscount Deerhurst, who married Miss Victoria Bonynge of San Francisco. There were many handsome presents from Americans abroad and titled English people. It is said that the bridegroom will go to South Africa after the honeymoon. Miss Whitehouse was quite a belle at Newport some seasons ago, but of recent years she has remained abroad.

The third in their series of informal musicales was given by Miss De Forest and Miss Callender at their apartment, in the Tiffany Building, last evening. There was no printed programme, but Mr. Victor Harris, who had charge of the entertainment, arranged a delightful musical menu, which was rendered by Signor Campanari of the Metropolitan company, Mrs. Morris Black, contralto, and Mme. Camilla Urso, the violiniste. Mr. Harris was the accompanist. As at the first two musicales, there were about 100 guests present, all of whom had been invited verbally, and the usual light collation was served.

Aiken seems to be waking up. Major and Mrs. Mallery have given the first dinner of the season, at which several of the Eustis family were present; Mrs. Duncan Elliot, who has taken the Prickly Pear cottage, is expected daily, and the Clarence Dinsmores have arrived. All this promises a very lively season, and to-day the first meet of the hounds is announced to take place. At San Augustine, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Duryea have arrived and the hotels are opened. At Tampa the hotel also has thrown open its doors. At Aiken, which he has selected as a place of Winter residence, Clarence Dolan is building a splendid residence, which will vie with the colossal country houses of the American aristocracy in other parts of the country. The house, it is said, will have 100 rooms and will be suitable for entertaining on a scale commensurate with the position Mrs. Dolan has taken at the head of the ultra-fashionable set there. It is expected that the house will be ready for occupancy next season.

The announcement made by Dr. Porter, State Health Officer of Florida, from Miami, that "cases of yellow fever have ceased to occur at Miami for the past two weeks," which probably means that the quarantine has been raised there, is both significant and important in its bearing upon the Florida season. From the absence of any news from Florida, and especially from Key West and Miami, where yellow fever broke out last Autumn, during the past month or so, the reading public had probably forgotten that yellow fever was existent there. Some people may argue that this absence of news regarding a yellow fever epidemic in lower Florida was due to the fact that yellow fever no longer created a panicky feeling in the public mind, and also that other and larger topics had subordinated news of the epidemic. The true reason, however, for the suppression of news regarding the yellow fever is probably that any notice of it would have militated against the success of the opening Winter season of tourists' travel to the "land of flowers." Shrewd are the hotel keepers and railroad managers of Florida, and there is no harm, now that Dr. Porter announces the epidemic over, in Miami at least, in congratulating these same hotel keepers and railroad managers on having so successfully kept the public in ignorance of Yellow Jack's late lingering, while intending travelers to Florida can now safely journey there.

Mr. William K. Vanderbilt has reached the Azores, according to a late cablegram, and this refutes the story that he was going to make a trip through the West Indies. The Valiant is en route to Nice, and will be in that harbor within a week. According to another sensational tale, Mr. and Mrs. Willie K. Vanderbilt, Jr., have been traveling "incog" through France, and have met, in consequence, with many surprising adventures. The Vanderbilt name is well known in Paris, but in the southern part of France, except in the larger places, it is absolutely unknown. In fact, an Astor, a Vanderbilt, or a Belmont might with safety travel and appear in many places abroad without undue publicity. It would be different in the case of a Rothschild.

The Baroness Emily Halkett, who is a near relative of the Baron Halkett, who married the daughter of Mr. Anson Phelps Stokes of this city, has gone to South Africa as a nurse on the Princess of Wales's hospital ship. She has become a Roman Catholic, and resided for some time in a convent of Benedictines near Rome, with the purpose of joining the order. She is very young, and is described as being very handsome, with a distinction of manner and bearing which is supposed to be gained exclusively in the atmosphere surrounding royalty. Her father was Aide de Camp and Equerry to the second King of Hanover, and the Baroness Emily and her sister Nora were in the service of Queen Marie. The Halkett family is descended from Sir Hugh Halkett, who distinguished himself at Waterloo.

The following from Calcutta is of date Dec. 7: The Viceroy had a big camp at Agra, where he has been receiving native Princes and examining the Taj and other monuments to prevent them from falling into further decay. Lady Curzon and the Misses Leiter are with him. The party is expected at Government House within a week.

The general idea in London, according to Vanity Fair, is that Lady Randolph Churchill will not remain long at the Cape. She is expected back in London in February. Mr. Dudley Leigh, who married Miss "Baby" Beckwith of this city, is one of the volunteers for the Cape, and he leaves with the Duke of Marlborough on Saturday. There is not much news in London except that pertaining to the war, and the mail only brings stories of a dismal Christmas, with nearly all the house parties abandoned; of Mrs. Arthur Paget and her tableaux, and of the sailing of the hospital ship Maine, all of which has been sent over by cable.

RIVAL ANTI-TRUST MEETINGS.

Local League Not to Take Part in the Chicago Conference.

The Commercial Travelers and Hotel Men's Anti-Trust League, which has an office in the St. James Building, purposes holding an anti-trust convention, either in this city or in Washington, within the next few weeks. This meeting is the result of a falling out between the league and the persons who are managing the anti-trust conference to be held in Chicago on Feb. 12. Joseph J. Willett, who made the "long talk" at the Tammany Fourth of July celebration last year, and then started the boom of Augustus Van Wyck for President, is at the bottom of the trouble.

According to the officers of the league, ex-Gov. John P. Altgeld, ex-Congressman Charles A. Towne, and the other men who are directing the Chicago conference, wrote to the officers of the league asking them to take part in the conference. The invitation was accepted, and the local organization notified the Chicago people that Mr. Willett, who is Chairman of its committee on legislation, would deliver a speech. A reply came from the Chicago committee informing the local men that it had not been intended that Mr. Willett should speak. Thereupon the Commercial Travelers and Hotelmen's Anti-Trust League informed the Chicago men that unless Mr. Willett were permitted to speak the league would be unrepresented at the conference. After some further correspondence the Chicago men agreed to let Mr. Willett speak, providing his address were first submitted to ex-Gov. Altgeld and his colleagues for their approval. Mr. Willett declined to permit his speech to be censored by men whose views on politics do not accord with his own, and the acceptance of the original invitation was consequently rescinded.

It was said yesterday at the office of the league that the arrangements for the proposed conference, to be held in this city or Washington, had not yet reached a definite stage, but that it was the intention to have a number of speakers of prominence present.

Mrs. William H. Earle.

Mrs. William H. Earle, wife of the proprietor of the Park Avenue Hotel, died in that house Monday morning from a complication of diseases. She had been ill for two years. During that time she had for the most part been in a comatose condition, reviving only at intervals. During the last few months, however, the periods of consciousness became more frequent, and while there was at no time any hope of her ultimate recovery, it was thought that the end might be longer postponed. Mrs. Earle was the mother of two sons, Arthur G. and Howard De F. Earle, who were associated with their father in business prior to their death several years ago.

Imp Expected to Get the Top Weight—Number of Entries for Races in 1901-2.

T. M. Jackson, who has been Acting Secretary of the Brighton Beach Racing Association since the death of Mr. Croft, has issued the list of candidates for the big stakes which will be features of the meeting at Brighton Beach next Summer. The Brighton Handicap and the Brighton Cup are the principal races, both being rich events, ranking in importance with the Suburban and Brooklyn Handicaps. The Brighton Handicap has drawn almost the same class of horses that has been nominated for the Brooklyn and Suburban, but Banastar, who will probably get the top weight in the latter events, is not among the candidates. Imp and Ethelbert are candidates, and the assignment of weights will probably result in Imp's being placed at the top of the list.

The Brighton Cup is one of the most popular races of the season, for it takes the candidates over a long route at the old cup distance of two and a quarter miles. TUXEDO PARK TENNIS.

Latham, Professional, Defeats Stockton, the Boston Amateur.

Special to The New York Times.

TUXEDO PARK, N. Y., Jan. 16.—A large and fashionable crowd witnessed the second day's playing in the formal opening of the Tuxedo Racquet Tennis Club to-day, and saw the professional champion of the world, Peter Latham of England, defeat Lawrence M. Stockton, amateur champion of America, from Boston, in three straight sets. The professional gave Stockton half thirty handicap. The first set Latham won by 6 to 1. In the second set Stockton began to get into his stride and some fine rallies resulted. But Latham seldom let a ball pass him and volleyed and half volleyed in magnificent style. The set went to him by a score of 6 to 2.

The third set Stockton might have won but luck was against him. All 2 all and 3 all was called and even after Latham had reached 5 to 3 Stockton got the next game, but lost the set by 6 to 4.

Better tennis has seldom been seen in America. The returns seemed at times almost beyond belief, and Latham's method of taking Stockton's favorite service, the chief strength of his game, was a great sight to behold.

In the morning Pettitt and Miles played the best two in three, Miles losing. J. MacDonough played Ted Johnson, the instructor of the club, who gave him a handicap, MacDonough winning by a score of 3 sets to 1. MacDonough plays a fast game, showing good service and volleying.

On Wednesday Lawrence Stockton will play T. Suffern Tailer in the morning and Thomas Pettitt and E. H. Miles will play in the afternoon

AUGUST BELMONT'S NEW YACHT.

The Mineola Successfully Launched at Bristol, R. I.

BRISTOL, R. I., Jan. 16.—The new racer built at the Herreshoff works for August Belmont, the New York banker, was launched to-day. Mr. Belmont and party, including Miss Natalie Schenck, Mrs. Tiffany, Miss Tiffany, Mr. Belmont's eight-year-old son, and A. Van Rensselaer Kennedy, arrived here in Mr. Belmont's private car this morning. After breakfast the party were driven to the shipyard, and the launching was successfully accomplished soon after their arrival.

Miss Schenck acted as sponsor, naming the yacht Mineola, after the forty-six-footer which was built in Boston in 1886 for Mr. Belmont. The new boat is 105 feet over all, 70 feet on the water line, 20 feet beam, and 15 feet draught. There are 40 tons of lead in the keel. The frames are the same as those of the cup racer Columbia. The spars are being made in Boston.

The Mineola is the pioneer in the class which promises to create the greatest interest in yachting circles in 1900. The contract for her was let to the Herreshoffs in August last, and almost immediately was followed by orders for others from E. D. Morgan, Harry Payne Whitney, and W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., that of Mr. Morgan being now the next furthest advanced. The new yacht, while of course of lower power than the great international cup defenders, is of the Herreshoffs' best as to model, construction, and appointments.

On the tide succeeding that on which the Mineola was launched an elaborate steam launch, eighty feet in length and of high pressure, also built for Mr. Belmont, was sent from the ways. She will be used principally as a tender for the Mineola, accompanying her on the cruise and carrying spare sails, spars, &c. Master Morgan Belmont christened her, naming her the Scout. Mr. Belmont would not discuss the plans for the Mineola's season, and said the launching had been strictly informal.

SAYS LABOR LAW IS INVALID.

L. Laflin Kellogg Attacks Its Provision Regarding Wages of Men on Public Works.

L. Laflin Kellogg attacked the constitutionality of the labor law before Justices Beekman, O'Gorman, and Giegerich yesterday in the Appellate Term of the Supreme Court. The case was an appeal from a judgment of $187 rendered by Justice Roesch in the Fourth Municipal Court against Augustus Smith, a contracting painter, in favor of Joseph P. Hughes. If the constitutionality of the law is upheld, contractors who are doing work on the new East River Bridge, the Jerome Park Reservoir, and other public works probably will be sued for hundreds of thousands of dollars through the trades unions.

Smith had a contract from the city to paint city sheds. Justice Roesch said the evidence before him showed that he sublet the work to a corporation consisting of himself, his brother, and another relative. The corporation employed Hughes to do the work for 22½ cents an hour, instead of 35 cents, the union rate of wages. The contract to do this work was in writing, duly signed and witnessed, and it stipulated that Hughes considered "22½ cents per hour equal to the prevailing rate of wages for men of my ability."

When the work was completed Hughes signed a receipt in full, but afterward undertook to recover $170.50, the difference between the pay that he received and the union rate of wages, on the ground that the union rate was the prevailing rate of wages for a legal day's work. The case was decided in October last. Justice Roesch said last evening that in rendering the decision he left the constitutionality of the statute to be tested in the higher courts. Justice Roesch continued:

"Many men prominent in labor unions were called to testify as to the prevailing rate of wages in the painters' trade, and I was satisfied that in this case the contractor had taken advantage of the plaintiff's necessities and had paid him less than the prevailing rate. As to the paper which plaintiff had signed, I looked upon it as having been substantially signed under duress."

Mr. Kellogg, in his brief on the appeal from Justice Roesch's decision, contends that the labor law, in so far as it provides that the wages for public work shall not be less than the prevailing rate for a legal day's work in the same trade or calling in the locality where the work is performed, and that every contract for the construction of a public work shall contain a provision that the same shall be void and of no effect unless such rate is paid by the contractor to his employes, is vicious legislation, and unconstitutional and void. He further contends that the provisions of that statute are unconstitutional, inasmuch as they conflict with the United States Constitution, which provides that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. The brief declares that the effect of such a statute would be the compulsion of the payment of a uniform rate to every employe in the same trade or calling, irrespective of his ability or industry, thus stifling all competition. If the Legislature has the power to regulate the wages for labor done on public work, Mr. Kellogg says, it has the power to regulate the wages of labor in every branch of trade. If its right to regulate wages is upheld, it may further restrict the freedom of contract between employer and employe, and subject both to its tutelage in other matters which heretofore have been considered as wholly outside of legislative authority.

The Court reserved decision on the appeal.

SAY SHEPARD WAS DRUNK.

Witnesses Testify Against the Soldiers' Home Commandant.

Special to The New York Times.

BATH, N. Y., Jan. 16.—The committee of the State Board of Charities to-day resumed the investigation of the charges made against Col. Charles O. Shepard, Commandant of the Soldiers' Home, by six of the nine Trustees.

Miss Eva A. Aulls, formerly confidential clerk and stenographer of Col. Shepard, was the first witness called. She was on the stand nearly two hours. She testified that she had never seen Col. Shepard in an intoxicated condition during her employment at the home, and that, so far as her observations went, he was always kind and humane in his treatment of the inmates. Miss Aulls resigned her position at the home last December.

The next witness was the home architect, Thomas Fogarty. He testified that the local Trustees had never attempted to influence him in the purchase of lumber or building material for the home. He said he did not remember ever having seen Col. Shepard under the influence of liquor.

At the afternoon session Trustee H. S. Finch of Tioga County was examined. His testimony on the whole was damaging to Col. Shepard. The witness said that he had visited the home quite frequently during Col. Shepard's incumbency and that he had seen much of him during that time. Mr. Finch said that in his opinion Col. Shepard was unfit to occupy his present position by reason of his intemperate habits and his erratic temperament.

The sensation of the day was the arrival at headquarters of Sheriff James Faucett of Steuben County, who was the next witness before the committee. He testified that he was present in February, 1898, when the committee of the State Legislature was at the home; that Col. Shepard ordered wine brought to the chapel, and that he served it to those present.

The next witness was John J. McGuire of the home. He said that Col Shepard had often been intoxicated while on duty. McGuire stated that Col. Shepard had been drunk at least 100 times since he assumed command at the home.

The present session will probably last the remainder of the week. Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, President of the Board of Trustees, arrived at the home last night and will remain during the session.

MURDER AND SUICIDE IN A BANK

Cashier of Georgia Institution Shoots a Teller and Himself.

COLUMBUS, Ga., Jan. 16.—Capt. J. W. Murphy, cashier of the Third National Bank, instantly killed Teller P. T. Shutze this morning, and then committed suicide. The murder and suicide occurred while the bank was filled with customers and the full corps of clerks.

Capt. Murphy, who did the shooting, was formerly Assistant State Treasurer and a well-known politician. He has been one of the most prominent business men of the city for a number of years, but in recent months he had been in ill-health, and has suffered two strokes of paralysis. It is believed that he was temporarily insane when the shooting was done, as he and Shutze had long been the closest of friends.

Evidence before the Coroner's jury shows that Murphy, presumably insane, placed the pistol close to the temple of Mr. Shutze and fired. He then placed the pistol in his own mouth and fired twice, both balls penetrating his brain. Both men leave families.

THE EAST SIDE'S MORALS

University Settlement Places Responsibility on Tammany.

Ex-Speaker Reed Makes an Address at the Annual Meeting—Work of the Society.

The charge that under the present municipal administration the lower east side has relapsed into a deplorable condition of material and moral uncleanliness was made at the annual meeting of the University Settlement Society, and of the Woman's Auxiliary, held at the settlement house, Eldridge and Rivington Streets, yesterday afternoon, at which Seth Low, President of the society, presided, and ex-Speaker Thomas B. Reed was present and delivered an address. The charge was made by James B. Reynolds, head worker of the society, who, in telling about the work done during the year, said:

"In only one thing have we had cause for disappointment and depression, and that is in the material and moral condition of our district. Those who remember how admirably the work of keeping the streets clean was performed by Col. Waring [Applause] must know how dirty the streets about here are now, and how unclean morally the district has become again.

"The present attitude of the police force toward the latter evil will perhaps best be understood from a remark made to one of our workers by a policeman stationed in a neighborhood where vice is openly practiced, under the very nose of the police. The worker asked him what he was doing there, and he replied: 'I'm minding my own business. That's what I was sent here to do.'

"A public school teacher told me that the moral training of the pupils, owing to the influences of their surroundings, was a task of ever-increasing difficulty. If the public authorities will not do what is needed in this quarter, we shall ourselves have to do the best we can toward bringing about a better condition of things."

Of the good done in the new building, Mr. Reynolds said the roof garden, where their own orchestra supplied music once a week, had been an inestimable boon, being the only place where the people of the district could find a certain provision for fresh air during the hot months. Through the generosity of Jacob H. Schiff, who had presented twenty-five bicycles to the settlement, ten for girls and fifteen for boys, a bicycle club had been formed. To Mrs. Nicholas Fish they were indebted for the concerts being given monthly throughout the Winter. A bathing establishment with twelve baths was also being fitted up in the basement, but $500 would be required before it could be opened and operated.

The report of the Woman's Auxiliary was read by Mrs. Nicholas M. Butler, the Secretary, who made an appeal for funds for the kindergarten section. This boasted sixty children, she said, all that could be taken at present, but no fewer than 125 were on the waiting list. During the year, Mrs. Butler said, the Woman's Auxiliary had raised $5,000.

Mrs. Edward R. Hewitt, Vice President of the Woman's Auxiliary, also spoke of the work accomplished and being done, and that it is hoped to accomplish it, and lauded the school of music, in which the piano, violin, and singing are taught. The kind of music for which it inculcated a predilection was an antidote to the music of the streets and the music of the Bowery halls, which was debasing the taste of their clientele to the lowest possible level.

President Low, in a graceful speech, introduced ex-Speaker Reed, who took for his theme the obligation that the swift in the race of life are under to stop now and then and extend a helping hand to their straggling brethren. The Almighty, said he, had seen fit to bind human beings together more closely than is sometimes realized. The tendency was to leave others behind, but there was something in the nature of man that forced him to stop and help the weaker brother, or else suffer the pains and penalties of not doing so. Selfishness, the great master of the human race, might well be the impelling factor, for aside from the brotherly love which ought to animate people, it was to the interest of each and every one that their fellows should be lifted to the height of their progress. Nowhere was this lifting process more needed than on the densely crowded lower east side.

"Men come to the cities," he continued. "Why? None can tell. Poets have pointed out that the delights of the city pale in comparison with those of the country. All literature is full of the squalor of the town. Yet men flock to the city when deserted farms and broad, fruitful acres are waiting to be occupied. The underlying reason, it seems to me, is that we are fond of our kind, of each other's society.

"It also seems to me that there is a second underlying reason, and, though it may sound like a strong assertion, I venture to say that nine-tenths of the culture and knowledge we possess come of contact with our fellow-beings. We exchange ideas as we exchange merchandise, but in this interchange of sentiment, thought, and feeling we lose nothing that we impart, and we gain by everything that is imparted to us. Knowledge must be buttressed up by numbers. It is a very lonesome life men lead who become aware of truths before their time. Men realize that for their own sakes they must help their fellows. Whenever man ceases to help his fellow-man the race will be no more."

The following were elected or re-elected members of the Council: Richard Watson Gilder, Y. Everit Macy, Henry D. Sedgwick, Jr., William M. Sloane, and Henry Taft.

BATTLE WITH ARMED ROBBERS.

One Man Seriously Wounded by the Marauders at Farnumsville, Conn.

WORCESTER, Mass., Jan. 16.—Four burglars made an attempt to rob the Post Office at Farnumsville, ten miles from this city, this morning. Their work on one of the safes in the building awakened the families which lived in a tenement over the store. R. E. Kies, Superintendent of the Farnumsville Cotton Mills, and Charles F. Kempton, both armed, went down the stairs and stood at the front door of the store.

The burglars heard the two men coming down the stairs and made a rush through one of the front windows, when a fight with revolvers began. Kies and Kempton kept up a lively fire, and each one of the four burglars was armed and took a hand in the battle as soon as he reached the outside.

All the men were wildly excited, and, although they were firing at short range, only two bullets took effect. Both of these hit Kempton, one in the jaw and the other in the ribs. His condition is serious, but it is thought that he has chances of recovery.

All four robbers escaped, and, so far as is known, none of them was hit by bullets. As soon as the shooting was over the town was aroused, a crowd collected, and an improvised posse started in hot pursuit in teams and on foot. The four men were traced through Northbridge and as far as Upton, where all traces of them were lost. They had failed to open the safe.

GETS VERDICT FOR $15,000.

Buffalo Woman Recovers Damages for Injuries.

BUFFALO, Jan. 16.—Harriet F. Parsons, wife of R. Grover Parsons, Secretary of the Board of Public Works, was granted a verdict of $15,000 this morning in her suit to recover $20,000 for personal injuries from the Terminal Railroad of Buffalo, the town of Hamburg, and Smith & Lally, a Cleveland contracting firm.

Mrs. Parsons was one of a party returning in a tally-ho from the Hamburg Fair in September, 1897. The vehicle was overturned by a pile of dirt in the middle of the road. Mrs. Peter C. Deming, one of the party recovered a verdict of $8,000 in a damage suit last year.

SETTLERS GO TO CANADA.

Nearly 14,000 with $2,000,000 Went from This Country Last Year.

TORONTO, Ontario, Jan. 16.—The Superintendent of Immigration has received reports from most of his agents in the United States and estimates that nearly 14,000 settlers from the Republic have become residents of Canada during the past year. A conservative estimate places the wealth of these persons at $2,000,000.

The prospects for increasing the number of settlers from the United States during the season of 1900 are very encouraging. Kansas and Arkansas supplied the greater part of those who came.

BRITAIN AND THE BOERS

MR. SHEARMAN ON THE WAR.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The letters of all the Boer advocates display almost total ignorance of facts. They all assume that the ground of quarrel between the British and the Boers is over the question whether Britons and Americans should have the right of naturalization in the Transvaal without renouncing their allegiance to Great Britain or America. This is simply not true.

The whole foundation for the story is that the Orange Free State having, of its own accord, and without the slightest pressure, granted this privilege, the British Government requested the Transvaal to do the same, and that some argument was necessary to persuade Paul Krüger to yield upon this point. But he did yield, long before the slightest threat of force was made; and there has never been any issue upon this point since he yielded; because it was the unanimous wish of all the people of Dutch origin in South Africa outside of the Transvaal, and of many of them inside the Transvaal, that this point should be conceded. The war has not, and never has had, anything to do with this question.

These correspondents next assume that the war has been waged solely over the question whether foreigners should be naturalized, either in five years or in seven years. This, also, is not true. In substance, it is not even true that the war has arisen over the question of naturalization at all. The real cause of the difficulty was the gross injustice, insolence, corruption, and oppression with which the Boer Government treated all foreigners.

The British representatives came to the conclusion that, instead of demanding redress in detail for all the scores of wrongs committed by the Boer Government, and the prevention of many similar acts in the future, it would be better to accept a compromise, by which the Outlanders, constituting two-thirds of all the residents in the Transvaal, should be allowed to elect one-fourth of its Legislature.

Under tremendous pressure from his Dutch neighbors Paul Krüger sullenly conceded something of this kind in form, but persisted to the last in reserving to himself an absolute right to interpose a veto upon all naturalizations, and also to so fix up the representation that the Outlanders should have no chance to elect so much as one-eighth of the Legislature and no certainty of electing any.

When asked to enter into a conference for the purpose of settling the details of his pretended reforms, he first flatly refused; and then, under great pressure from his fellow-Dutchmen, he offered to agree to a conference, provided Great Britain would stipulate never to ask anything more of him as long as the world stood. This was obviously absurd. Neither Great Britain nor the United States of America would ever make such a stipulation with any power on the face of the globe; nor ought they to do so.

Some of your correspondents undertake to defend the action of the Boer Government toward the sixty Outlanders, including six Americans, who were convicted in 1896 of having planned an insurrection, although they had all tried to stop the Jameson raid. There is hardly a student of criminal law who does not know that their statement of law is entirely incorrect.

Take, first, your Irish correspondents, who fiercely declare that if the Outlanders had been convicted of the same offense in Great Britain, they would have been hanged or blown from the mouths of guns. The simple answer to this is that the same offense has been repeatedly committed in Great Britain and Ireland during the last fifty years; that many persons have been convicted, and that not in a single instance was even one of them sentenced to death. The last death sentences, even for overt acts of treason, were rendered in 1848. In those cases the persons convicted had not merely secreted arms with a view of insurrection, but had actually commenced open war and killed some British soldiers.

Your Irish correspondents seem to think that the Boers are fully justified in doing anything to Englishmen which England ever did to Irishmen, a century or so ago. I do not. I think that the treatment of Ireland by the English Government, in the last century, was very wicked. A vast majority, even of Englishmen, think so to-day, and are anxious to put Ireland upon a footing of perfect equality with England. But even if this were not so, that is no good reason for refusing to sympathize with the British, when they are struggling to obtain justice in South Africa, especially when they ask this justice, not for themselves alone, but for Americans and all other nations.

Russian government at home is abominable, and still I sympathized heartily with Russia in her efforts to compel the still more brutal Government of Turkey to do justice in 1877 and 1878. Even if the British were a bad people, which they are not, it would be perfectly absurd to refuse to sympathize with them, when they are seeking to secure justice for all other nations in some other part of the world. This whole line of argument is similar to that with which every effort at reform is met, "Why do you not first reform something else?"

Appealing, however, not to your Boer correspondents, but to intelligent Americans generally, with reference to the points which, from this correspondence, it seems probable are most considered by Americans, let us call attention to a few plain facts.

1. The present war was actually begun by the Boers. They are now invading British territory. Why should we sympathize with the invaders?

2. It is said, in answer to this, that the British intended to invade the Transvaal, and would have been the first to do so if the Boers had not been the first to fight. This has not been proved, and it could easily be proved that the British would not have invaded the Transvaal if the Boers had not begun the war. The peace party in England was so strong that, even if it were a minority, it would have been quite strong enough to compel a peaceful settlement if Mr. Krüger had been at all disposed for peace.

3. The real question is, therefore, whether there was sufficient justification for massing a large number of troops upon British soil in South Africa. The present state of affairs has proved that this policy was justified. The tremendous preparations made by the Boers for war, years in advance of any English preparation, show that they were very dangerous neighbors, against whom it was necessary that the British should be prepared to defend themselves.

4. Nobody has attempted to deny the corruption, rapacity, and oppression of the Boer Government. All that has been said in reply is that similar things could have been said as truly of Great Britain 100 years ago, and can as truly be said of some parts of our own country to-day.

5. The government in New York City, it is said, is just as corrupt and rapacious as that of the Transvaal. Probably this is true. I only wish that there were a large majority of voters in this city, as there was in the Transvaal, who desired to put an end to this state of things; and if the minority then refused to the majority any right to vote, I should rejoice to see a revolution started in our midst. And if such a majority happened to have been born in New England, and were on that account denied the right to vote, I should heartily sympathize with New England if she would assist our revolution.

6. It is said that the courage and skill with which the Boers fight are a proof of their superiority. If so, then the red Indians are our superiors and stand in the forefront of the human race; for the Boers are not half as persistent or skillful fighters as the Apaches or the Modocs were, nor half as brave as the negro savages of the Soudan.

7. It is claimed that the Boers have an absolute right to possess the Transvaal, because they entered there first, and have scattered themselves over a territory of which they cannot occupy or improve a thousandth part. If this is true, then we have grievously sinned against all the red Indians, who had scattered themselves over this continent, before our ancestors came here. And any ten men choosing to go out into a new territory covering a million square miles have an absolute right to forbid the entrance of any other men upon that territory. I recognize no such right. I deny the right of the Boers, or of any other 60,000 people, white, black, or red, to map out even 100,000 square miles and to forbid all the rest of the human race to enter the country, except on condition of becoming their serfs.

8. It is said that the Boers must be fighting for their freedom, or their right to self-government, because, although there is not the slightest pretense that anybody wants to deprive them of either of these, they are, nevertheless, fighting so valiantly. But all history shows that men will fight more desperately for the privilege of enslaving others than they will even for their own liberty. There is nothing which the average man loves so much as the power to tyrannize over somebody below him. His own liberty is a small matter compared with this. The history of our own civil war is ample proof of this fact. But it has been proved over and over again in all history. The Boers are not fighting for liberty or independence. Of those rights they are secure, in any event, and they know it. They are fighting for the right of exclusive domination. They are fighting, just as the poor whites of the South did from 1861 to 1865, to prevent what they regard as an inferior race from being put upon a footing of equality with themselves.

9. It is asked why, if the British Government is beneficent, the Dutch farmers of Cape Colony are inclined to rebel against it, and to join the forces of the Transvaal. The blindness and madness of race sympathy and race hatred are quite enough to account for this, just as they accounted for the fury with which Austrians fought to enslave Italians, even though in doing so they fought to enslave themselves. Their own liberty never counted for anything with them, as compared with the liberty of kicking and cuffing an Italian. Why do Turks fight to enslave Armenians? Turkish soldiers are most brutally treated, receive no pay, receive no attention when they are wounded, but are left to rot. Nevertheless, they will fight to enslave Christians, just as long as other Christians will allow them to do so.

10. The blindness of this race hatred is manifested in the present attitude of Germans and other Europeans in this country. Not one of them has ever suffered the slightest injury from the British. Millions of them have fled to this country, to escape from the oppressions of their own Governments. Yet nearly all of them would heartily sympathize with a European invasion of Great Britain, undertaken with the express purpose of destroying its freedom and bringing it under the military dominion of those Governments, which now compel all their subjects to submit for several years in their lives to the cuffs, oaths, contempt, and brutality of military officers. Read "Trooper 3,809."

11. A further striking illustration is furnished in the race hatred which leads so many Irish Roman Catholics to sympathize clamorously with a bigoted Protestant tribe like the Boers who will not allow a single Roman Catholic to hold the smallest office, and who would, if they could, banish every Roman Catholic from their country. Great Britain, on the other hand, gives to all Roman Catholics absolutely equal rights, allowing them to hold nearly every office in Ireland and a large number of offices in England, while in South Africa most of the British Prime Ministers have been Irish Roman Catholics, and in Australia Irish Roman Catholics have held many of the highest offices.

I observe with great satisfaction the Boer resolutions offered, and sometimes passed, in certain Boards of Aldermen. We all know these Aldermen. It is quite natural and proper that they should sympathize with corruption, extortion, and oppression wherever they are found. These Aldermen are, moreover, eminently pious. They are quite regular in their attendance at church, just as Oom Paul is in his attendance at preaching. THOMAS G. SHEARMAN.

BRITISH WAR MOTIVES.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The cry "The Church is in danger" sufficed for generations to restrain English statesmen from doing a certain small measure of justice to a dependent neighbor people. To-day the denial of a like measure of justice to a few individuals, not a nation, is denounced by an English statesman as conclusive proof of the intolerant bigotry of Dutch Afrikanders; but only the tenderly sensitive ear of John Bull has heard the complaint of the victims of this intolerance—indeed, the victims seem to be very warm friends of those intolerant Afrikanders; there is a legion of them in the burghers' army. Instead of "The Church is in danger," the cry to-day is "Civilization is in danger," and a crusade is set on foot against the enemies of civilization in South Africa. In that cry THE NEW YORK TIMES joins with a will, seeing in the peril to civilization from Afrikander success the all-sufficient justification of this infamous war.

Before the war commenced the English gave out that the denial by the Afrikander farmers of citizen rights to the floaters at Johannesburg and the Rand was the specific wrong which they were called on to right. But the pretense was too thin, and now their cause is the larger and holier one of civilization. The war is England's crusade of civilization, and it is piously believed that all the civilized world—which is to say, the "Anglo-Saxon" civilized world—has coequal interest with England in the triumphant issue of the Joseph Chamberlain-Jameson-Rhodes little war, which has grown and is growing. Such an outpouring of the spirit of brotherly love was never seen on this earth since the day of Pentecost as began after the eyes of our kin beyond the sea had been opened by the Venezuelan incident. Since then, even for The London Saturday Review, all Anglics, all English-speaking peoples are brothers. We, while this war lasts at least, know no distinction of American and Briton, colonial and home-staying Englishman, Tommy Atkins (R. I. P.) and boy in blue; for we are all Crusaders of civilization as these others of old were Crusaders of religion.

Crusaders of civilization, not of "gold mining and diamond mining," are we. Mr. Balfour in to-day's news assures us that England is animated by "no petty desire to add wealthy regions to an already gigantic empire." Why? Because "no mere acquisition of territory could compensate for a war costing so much blood and treasure." Though the question may be rude—like Gen. Cronje's treatment of Gen. Lord Methuen—I should like to ask Mr. Balfour whether, before this war opened, he had any thought that it would be such costly an enterprise; and whether the conquest of the Afrikander territory by a picnicking excursion to Pretoria would not have been a pretty good bargain? Plainly he thought the gun wasn't loaded. But now both he and his uncle's Government see that even were the war to end next week by the irretrievable defeat of the farmers, the loss to England and to English capitalists to say nothing of the loss in men and nothing of the breaking up of the business of the guinea pigs of the London Stock Exchange—must be well-nigh $500,000,000. What the ultimate loss in money, lives, and prestige will be, who will calculate? Mr. Balfour is a suspected witness as to the end proposed to itself by England in bringing on this war. A more impartial witness is Mr. Lecky. Lecky sees in gold hunger, that ancient auri sacra fames, the prime cause. This it is that made it a main object of the gang of conspirators in and out of the Cabinet to overthrow their (the Burghers') Government. The trail of finance runs through the whole story. I much fear England is a Jesuit in disguise; or shall I say, rather, a Jesuit all too frank, (I speak as a fool, as one fooled by the traducers of an honorable order of Christian men,) in sanctifying the means she uses by appealing to the holiness of the end—civilization. By the way, it is funny to find a scholar like Balfour talking of wars beginning triumphantly. Before Tommy Atkins and Gen. Buller, triumphs came after war or battle. "Let not him that girdeth him for battle boast as he that ungirdeth"—very good advice to Jingo.

But a prelate bearing the amplitudinous title, Archbishop of the West Indies, specifies another holy end aimed at by England in this unholy war; for his Grace, too, is a Jesuit without disguise, and lies for the honor and glory of England. This representative of English Christianity, as Labouchere tell us in our TIMES of to-day, directs his parsons, missioners, and cathecists to teach the negro faithful and catechumens that "our troops are fighting for justice to the black people." Here we have an Anglican article of faith strictly for Sambo's consumption. In the board room of the Goldfields Company in London the mission of Tommy Atkins (R. I. P.) is credited with a slightly different purpose—to give gold-field exploiters a free hand to work the "nigger" double time at half present wages. Oh! England is so touchy and tender-conscienced about the rights of black men and Johannesburg floaters; but one asks with Juvenal, giving a slight twist to his familiar verse: "Anglos quis tulerit laeso, de jure querentes?"

In fine, if civilization must go down in the event of the South African Republic and the Orange Free State, nay, even the whole of Natal and Cape Colony, becoming an Afrikander State autonomous and independent, then civilization must be a pretty sickly plant. Si vis pacem, para bellum. How true! But what nation even laid that maxim to heart as did this heroic race of long-headed men? I rather think civilization has nothing to fear from such men, if permitted to govern their own State in their own way.

PASSAIC, N. J., Jan. 16.—The Rev. Dr. Rudolph Maessner, pastor of the German Lutheran Church at this place, saved two boys from drowning in the Vreeland Lake here to-day. The boys were skating on the thin ice, when they broke through.

Dr. Maessner was passing the lake at the time and saw the boys struggling in the water. Without waiting to divest himself of his clothing, the minister went to the boys' assistance, and after struggling in the water with them finally brought both to shore.

MOEN TOBACCO COMPANY.—Vice Chancellor Stevens, at Newark, N. J., yesterday appointed Jay Ten Eyck receiver of the Moen Tobacco Company. The assets of the concern amount to $8,000, while it has an indebtedness of more than $17,000.

WILD BROTHERS JEWELRY COMPANY.—The Wild Brothers Jewelry Company of St. Louis has filed a deed of trust on all its stock of jewelry and fixtures to Peter A. Picket, as trustee for the creditors. The total amount of indebtedness is placed at $57,000. No statement of assets is made.

THOMAS W. WOODWORTH.—Thomas W. Woodworth, a Price Hill real estate dealer, filed a petition to be declared a bankrupt at Cincinnati yesterday. His debts amount to $64,242.19, and his assets consist of wearing apparel valued at $50. His principal creditors are the National Printing Company of Chicago, $20,000; Times Printing Company, St. Louis, $15,000; the Albert Hughes estate, $9,287.54, and Adolph Ansbacher of New York, $4,003.81. Woodworth's wife, May, filed a similar petition several weeks ago.

PETITIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

ISIDOR OLSTEIN.—Isidor Olstein of Peekskill, N. Y., has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $1,809 and assets of $44.

JOSEPH SCHNAPMAN.—Joseph Schnapman, salesman at 4 Bond Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $6,256 and no assets. He was formerly a manufacturer of artificial flowers and feathers, and failed in 1893.

J. P. KLATTHAAR.—John P. Klatthaar, clerk of 120 East Ninetieth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $9,745 and no assets. He is a cabinet maker at 158 West Twenty-seventh Street, and was formerly a manufacturer of furniture at 176 Wooster Street.

SAMUEL FEINBERG.—Schedules of Samuel Feinberg, formerly a dealer in clothing at North Adams, Mass., against whom a petition in bankruptcy was filed here a month ago, show liabilities of $1,883 and assets of $800, consisting of a stock of clothing at North Adams.

HARRY SCHWEITZER.—The petition in bankruptcy filed against Harry Schweitzer, dealer in poultry at Washington Market, by several creditors on the 5th inst., has been dismissed by consent of the creditors. At the office of Arthur Furber, his attorney, it was said that Mr. Schweitzer had made a settlement with his creditors at 30 cents on the dollar. His liabilities were about $15,000.

J. A. & A. T. BLEAKLEY.—James A. Bleakley of 868 West One Hundred and Seventeenth Street and Alexander T. Bleakley of 10 West Sixty-fourth Street, both clerks, have filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $2,967 and no assets. All the debts were contracted in 1899, when they were in business as Bleakley & Co., dealers in dry goods and fancy goods. There are eight judgments against them.

HUDSON HEATING AND VENTILATING COMPANY.—A petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed yesterday against the Hudson Heating and Ventilating Company, a partnership composed of John K. L'Hommedieu and Shirley Tuck at 776 Eighth Avenue, by the following creditors: The A. A. Griffing Iron Company, $1,029; Robert A. Keasbey, $120, and Isaac G. James, $162. It is alleged that they are insolvent, and that on Dec. 5 they transferred orders on various parties to the amount of $3,436, to Susette Tuck, wife of Shirley Tuck, and orders for $478 to Dunbar & Ashley to give them preference. Mr. L'Hommedieu started the business four years ago.

ANTON FUERST.—Anton Fuerst, musical conductor at the Harlem Opera House, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $9,271 and no available assets. He has a violin worth $100, but he claims exemption for it. Of the liabilities, $7,077 is a deficiency judgment in favor of Elias Kempner, growing out of the foreclosure sale of 125 White Street, where Mr. Fuerst was interested in a building operation a few years ago. The balance of the liabilities is for legal services, painting, merchandise, and rent. Mr. Fuerst's petition was due to supplementary proceedings being pressed against him by two creditors, Kniffin & Tooker, on a claim for $53, and William H. Payne, on a claim for $81 for rent. He obtained an order yesterday restraining these supplementary proceedings for a year.

Discharge in Bankruptcy.

Judge Brown of the United States District Court has granted a discharge in bankruptcy to David Gutlohn, employed at 98 Greene Street, who filed a petition on July 18 last, with liabilities of $123,850. He was formerly of D. Gutlohn & Co., wholesale dealers in furs at 115 Mercer Street and in Philadelphia.

OFFICE OF
AMERICAN HIDE AND LEATHER COMPANY.
NEW YORK, January 4, 1900.

Messrs. J. & W. Seligman & Company, New York.

"DEAR SIRS: In answer to your request for information in regard to American Hide and Leather Company First Mortgage Six Per Cent. Sinking-Fund Twenty-Year Gold Bonds, I beg to say that the total authorized issue is $10,000,000 bonds, of which $8,445,000 bonds have been issued, leaving $1,555,000 bonds in the treasury of the Company. Of these treasury bonds, $1,000,000 may only be issued upon the acquisition of new properties which shall become subject to the existing mortgage. The bonds are payable in twenty years from date, namely, on September 1, 1919; coupons are payable March and September; and the principal and interest are payable in gold coin. The Trustee of the mortgage is the Colonial Trust Company of New York. The mortgage provides a sinking fund for the purchase at not over 115 per cent. and interest of $150,000 bonds per annum. If bonds cannot be bought at 115 or less, the sinking-fund is to be invested in a manner satisfactory to the Trustee of the mortgage. Bonds in sinking-fund are to draw interest, which is likewise to be invested or used in purchase of outstanding bonds. The bonds cannot be partially redeemed for sinking-fund purposes, but the entire issue can be redeemed at any time at 115 and interest, upon notice as provided in the mortgage.

The total authorized capital stock of the company is $35,000,000, of which one-half, or $17,500,000, is 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock, with preference as to dividends and assets, and $17,500,000 is common stock. Of this capitalization, only $13,000,000 of preferred and $11,500,000 of common stock have been issued, and of this upwards of $700,000 preferred and $350,000 common stock will be held in trust for the company for the purpose of acquiring additional properties or supplying additional working capital. The properties now owned by the American Hide and Leather Company and covered by its mortgage were formerly those of

LAMBEAU LEATHER CO., CHICAGO.	JOHN BLAKE, ELLENVILLE, N. Y.	JOSEPH HECHT & SONS, NEW YORK.
WM. TIDD & CO., BOSTON.

These properties now represent about seventy-five per cent. of the upper-leather business of the United States. The business of the American Hide and Leather Company is that of manufacturing UPPER LEATHER and not sole leather, AND ACCORDINGLY THE COMPANY IS NOT A COMPETITOR OF THE UNITED STATES LEATHER COMPANY.

The report of the Audit Company of New York, which has examined the books of these concerns, shows the average annual net earnings of all the properties as operated separately before they were acquired by the American Hide and Leather Company to be the sum of $1,585,748.42, being more than three times the amount necessary to pay interest on the $8,445,000 bonds outstanding.

These properties were acquired free of debt and encumbrance, and the Company assumed no outstanding liabilities.

I am familiar with the value of the various plants acquired and now owned by the Company, and in my opinion the conservative value of such plants as going concerns, together with the quick assets and cash now on hand, represents much more than the total amount of the bonds and preferred stock issued.

All of the plant acquired by the Company are now working at their full capacity, and the entire output is sold for at least sixty days in advance at satisfactory prices. The estimated output of the Company will be from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 annually.

The upper-leather industry is well known to be one of the most conservative and stable industries in the country. It has been largely carried on by old-established houses in the Eastern States and in the large cities of the Middle West, where most of the plants acquired are situated. Experience has shown that the industry can be established upon a reliable and paying basis only after long experience and the investment of capital for a considerable period. The value of the good-will of the various concerns which this company has acquired is consequently very great.

The demand for all the articles produced is constant and unfailing, while the records of the business for a period of twenty-five years show fewer failures than in any other mercantile or manufacturing business.

It has been customary hitherto for each factory to produce all or many of the various classes of goods embraced in the trade. Now, each factory acquired by the company manufactures that class of goods for which it is peculiarly adapted by situation and construction. By this division of labor, as well as by the common use of the best patterns and methods of manufacture known to the trade, a better article is being produced at less cost of manufacture. The saving effected in these various respects, and in economies of administration, transportation, etc., will, in the opinion of leading tanners, in which I concur, increase the net earnings to more than $2,750,000 annually.

Yours truly,
THOMAS W. HALL, President."

The new Company, according to the above estimate, should therefore make the following showing:

Net earnings, say	$2,750,000
Annual interest charge on $8,445,000 bonds	506,700
	$2,243,300
Sinking fund, say	172,500
Balance available for dividends	$2,070,800
7 per cent. dividends on $13,000,000 Preferred Stock	910,000
Surplus	$1,160,800

Equal to over 10 per cent. on $11,500,000 Common Stock.

The Audit Company of New York have made the following report:

MESSRS. J. & W. SELIGMAN & COMPANY,
Mills Building, New York.

DEAR SIRS:

"We have made an audit of the accounts of the following firms and companies for periods varying in each case from four to ten years, to wit:

W. N. Eisendrath & Co.	Hall, Haight & Co.	C. T. Roenitz Leather Co.
Wm. Becker Leather Co.	Stephen Dow & Co.	James Skinner Leather Co.
White Bros. & Co.	Bernard & Friedman.	Walker-Oakley Co.
Buswell, Hubbard & Co.	J. P. Crane & Co.	E. C. Cottle & Son.
Middlesex Leather Co.	Watauga Tanning Co.	J. B. Weed & Co.
Alley Bros. & Co.	M. Robson Leather Co.	B. F. Thompson & Co.
Lambeau Leather Co.	John Blake.	Joseph Hecht & Sons.
Wm. Tidd & Co.

In these examinations we have deducted from the profits of the various concerns proper allowances for depreciation on buildings and machinery, and the maximum amount for management. We have added to the profits the amounts paid in each case for interest on borrowed money.

We certify that under these conditions the total average annual net earnings of all the companies and firms named above for the periods stated in each case amounted to the sum of ($1,585,748.42) one million five hundred and eighty-five thousand seven hundred and forty-eight dollars and forty-two cents.

THE AUDIT COMPANY OF NEW YORK,
THOMAS L. GREENE, Manager."
Attest; E. T. PERINE, Secretary.

NEW YORK, October 2, 1899.

AMERICAN HIDE AND LEATHER CO.:

DEAR SIRS: We are familiar with the proceedings connected with the incorporation of the American Hide and Leather Company, the issue of its capital stock, the execution of its First Mortgage and Supplemental Mortgage, and the issue of its First Mortgage Six Per Cent. Sinking-Fund Twenty-Year Gold Bonds to the amount of $8,445,000.

We are of opinion that the American Hide and Leather Company has been legally organized; that it has legal power to issue capital stock to the amount of seventeen million five hundred thousand dollars ($17,500,000) par value of preferred stock and seventeen million five hundred thousand dollars ($17,500,000) par value of common stock; that of this capital stock $13,000,000 par value of Preferred and $11,500,000 par value of Common Stock has been issued in due form for property or cash, and that the action of the directors and stockholders in respect of the issuance of such stock is in due conformity with the laws of the State of New Jersey.

We are also of opinion that the Company had legal power to execute its First Mortgage, dated September 20, 1899, and its supplemental mortgage, dated October 2, 1899, to the Colonial Trust Company, as Trustee, to secure its First Mortgage Six Per Cent. Sinking-Fund Twenty-Year Gold Bonds, and to issue bonds thereunder and secured thereby, and that the action of the Company in respect of the execution of said mortgages and the issuance of said bonds is in due conformity with the laws of the State of New Jersey.

We are, dear sirs,
Yours respectfully,

FINANCIAL. FINANCIAL.

TO THE STOCKHOLDERS OF THE
January 15th, 1900.

CONSOLIDATED GAS CO.

In January, 1899, at the time of your last Annual Meeting, the Consolidated Gas Company was profitably engaged in the business of manufacturing gas and retailing the same at the price of $1.10 per thousand cubic feet. The stockholders were receiving dividends upon their investment at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, and the stock, by reason of these satisfactory and prosperous conditions, enjoyed universal favor and confidence on the part of the investing public.

On the first day of May, 1899, your directors saw fit to reduce the price charged to consumers for gas to 65c. per thousand cubic feet, its rivals and competitors perforce meeting this act by similar reductions in price. A ruinous rate war, thus entered upon, has resulted in serious loss to the stockholders of the Company, and in a reduction of their dividends to one-half of the amount previously paid.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Consolidated Gas Company, to be held on the 22nd day of January, 1900, finds a demoralized condition of its affairs prevailing. Dividends have been gradually reduced until they are now one-half of those formerly received, and the stockholders are confronted with the possibility that if the Company continues its present policy respecting the price of gas to the consumer for any period of time, the restoration of more favorable conditions may be prevented by the enactment of hostile legislation on behalf of a public that, having become accustomed to the present price, will tolerate no change.

A matter fraught with so much of vital consequence to those whose capital is invested in the securities of the Company is one that merits the serious and thoughtful consideration of every stockholder, especially in view of the fact that a continuance of the present disastrous policy of the directors may produce further reductions in dividends and even place the Company in a position where it cannot continue to earn its fixed charges. The stockholders are copartners with each other in the business of manufacturing and selling gas, and they owe a duty to themselves to demand and obtain at the annual meeting of the stockholders full information concerning the business policy of the Company, and before re-electing any of the directors to know whether a continuance of the course adopted by the present directors is warranted by existing conditions, or is to the best interests of the Company.

One competitor of your Company has already restored the price of the gas sold by it to $1.10 per thousand cubic feet. The other competitors of the Consolidated Gas Company, not being charitable institutions, would doubtless be exceedingly glad to co-operate with the Consolidated Gas Company in restoring the price of gas to a normal and proper level.

In the absence of very positive information to the contrary, this course would seem to be to the best interests of the Company, and no selfish aims or private purpose of any officer of the Company should prevail at the expense of the stockholders.

Your directors have recently purchased, by a certain private arrangement, a large number of shares of the capital stock of the New York Mutual Gas Light Company. It is believed by many that the price paid for this stock was enormously in excess of its actual or prospective value.

This transaction may have been a profitable one for the Company, but the surface facts disclosed warrant a close investigation into its details, and satisfactory assurance that it was not dominated by the individual interests of any person in a position to shape the affairs of the Consolidated Gas Company to the accomplishment of his own ends.

It appears by a publication contained in The New York Herald of Jan. 4th, the correctness of which is admitted by the President of your Company, that on or about that date your Directors acquired control of the New York Gas and Electric Light, Heat and Power Company. This transaction is one of great magnitude, and the details of it should be scrutinized with great care by the stockholders of the Consolidated Gas Company before ratification by them. The New York Gas and Electric Light, Heat and Power Company is a consolidated or parent company of a number of electric light companies, most of them absorbed on a most extravagant basis of valuation. As an instance of this: $21,000,000 purchase money bonds of the present Company were issued to acquire $9,200,000 of the Common Stock of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company. The assumption by the Consolidated Gas Company of the control of the New York Gas and Electric Light, Heat and Power Company, with its enormous bonded indebtedness, and its $36,000,000 of Capital Stock, marks a radical step in the history of the Consolidated Gas Company, and the stockholders can certainly ask in all fairness that they be given a most thorough opportunity to consider this momentous financial operation after a submission to them of the full details thereof, before being called upon to ratify it.

It is understood that your Company has also purchased control of another great electrical company, but the persons directly interested are emphatic in their refusal to state anything concerning the price paid.

The belief is beginning to be held by many stockholders that they would receive much larger returns upon their investment, and their stock would have a much greater market value, were the affairs of the Consolidated Gas Company divorced from the control of men having vast personal ambitions to serve. The stock of the Company is selling for much less than its actual worth, because its affairs have not been in the hands of men who have administered their trust with a sole view to the earning of as much money as possible by the manufacture and sale of gas, and the resulting payment of large dividends to the stockholders.

It is beginning to be felt that the stock of the Company is being used as a mere factor in vast and involved financial intrigues and in attempts at the accomplishment of far-reaching personal ambitions by men who, in their lust for financial power or the gratification of personal desires, have become indifferent to the interests of the stockholders of this gas company.

The stock of the Consolidated Gas Company is held very generally by legitimate investors, who have purchased the stock of the Company with the intention of permanently holding it for the dividends to be earned from the manufacture and sale of gas in New York. It is not fair that their interests should be subservient to those of men who, having many diverse and complicated interests, serve them at the expense of the stockholders. There are on the board of your Company many men of uprightness and integrity who are conscious of their responsibility as trustees for the stockholders, and who it is believed, will respond at once to the just demand of an expressed public opinion that they conduct the business of the Company in the sole and exclusive interests of their stockholders.

The stockholders have it within their power, by an insistence upon conservatism and of their rights to be fully informed concerning the business of the Company, to greatly enhance the market value of their stock and to obtain much larger returns upon their investment, by way of dividends.

The attention of guardians, trustees, executors, administrators and those acting in a judiciary capacity for stockholders of the company is especially called to this communication. A duty is imposed upon them of seeking full information concerning these matters which may affect the value of the securities held by them, and of asserting and enforcing the full rights of stockholders in the management of the Company.

It is desirable that as many stockholders as possible shall attend the annual meeting in person. Those who cannot do so, and believe that the directors should be called upon to furnish information concerning the affairs of the Company, are requested to sign the proxy which has been sent to them, and to mail the same to

MARKET CONDITIONS.

Total transactions on the Stock Exchange yesterday aggregated less than 200,000 shares. This is a record low beyond any average for months past. During much of the day brokers' tickers stood practically still. Not only were transactions relatively few, but the number of shares involved in them was small. Just before the close of business a little spurt came. Leather Trust common stock of a sudden became active and went up easily, and some other conspicuous stocks also scored gains. In the case of the Leather Trust strength seemed to come from favorable information authenticated in official circles; the plan for readjusting the Leather Company's capital accounts has not been abandoned, but in even more favorable form is presented again—and this time with support beyond what was formerly available.

Easier money market indications are disclosed. Especially is this noticeable in the time money market. Many individual lenders and institutions putting out large amounts on time have dropped the rate down to an average of about 5 per cent. where over 6 per cent. has for some time past been ruling. The return of funds from the West has reached a volume sufficient to induce the belief in banking circles that danger of returning stringency is disposed of.

The evident determination of interests engaged in promoting new enterprises to proceed with slowness—being, indeed, obliged so to proceed—exerts effect. The establishment of easier conditions abroad is also an influence helping the money market here.

While Wall Street is expending so small an amount of energy in market transactions there is crowding activity in matters of gossip. There seems to be readiness to invent and circulate every manner of fable—some representations gaining currency being shameless. Gredit is treated with contempt and names that have stood high for years are assailed recklessly. Rumor mongering seems to have for its object malice more than money-making purposes, for most tales sent circulating are too utterly foolish to exert the slightest effect upon the market's course. Business rivalries are of a curious sort that reach such low levels; yet examples of just such mean character are kept in view.

Commission brokers who are still advising customers to remain inactive as to the stock market report that there is a developing disposition among holders of funds to take hold of bonds; and many bond houses are filling large orders "over the counter." On the Stock Exchange the bond market does not much extend, but bankers who deal in bonds on their own account are busier than for a long time past.

AMERICAN TIN PLATE.

The annual meeting of the American Tin Plate Company was held at Orange, N. J., yesterday, when officers and Directors were elected, but no action was taken on the dividend. The balance sheet of Dec. 31 shows as follows:

Assets—Plants, real estate, patents, machinery, &c., $43,404,508; merchandise, inventory, $4,951,926; accounts receivable, $1,518,247; cash, $989,984; total, $50,864,665. Liabilities—Capital stock, preferred, $18,325,000; common stock, $28,000,000; purchase money mortgages assumed, $270,000; accounts payable, $1,056,239; surplus $2,613,426; total, $50,864,665.

A statement issued by a majority of the Directors at the conclusion of the meeting said: "The amount of capital stock and the amount authorized to be issued is $50,000,000. The proportion actually issued is $46,325,000. The amount of debts does not exceed the sum of $1,926,238.99. The amount of assets is at least the sum of $7,460,157.09."

The officers elected were:

President—D. G. Reid; First Vice President—William B. Leeds; Second Vice President—William T. Graham; Third Vice President—Warner Arms; Treasurer—F. S. Wheeler; Secretary and Treasurer—E. G. Applegate; Assistant Secretary—W. B. Wheeler; Counsel—James B. Dill.

The Directors of the company, with their terms of office, elected are as follows:

To serve one year more, George Greer, William H. Donner, and Cecil A. Robinson; to serve two years more, Warner Arms, James B. Dill, and Frederick S. Wheeler; to serve three years more, William T. Graham, James McLean, and James H. Moore; to serve four years more, Daniel G. Reid, William B. Leeds, and William H. Moore; to serve five years more, William E. Reis, Richard R. Quay, and James A. Mathews.

LEATHER'S MOVEMENT.

United States Leather common was the strongest active stock on the list yesterday, scoring a gain of 1¼ points on sales of some 11,000 shares. Since the announcement several weeks ago that the Standard Oil interests were in control of the company the quotation for the common stock has hovered around 16, and even on those days when the general market was weak the Leather quotation held consistent and firm. Insiders always buying in the event of any slight recession. It was this buying, indeed, that, some days before the public statement of Standard Oil control, carried the price from 11—where it had gone after the heavy slump—to 16.

Lately the Street has watched with much interest the movement of the stock, and when a rise did not materialize immediately some there were who were inclined to the belief that there had been no change in control.

But from semi-official sources came the statement that the change was as the Street had heard it; and now it is said that yesterday's advance marks the beginning of an upward movement in the stock which will be both decided and lasting. Coincident with the advance the Street again hears that the Rockefeller interests will be personally represented on the Directorate of the company.

SUGAR'S FRACTIONAL GAIN.

Sugar Trust stock, after a day of comparative quiet and little fluctuation, yesterday on sales of about 26,000 shares scored a gain of five-eighths of a point, principally due to profit taking by some few shorts who had sold at the recent higher prices.

There was no new news in respect to the property, but the fact was reiterated that President Havemeyer had decided to fight the independent companies to a finish, and was making ready to wage the war with such vigor that these companies would be glad to sue for peace. The independent companies, however, treated this oft-repeated statement as they have in time past—simply with the declaration that they would be glad to see the war over, as they as well as the trust were losing money.

Pending developments, the bears appeared yesterday to be content to let the stock alone, while, on the other hand, there seemed to be no strong interests ready to buy.

BIG ORDERS FOR STEEL RAILS.

The strength of Federal Steel yesterday was on the official report that the company has just closed a large order for steel rails at $35 per ton, to be delivered the second half of the year. It is stated that the railroads have recently been holding off in the hope that there might be a reduction in price; but, seeing none in sight, they concluded to place their orders and make sure of delivery. One order for 30,000 tons came from the Chicago and Northwestern Railway.

President Gary of the company, discussing the belief expressed in some quarters that the strike in the American Steel and Wire Company would hurt other steel and iron companies, said: "The idea is almost too ridiculous to dignify with notice. Such companies as Federal Steel, Republic Iron and Steel, Tennessee Coal and Iron, and the like, are all independent companies, whose business goes on whether there is or is not a strike in another company's plant.

"As for the general situation, there is no reason why the iron and steel trade should not enjoy a long season of prosperity."

C. P. HUNTINGTON A BUYER.

Discussing a reporot that the Stanford-Hopkins holdings of Southern Pacific, recently purchased by the Huntington-Speyer syndicate, had been sold to E. H. Harriman and Jacob H. Schiff, representing the Union Pacific, President C. P. Huntington of the Southern Pacific said yesterday:

"There is not a word of truth in it. I know exactly where and how that stock is held. And I may say, in passing, that I am not selling any Southern Pacific stock. Rather, I am buying it."

"As for the interests which you say purchased these shares, I can only say that some time ago they did purchase some Southern Pacific stock at my advice. But you can rest assured that they have not gotten hold of the Stanford-Hopkins holdings.

"As for our relations with the Union Pacific, they are of the best."

LOCAL TRACTION STOCKS.

All the local traction stocks were yesterday more or less affected by the opening of the bids for the construction of the underground road. There were many views as to how the interests of the various local roads would be affected by the new system when built, and upon the fact whether these views were good or bad depended the temporary fate of the several traction stocks. Hence, with the varying views it is not surprising that the stocks showed irregularity.

Brooklyn Rapid Transit ranged in price from 67½ to 69¾, closing at 68¾, a net gain of ¾ of a point; Metropolitan fell as low as 162½, and went as high as 165, with the close at 164¾, a net gain of ¾; Manhattan's quotation ranged from 90¾ to 92¾, with the close at 91½, a net loss of ⅝; while Third Avenue, least irregular of all, though weakest, scored a loss of 2¾ points on sales of 333 shares. It opened down 2¾ and rallied ½, only later to fall to the opening figure, where it closed.

HOPEFUL FOR THE FUTURE.

Tennessee Coal and Iron, which on the day previous had declined on the absurd assumption that it might be affected by the strike in the establishment of the American Steel and Wire Company—a quite independent organization—yesterday advanced a full point on trading of about 600 shares.

As evidence of the excellent condition of the company a bulletin put out by Dow, Jones & Co. yesterday stated, among other things, that the surplus profit on the operations of the company this year will be about $1,400,000, while "a reasonable estimate of the net earnings of 1900 is said to be $2,000,000."

GREAT NORTHERN'S TROUBLES.

Not a share of Great Northern was traded in yesterday, not alone because of the general inactivity of the market, but also because of the desire of the speculative element in the Street to await the outcome of the threatened labor trouble and strike of employes on the road.

At the offices of the company in this city no definite information had been received as to the situation, but in the Street it was said that an amicable settlement was not unlikely if only President Hill would make some slight concession.

FOR PENSION PAYMENTS.

Again yesterday the Sub-Treasury was a large debtor to the Clearing House, the total amount being in the neighborhood of $1,600,000. Over one-third of this amount was for pension payments, which have now begun.

DULLEST MARKET IN MONTHS.

Yesterday was easily one of the dullest days the Stock Exchange has seen for months, less than 200,000 shares being traded in. At times, indeed, the market was lifeless, and not infrequently the tape failed to record a sale for several minutes at a time. As an evidence of this lifelessness it is pointed out that not a single share of such a fairly active stock as Rock Island was traded in from about noon Monday until noon yesterday. Had it not been for short covering yesterday's market, dull as it was, would have been duller still.

ANTICIPATING A REPORT.

American Tobacco was bid up yesterday on the strength of a report that the annual statement of the company would show increased earnings. Reports of new competition were still heard.

MR. SAGE AND STANDARD GAS.

A statement in regard to what has been termed Russell Sage's breach of faith in selling his Standard Gas holdings was made yesterday by interests who are identified with the Protective Committee, which purposes to secure a consent of the majority of the stockholders of the company to the plan not to sell stock without offering it at the market price to the committee, which consists of Directors E. A. McAlpin, Oliver S. Carter, John T. Terry, Frank Tilford, and Charles Dana. It was ascertained that last week the holdings of Standard stock of the late Wallace C. Andrews, amounting to 12,000 shares, had been sold, and it was stated on good authority that they had been acquired by the same interests that purchased Mr. Sage's stock, so that these two deals account for 17,700 shares out of the 93,211 shares, common and preferred stock, of the Standard Gas Light Company.

The statement in regard to Mr. Sage's sale of stock said:

From good authority, Mr. Sage obtained for his stock 140 for the common and 170 for the preferred. While the main stockholders have permitted it to go out to the world that Mr. Sage owned the Standard Gas Company, it was far from the fact, he holding less than 5,700 out of 93,211, showing him to be a moderate stockholder.

While his positive assurances for the past two years from time to time to the board, as well as to other stockholders, were not accompanied by a money consideration or acknowledged before a Notary Public, he made a more solemn pledge to the board, "that whatever he obtained for his stock" every other stockholder should have. Still he sold his stock.

Was not the Director who told him he ought to resign his position as President of the company doing his duty in making such a request, even though, as Mr. Sage says, it came from a stockholder who had not any large interest in the company?

It does not seem probable that the parties who purchased Mr. Sage's stock at 140 and 170 would have done so had they not been satisfied the stock was worth that price.

Russell Sage shunned the subject of Standard stock and the attitude of his fellow Directors and stockholders. "I have," he said, "nothing to discuss and nothing to state except that there's nothing new. If I don't talk I won't be misrepresented."

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Business on the Bourse continues favorable, owing to the easy settlement. Prices fluctuated, but eventually became firm. Rio Tintos advanced in the expectation of a considerable decrease in the visible supply of copper. Kafirs were fairly strong, owing to reassuring reports of the position of the British forces near Ladysmith, and were helped by London buying. Three per cent. rentes, 100 francs 20 centimes for the account. Exchange on London, 25 francs 20 centimes for checks. Spanish 4s closed at 68.10.

BERLIN, Jan. 16.—In the absence of any confirmation of yesterday's war news, prices opened weak on the Boerse to-day. Subsequently they fluctuated, but improved at the close, in consequence of favorable advices from Western Bourses. Exchange on London, 20 marks 51 pfennigs for checks.

FRANKFORT, Jan. 16.—On the Boerse to-day prices were undecided and weak during the early hours, but closed steady.

Bombay Discount Higher.

BOMBAY, Jan. 16.—The rate of discount of the Bank of Bombay was to-day increased 1 per cent., to 9.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Total transactions in yesterday's market for outside securities amounted, probably, to not more than 4,000 shares. Of this amount more than a quarter was supplied by Bay State Gas, while in the other issues traded in sales were in most cases limited to 200 or 300 shares. It was probably the most inactive day the curb has had in many months, and at no time during the day was business large enough to attract any particular attention. In this dull condition of the market prices were irregular. When sellers appeared it was generally only at a sacrifice that they could dispose of their stock, but, on the other hand, buyers were in several cases obliged to take stock at figures above recent sales. It was a narrow market, in which a few hundred shares on either side were sufficient to bring about considerable movement in price, although the general tendency seemed to be toward a lower level. Liquidation, which at times appears forced, has been going on in the market during the recent dull days, and although the amount of stock offered has been relatively small, it has proved sufficient to cause serious declines in a number of issues. Buying that is called good has not been lacking in some quarters of the market, but the majority of issues has seemed to have little or no support.

DISTILLING OF AMERICA preferred was weak, and sold down to 23, a decline of several points from the last previous sale. There were rumors of the likelihood of another suit being brought against the company, but a more proximate reason for the sharp decline seemed to be forced liquidation. Trading amounted to only 200 or 300 shares, but stock was freely offered at the close at 23, and the demand for the stock was relatively small. As far as reported, sales of the common stock were restricted to odd lots. No report has yet been had as to when the committee which is now investigating the affairs of the company will complete its report, and the result of the investigation is naturally awaited with considerable interest.

NEW AMSTERDAM Gas common sold at 22 and closed at 22 bid, showing no change for the day, while the preferred stock changed hands at 46½, and ended the day with a 1 point loss, at 45 bid. Transactions in the bonds amounted to $50,000 or more, and these closed with a half point loss, at 95 bid. Good demand was had for the bonds early in the day, and they sold as high as 96, but several lots of the bonds appeared in the market and forced the price down to 95. It recovered fractionally, and the last sale was made at 95⅝.

WOOLEN GOODS, which has been very steady during the last few days, was in good demand, and in the preferred stock sales of 400 shares were made at 79. As far as reported, the common stock was not traded in, but the price of this issue was maintained at 23½ bid.

INTERNATIONAL PUMP preferred sold at 64, a point advance over the previous day's closing bid. The price at which this issue sold indicated that buyers of stock, even in the present condition of the market, are obliged to pay relatively high prices.

ELECTRIC VEHICLE recovered to 50, which was an advance of 10 points over the best bid at the close on Monday, but, as far as reported, no transactions were effected.

ILLINOIS TRANSPORTATION sold at 2¾, and later at 2½. It closed at 2½ bid, a loss of a quarter of a point.

Closing quotations were as follows:

NEWS OF THE EXCHANGES.

There was a good deal of trading in wheat yesterday, with results discouraging to those who were long of the product. It suffered a rather sharp break, from which it did not recover. This was felt to a considerable extent on the Consolidated Exchange, where wheat was the feature of the day's business, the market for stocks there being comparatively firm. The decline was also a matter of interest and excitement on the Produce Exchange. It amounted to one cent a bushel on March wheat, about the same on July, and one cent and an eighth on May.

The break was laid largely to weak Liverpool prices, the absence of any startling developments in war news, and an unexpected increase in the world's visible supply, and the wheat on passage. The cereal closed on Monday on the Produce Exchange as follows: March, 74⅛ bid; May, 73 bid; July, 73 asked. Wheat opened about one-quarter of a point off, on weak cables, and selling tendencies were early in evidence. There was a slight rally, in which May wheat changed hands at 73 and July at 72⅞, but the appearance of a bearish report by Bradstreet's at 1 o'clock broke the market again. Wheat closed at about bottom prices. March, 73⅛; May, 71⅞; July, 71⅞. Corn suffered a sympathetic decline, closing at 39 to 39½, a net loss of about three-eighths of a point. Oats were firm, and enjoyed fair trading.

The Coffee Exchange transactions amounted to 50,000 bags. Coffee made the noteworthy decline of from 25 to 35 points on realization principally. This was a natural reaction after the big upward movement, which the market has experienced as a result of the plague scare. Many brokers feel that the market tendency is still healthy, and the decline did not result in shaking at all the long interests. In fact, the closing prices of yesterday were 10 to 30 points higher than those of Tuesday, Jan. 9, just before the plague scare. Coffee opened 15 to 25 points up yesterday, then rallied 5 or 10 points, and suffered a sharp break near the close. Europe was weak throughout the day.

The Cotton Exchange market was steady, and quotations appeared to be little changed. The trading amounted to only about 200,000 bushels. The market is a waiting one. A number of followers of it believe that considerable cotton has been held back. If proof of this is not forthcoming in a month or so, it will probably be accepted as a fact that light receipts hitherto mean simply a light crop. Operators at present are not to want a little more time for developments before acting on their judgment of what future prices are to be.

PRODUCE EXCHANGE BY-LAWS.

Two Amendments Adopted Yesterday by Large Majorities.

Members of the New York Produce Exchange voted yesterday in favor of amending two of its by-laws. For the following 455 yeas and 71 nays were cast:

Section 52.—The Exchange shall be open for business daily, except Sundays and legal holidays, during such hours and under such rules as the Board of Managers may establish; but the Exchange may be closed for one day at any time, by a vote of two-thirds of the Board of Managers.

For this amendment, which will have a bearing on the vote to be taken next Monday on the proposed Gratuity Fund plan, 442 yeas and 87 nays were cast:

Section 7.—A plurality of votes cast shall constitute a choice. None but members of the Exchange entitled to vote in their own right shall act as proxies for other members. Proxies shall be valid for three months after their date, and no longer.

TITLE GUARANTEE AND TRUST.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, held at the company's offices, 146 Broadway, yesterday, the following were re-elected Directors for the ensuing year: George G. Williams, Alexander E. Orr, Robert Olyphant, Elihu Root, Wodbury Langdon, Charles S. Brown, Benjamin D. Hicks, Martin Joost, James D. Lynch, Charles R. Henderson, William J. Easton, Ellis D. Williams, John S. Kennedy, August D. Juilliard, Charles A. Peabody, Jr., William M. Ingraham, John Jacob Astor, Julien T. Davies, John D. Hicks, Frederick Potter, Clarence H. Kelsey, Frank Bailey, Louis Windmüller, Charles Richardson, and Charles Matlack. Clarence H. Kelsey, the President, and the other officers were all re-elected.

SLUMP IN CHICAGO WHEAT.

Largely Increased Visible Was Responsible for the Decline.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—Two days' business, or lack of it, has cost May wheat 2⅝@2½c on the Board of Trade. The slump of yesterday received a new impetus to-day from the increased visible of 4,040,000 bushels. A moderate increase would have occasioned little agitation, but the magnitude of the week's gain announced by Bradstreet's about noon had a bomblike effect in shattering bull-like expectations.

Holders joined the crowd of sellers, adding concession to concession to rid themselves of the article, the supply of which was evidently much greater than the demand. The close was at the bottom—May ⅞@½c under yesterday, at 66¼@66⅝c. It was explained that the unexpected magnitude of the increase in the visible was due to a correction of Russian stocks.

Corn Exchange Bank Change.

The Directorate of the Corn Exchange Bank underwent a change yesterday at the annual meeting of the stockholders. Thomas A. McIntyre of the firm of McIntyre & Wardwell retired, his place being taken by R. R. Cable of the Keokuk and Des Moines Railroad Company. The other Directors were re-elected as follows: W. A. Nash, A. N. Brady, T. T. Barr, W. Harman Brown, David Bingham, C. H. Kelsey, H. J. Grant, Howland Davis, W. R. Stewart, M. B. Fielding, J. M. Bowers, L. J. Busby, and W. H. Nichols.

BOSTON STOCK BROKERS FAIL.

H. C. Wainwright & Co. Unable to Realize on Mining Stocks.

BOSTON, Jan. 16.—The firm of H. C. Wainwright & Co., bankers and brokers of 40 State Street, this city, has made an assignment to George C. Lee, Jr. No statement of assets and liabilities is available. The firm has been carrying a heavy load of United States Mining stock, on which it was unable to realize. It has been in business for a great many years, and is a member of both the New York and Boston Stock Exchanges. The members are Henry C. Wainwright, Arthur Wainwright, and Amory D. Wainwright.

Rolston & Bass are the local correspondents of H. C. Wainwright & Co., stock brokers, of Boston, whose failure is announced. A member of the local firm said: "Wainwright & Co., to our knowledge, had no interest in the New York stock market, and their failure, we understand, was due entirely to their holdings of United States Mining stocks. They have a credit balance with us, and we hope and expect that they will resume business.

A DEAL IN TELEPHONE STOCKS.

The Bell Company Absorbs Two Rivals in Michigan.

DETROIT, Jan. 16.—Through the purchase of a majority of stock of both companies the Michagan Telephone Company to-day closed a deal for control of the two independent companies of this part of Michigan, namely, the Detroit Telephone Company and the New State Telephone Company. The Michigan Telephone Company, which has thus regained control of what was formerly its exclusive field, is one of the factors of the Erie Telegraph and Telephone Company consolidation.

The Detroit and the New State Companies conjointly operate about 6,000 miles of long-distance lines and have about 10,000 subscribers in Detroit and forty other Michigan cities and towns. By to-day's transactions 70 per cent. of the independent telephone business of Michigan passes into the control of the Erie system.

Gov. Pingree with several of his political and personal friends were prominent in the organization of the Detroit Company. Since it began operations the rates of the Michigan (Bell) Company were reduced one-half. Replying to questions as to rates under the new consolidation, President Glidden said that long-time contracts would be made if desired at the rates in force to-day. He said further:

"The independent telephone people of the country have acknowledged these two companies as the foundation of the independent telephone movement in the United States. The close of these negotiations we believe to be the beginning of the end of the independent telephone movement."

The Erie telephone system is now the largest in America, and, with one exception in Great Britain, the largest in the world. It controls the companies operating under the Bell patents in North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Arkansas, Texas, and in Cleveland, Ohio. The combined capital of its companies is $22,000,000.

NOTES OF INSURANCE INTERESTS.

The New York Board of Fire Underwriters will hold its January meeting to-day.

Superintendent Payn of the State Insurance Department yesterday authorized the Hanover Fire Insurance Company to transact a tornado insurance business.

The Moscow Fire Insurance Company of Russia has been admitted to Pennsylvania and New Hampshire, and Chicago advices say that Commissioner Giljohann of the Wisconsin Insurance Department has also decided to issue a license to the company.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Assurance Company of America yesterday the following Directors were elected to serve three years: E. C. Converse, President of the National Tube Company; Lucius A. Cole, President of the National Lead Company; Joel F. Freeman, ex-Treasurer of the Standard Oil Company; F. H. Pouch, President of the American Dock and Trust Company, and R. Bleecker Rathbone, Secretary of the Assurance Company.

West Pollock was appointed yesterday by the St. Petersburg Insurance Company of Russia as its manager in the United States for reinsurance. Mr. Pollock said last night that his representation of the St. Petersburg would be entirely distinct from his local agency business. The application of the St. Petersburg for admission to this State is now pending, the necessary papers having been filed with Superintendent Payn. Mr. Pollock, who recently resigned as Deputy Manager of the American branch of the North British and Mercantile Insurance Company of London and Edinburgh, was for thirteen years with the Niagara Fire Insurance Company, first as Assistant Secretary and then as Secretary. In 1896 he left the Niagara to

THE NORTH RIVER BRIDGE

Promoters of the Scheme Before the Sinking Fund Commission.

The Mayor, Controller, and President Guggenheimer Not Favorable to the Desired Franchise.

Burton N. Harrison, Gen. J. S. Clarkson, Charles H. Swan, George Young, William H. Foster, and others appeared before the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund in the Mayor's Office yesterday to renew the application of the New York and New Jersey Bridge Company for the approval of the board as to the location of its approaches in New York. After some consideration the matter was referred to Controller Coler and President Guggenheimer of the Council.

Mr. Harrison, the spokesman, said that the representatives of the company now came before the board with a proposition which would result in municipal ownership of the New York approaches.

"That is more or less deceptivev, isn't it?" asked Controller Coler. "I understand the city gets its ownership at the end of 100 years."

"There are two propositions which involve municipal ownership," replied Mr. Harrison. "One of them provides that the city may take control at any time upon the payment of the value of the property, and the other that, without any payment at all, at the end of 100 years the city becomes absolute owner."

Mr. Harrison said that street railway franchises, the expense involved in which was only a million or so, were made returnable to the city after twenty-five years, and it was not asking too much to make the term 100 years in a case like the bridge, which would cost in the neighborhood of $100,000,000.

President Guggenheimer brought up the proposition which had been made to the company, that it pay a percentage of its gross receipts to the city. Mr. Harrison thought that under the circumstances this would be an oppressive arrangement as affecting the bridge company.

The Mayor said in substance that the approval of the Sinking Fund Commission would be equal to giving the bridge company a franchise, and that under the plan of the North River approach along the pier line down to the Battery, connecting with the piers, the company would get absolute control of the shipping of the port.

Mr. Harrison replied that the act of Congress made the approval by the Sinking Fund Commission of the location a necessity, but that this approval was not a franchise, as other departments of the city Government had to be consulted. The approval by the board of the location could not be construed as a franchise, he said, because the vote of the Municipal Assembly was required.

Controller Coler said that the board had not received satisfactory proof that the company had the money behind it to build the bridge. "There are no big financiers connected with it at all," said he.

Mr. Harrison urged an answer as soon as possible. "We find it hard," said he, "to hold the capitalists who have promised to advance the money with these long delays."

"You will not have any trouble getting money for this thing if you get the franchise," said the Controller. "You can always get men to give 50 cents for a dollar."

After the meeting President Guggenheimer said:

"The men who appeared before the commission are backed by Parisian and New York bankers. They offer to buy out the old Swan Bridge Company for $85,000,000 and build a railway all the way from the Battery to Fifty-ninth Street for carrying freight as an approach to the bridge. Instead of paying the city a percentage on their gross receipts, as all railroads which get a franchise are required to do, the company offers the city nothing until it has got back the $85,000,000 which it paid the old bridge company. In other words, we are asked to give away for nothing for a hundred years or more an important railway franchise, for which the city ought to receive a large annual return. I for one will not consent to such a proposal until the company agrees to pay the percentage to which the city is entitled."

ALDERMEN CHARGE TRICKERY.

Republicans Condemn Methods Used in the Interest of Senator Sullivan's Theatrical Firm.

By a procedure which was denounced by the minority as "scandalous" and "tricky," the Democratic members of the Board of Aldermen yesterday adopted a resolution permitting Sullivan & Kraus to erect an awning in front of the Schley Music Hall, now in course of erection at 110 West Thirty-fourth Street. The passage of the resolution aroused the Republicans, several of whom used strong language, and provoked replies in similar vein from the Tammany members.

The senior member of the firm applying for the right to erect the awning is Senator Timothy D. Sullivan, the Tammany leader of the Sixth Assembly District. Although the theatre is in the Twenty-fifth District, which is represented in the board by Alderman Parsons, (Rep.,) the resolution was offered by Mr. Fleck, (Tam.,) who comes from Mr. Sullivan's bailiwick, on the east side. By rule of courtesy such resolutions are always presented by the member representing the district in which the building is situated.

Hardly had the resolution been read when Mr. McInnes, the Republican leader, protested angrily that advantage had been taken of the absence of Mr. Parsons to offer a resolution affecting his district.

"Don't you talk that way about me," shouted Mr. Fleck. "I won't stand for it."

Mr. McInnes moved to send the resolution to a committee. This was voted down. In the meantime Mr. Parsons entered the room and asked for a reconsideration of the defeated motion. A derisive laugh from the Democratic side followed this demand, and then Mr. Parsons explained the facts in the case as follows:

"Alderman Fleck came to me a few minutes ago and told me some one wanted me at the telephone in the committee room. I went to the instrument, and then some one tapped me on the shoulder and said that I was wanted at the telephone down stairs. I went down stairs, and when I got there I found that no one had called me. This is a mean trick to take advantage of me. I don't know who Sullivan & Kraus are, but the same names are on the Dewey Theatre. I was asked to introduce this resolution, but I declined until I could ask the neighbors about it."

Alderman Goodman (Rep.) protested against such a violation of courtesy, and said that it would provoke retaliation.

Alderman McCall (Tam.) thought that where an Alderman had made an unwarranted attack on a request from a man in his district there ought to be some way to overrule him. "Mr. Sullivan is a Senator of the State of New York," said Mr. McCall, "and I'm proud to say he's my friend."

"Who is Mr. Kraus?" asked Mr. Parsons.

"Give him a letter of introduction," suggested President Woods.

Alderman Burrell (Tam.) protested against the discourteous treatment accorded to Mr. Parsons, and Mr. Matthews (Rep.) denounced the introduction of the resolution as a trick.

The resolution was finally adopted by a vote of 42 to 11.

BOARD OF ESTIMATE MEETING.

Hall of Records to Cost $4,250,000—Money for New Schools.

At yesterday's meeting of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment John R. Thomas, the architect for the new Hall of Records, made a second report on the amount of money which he deemed necessary for the interior decorations and floorings of the building. Mr. Thomas, in his original estimate, fixed the amount at $2,500,000. The board thought the estimate too high, and refesred the plans back with instructions that they be so amended that the cost be kept within $1,500,000.

Mr. Thomas reported yesterday that since the original estimate was made the cost of labor and material had increased to such an extent that $350,000 more would be needed to carry out his plans. He said that the interior decorations could not be completed for less than $2,250,000 without spoiling the architecture of the building. The exterior of the building will cost about $2,000,000, so that the entire structure would cost $4,250,000. The plans were referred to Controller Coler, who is to consult with Mr. Thomas and report at the next meeting of the board.

Controller Coler reported a requisition from the Board of Education for $1,770,000 for sites for eleven new school buildings in Manhattan and the Bronx. The Chief Engineer of the Finance Department reported that the estimates were too low, and that $270,000 more would be needed to purchase the sites. The Controller recommended that $1,500,000 be allowed the Board of Education for six new sites at present, the remainder to be allowed when necessary.

The board allowed $129,475 for new School No. 5, in Long Island City, and $92,690 additional for school sites in the Borough of Queens.

HONESTY OF THE ALDERMEN.

The Board Tables Resolutions to Call Thomas G. Shearman to Account for His Remarks.

The recent statement made by Thomas G. Shearman, the Brooklyn lawyer, before the Nineteenth Century Club, that the Aldermen of New York were a "set of thieves," called forth indignant resolutions from Alderman Wirth of Brooklyn, and resulted in a spirited debate at yesterday's session of the board. The majority of the members of the board were disposed to regard the charge lightly, and the resolutions were finally laid upon the table by a vote of 38 to 17.

Mr. Wirth is a new member of the board, and he resented the allegation that he and his colleagues were influenced by dishonest motives. In his resolutions Mr. Wirth recited that many members of the board were reputable business men of known integrity, and continued:

Resolved, That while we do not ordinarily take notice of remarks of this character when uttered by shallow, vapid minds, we do most emphatically condemn and object to such utterances when coming from a citizen standing high in professional, social, and religious circles, as does the man referred to, whose unjust sweeping charge is without foundation, and liable to reflect on the character of men who highly prize their good name, and who will defend the same at all hazards.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Thomas G. Shearman with a letter requesting that he retract or deny having made the statement attributed to him, and if such retraction or denial is not forthcoming, demanding an apology from him because of its falsity and injustice to the members of the Aldermanic Board.

Alderman McCall, the Tammany leader, thought that Mr. Shearman's declaration should be treated with contempt. "Such remarks as these should be made to a Grand Jury," said Mr. McCall, "and not to a tableful of half-drunken men. Anyway, people in glass houses shouldn't throw stones. If this reaches Mr. Shearman, he'll know what I mean."

Alderman Goodman agreed with Mr. McCall, and then Mr. Wirth, speaking for his resolutions, remarked: "It is remarkable that I should be here making my maiden speech in defense of my honesty and that of my colleagues. Mr. Shearman is an old man, and for that reason his charge is worthy of reply."

Alderman Bridges followed with a speech in which he urged new members to restrain their desire to talk, and not to permit themselves to be insulted too easily. "If you're going to take notice of everything that's said about you," Mr. Bridges said, "you'll have your hands full. I want to warn the new members to be precise. If you say anything, the newspapers will add ten words to it and make you ridiculous before your constituents. If I offered this resolution and Mr. Shearman took no notice, I'd go to the courts. I don't say I'd try to take any of his money away from him, but I'd try to punish him."

After the remarks of Mr. Bridges the resolution was laid on the table.

RESOLUTIONS IN THE COUNCIL.

Railway Regulations Reintroduced—The Blackwell's Island Bridge.

Several resolutions, having for their object the regulation of street railroads, were introduced in the Council at yesterday's meeting. One of these provided for the abolition of turnstiles on the elevated railroads and the substitution of ticket choppers, and another for the inclosing of the front and rear platforms of surface cars with wood and glass for the protection of motormen and conductors. Both were referred to the Committee on Railroads. Similar resolutions have been before the Committee on Railroads for the last two years, but have not been acted upon, excepting during the fight on the Manhattan Railway Company last Spring, when the turnstile resolution was passed and sent to the Mayor, but was afterward withdrawn.

A public hearing was fixed for Friday, Feb. 9, on the application of the Manhattan Tunnel Railway Company for a franchise for a tunnel across the North River from Chambers Street and West Broadway to Jersey City.

Councilman Cassidy of Queens reintroduced the resolution which the old Municipal Assembly did not pass, authorizing the Commissioner of Bridges to let contracts for the building of the Blackwell's Island bridge, between Sixtieth Street, Manhattan, and Charles Street, Long Island City. Mr. Cassidy tried to have the resolution passed, but the other members insisted that it be referred to the Bridges and Tunnels Committee, and this disposition was made of it.

FIRST BATTERY ARMORY.

Awards for Land Confirmed and the Plans Referred to a Committee.

At a meeting of the Armory Board in the Mayor's office yesterday the awards for the land needed for the First Battery Armory, at Sixty-sixth Street and Central Park West, amounting to $115,681.15, were confirmed.

Brig. Gen. Butt said: "I would like to have the plans for this armory discussed."

"Have you got the plans?" asked the Mayor of Commissioner Kearny.

"I submitted them to Gen. Butt, and they were not satisfactory," replied Mr. Kearny.

"Then I move that Gen. Butt and Commissioner Kearny be appointed a committee to submit the plans to the board," said the Mayor.

"The board has already given me the power to appoint an architect," said Mr. Kearney.

The matter was referred to the committee suggested by the Mayor. Gen. Butt wanted to have the plans submitted to competition at the last meeting, but the board voted to give Mr. Kearny the right to employ an architect to draw the plans.

Col. Clayton, of the Fourteenth Regiment asked for $40,000 worth of repairs to the armory of that regiment. The board authorized the letting of the contracts for the work.

NEW ALDERMANIC COMMITTEES.

Assignments of Members Announced by President Woods.

President Woods of the Board of Aldermen announced yesterday the following as the committees of the board:

Dewey Place vs. Lafayette Avenue.

An ordnance changing the name of Elm Street, Marion Street, and Lafayette Place, all continuances of the same thoroughfare, to Dewey Place, which was passed by the Aldermen last year, but was held up in the Council, was offered in the Board of Aldermen yesterday. After a long discussion it was decided to refer the matter to the Aldermen of the districts affected. Mr. Fleck gave notice of his intention to offer a substitute resolution making the name of the Street Lafayette Avenue.

NO "TIPS" FOR ASHCART MEN.

Thomas Mulcay Dismissed from the Street Cleaning Force.

Thomas Mulcay, the ashcart driver of the Department of Street Cleaning who was charged by Mrs. M. C. Lane, Superintendent of the Wetmore Home, with demanding tribute before removing ashes, was tried before Deputy Commissioner Gibson yesterday, and as a result was dismissed from the service.

In order to guard against similar infractions of the department's rules, Commissioner McCartney issued yesterday a formal order to District Superintendents directing them to detail a sufficient number of assistant section foremen to visit every private house, hotel, store, apartment or tenement house in their respective destricts and ascertain who have been in the habit of giving gratuities to drivers for the work, and what drivers have received such gratuities. He also gave out a statement informing householders that the drivers, by the rules of the department, are forbidden to accept "tips" on pain of dismissal, and requesting information in regard to violations of the rules.

SUPT. BROCKWAY'S METHODS.

Discipline at the Elmira Reformatory Sharply Criticised Before the Charity Organization Society.

The first of a series of monthly conferences, held under the auspices of the Charity Organization Society, to consider the evils of pauperism, was held at the United Charities Building yesterday morning. Miss Kate Bond presided.

David Willard, Principal of the Tombs Prison School, in speaking on "The City's Vagrant Boys," said that it was the general belief among the unfortunate lads of the Cherry Hill district that boys who went to Elmira never came back alive. Two of their comrades, whom the speaker had known, had been sent there and had been brought back dead. The undertaker said, Mr. Willard asserted, that the bruised and battered condition of their bodies left no doubt in his mind that they had been beaten to death. Mr. Willard said that he himself believed that one boy whom he knew as "Hobo," and who had been sent to Elmira about eight months ago for assaulting and robbing a drunken sailor, would not live through his term, as he was a very bad boy, and would not be likely to conform to the rigid discipline of the institution.

Edward T. Devine, General Secretary of the Charity Organization Society, and a personal friend of Superintendent Brockway of the Elmira Reformatory, called upon Mr. Willard as soon as the latter had finished, for further details of the death of the boys. Mr. Willard said he could not supply them on the moment, but could easily place Mr. Devine in the way of getting them.

Mrs. J. H. Johnston, President of the Little Mothers' Aid Association, said that one of Brockway's methods was to ask young men brought before him upon their arrival at the prison, "Does your mother get drunk?" If they showed resentment, they were degraded and punished, and in this way many Hebrew youths suffered severely, because their religion lays special stress upon respect for parents. "Col. Brockway's policy," she said, "is that a bad nature must be ground to powder, and a new nature built out of the powder."

Prof. Walter A. Wyckoff, author of "The Workers," and who holds the Chair of Sociology at Princeton University, spoke on "The Field for Organized Work in Economic Improvement." He said that the great work of organized charity is a palliative and not a curative, and that the true philanthropist is he who finds work for the unemployed. Prof. Wyckoff said that in Chicago, where he had been studying social conditions, there are 24,000 sweat shops.

WIDOW CONTESTS HIS WILL.

Says William Cullen Was Influenced by Others in Neglecting to Mention Her.

William Cullen died at his home, 439 West Thirty-ninth Street, on Nov. 11 last, leaving valuable real estate and personal property, the exact value of which has not yet been ascertained. In his will, dated Dec. 23, 1896, no mention was made of his wife, from whom he had lived apart for many years. In a notice filed in the Surrogate's Court yesterday the widow, Mrs. Eliza Cullen, announces her intention of contesting the will.

The testator left the bulk of his estate to Mary Frances McLoughlin, and his reasons for so doing are set forth in the following clause in the will: "As Mary Frances McLoughlin has taken care of my mother and myself for some twenty years without compensation, but on the understanding that I should devise to her on my death the premises where we now reside, 439 West Thirty-ninth Street, and as the value of said property is only a fair compensation for the services rendered by her to my mother and myself, intending to make compensation to her, I give to her the house and lot at 439 West Thirty-ninth Street."

In another clause of the will the testator devised to Mary Frances McLoughlin the property at 518 Monroe Street, Elizabeth, N. J. To the Rev. Bernard Brady, curate of St. Raphael's Roman Catholic Church, he bequeathed $500, and to the Trustees of St. Patrick's Cathedral a like sum. His property at 536-538 West Forty-ninth Street and at 494 Madison Street, as well as all the residuary estate, Mr. Cullen left in trust for his adopted daughter, Lorella Cullen. She is to come into possession of the property absolutely when she attains the age of twenty-one years. The provision is made that should Lorella die during her minority the property left to her is to be divided equally between the New York Foundling Asylum and Seton Hospital, at Spuyten Duyvil. George J. Kenny and Mary Frances McLoughlin are named as the executors of the will.

Mrs. Cullen, the widow, sets forth in her notice of contest that the alleged will is not the last will and testament of the deceased, and that at the time it purports to have been executed her husband was not of sound mind and was under the influence of persons whose names are not mentioned. P. J. O'Beirne, the counsel for the contestant, said yesterday that for years Cullen had lived the life of a recluse, and that he and his wife had lived apart for a long time by mutual consent. The petition for the probate of the will was filed by Mary Frances McLoughlin.

Illustrated Lecture on Scotland.

Garrett P. Serviss will deliver at the Berkeley Lyceum at 11 A. M. to-day the third in the series of illustrated lectures on "The Romance of Travel and History." His subject will be "Bonny Scotland, the Land of Poetry and Romance."

We invite criticism.

Has anything bought of us fallen short, come below our avowedly high standard? If so, tell us and we will prove what good pupils we are.

By hard scraping we've gotten together 150—the last of those high-priced, silk-lined and silk-shouldered overcoat odds and ends—and have reduced them to the ranks of the $15 overcoats.

Of the higher cost worsted Prince Alberts and cutaway coats and vests reduced to $15, there remain, with few exceptions, only the larger sizes, 40 to 46 chest—all at the Leonard St. store.

LEGAL NOTES.

VEHICLES AND CARS AT STREET CROSSINGS.—To William Petri, who was injured by being thrown from his light delivery wagon whole attempting to cross Third Avenue at the intersection of Sixteenth Street on the 21st of September, 1896, because it was run into by a car of the Third Avenue Railroad Company, a verdict for $1,100 was awarded on the trial of his suit against the company for damages. The verdict was yesterday set aside by Justice Russell, in the Supreme Court, as being against the weight of evidence. The car was going north at the rate of nine miles an hour. Petri, coming from the west side, attempted to cross the avenue with a fairly fast horse and at a good rate of speed. He saw the car when it was a short distance from Fifteenth Street, he said, and judged he could easily have crossed ahead of the car. Justice Russell said it was evident the plaintiff was right in saying he judged he could cross ahead of the car, and it was evident he made a miscalculation. "We may assume," Justice Russell added, "plaintiff had as good a right to cross as the car to proceed along the line of the avenue. A person crossing a track with a vehicle must take into consideration not only the distance of an approaching car, but also what the controller of that car would have the reasonable right to expect in the way of prudent caution on the part of the driver of the vehicle. He well knew that the gripman could not, in the discharge of his duty, stop before every crossing on the mere guess that a wagon approaching would be placed in a position of danger from lack of prudent driving on the part of the person controlling that vehicle. I do not see why the gripman is to be judged by any higher rule than the plaintiff himself. If the gripman, seeing the situation of the two moving objects approaching the same point, could, as the plaintiff did, have judged that the plaintiff might with proper diligence easily cross ahead, why was it negligence on his part to make the same mistake that the plaintiff did? If, on the other hand, the plaintiff was so near that the gripman had the fair right to believe the horse would be stopped or turned up the avenue, what duty was imposed upon the gripman to guess at the probable action of the plaintiff, and stop his carload of passengers to wait the decision on the part of one who might be reasonably supposed not to be willing to place himself in a position of peril?" The Court holds that there was nothing upon which the jury might rest a verdict that the gripman was negligent or that plaintiff was free from negligence.

EXPENSIVE AND PROLONGED LITIGATION WITHOUT RESULT.—Michael H. Haffey became a purchaser at auction, in February, 1889, for $7,800, of premises owned by Sarah Lynch, and she agreed in a memorandum to convey them "by the usual deed containing full covenants, with warranty." At that time she had such a title as she had contracted to give. Thereafter, an action of ejectment was brought against her by a third person, who claimed the land in fee, and a lis pendens was filed. Then Mrs. Lynch refused to make conveyance to Haffey. He brought suit to compel performance, knowing at the time of this claim and of the lis pendens. Before the trial of Haffey's suit the ejectment suit was tried, and the complaint was dismissed, and that judgment was afterward affirmed by the General Term. Mr. Haffey, at the trial of his suit, expressed his consent to accept a deed in terms as prescribed in the contract. It did not appear that the defendant had made any effort to remove the incumbrance of the lis pendens. The Court of Appeals, in 1894, by a divided court, reversed judgments given below in favor of the defendant, holding that it was her duty to make all reasonable efforts to remove any obstacle that stood in the way of performance. Nothing further was done until last June, when upon a new trial, it appeared that a new ejectment suit had been begun and a new lis pendens had been filed; but evidence on that point was excluded on the ground that it was not pleaded. Defendant's subsequent application for leave to put a supplemental answer was granted on payment of all costs up to that time. On appeal by defendant from this order, so far as the imposition of costs was concerned, it was recently modified by the First Appellate Division, which required the defendant to stipulate to waive all costs which had been awarded on former appeals, and gave plaintiff leave to discontinue, if so advised, without costs.

DAMAGES FROM COLLAPSE OF ADJOINING BUILDING.—Justice McLaughlin yesterday gave judgment for over $10,000 in favor of Matthew McPhillips, in his suit against Mary Fitzgerald, as executrix of James Fitzgerald, deceased, for damages to his adjoining apartment houses from the collapse, in November, 1893, of the five-story brick building 75 and 77 King Street. For upward of a century Trinity Church Corporation has owned and now owns most of the land in that neighborhood. In 1776 it leased to Aaron Burr for ninety-nine years that portion on which these apartment houses were subsequently erected. In 1837 the plaintiff and his brother Andrew became owners of the outstanding lease of the ground on which these houses stood, and then purchased the buildings for $3,000. They expended $5,000 in repairs, and got renewals of the lease. James M. Fitzgerald, deceased, was in possession of the adjoining building when it collapsed, as tenant under a written lease which obligated him to make necessary repairs. He used the premises for pressing paper into bales and for storing the bales. His lease expired in May, 1894. The jury at Trial Term found the testator guilty of negligence in overloading the building and that such negligence caused it to collapse. Justice McLaughlin then assessed the damage.

ASPHALT CONTRACT HELD UP.

Injunction Against Commissioner Keating on Elm Street Work.

Justice Fitzgerald, in the Supreme Court yesterday, granted to Simon H. Bergoffen a preliminary injunction restraining James P. Keating, Commissioner of Highways, and Controller Coler from accepting bids for the paving of Elm Street with asphalt. An order requiring the defendants to show cause why the injunction should not be made permanent and why they should not be compelled to readvertise for bids and accept those of the New Jersey Mexican Asphalt Company was also granted. The case will be argued Friday.

The New Jersey Mexican Asphalt Company is behind Mr. Bergoffen in the suit, which was begun, it is alleged, because of the refusal of Commissioner Keating to consider bids put in by the company.

According to the affidavits of George W. Crichfield, S. P. McGiven, and Thomas Kavanagh, officers of the company, Commissioner Keating exceeded his official capacity in the matter of the bids. It is alleged that the proposals for bids for the work contain provisions that practically shut out all except favored bidders.

On Jan. 11, according to the affidavits, Crichfield, McGiven, and Kavanagh, accompanied by a lawyer, went to the office of Commissioner Keating and announced their intention of depositing bids for the work.

"You can't put your bids in here. You will have to see the Commissioner," the clerk in charge is alleged to have said.

The officials of the company say that they went to the Commissioner's private office, but that Mr Keating opened the door and said: "I don't want to have anything to do with you. Get out of my office."

FERRYBOAT LOST IN THE FOG.

The South Brooklyn Goes Ashore Off Governors Island, and Soldiers Go to the Rescue.

The heavy fog yesterday morning caused the pilot of the ferryboat South Brooklyn of the Thirty-ninth Street line to make a mistake in his reckoning and to run the boat ashore off Governors Island. The boat had about 120 passengers and several trucks aboard at the time. Some of the women and a few of the men were frightened, but they were soon reassured by the pilot and deckhands and the appearance of several soldiers of the Governors Island garrison.

The South Brooklyn left her slip in Brooklyn at 7:30 o'clock. She moved out slowly, blowing her whistle, for the pilot could hardly see fifteen yards ahead. He steered by compass and believed he was heading straight for the slip at the Battery. Ten minutes later the passengers felt the boat shiver from end to end. There was a rush out of the cabins, and the passengers asked what was the matter.

"I guess we have run aground," said one of the deckhands, and he added: "I think we're on the sand bar off Governors Island."

"Who goes there?" came through the fog from the land side. It was the voice of a sentry who had heard the voices of the passengers and the whistle of the boat.

"Oh, we're enjoying the morning fog," replied one of the passengers.

The figure of the sentry who had climbed on the sea wall was dimly seen through the mist, and then the soldier shouted, "Wait a minute. I'll see what we can do for you."

The sentry fetched the Sergeant of the guard, who called the officer, and soon the prisoners who were working outside and several soldiers who were off duty came down to the sea wall. They gathered all the barrels and loose timber that was about and piled it under the sea wall on the rocks. Across the barrels the men ran a couple of planks and bridged the span between the boat and the sea wall.

Then the Sergeant shouted to the passengers to come on. Several men walked over, but the women were rather timid, and then the Sergeant himself walked across to the boat, took one of the women by the hand, and led her over. The others, encouraged, followed one after another.

About forty of the passengers were persuaded by the pilot to stay on board and help him to float the boat. They were made to jump up and down at the end of the boat which was in deep water for about half an hour, and then, with the aid of the tide, the boat slid off the bar and went on to her slip.

The passengers who landed on Governors Island were taken over to New York by the steamer Gen. Hancock, which is used as a ferryboat between the island and the city.

STREET CAR BUFFET SERVICE.

A Chicago Line Will Sell Luncheon, Drinks, and Cigars.

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—The Chicago Union Traction Company will in the near future inaugurate a buffet service on street cars. The arrangement will be similar to that between the Pullman Company and the railroads. The cars will be run at stated intervals, always as trailers, and will be conducted as well as any transcontinental dining car. Besides coffee and luncheon, cigars and liquors will be obtainable.

An extra fare of 5 cents will be charged for the privilege of riding on the buffet.

CARNEGIE'S GIFT TO LOUISVILLE.

Aldermen Refuse to Consider Levy to Make $125,000 Available.

Special to The New York Times.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 17.—A perverse majority in the Board of Aldermen last night refused to take up for consideration a petition that a tax be levied for the support of a free library in order to comply with the conditions made by Andrew Carnegie when he offered a library endowment of $125,000. The petition was referred to the Committee on Cemeteries, though in the lower board it was assigned to a special committee.

Eventually the proposition will be accepted, but feeling in the Board of Aldermen is so hostile to the Mayor that they are unwilling to levy a tax for the support of the library as long as he is in office. One newspaper urges the city administration to refuse the gift, on the ground that Louisville is rich enough to endow her own library.

The owners of the Polytechnic Library, with 60,000 volumes and much valuable real estate, offer to turn it over to the city provided a tax for its support is levied, and this will eventually be done, but in the meantime there is opposition to the whole scheme.

TALKS OF TUNNEL PLANS

Mr. McDonald Will Begin Construction Within a Month.

HE WILL LEASE THE SYSTEM

Plainly His Interest to Complete the Road in Three Years—President Orr's Statement.

Contractor John B. McDonald, who will build the rapid transit tunnel, announced yesterday that he will be ready to proceed with the actual work of construction within fifteen days after the formal signing of the contract. Mr. McDonald has given assurance that he will have no difficulty in depositing the million dollars in cash or approved securities and the additional bonds of $5,000,000 and $1,000,000 respectively, so that from present appearances the work, as he says, will go on simultaneously at different points along the route, with the prospects of completion assured at the end of three years.

Mr. McDonald was a busy man yesterday. He was in and out of his temporary office at 100 Broadway all day, doing the while a multitudinous number of things, conferring with financiers, talking with would-be sub-contractors and employes, whose number is legion, and attending to other details which he described as too numerous to mention.

There has been some suspicion that injunctions might be served upon Mr. McDonald by the disappointed ones to delay the project, but counsel for the Rapid Transit Commission and other lawyers view this possibility with light hearts.

MR. M'DONALD'S PLAN.

With all his work, Mr. McDonald was in a cheerful frame of mind yesterday.

"Where will I begin work? Under a bank," was the smiling answer to a question. He continued:

"My general idea is that the work shall begin at the most difficult places, and then be carried forward by taking up the less difficult work at various points of the route; then go forward with the whole so as to have the entire work finished at one time and ready for equipment.

"About the first place to begin, and one of the most difficult along the entire route, will be the section from Thirty-fourth Street to Forty-second, touching the Grand Central Station, and from there through Forty-second Street to Broadway. At the Forty-second Street turn the network of surface tracks and the many sewer and other underground pipes will offer considerable interference and will have to be carefully looked after.

"I expect to have the entire road finished in three years. It will be important for me to do so, as I will have to pay the interest on the bonds as fast as they are issued. Plainly, it is to my interest to get the route in running order quickly, so as to begin to earn money to meet my obligations. My intention is to begin construction within fifteen days after the signing of the contract, or within a month from now. My qualifying bonds can now be delivered at any time."

ROAD TO BE LEASED.

Mr. McDonald was asked if he would run the road after it is finished, and he replied:

"I am a contractor, not a railroad man, and I guess I had better stick to my business. The road will be leased, and it will be in good hands, but it is too early now to say anything about that.

"I will employ all the men that can be advantageously used, irrespective of political affiliations. There will be several thousand engaged in various capacities."

Asked as to his observation on the labor laws in their effect upon the contract, he said that there were but two provisions of any consequence. One is the eight-hour law, and the other relates to the use of stone which must come here in the rough and be dressed. This latter provision would naturally increase the cost of masonry work, but it is a matter which has already been taken into consideration.

"But, so far as stone is concerned," said Mr. McDonald, "I am using a great quantity of the cut stone, brought here in the rough, on Jerome Park reservoir."

"Will it be necessary to provide an extensive plant?" he was asked.

"No, because the work will be let out in small sections. I will put as many sub-contractors to work as may offer themselves, provided I am satisfied they are the right men, and can do their part of the work expeditiously and properly. I shall sublet a single block, two blocks, or three blocks or more, and the sub-contractor will furnish the labor under him.

"There will be no trouble in getting rid of the earth, sand, and rock. I cannot say just where it will be dumped, but some will be utilized for filling purposes.

THE CONSTRUCTION SIMPLE.

"Constructing the tunnel will be simple, just like cellar digging, as rock work has no terrors in modern construction."

The formal notice that the contract had been awarded to him was handed to Mr. McDonald yesterday afternoon by Bion L. Burrows, Secretary of the Rapid Transit Commission.

In speaking yesterday upon the operation of the road, Controller Coler said that the contractor has the right to lease the road with the consent of the Rapid Transit Commission. This body, he added, would not object to such a step on his part if he could satisfy the board of the capability and responsibility of the sub-lessee. The main object, Mr. Coler said, is to have the road run efficiently and in a manner to give the public good service.

A rumor was current during the day that the road would be eventually turned over to the Metropolitan people, but this could not be verified.

The Commissioners will meet in a few days to discuss the issue of the bonds the money from which will be furnished as needed.

Mr. Coler said further during the day that as soon as the contract is signed the Commission will take up the question of extending the road to the Battery and thence to South Brooklyn. "I believe the Mayor will be in favor of it also," he said, "as it follows logically what we have already done."

Alexander E. Orr, President of the Commission, again made the statement yesterday that the tunnel is only a beginning in the city's rapid transit ventures.

"The problem," he said, "is not yet solved, by any means. The tunnel is good as far as it goes, but this is a growing city, and there will still exist a problem when this road is finished.

WANTS BROADWAY TUNNEL.

"If anybody shall come along with a good plan for rapid transit we will be obliged to consider it if he makes his case good and can show that the city will be benefited. Doubtless some day we will see a tunnel running under Broadway. It was, in my estimation, a mistake not to have the tunnel there before putting it anywhere else. The Broadway propery owners thought, however, that it would injure their property values. It is not at all unlikely that before this tunnel has been running very long these same property owners will come to the conclusion that they want a tunnel under Broadway."

The date for the formal breaking of the ground has not yet been determined. This part of the programme rests with the Rapid Transit Commission. There seems to be a considerable sentiment for a public ceremony to which officials from neighboring cities may be asked.

In addition to the army of unemployed now in the city, the next few days, it is said, will see a great influx of laboring men from other cities, who will come here at the prospect of employment on the great undertaking. This work will obviously be a boon to labor; and, it was pointed out, the letting loose of so much money for construction, equipment, and service within the next few years, will have a notably stimulating effect in numerous lines of commerce.

Roughly speaking, so it was said yesterday, the iron, steel, and granite to be used in the construction of the system will approximate in value $12,000,000, while the labor account may reach a sum not far from $15,000,000.

METROPOLIS COMPANY'S BID.

Mr. Hough on Failure of Combined Interests to Compete,

The rapid transit construction contract awarded to John B. McDonald has caused disappointment, as has been intimated, to the various interests which were combined with the Metropolis Company. Among the rumors as to the failure of this combination to compete was one which gained considerable credence yesterday. It was to the effect that David L. Hough, President of the United Company, had at the last moment withdrawn his share of the required certified check of $150,000.

Both Mr. Hough and his counsel, A. C. Hume, deny this. When Mr. Hume was asked about the rumor last night, he said:

"I know all about this affair, but I am not sure I am ready to talk now."

Mr. Hume then consulted with Mr. Hough, who on his own behalf said:

"Some of the published stories are hardly worth dignifying by a reply. I devoted many months and considerable money to the perfecting of my plans preparatory to making a bid for the tunnel. I was at the head of the United Engineering and Contracting Company, which is doing the engineering work for the Terminal Railroad and Tunnel Company. We were prepared with our bid when it was suggested we join with the Metropolis Company. The proposition was absolutely fair, and we went into it because it was represented to us that there were certain people in the company.

"There was no dispute about our share of the work. I did not withdraw on that account.

"None of the bidders got together until last Saturday, and then we did not come to a final understanding until Sunday. On Monday we met at a certain Wall Street bank prepared with our certified checks, but the representative of the Metropolis Company failed to show up in time, so I withdrew.

"I believe that it was entirely due to an accident that the agent of the financiers did not put in an appearance at the proper time."

Both Mr. Hough and Mr. Hume declined positively to disclose the names of the men back of the Metropolis Company further than to say that Frederick B. Esler was its President.

From some of those interested it was learned that among the Directors were Charles L. Sprague, Edward Lauterbach, W. Seward Webb, and Gen. Charles Miller of Franklin, Penn.

When asked if John C. Sheehan had any interest in the Metropolis Company, Mr. Hough replied:

"No, he has none now; he was out of it before we combined to make our bid."

MR. WHITNEY TO MR. ORR.

Declares the Metropolitan Will Do All It Can to Aid the Rapid Transit Construction.

President Alexander E. Orr, of the Rapid Transit Commission, yesterday received the following letter from William C. Whitney:

"New York, Jan. 16, 1900.
"871 Fifth Avenue.

"My Dear Mr. Orr:

"I cannot begin this day without offering to you and your associates my sincere congratulations upon the success of your long labor.

"It is apparent you have responsible and capable parties bidding and the work will necessarily be completed.

"The Metropolitan Company, I promise you, will do all in its power to aid the work, no matter which bid you accept, and will loyally stand by your efforts in every way. Yours very truly,

"W. C. WHITNEY.

"To Alexander E. Orr, Chairman.

"I should say perhaps that the company has no connection with nor responsibility for either bid. The credit of undertaking this great work belongs to others, but we will aid them in all ways possible."

THE MANHATTAN WILL BUILD.

Elevated Road to be Extended from 177th Street to Bedford Park Station—Work Begins Soon.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—The State Railroad Commission to-day received from George J. Gould, President of the Manhattan Railway Company of New York City, a letter announcing that the road will extend its lines on the east side from One Hundred and Seventy-seventh Street to the Bronx Park at Bedford Park Station. The letter from Mr. Gould is as follows:

"Gentlemen: Referring to your communication of Jan. 10, in answer thereto I beg to inclose certified copy of action taken by the Executive Committee of the Manhattan Railway Company at its meeting to-day authorizing the immediate extension of its east side lines from One Hundred and Seventy-seventh Street to the Bronx Park at Bedford Park Station. Respectfully yours,

"GEORGE J. GOULD, President."

The Executive Committee of the Manhattan Railway Company met at the office of the company on Tuesday, all the members of the committee being present, and adopted the following preamble and resolutions:

"Whereas, The Board of Railroad Commissioners, on the third day of January, 1900, have recommended to this company that it proceed without delay to construct its railroad on its route from One Hundred and Seventy-seventh Street to Bedford Park Station.

"Resolved, That the Manhattan Railway Company accepts said recommendation of the Board of Railroad Commissioners, and will proceed to carry the same into effect.

"Resolved, That the officers of the company, with the approval of the Executive Committee, are authorized to enter into the necessary contracts for the extension and construction of the railroad of this company from One Hundred and Seventy-seventh Street to Bedford Park Station, and that the new construction be adapted for the use of electricity upon the plans heretofore adopted by this company, and that it proceed so that the new portion of the railroad, from One Hundred and Seventy-seventh Street to Bedford Park Station, may be occupied for purposes of travel at the same time that the electrical equipment of the company's railroad on Third Avenue is completed south of One Hundred and Seventy-seventh Street."

"PUTS AND CALLS" PROHIBITED

Chicago Board of Trade Takes Final Action, Stopping All Privilege Trading—About 300 Brokers Affected.

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—Trading in "puts" and "calls" on the Board of Trade was finally and absolutely prohibited by the Directors of the Board to-day, and the rule to that effect passed yesterday by the Directors was read from the gallery by Secretary Stone. At a meeting of the Directors to-day so-called privilege trading was defined as dishonorable conduct.

It is said that the action of the Directors not only prohibits the passing of money around the floor in payment for privileges, but makes it a violation of the rules to operate in puts and calls in the regular market in any way. Traders, it is said, will not be allowed to either put or call wheat or any other article by means of privileges in the course of the regular session, as is now largely the custom.

Privilege trading is said to afford a livelihood to about 300 brokers on the Board, and it is said that active agitation toward making trading in "puts" and "calls" legal will be the result, the agitation taking the form of attempts at legislation.

BRYAN TO MEET LEADERS.

Accepts Invitation to Dine at the Democratic Club—Not Expected to Make a Speech.

William Jennings Bryan yesterday sent a telegram from Frankfort, Ky., to John W. Keller, President of the Democratic Club, signifying his acceptance of Mr. Keller's invitation to a dinner to be held at the clubhouse during Mr. Bryan's visit to this city.

Mr. Bryan set no date for the dinner, but Mr. Keller hopes to have it take place on next Tuesday evening. As yet it has not been decided who among the Democratic leaders of the Greater New York shall take part in the dinner, but it is Mr. Keller's intention to have as many as can conveniently be accommodated in the large dining hall of the clubhouse. This room will seat about 100 persons, and it is possible that that number will be asked to dine with Mr. Bryan. Before and after the dinner an informal reception will be held at which members of the club will be presented to Mr. Bryan.

According to present plans, Mr. Bryan will not be expected to make a speech either at the dinner or at the reception. The intention is to regard him as a distinguished Democrat, who is accepting the hospitality of a club member, and all formality will, as far as possible, be avoided.

Bryan and the Money Question.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 17.—Col. William Jennings Bryan to-night addressed a meeting at Music Hall, held under the direction of the Cincinnati Bimetallic Council. In the course of his speech he said he had been asked to drop the financial question; but he believed in the double standard, and as to dropping the money question, there was no man in the Nation big enough to let that question fall in such a way as to break it.

THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

Plans for Seating Delegates Are Being Perfected—Newspapers Apply for Seats.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Senator Hanna, Senator Scott, Joseph H. Manley, and the architect of the Republican National Convention Hall at Philadelphia, together with Mr. Shields, Chairman of the Philadelphia Convention Committee, met this morning at the house of Senator Hanna to consider the preliminary plans for the arrangement of the convention hall.

The architect brought his sketches of the exterior and interior of the auditorium, and explained how he had divided the interior so as to conveniently place the delegates and alternates, the Executive Committee, the press, and the telegraph companies, and the spectators, who are to be provided for. It was found, after a brief consideration of the plans, that there would have to be but little alteration of the original sketches in order to bring all the delegates and alternates, some 1,800 in number, within a space that corresponds to the orchestra of a theatre. This will be accomplished by pushing back the stage a short distance and advancing the floor seats.

The proposed plan will seat the working representatives of the press, to the number of about 500, immediately in front of and at both sides of the presiding officer's desk. Part of the newspaper men will have seats lower than the stage, so that from the stage the audience can be seen over their heads. The newspaper men seated at each side of the stage will be raised above the stage so that they may all have an unobstructed view of the convention.

Applications have been pouring in upon the Educational Committee for places for representatives of the press ever since the place and date were fixed. It will be at least two months, says Mr. Manley, before the assignments of seats will be made. A local committee in Philadelphia, acting with members of the press and the standing committee of press correspondents at Washington, will agree upon a basis of distribution and the seats will be assigned on some basis satisfactory to all concerned.

That the National Committee will be obliged to revise some of the applications for seats may be assumed when it is stated, on the authority of a member of the National Committee, that one New York paper has asked for sixty seats in the convention for the use of its force during the sessions. It will get something less than that.

A GERMAN-AMERICAN WANTED.

If Republican and from the West, He May Get a Vice Presidential Nomination.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—A row of New York candidates for the Vice Presidency having been bowled out, leaving only Lieut. Gov. Woodruff in the attitude of an expectant, the expected agitation for a candidate from another section has begun. With the utterances of Senator Scott of West Virginia to-day favoring the nomination of a Western man, and possibly a Republican acceptable to the German voters, there is at once the apparent desire to draw back the large German vote that has been suspected of a waning interest in the Republican Party.

"The Republican Party should nominate a good Western man," said Senator Scott to-day. "It is not yet settled by a great deal that the place is to go to the East, and there is little use in that notion becoming fixed. A good Western man stands a splendid chance for the nomination. There is Senator Spooner of Wisconsin. He would make an ideal candidate. There is also Henry C. Payne, from the same State. Another strong man would be Gen. Harrison Gray Otis of California. Any one of these men would give strength to the Republican ticket."

Senator Scott is a member of the Republican National Committee. He is a member of the Special Committee of that body which has charge of the convention to be held in Philadelphia and met with the special committee this morning to consider plans which had been submitted by the Philadelphia people for a convention hall. Senator Scott is also one of a number of Republicans who believe that it will be well to give recognition to the Germans in some way. If this cannot be done by the nomination of a prominent German-American the next best thing is said to be the nomination of a man acceptable to the Germans and in whom they have confidence.

New Jersey politicians have not concluded to give up all idea of a candidate to succeed the late Mr. Hobart. They say that had Mr. Hobart lived he would have been renominated. This, it is claimed, morally gives the office to New Jersey. Under these arguments the politicians are trimming their sails for a fight for Attorney General Griggs, if he will permit the use of his name.

CAMPAIGN MONEY TO BE PAID.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 17.—President Burk of the Citizens' Convention Association to-day emphatically denied the report sent from Washington that the committee was unable to redeem its pledge of $100,000 for the National Committee to open the campaign. He asserts that no fear of failure is entertained, and that the $100,000 will be forthcoming. William L. Elkins of this city is said to have remarked to Senator Hanna:

"Don't worry over that $100,000 promised the National Committee, Senator. If it is not made up by the time you need it, call upon me, and I will make good the deficiency."

No City Lighting Plant for Bayonne.

Bayonne will not own its own electric lighting plant as proposed, as City Attorney Benny has given an opinion holding that the city has not the power to do so. The Committee on Water, Streets and Drainage has drawn a new lighting contract with a private concern now doing the work, but it is claimed by some of the Councilmen that the rate is too high, and the matter has been held over for investigation.

MAZET COMMITTEE COSTS

Over $9,000 Spent for Dinners, Luncheons, and Hotel Bills.

MAZET'S EXPENSES WERE $554

Included $20 for Flowers for Funeral of J. C. Crawford—One Hotel Received Over $7,000.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—Official announcement was made at the Controller's office this afternoon that $46,066 had been paid out up to date for bills incurred by the late Mazet investigating committee which was appointed by the last Assembly to examine into the workings of the New York City departments.

The amount appropriated for the use of the committee was $50,000, and it is admitted to-night by members of the committee that it will be necessary to ask the present Legislature for an additional sum of money in order to pay all outstanding indebtedness, including the fees of Frank Moss, counsel to the committee, and his associates, who have up to this time only received $4,000. It is not known how much more money will be asked for, but it is said that at the lowest figure $25,000 will be needed.

A thorough investigation to-day of the vouchers on file in Controller Morgan's office disclosed the amounts paid out of the Mazet Committee's appropriation and the purposes for which the money was spent. All orders for money were signed by Chairman Mazet and approved by Speaker Nixon. The following table will show how most of the money was disposed of:

ITEMIZED EXPENSE ACCOUNT.

Paid to counsel on account:
Frank Moss	$2,000.00
John Proctor Clarke	1,000.00
Francis E. Laimbeer	1,000.00
Personal expenses of members:
Robert Mazet, Chairman	554.57
Edward R. Fallows	189.37
Benjamin Hoffman	76.50
Thomas M. Castello	428.13
Anthony J. Boland	536.15
Harris Wilson	39.92
James B. McEwan	113.34
Amounts paid to order of Frank Moss for salaries of employes, including detectives and subpoena servers and other expenses, exclusive of fees of stenographers	15,849.18
Expenses of Sergeants at Arms:
James C. Crawford	756.16
Frank V. Johnston	716.66
Fees of stenographers	11,293.50
Salaries of doorkeepers, janitors, messengers, &c.	1,405.12
Hotels, dinners, luncheons, &c., for members of the committee and attachés	9,229.20
Miscellaneous charges	165.40
Total	$45,425.20

All office expense incurred by counsel such as pay for typewriters, clerks, agents, subpoena servers, &c., was paid to Mr. Moss, who employed his own assistants. In many of the bills submitted by Mr. Moss there were charges for various sums paid for "services of persons whose names cannot be divulged." Mr. Moss hired his detectives from W. L. Sayer. An item in Mr. Moss's bill, which was paid on May 25, was "for furniture for office of counsel," which amounted to $131.83. In two of Mr. Moss's bills there appears the name of Birdie J. Moss, who received small amounts for services rendered as a stenographer.

Among the items in Chairman Mazet's personal expense bill, which was paid to him on Oct. 17 last, there appears a charge of $20 for flowers sent to the funeral of James C. Crawford on Oct. 4. Mr. Crawford served as Sergeant at Arms of the Mazet committee up to the time of his death. Mr. Mazet also paid out money for "confidential services" performed by persons whose names cannot be divulged.

All the members of the committee disposed of a good deal of money for messengers, telegrams, telephone charges, railroad fares, and luncheons and dinners on trains going to and from Albany to New York and from their homes to New York and return. These meals were exclusive of those eaten by the members and attachés of the committee while in New York and which were paid for separately.

Of the amount paid for hotel bills, the Hotel Cadillac received $7,166.27 for "rooms, restaurant, and livery." Of the balance the greater part went to F. J. Allen of the Astor House restaurant for luncheons and dinners. The hotel bills paid by the State are regarded as being rather heavy in view of the fact that four of the seven members of the committee—Messrs. Mazet, Fallows, Wilson, and Hoffman—are residents of New York City, where the sessions of the committee were held.

Much speculation is being indulged in here regarding the amount which will be allowed to Mr. Moss, John Proctor Clarke, and Francis E. Laimbeer for their services if the present Legislature grants the extra appropriation which will be asked for. A prominent Republican Assemblyman said to-night that Mr. Moss and Mr. Clarke would probably receive $10,000 each, while Mr. Laimbeer would be allowed $5,000.

His explanation of why Mr. Clarke, as associate counsel, should receive the same amount as Mr. Moss, who was chief counsel, was that Mr. Clarke was consulted all along by the committeemen, and is now engaged in revising the testimony which is to be printed for distribution. The printing and indexing will cost some more money, it being said that the indexing alone will cost in the neighborhood of $1,000.

FAMILY SPENT $4 A WEEK.

In This Way the Wilsons, Who Lived on the Co-operative Plan, Amassed a Fortune of $100,000.

Surrogate Abbott of Brooklyn heard testimony yesterday in the contest over the will of Robert Wilson. An interesting story of the lives of the Wilson family has been developed by the trial. Robert Wilson and his brothers and sisters lived together on the co-operative plan for half a century, and jointly amassed a fortune of about $100,000.

Robert Wilson was a journeyman jeweler and lived at 329 Greene Avenue, Brooklyn. In 1849 his surviving parent, his mother, died, and soon afterward Robert called a family council, at which it was agreed by him, his brother John, and his sisters, Jane, Charlotte, and Margaret, that they should all go to work, make a "family fund" of their earnings, and live together. Part of the agreement was, according to the testimony before the Surrogate, that they should live very frugally. Margaret died some years later, but the brothers and sisters continued to live together co-operatively until July, 1898, when Robert, the family "banker," died. From the savings of the five he had accumulated $80,000 in bonds and mortgages, the house 329 Greene Avenue, and some real estate in East New York.

Just prior to his death Robert made a will, by which he left one-third of the property to his brother John, in trust, and one-third to each of the surviving sisters.

John claims that he did not understand at the time the will was made that his share was left in trust, and signed a consent that the will be entered for probate. Some time later he examined the will in the Surrogate's office and for the first time learned that he could not control his share. The contest of the will was then begun.

John, in describing how the "family fund" was accumulated, said that the weekly household expenses of the family did not average more than $4.

AUTOMOBILE CAUSES RUNAWAY

Accident Near Greenwich Greatly Affects William Rockefeller, Whose Vehicle Was Responsible.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Jan. 17.—William Rockefeller a few days ago rode over from North Tarrytown to his Greenwich farm in an automobile. He was accompanied by an engineer, who was giving the Standard Oil magnate points regarding the running of the carriage, so that Mr. Rockefeller might secure a license as an engineer. All went well until Byram Hill was reached, when a horse driven by Mrs. Herbert Smith, of Round Hill, became frightened at the horseless vehicle and ran away. The carriage was overturned and Mrs. Smith and a young woman who was with her were thrown out and bruised.

Mr. Rockefeller immediately brought his vehicle to a stop, and, alighting, went to the ladies' assistance. Several small boys of the neighborhood gathered, and in the excitement of the moment Mr. Rockefeller drew from his pocket a silver half dollar and dispatched one of the youngsters to Merritt's stables in Greenwich for a carriage to take the ladies to their home.

"Who'll pay for de rig?" queried the youngster, as he started off.

Mr. Rockefeller had forgotten this important adjunct and called the boy back. He again went down in his pocket and, handing the boy a card, remarked, "You hurry off; present this card to Mr. Merritt, and that will be sufficient." Mr. Rockefeller remained at the scene of the accident until the carriage arrived, and was so nervous and excited over the affair that, although within a mile of his farm, he abandoned the trip and returned seventeen miles to his home.

Since the accident Mr. Rockefeller has had the damaged carriage repaired and has also sent a neat check to the injured ladies.

INDIANS SEEK INDEPENDENCE.

The Yaquis Offer Inducements to Americans to Come to Their Aid in Sonora.

Special to The New York Times.

EL PASO, Texas, Jan. 17.—A circular received in this city indicates that the Yaqui Indians have attempted to establish a form of civil government and proclaim the independence of Sonora. The circular is in the form of an appeal to the American people, and is signed by Manuel Sauveda, President, and Teresa Duryea, Jesus Escalente, Harry Herbot, John Dwyer, Tenebanto, and Julian Villa, members of the Junta.

The proclamation is dated Bavispe, Sonora, a town on the Bavispe River, one of the streams that further down form the Yaqui River, in an isolated region of Sierra Madres. The seat of government is located there and army headquarters at Oposura and Potan. The proclamation declares the object of the war is the independence of Sonora, "because it is not right that a superior race should submit to an inferior."

All Americans are invited to enlist and a promise is made that in the event of Yaquiri triumph no foreigners except Americans will be allowed in Sonora for ten years. The circular says that when the Americans were fighting the Spaniards the Yaquis offered the services of 2,500 soldiers fresh from the battlefield and the Mexican Government, in its hatred of the United States, prevented the Yaquis helping them and ever since has heaped injury and indignity upon the Yaquis.

It declares that the Mexican army is composed of robbers and convicts and has murdered Americans in order to put the blame on the Indians and prejudice Americans against them. Senor Francisco Mallen, Mexican Consul in this city, a cousin of Torres, commander in Sonora, was shown the circular, and said:

"The claims of the Indians are simply ridiculous. If they ever offered to assist the United States no one has heard of it. The claim to establish the independence of Sonora is absurd, as the Indians are but a small fraction of the population. The charge that the Mexicans have killed Americans is beneath contempt."

GEN. JOHN M. PALMER'S PENSION

He Refuses to Accept More Than $50 a Month and Causes the Withdrawal of a Bill Increasing It.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Gen. John M. Palmer, who was the candidate of the gold Democrats for President in 1896, is a pensioner, receiving $50 a month. Some of his friends, thinking that this pension was insufficient in view of his services to his country and the injuries he received, determined to secure, if possible, the passage of a bill doubling the amount. This, it seems, was without Gen. Palmer's knowledge. A bill increasing his pension to $100 a month was drawn and presented to Senator Cullom of Illinois, who introduced it on Dec. 6. When this came to the veteran's ears he promptly sent the following letter to the friend who informed him of it:

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 10, 1899.

My Dear Sir: I have received your note of Dec. 8. I could not accept an increase of my pension, because I have said to my friends that the present pension ($50) is what I desired. I am greatly obliged to you for your effort in my behalf, because I know it was dictated by friendship for me. Please inform Senator Cullom of my wishes. JOHN M. PALMER.

All efforts to shake the General's determination proved unavailing, and at length the letter was given to Senator Cullom. Yesterday he withdrew his bill, and in explaining the circumstances of its introduction, said: "I thought that if there was anybody in this country entitled to a pension of $100, Gen. Palmer was that man."

FAILS FOR OVER $5,000,000.

Former Chicago Real Estate Operator a Voluntary Bankrupt.

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—An indebtedness of $5,564,917, said to be the largest schedule of liabilities ever presented for discharge under the National bankruptcy act, is set forth in a petition in voluntary bankruptcy filed in the United States District Court to-day by Francis P. Owings, who was formerly interested largely in real estate in Chicago.

The petitioner built the Owings Building, now the Bedford, at Dearborn and Adams Streets, which was the first skyscraper in the West. He purchased leasehold interests in much property, and assumed a number of mortgages, which were afterward foreclosed.

Some of the creditors are: William Strong, $1,485,000; Thomas Hogan, $297,000; Valentine Turner, $594,000; Perkins Bass, $654,500; unknown owners of property at No. 67-69 and 73-75 Plymouth Place, $475,200 and $247,500, respectively; J. B. Jeffery, $274,500; C. E. Berger, $631,000; Northwestern Life Insurance Company, $150,000.

Mr. Owings is now a stock broker and operator. He has no property.

MONEY IN CHICAGO TELEPHONES.

Company Earned $676,559 Last Year and Increases Its Capital.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—Stockholders of the Chicago Telephone Company, over 41,500 shares out of a total of 50,000 being represented at the meeting, unanimously approved the proposition to increase the authorized capital stock from $5,000,000 to $15,000,000, the additional $10,000,000 to be issued from time to time as may be needed for improving and extending the plant. Chauncey Keep was elected a Director to succeed the late Norman Williams.

The financial statement showed an increase in gross earnings of $390,706, or 15.6 per cent., as compared with 1898, against an increase of 11.3 per cent. last year, 5.94 per cent. in 1897, and 11.1 per cent. in 1896. The net earnings of $676,559 were the largest in the history of the company, and, notwithstanding the increase in the dividend requirement resulting from the issuance of $663,500 new stock during the year, the surplus for the year increased $3,427.

BULLER SURPRISES BOERS

Takes Their Forces Unawares at Potgieter's Drift.

OCCUPIES THE HILLS BEYOND

Gen. Warren Crosses the

this part of the field was now ended, and the finale was a terrible fusillade all along the line, the crash of which almost drowned the incessant thunder above.

"Meanwhile a more exciting contest was in progress in the direction of Wagon Hill. At 2 o'clock a storming party, furnished by the Harrismith commando, crept slowly and cautiously along a donga in the valley which divides our posts from their camp. A few well-aimed rifle shots killed our pickets.

"Taking the advantage of every inch of cover, the Boers then gradually reached the crest of the heights. Here a body of light horse was posted, but they were forced to retire before the advance of the Free Staters there being no breastworks for defense on the western shoulder of the hill. With little to impede their progress the enemy soon came to an emplacement, where they surprised working parties of the Gordon Highlanders and the Sixteenth Rifles.

"Lieut. Digby Jones of the Royal Engineers, collecting a handful of men, made a gallant effort to hold the position but the numbers were against him, and, after a stubborn resistance, he was driven back, and the enemy got possession of the summit. Even then, however, the Free Staters were afraid to venture far or to face the heavy fire from the sangar. Here it was that Lieut. Magnaghten and thirty of the Gordons were captured, although not until every man among them was wounded.

"At 5 o'clock Col. Edwards, with two squadrons of Light Horse, arrived upon the scene, and the Twenty-first Battery of the Royal Field Artillery, under Major Hewitt, came into action, preventing the storming party being reinforced from the Boer camp.

"At the same time the Eighteenth Hussars and the Fifth Lancers checked the movement from the spruit on our right flank. Nevertheless our position at this point had become critical. Our men had retired for cover behind the northern slope, while the enemy had made their way into the pass dividing them from the hill. Major Bowen rallied a few of the Rifles, but fell while leading them to the charge. His example was at once followed by Lieut. Tod, but the latter met the same fate.

"The enemy were making good the footing they had already secured in the emplacement when Major Miller Walnutt, calling the scattered Gordons together, charged in and drove them back. Having thus cleared the ground he joined Lieut. Digby Jones in a newly prepared emplacement on the western shoulder.

"A pause ensued for a time, but the Boers were not yet finally beaten. Taking advantage of the storm now raging, they essayed to capture the position by another rush. Three of their leaders reached the parapet, but were shot down by Lieut. Digby Jones and Lieut. Walnutt, the latter of whom also fell.

"The renewed check effectually discouraged the assailants, and the deadly duel was now practically at an end. Nevertheless small parties of the braver spirits kept up a murderous fire on our men from behind the rocks."

"The moment had evidently arrived to strike the final blow, and Col. Park quickly issued the necessary orders. Three companies of Devonshires, led by Capt. Lafone, Lieut. Field, and Lieut. Masterson, made a brilliant charge across the open under a terrific fire, and fairly hurled the enemy down the hill at the point of the bayonet. In the course of the struggle Capt. Lafone and Lieut. Field were killed and Lieut. Masterson received no fewer than ten wounds.

"This was a fitting close to a struggle that had lasted sixteen hours, during which every rifle and gun had been brought to bear. Our position was now secure. The attacks on the north and east had also been repulsed, and the grand assault had failed all along the line.

"The Boers lost heavily. They admit that the engagement was the most severe blow their arms had sustained since the opening of the campaign. They were confident of their ability to capture the town and had called upon reinforcements from Colenso to assist at the expected victory. Our losses also were considerable.

"Early in the morning the Earl of Ava was mortally wounded while accompanying Col. Ian Hamilton to the scene of action.

"The garrison awaits the coming of relief with renewed confidence."

FIGHTING ON MODDER RIVER.

MODDER RIVER, Cape Colony, Jan. 17.—There was a demonstration in force, under Gen. Methuen, yesterday, a division being engaged, with the object of ascertaining the strength and disposition of the Boer force, and also in order to try to withdraw the Boers from Kimberley, where, lately, they have been active. The British discovered the Boers in great force and being reinforced from the direction of Jacobsdal.

At 4:30 the artillery opened fire, the shells dropping in the Boer intrenchments with great precision. The attack was directed against the Boer left. The firing continued until sunset, mostly with artillery, although the Guards, on the right, fired some long-range volleys. The Boers reserved their fire until the British were returning to camp, in the darkness, when six shells followed them. There were no casualties among the British troops.

FRENCH'S VICTORY CONFIRMED.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The War Office has received the following dispatch from Lord Roberts, dated Cape Town, Jan. 16, evening:

"On the 15th the Boers made a determined attack on French's advance post, held by the New Zealand Mounted Rifles and a detachment of the First Yorkshires.

"The Boers were repulsed, having twenty killed. Their wounded estimated not less than fifty. The attack was preceded by a long-range fire from one gun.

"Otherwise the situation is unchanged."

Gen. French's success, though consoling to the British, is recognized as being only a side issue. The country is grateful to learn that the British losses in this engagement were only six killed and five wounded.

The news that two transports with troops have been ordered from Cape Town to Port Elizabeth indicates that substantial reinforcements are on their way to Gen. French.

RENSBURG, Cape Colony, Jan. 16.—The Boers opened an artillery duel this morning, using a captured British fifteen-pounder, which the British gunners ultimately silenced. The British kept up a searching fire all day long on the Boer kopjes, and also dragged up another gun to the summit of Coleskop.

A Cabinet Council To-morrow.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The Ministers are gathering for a Cabinet Council, which will probably be held to-morrow.

BOERS SAID TO FIRE ON WOMEN.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The following dispatch has been received from Mafeking, under date of Jan. 3:

"The enemy began a renewed and vigorous bombardment Jan. 1, and deliberately fired six nine-pounder shells into the women's laager, killing a little girl and wounding two children. The strategical position is unchanged."

"Col. Baden-Powell sent a strong protest to Commandant Snyman against shelling the women's laager.

"Two mules killed by a shell were eaten by the Kafirs."

LORENZO MARQUES, Jan. 15.—A dispatch by way of Beira, dated Jan. 11, announces that Col. Plumer has arrived near Mochudi, about 100 miles north of Mafeking, with a portion of his forces from Tuli.

WARNED TO REMOVE THE WOMEN

LONDON, Jan. 17.—A special dispatch from Cape Town, dated to-day, says Gen. Gatacre has protested to the Boer commandant at Stormberg against allowing the wives and daughters of the Boer soldiers to reside in or near the camp.

STERKSTROOM, Jan. 17.—Gen. Gatacre has warned the Boer Commandant that, if the women are not removed, they must take their chance of being shot in the event of an attack. All is quiet here.

SAYS BOERS ARE DISHEARTENED.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The correspondent of The Times at Lorenzo Marques, telegraphing yesterday, says:

"An old British resident in the Boer Republic, who has just been expelled, informs me that 10 per cent. of the Free State commandos are Britishers or British born, who have been compelled to go to the front. The Boers are so disappointed and disheartened that he predicts that a single big reverse would be followed by a wholesale dispersal of the Free Staters, who are disgusted with the Transvaalers.

"They have no money and no food stuffs except unground wheat and mealies, in the Free State, and the payment of official salaries has been suspended. In consequence of defective transport, the men at the front often go for days without food. Rifle ammunition is running short, and what was condemned by Gen. Joubert at the beginning of the war as dangerous is now being used.

"A correspondent of The Standard and Diggers' News says that the Boers in Natal are quarrelsome, cantankerous, overweary of waiting and of the hardships of camp life, and that they criticise their Generals.

"Information from Pretoria says the Boer Government refuses to accept the claim for licenses made by absentee Outlanders. It is difficult to trust to the efficiency of Portuguese control over goods passing through here to the Transvaal. There is little doubt that goods are smuggled over the border; but it is impossible to say whether these are contraband, owing to the fact that the Boer agents command unlimited money, and that the Portuguese officials can easily be bribed or hoodwinked."

NO MORE VOLUNTEERS WANTED.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The War Office declines the offer of a Third Battalion of Northamptonshire militia, saying that no more militia will be sent abroad. It seems probable that only 5,000, instead of 10,000 yeomanry will be mobilized.

The War Office sent for Lord Strathcona yesterday, and he had a long interview with the officials, particularly Gen. Sir Evelyn Wood. The details of his force have been arranged and cabled to Canada.

Mr. J. J. Van Alen's offer to give a field hospital section, to consist of three wagons, twenty-five cots, and twenty transport animals, with all the appliances, has been accepted by the War Office. The section will be called the American Section of the hospital to which it is attached.

The Durban correspondent of The Standard, telegraphing Tuesday, says:

"The Government has canceled the orders calling out the rifle associations for active service.

"It is reported that smallpox has broken out in the Boer camps in Natal."

CAPE OFFICIALS SNUB ROBERTS.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The Cape Town correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, telegraphing Jan. 16, says:

"Attorney General Solomon, who went to meet Lord Roberts and Lord Kitchener, informed his colleagues in the Cape Cabinet that, if none of them went, he would not refrain from going. All declined. Mr. Schreiner (the Premier) sent his secretary. Mr. Solomon was hooted by the crowd; but his action is now approved.

"Lords Roberts and Kitchener have taken buildings for permanent offices."

Revival Meeting at Ladysmith.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The Rev. Allen Senser, a Wesleyan army Chaplain in London, says that prayer meetings have been held daily for some time in Ladysmith and been regularly attended by more than one thousand men, with the result that there has been a marked spiritual revival.

Australian Volunteers Depart.

SYDNEY, New South Wales, Jan. 17.—The departure of the second Australian contingent for South Africa to-day took place amid unprecedented scenes. The streets were decorated and were thronged with enthusiastic crowds of demonstrators. Outside the United States Consulate was a streamer bearing the words, "America wishes Australia's patriots godspeed."

ARMS SHIPPED TO THE BOERS.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 17.—Some well-grounded rumors that large shipments of arms were being sent from New York to South Africa for the use of the Boers has directed attention to the two firms in this city who are doing a big business in guns and ammunition.

While the officials of the Winchester Repeating Arms Company and the Marlin Fire Arms Company were both non-committal, neither would deny that the arms were for the Boers. They admit that they are doing a big business now, larger than the season would warrant, and practically concede that this rush is due to orders from the Transvaal. The arms and ammunition are shipped to New York, and then under the guise of provisions, &c., find their way aboard tramp steamers for South Africa.

PRO-BOER MEETING IN BOSTON.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 17.—At a large meeting held in Faneuil Hall to-night resolutions of sympathy with the Boers were adopted, after a number of speeches which provoked much enthusiasm. George Fred Williams was the principal speaker.

The resolutions recite that the struggle of the Boers is essentially the same as that in which this country engaged over a century ago, and that the meeting extended its "heartiest sympathies to the brave burghers of our sister republics of the Transvaal and Orange Free State in the gallant contest they are making for the maintenance of their freedom."

The action of Great Britain—"the bully among the nations"—is denounced, and President McKinley is urged to construe strictly the neutrality laws against Great Britain. Protest is also made against the seizure of American goods, and finally it is provided that copies of the resolutions are to be forwarded to President McKinley and his Cabinet, President Krüger of the Transvaal, Dr. Leyds, the Transvaal representative in Europe; President Steyn of the Orange Free State, and Joseph Chamberlain, the British Colonial Secretary.

Speeches were also made by George F. Hollis, former United States Consul at Cape Town; P. J. Flatley, who presided in the absence of A. E. Pillsbury; Prof. C. Miller Reid of Harvard University, and others, and letters were read from Senator George F. Hoar and others assuring the meeting of their entire sympathy with the objects for which it was held.

WARSHIPS GUARD TRANSPORTS.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 17.—It is stated here that there are British warships within easy reach of the Mississippi assigned to the duty of escorting the mule transports when they shall have been loaded with animals at New Orleans for South Africa.

The presence of the warships in the Gulf waters is said to have been brought about by advices received at the British War Office in London to the effect that two old hulks had been fitted out by American sympathizers with the Boers with the avowed intention of capturing and sinking the mule transports as soon as they left the mouth of the river on their voyage across the Atlantic. These advices, it is said, were cabled from London to Capt. Marsham, in charge of the buying of mules in this country for the British Army.

Capt. Marsham to-day admitted that there were British warships within easy call of the river's mouth, and, while not absolutely denying the fact that he had received information of the alleged Boer expedition, he reasoned against the possibility of the expedition being in existence.

FRANCE AND THE BOER WAR.

Max O'Rell Hissed for Speaking Kindly of the English.

Paul Blouet, the novelist and lecturer, better known as Max O'Rell, arrived yesterday by the steamer Oceanic. He will lecture in the South for several months.

In speaking of the war in the Transvaal and the sentiment in France M. Blouet said: "I came near being mobbed in France because I said a few nice things about the English. In Rouen and several other cities where I lectured I was hissed every time I tried to say good things of the English.

"As to the outcome of the war, there is no doubt. The English will win, but they will have nothing to swagger about. This is the sentiment in France. They say, 'Here is the nation which has been boasting that she could fight the world compelled to send all of her fighting men against a few thousand farmers. These farmers are without uniform or training, and yet they have been giving the English a good licking.'"

Another passenger on the Oceanic was Robert Barr, the author, who is here to write a novel on American life. He will stay in Washington, D. C.

BUNDESRATH TO BE RELEASED.

Satisfactory Settlement Between Great Britain and Germany Is Now Confidently Expected.

BERLIN, Jan. 17.—An official telegram from London says the British Government has declared that now the inquiry into the seizure of the Bundesrath is concluded her release may be expected immediately and a satisfactory settlement of the pending difficulties may be regarded as certain. Measures, it is added, will also be taken to prevent a recurrence of similar incidents. The Foreign Office officials informed a correspondent that Great Britain admits no contraband of war was found on the Bundesrath and promises that the steamer will be released to-day or to-morrow.

This news, together with the announcement that Great Britain offers a guarantee against the repetition of such occurrences, was received in German official circles with unqualified satisfaction. The evening papers got the news so late that most of them printed it without comment.

The Freisinnige Zeitung says:

"England's backing down is due to Germany's powerful political attitude. Germany would command respect even without a big navy."

The Lokal Anzeiger says that England will have to pay full damages to the line for the seizures. The Deutsche Tages-Zeitung says the release of the Bundesrath will not stop a thorough discussion regarding the seizures in the Reichstag.

The Leipsic Neueste Nachrichten prints a London letter asserting that Mr. Chamberlain, at a diplomatic dinner in London on Jan. 12, boasted that Germany must receive a reminder that England is still a great power, and that therefore the seizures were made.

HAMBURG, Jan. 17.—A cablegram received by the owners of the Bundesrath, at Hamburg, says all the cargo of that steamer has been discharged and entirely agrees with the manifest. The Prize Court has not yet rendered a decision.

SENATE CONSIDERS SEIZURES.

The Hale Resolution, After Being Amended, Is Adopted.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—The Senate to-day adopted the Hale resolution relating to the seizure of flour in Delagoa Bay. This resolution as it passed the Senate reads:

"Whereas, It is alleged that property of citizens of the United States, not contraband of war, has been lately seized by the military authorities of Great Britain in and near Delagoa Bay, South Africa, without good reason for the same, and contrary to the accepted principles of international law; and

"Whereas, It is alleged said property is now unjustly detained by the military authorities of Great Britain, in disregard of the rights of the owners of the same, therefore

"Resolved, by the Senate of the United States, that the President is hereby requested to send to the Senate, if, in his opinion not incompatible with the public interest, all information in possession of the State Department relating to said alleged seizure and detention, and also to inform the Senate what steps have been taken in requesting the restoration of property taken and detained as aforesaid."

As adopted, the resolution was materially changed from its original form by amendments offered by various Senators. A brief discussion was also indulged in, during the course of which it was suggested that the resolution as originally framed was of such a nature as to give offense to a friendly power.

STATE PAID SHEPARD'S BILLS.

Witnesses Say Private Accounts of the Soldiers' Home Commandant Were Settled with Public Funds.

Special to The New York Times.

BATH, Jan. 17.—The first witness before the Court of Inquiry at the Soldiers' Home to-day was Major Joseph P. Cleary, Chief of Police of Rochester, and a trustee of the home. He is a candidate for Colonel Shepard's place at the home.

Four witnesses were called to-day by the opponents of Col. Shepard to show that during the years 1897, 1898 and 1899 he caused to be paid out of the home funds the personal bills of himself and his family for telephone and telegraph messages, express and freight charges and for transportation of his personal friends amounting to about $775. The witnesses were George H. Parker, station agent of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad; A. T. Foster, agent of the Erie; H. A. Tingley, manager of the local Western Union office, and Miss Jennie Davison, formerly chief operator at the telephone exchange. They all testified that the personal bills of Col. and Mrs. Shepard were charged to and paid out of the State funds.

Mr. Parker also testified that Col. Shepard was intoxicated one evening at the station and that he acted strangely while waiting for a train.

Fred McConnell, a clerk in the Quartermaster's office, was also examined. He said he had seen Col. Shepard intoxicated, and that he had spoken disparagingly of some of the trustees, particularly Gen. Sickles, whom he characterized as an "old hog." McConnell also testified concerning the vouchers for the Colonel's private bills, which he had brought with him to headquarters.

Moses Davison, a dry goods merchant of Bath, was the next witness. By this witness it was shown that in July, 1898, Col. Shepard purchased at his store a bill of dry goods, and that the same was paid out of the $30 which was allowed him each month for groceries outside the home. During this time Col. Shepard and family were boarding at the home hospital dining room.

Lafayette Small of Bath, who was formerly employed as a carpenter at the home, testified that he had seen Col. Shepard intoxicated. Frank Smith, a police officer of Bath, at one time employed at the home, said that Col. Shepard was intoxicated one morning about 6:30 o'clock, and that he used profane and indecent language on that occasion.

The committee adjourned until to-morrow morning at 9:30 o'clock.

WAR IN PEOPLE'S CLUB.

Dissensions in the People's Club, founded by Charles Sprague Smith in connection with the People's Institute, threaten, it is said, to lead to the extinction of the former organization. The club was started last March to replace the saloon as a meeting place for workingmen and has met with success. Until recently it had 500 members. At present the club numbers barely 300, divided into two bitterly hostile factions. Moreover, Prof. Smith, who is President, has, it is said, threatened that financial assistance given by the Institute to the club will be withdrawn.

The immediate cause of the present state of affairs is a dispute between the Membership Committee and the President of the club. A certain member has been conspicuous by his criticisms of rulings. About two months ago Prof. Smith announced that he had invited a gentleman to speak. The member in question declared that the matter should have been referred to the Programme Committee, and, so it is said, made use of some expressions after the meeting that were reported to Prof. Smith, and which the latter regarded as being improper and insulting. Charges of improper conduct were preferred, and were considered by the Membership Committee. The latter, by a vote of 6 to 1, decided that the matter did not call for action. The report of the committee was sustained.

At the last meeting, held on Jan. 4, Prof. Smith demanded that the Membership Committee be asked to resign and declared that the club was on the verge of collapse. The majority then passed a resolution in accordance with the terms of Prof. Smith's request by a vote of 52 to 18.

J. H. Querling, the Financial Secretary of the club, said last evening that the question had been put within the last few days to Prof. Smith as to whether an apology from the member he objected to would not suffice to end the trouble, but that Prof. Smith replied that there would be "no compromise." "But," said Mr. Querling, "the club will go on in spite of Mr. Smith or any one else."

Prof. Smith admitted that there was dissension in the club, but said that this was almost unavoidable, considering the heterogeneous elements which constituted it.

A call for a special meeting for next Sunday afternoon has been issued.

No More Pugilism in Rochester?

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, Jan. 18.—Rochester, the home of many pugilists and formerly the scene of weekly fights under the Horton law, may have seen its last bout. Mayor Carnahan this morning refused to allow a match in this city, and gave as his reason that the Horton law is being attacked by a legislator from Monroe County.

The Rev. J. M. Atwater Dead.

The Rev. J. M. Atwater died yesterday in Cleveland, Ohio, at the age of sixty-two years. He was at one time President of Hiram College, then a professor in Eureka College, Ill., and later President of Central Christian College, at Albany, Mo. His health failing, he resigned from Central Christian College, a few months ago, and went to Cleveland for medical treatment.

HOW GEN. WAUCHOPE DIED

Graphic Details of the Battle at Magersfontein.

TRIBUTE TO THE HIGHLANDERS

Morale of the Army Seriously Impaired by Recent Defeats and the British Failure to Advance.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—Some of the most brilliant work in the way of descriptive writing ever done by British war correspondents has been appearing in the London papers during the last few days. Bennet-Burleigh's splendid description of the battle of Colenso, which was cabled in part, is not one bit finer than the account of Magersfontein by the correspondent of The Daily News. The pity of it is that the world has to wait so long for these excellent and instructive pen pictures, for, with the exception of a few efforts at local color and war reporting by the Generals themselves, the cables from South Africa are confined to the barest and often most uninteresting details.

After tracing the terrible loss suffered by the Highland Brigade at Magersfontein, The Daily News's correspondent thus writes of the burial of Gen. Wauchope:

"Three hundred yards to the rear of the little township of Modder River, just as the sun was sinking in a blaze of African splendor, on the evening of Tuesday, the 12th of December, a long, shallow grave lay exposed in the breast of the veldt. To the westward the broad river fringed with trees ran murmuringly, to the eastward the heights, still held by the enemy, scowled menacingly; north and south the veldt undulated peacefully; a few paces to the northward of that grave fifty dead Highlanders lay, dressed as they had fallen on the field of battle; they had followed their chief to the field, and they were to follow him to the grave.

APPEARANCE OF THE DEAD.

"How grim and stern those men looked as they lay face upward to the sky, with great hands clenched in the last death agony and brows still knitted with the stern lust of the strife in which they had fallen. The plaids dear to every Highland clan were represented there, and, as I looked, out of the distance came the sound of the pipes; it was the General coming to join his men. There, right under the eyes of the enemy, moved with slow and solemn tread, all that remained of the Highland Brigade. In front of them walked the Chaplain with bared head, dressed in his robes of office; then came the pipers, with their pipes, sixteen in all, and behind them, with arms reversed, moved the Highlanders, dressed in all the regalia of their regiments, and in the midst the dead General, borne by four of his comrades.

"Out swelled the pipes to the strains of 'The Flowers of the Forest,' now ringing proud and high, until the soldier's head went back in haughty defiance and eyes flashed through tears like sunlight on steel; now sinking to a moaning wail like a woman mourning for her first-born, until the proud heads dropped forward till they rested on heaving chests, and tears rolled down the wan and scarred faces and the choking sobs broke through the solemn rhythm of the march of death. Right up to the grave they marched, then broke away in companies, until the General lay in the shallow grave with a Scottish square of armed men around him; only the dead man's son and a small remnant of his officers stood with the Chaplain and the pipers while the solemn service of the Church was spoken.

"Then once again the pipes pealed out, and 'Lochaber No More' cut through the stillness like a cry of pain, until one could almost hear the widow in her Highland home mourning for the soldier she would welcome back no more. Then, as if touched by the magic of one thought, the soldiers turned their tear-damp eyes from the still form in the shallow grave toward the heights where Cronje, the 'Lion of Africa,' and his soldiers stood. Then every cheek flushed crimson, and the strong jaws set like steel, and the veins on the hands that clasped the rifle stocks swelled almost to bursting with the fervor of the grip, and that look from those silent, armed men spoke more eloquently than ever—spoke the tongues of orators. For, on each frowning face the spirit of vengeance sat, and each sparkling eye asked silently for blood. God help the Boers when next the Highland pibroch sounds. God rest the Boers' souls when the Highland bayonets charge, for neither death, nor hell, nor things above, nor things below will hold the Scots back from their blood feud.

SURROUNDED BY HIS MEN.

"At the head of the grave, at the point nearest the enemy, the General was laid to sleep, his officers grouped around him, while in line behind him his soldiers were laid in a double row, wrapped in their blankets. No shots were fired over the dead men, resting so peacefully—only the salute was given; and then the men marched campward as the darkness of an African night rolled over the far-stretching breadth of the veldt.

"To the gentlewoman who bears their General's name the Highland Brigade send their deepest sympathy. To the mothers and the wives, the sisters and the sweethearts, in cottage home by hillside and glen, they send their love and good wishes—sad will their Christmas be, sadder the new year. Yet enshrined in every womanly heart, from Queen-Empress to cottage girl, let their memory be, the memory of the men of the Highland Brigade who died at Magersfontein."

The same graphic writer thus depicts the way in which the disaster overtook the Highlanders:

"During the night it was considered expedient that the Highland Brigade, about 4,000 strong, under Gen. Wauchope, should get close up to the lines of the foe to make it possible to charge the heights. At midnight the gallant but ill-fated General moved cautiously through the darkness toward the kopje where the Boers were most strongly intrenched. They were led by a guide, who was supposed to know every inch of the country, out into the darkness of an African night. The brigade marched in line of quarter column, each man stepping cautiously and slowly, for they knew that any sound meant death. Every order was given in a hoarse whisper, and in whispers it was passed along the ranks from man to man. Nothing was heard as they moved toward the gloomy, steel-fronted heights but the brushing of their feet in the veldt grass and the deep-drawn breaths of the marching men.

"So onward, until the dark hour on the morning of Monday. Then out of the darkness a rifle rang, sharp and clear, a herald of disaster—a soldier had tripped in the dark over the hidden wires laid down by the enemy. In a second, in the twinkling of an eye, the searchlights of the Boers fell broad and clear as the noonday sun on the ranks of the doomed Highlanders, though it left the enemy concealed in the shadows of the frowning mass of hills behind them. For one brief moment the Scots seemed paralyzed by the suddenness of their discovery, for they knew that they were huddled together like sheep within fifty yards of the trenches of the foe. Then, clear above the confusion, rolled the voice of the General—'Steady, men, steady!'—and, like an echo to the veterans, out come the crash of nearly a thousand rifles not fifty paces from them. The Highlanders reeled before the shock like trees before the tempest. Their best, their bravest fell in that wild hail of lead. Gen. Wauchope was down, riddled with bullets; yet gasping, dying, bleeding from every vein, the Highland chieftain raised himself on his hands and knees, and cheered his men forward. Men and officers fell in heaps together.

BLACK WATCH'S CHARGE.

"The Black Watch charged, and the Gordons and the Seaforths, with a yell that stirred the British camp below, rushed onward—onward to death or disaster. The accursed wires caught them around the legs until they floundered like trapped wolves, and all the time the rifles of the foe sang the song of death in their ears. Then they fell back, broken and beaten, leaving nearly 1,300 dead and wounded just where the broad breast of the grassy veldt melts into the embrace of the rugged African hills, and an hour later the dawning came of the dreariest day that Scotland has known for a generation past. Of her officers, the flower of her chivalry, the pride of her breeding, but few remained to tell the tale, a sad tale truly, but one untainted with dishonor or smirched with disgrace, for up those heights under similar circumstances even a brigade of devils could scarce have hoped to pass. All that mortal men could do the Scots did; they tried; they failed, they fell, and there is nothing left us now but to mourn for them and avenge them.

"All that fateful day our wounded men lay close to the Boer lines under a blazing sun; over their heads the shots of friends and foes passed, without ceasing. All day long the battle raged; scarcely could we see the foe—all that met our eyes was the rocky heights that spoke with tongue of flames whenever our troops drew near. Once our guards made a brilliant dash at the trenches, and, like a torrent, their resistless valor bore all before them, and for a few brief moments they got within hitting distance of the foe. Well did they avenge the slaughter of the Scots; the bayonets, like tongues of flame, passed above or below the rifles' guard, and swept through brisket and breastbone. Out of their trenches the Guardsmen tossed the Boers, as men in English harvest fields toss the hay when the reapers' scythes have whitened the cornfields; and the human streams were plentiful where the British Guardsmen stood. Then they fell back, for the fire from the heights above them fell thick as the spume of the surf on an Australian rock-ribbed coast. But the Guards had proved to the Boers that, man to man, the Briton was his master.

METHUEN'S VAIN STRUGGLE.

"In vain all that day Methuen tried by every rule he knew to draw the enemy; vainly the Lancers rode recklessly to induce those human rock limpets to come out and cut them off. Cronje knew the mettle of our men, and an ironic laugh played around his iron mouth, and still he staid within his native fastness, but death sat ever at his elbow, for our gunners dropped the lyddite shells and the howling shrapnel all along his lines, until the trenches ran blood, and many of his guns were silenced. In the valley behind his outer line of hills his dead lay piled in hundreds, and the slope of the hill was a charnel house, where the wounded all writhed amid the masses of the dead, a ghastly tribute to British gunnery.

"...en, at 1:30 P. M., of Tuesday, we drew off to Modder River to recuperate. We left nearly three thousand dead and wounded of grim old Cronje's men as a token that the lion of England had bared his teeth in earnest."

The last mails from the Cape brought numerous accounts of Magersfontein, but none so vivid as this. Julian Ralph, in The Daily Mail, very bluntly writes of the Highlanders, after the first volley from the hidden trenches:

"They turned and ran, literally colliding and climbing over one another in their confusion.

"A Chaplain forward in the ranks was knocked down and trampled, a brave a man as any, and yet one who declared that there lived no man who would have behaved differently.

"It had been as if the earth had opened, and from a cleft that ran so far as our men reached fire had belched and shot and swept the veldt.

"The fever of fright lasted only while the men ran 400 yards, and then they regained some measure of order."

Says The Times's correspondent of the same occurrence:

"Back they came in a wave that no officer could stop. From a point of vantage on the Horse Artillery hill one could see them swarming like bees over the veldt until they were almost out of range, and the guns were left out in the open with no one to support them. It was perhaps the most unpleasant sight that a British soldier of to-day has ever beheld—it was certainly a sight never to be forgotten.

"It was difficult to say what would happen next until Major Ewart, Brigade Major of the Highlanders, rode up with an order from the commanding officer, which was almost an entreaty, to the effect that all he asked of the Highland Brigade was to hold the position until dark. So riddled and shattered was the brigade that Ewart had actually no other officer with him to help him to give the order to the scattered men, and he was glad to have the assistance of Col. Dawnay, who was there not as a soldier, but as a civilian, surveying the battle from the Horse Artillery hill."

FIGHTING WITH THE BOERS.

The Mir, a Russophile newspaper at Philippopolis, publishes a letter from a Bulgarian ex-officer, now serving in the Transvaal army. It is dated Farmer's Kopje, Natal, Dec. 2, 1899, and is in these terms:

"Look at the heading of my letter—Natal. Can you imagine that I should write you from South Africa, whereas you thought me to be in Chicago? I am now in the intrenchments of the Boer Army before Ladysmith. As soon as war was declared I made up my mind to go as a volunteer, and at New York presented myself to the Dutch committal there, who paid my traveling expenses, and I embarked on the Sidonia Fitwe, bound for Madeira. On Nov. 4 we landed at Lorenzo Marques; on the 6th I was in Pretoria, and on the 7th already here. I had a company of 110 soldiers intrusted to me, and as a pioneer officer my task is very important. Bearded, stalwart, hardy fellows are these Boers. I speak English, and that with the Boers is the universal language. Good people. But how terribly they hate the English! We never hated the Turks so much. All of them are good shots, good horsemen, and good Christians. Those of them who have finished their tasks of digging, sit down to rest with their Bibles in their hands; they know no other book. They believe in God and their rights. Our tactics here and everywhere along the fighting line are: 'Keep in your trenches.' We get ourselves intrenched and wait for the enemy. The English make their attacks in the open, thinking that they fight the Soudanese. We fire volleys at them and make havoc in their ranks. Hundreds are left on the battlefield, and the others retire. As we are well mounted we do our movements quickly. The hardest things we have to endure are the terrible heat, which keeps us in our shirtsleeves all day, and the Siberian cold of the nights, the heavy downpours of rain, and the dust storms."

A correspondent who was at the battle of Belmont writes:

"I dare say you have heard that David St. John, the heavyweight champion boxer of the Guards, was killed here at Belmont in the charge up the Kafir kopje. He came face to face with a Boer as big as himself. They had a bit of a scuffle. The guardsman gave Mr. Boer a lunge with his bayonet so hard that he drove it right over the hilt and crossguard, and not being able to extract it, he was practically unarmed, and while endeavoring to withdraw it another Boer shot him clean through the temple. I saw them lying, one on top of the other, both quite dead."

The Globe's correspondent at Magersfontein, presumably the Earl de la Warr, writes some plain home truths; in fact, part of his letter has been eliminated by the censor.

TROOPS ARE DISCOURAGED.

"It is not," he says, "the numerical loss of soldiers and men—ghastly and terrible enough in itself—which makes the position so serious; it is the effect which these reverses have on the morale of our troops and on the Boers which constitutes the real danger. If we could point to one real victory; if our men could see that these hard-fought battles, with their bloody results, were clearing the road to Pretoria, they would know they were doing some good. But all along the line, from Chieveley to Modder River, we are facing well-nigh impregnable positions, occupied by men determined to hold them with their last drop of blood, hurling forth one unanimous defiant message, 'thus far and no further.' It is useless to disguise the fact that a large percentage of our troops are beginning to lose heart in this campaign. Can you blame them? A close succession of frontal attacks on an invisible foe securely intrenched, where retaliation is almost impossible, will shake the nerve of the bravest. Our men have fought well; their conduct under most trying and adverse circumstances has been admirable. But they have been asked to perform miracles, and, being human, they have failed. Do not blame them. Do not blame that gallant General who, on Monday last, was the first victim of the terrible disaster which overcame the Highland Brigade."

A correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company, writing from Cape Town under date of Dec. 20, says:

"It has been expected certainly hoped, that the Boers may be compelled to assume the offensive, not from any desire to come into the open—quite the opposite is the case—but because it may become absolutely necessary for them to bring the war to an early conclusion, if they can. Not only do the Boers find it difficult to keep up their supplies of food, but also of ammunition. Their transport arrangements are of a primitive kind. The ox wagon even the mule wagon, is a very slow and cumbrous means of moving heavy goods, such as projectiles and foodstuffs, from one point to another, with long distances between the base of supplies and the army in the field. Again, the extent to which ammunition of all sorts has been used must have made serious inroads, even upon the heavy stocks accumulated in the Transvaal and Free State capitals within the last two years. A failure in the food supply or the supply of ammunition is fatal to any army, and there are some signs that supplies are falling somewhat short, and that the fact is having a demoralizing effect. This applies of course purely to the Boers. So far as the British mobile forces in the field are concerned, excepting Kimberley, Ladysmith, and Mafeking, which are cut off from communication, there is an illimitable supply of food and ammunition for the British army, and it is equally pleasing to Britons that Mafeking is amply supplied. It is hoped that both Mafeking and Ladysmith have food enough to last them until they are relieved. The prospects of the Boers in the matter of fresh supplies are not cheering. No ammunition is likely to reach the republics through Delagoa Bay, while the capture of the Bulawayo with her cargo of flour consigned to the Transvaal indicates that Great Britain has an eye upon the food supply of the enemy as well."

THIRD AVENUE RAILROAD DEBT.

Syndicate of Banking Houses Will Take Up the $17,000,000 as a Whole at a Low Interest.

It was learned yesterday that the Third Avenue Railroad Company, which has for some time been carrying a floating debt of about $17,000,000, a good deal of it now carried by various banks and trust companies, has made arrangements with a body of prominent bankers to have this debt taken up as a whole, the interest on it to be paid in periodical fixed charges, and at a very low rate. The matter will probably be settled to-day.

President Albert J. Elias of the Third Avenue Road issued the following official statement on the matter:

"The floating debt of the Third Avenue Railroad Company is about $17,000,000, as shown by its official reports. More than one-half of it represents the purchase of the Huckleberry Road, the Dry Dock, East Broadway and Battery Railroad, and the Forty-second Street, Manhattanville and St. Nicholas Avenue Railroad.

"The Railroad Commissioners long since authorized the issuance of additional stock by the Third Avenue Railroad Company for the extinction of this debt, and in lieu of issuing stock at this time arrangements have been made with a syndicate of prominent banking houses making provision for this debt, and for advancing to the company the moneys that will be necessary for the completion of the unfinished parts of the several lines."

The fact that some important change in the affairs of the Third Avenue Road was pending became noised about Wall Street, and the rumor soon developed into a report that the company was to be reorganized. This exerted a depressing influence on the stock. It showed much activity, the trading for the day aggregating about 5,000 shares, whereas on Tuesday it amounted to only 333 shares. The price ranged from 120 to 114½, and the closing sale was at 117½, a net loss of three points.

The talk about reorganization, however, met a prompt and emphatic denial from Edward Lauterbach, who is counsel for the company as well as a Director.

W. N. Amory, the Secretary of the company, said last night: "Our corporation is in a remarkably good condition because of its small funded debt. Our board is absolutely harmonious and unanimous in approving the step we are taking. It is decidedly to our advantage."

It was reported yesterday that the Third Avenue Railroad Company had obtained control of the Fort Lee Ferry and the Fort Lee trolley system, owned by the Bergen County Traction Company. An official of the company categorically denied this statement yesterday. "I suppose," said he, "it arose because we have terminals for two of our lines at the Fort Lee Ferry."

CONTRACTOR DOODY INDICTED.

Perjury the Charge in Connection with Evidence Given at the Trial of Robert W. Fielding.

Contractor Daniel Doody, the principal witness in the case of ex-Deputy City Works Commissioner Robert W. Fielding of Brooklyn, was indicted yestreday on the charge of perjury in connection with the Fielding trial. He was informed of his indictment at the District Attorney's office, whither he had been summoned. He was at once arraigned before Justice Aspinall in the County Court. He pleaded not guilty. His bail was fixed at $5,000. In default of it he was taken to the Raymond Street Jail.

Doody was a contractor when Theodore B. Willis was Brooklyn

HECKMANN IDENTIFIES MOLINEUX AS "BARNET".

Swears Defendant Hired a Letter-box Under Dead Man's Name.

RECORDER QUESTIONS WITNESS

Impresses Upon Him the Gravity of His Declaration, but Does Not Shake Him—Koch Again Called.

Nicholas A. Heckmann, who keeps a letter-box place at 257 West Forty-second Street, yesterday told the jury in the Molineux case that Roland B. Molineux was the man who had engaged a letter box at his place on May 27, 1898, giving the name of H. C. Barnet, and that letters and packages addressed to H. C. Barnet had been subsequently received there, among the things being one package of Kutnow's powders and a package containing calthos. Heckmann is the man who, before the Coroner's jury, gave similar testimony. Molineux at that time jumped up and exclaimed, excitedly: "It is a lie!"

Heckmann has been regarded as one of the star witnesses of the prosecution, and the defense therefore directed the burden of its attack in cross-examination on the witness's credibility by endeavoring to show that he had been influenced in making his identification of the defendant by hopes of reward; that he had received pay from a newspaper, and might be further influenced by hopes of escaping prosecution for an indictment pending against him in the District Attorney's office.

This had reference to the case in which Heckmann was accused in 1884 of having been guilty of bribery in the election of that year. The case never came to trial. When questions were put by Mr. Weeks yesterday Assistant District Attorney Osborne objected, and was sustained, and this line of questioning was dropped.

RECORDER QUESTIONS HECKMANN.

The Recorder wound up what had been one of the most spirited days of the trial by trying to bring out what there might be in the question of the witness's being influenced.

"Heckmann," he said, "you are a man of family, are you not?"

"Yes."

"And you understand fully the nature and solemnity of an oath?"

"I do."

"You know of what the crime of perjury consists, and that in case you have not sworn to the truth, what severe consequences may follow?"

"I do."

"Now I want you to state whether or not there was any inducement held out to you, whether any promise of reward of any kind in return for your testifying in this case?"

"No one has promised me anything and no one has held out any inducements," Heckman replied.

"Now, Mr. Heckman," continued the Recorder, "I want you to think well before you answer. Do you know how frightfully important it is if you have any doubt as to whether the defendant was the man to whom you rented the letter box? I want you, before you answer, to probe deeply into your conscience and consider well if you are certain you have made no mistake."

The reply came: "I am certain. I know I am right."

The Recorder had spoken in a low and impressive voice. The courtroom was absolutely quiet. Many hands were held to ears. Molineux leaned well over the table at which he was seated.

He had, during most of the witness's testimony, worn a broad smile. He had seemed to be laughing at him. But at this juncture, when the Recorder spoke and it seemed almost that the witness's answer must contain evidence of wavering, the prisoner's face was very serious.

WEEK'S CROSS-EXAMINES KOCH.

The trial was resumed with the recalling of Joseph Koch, the letter-box man of 1,620 Broadway, who, on the preceding day, had testified that Molineux had called there in December, 1898, to inquire about renting a box for a friend, and that later some one had called and rented a box under the name of H. Cornish. Mr. Osborne continued his direct examination by going further into details as to the receipt of the letters and packages of Kutnow powders and the Von Mohl letter and packages received there, and then Mr. Weeks began the cross-examination, taking up first the description of the stranger who had rented the box on Dec. 21, 1898.

"You gave the police a description," asked he, "saying that this man was about 5 feet 9 or 10 inches in height?"

"Yes."

"And you understand fully the nature and solemnity of an oath?"

"I do."

"You know of what the crime of perjury consists, and that in case you have not sworn to the truth, what severe consequences may follow?"

"I do."

"With a determined expression of countenance?"

"Don't recollect saying that."

"That he wore a white alpine hat, with a black band around it, and a tan coat?"

"Yes."

"When did you first see the police?"

"On Jan. 16 at my place of business."

This was two days after he found the two packages and one of the letters, which had been put in a wrong box and overlooked up to that time. The witness said that the next person he spoke to was Mr. Weeks himself.

He was required to recall the conversation that had taken place between them at Mr. Weeks's office, and asked if he had seen any photographs there. He said he had not. He had seen newspaper cuts purporting to be pictures of the man, but they were not exact.

LOOKED LIKE CORNISH.

"Did you ever say," asked Mr. Weeks, "that the person who hired the box looked like Mr. Cornish?"

"Yes, with an exception."

"And that was that his mustache was different?"

"Yes. It was not parted in the middle, and I said that I did not think that Cornish could train his mustache in that way."

"Did you ever see Cornish wearing a tan overcoat?"

"Not at that time."

"What difference would the parting of the mustache make?"

"It was parted so the upper lip showed white under the mustache."

Cornish was present in the courtroom during this examination.

Asked when he first gave a description of the man who had called a week before the one who had rented the letter box, Koch said it was on Jan. 27, when he gave it to Capt. McClusky, the same date, he said, as that on which he had given it to Mr. Weeks.

The description as brought out by the cross examination was that the man who Koch had sworn was Molineux was dark, had sharp features, rimless glasses, sack coat, light trousers, carried a pair of tan gloves, and wore a black derby hat, but no overcoat.

The first time the witness had seen the defendant after Jan. 1, 1899, was at the Coroner's inquest, he said, but not before he had taken the stand on that occasion.

"Did I show you a photograph of him in my office?" asked Mr. Weeks.

"I saw none in your office."

"Were the reproductions in the newspapers accurate?"

"I cannot say as to that. A reporter showed me a photograph near the end of January."

"Did you tell any one at the inquest that you had recognized the defendant?"

"No, I was not sure then."

"When did you next see the defendant?"

"In Judge Blanchard's court, in July."

NO STEPS TO IDENTIFY MOLINEUX.

"Had you taken any steps to make yourself positive?"

"No."

"You hadn't made up your mind, then, that he was the man?"

"No."

"Had you told the police what you thought?"

"No."

"Before you saw the defendant in Judge Blanchard's court had you told any one you thought he was the man who called on you Dec. 12?"

"Yes; you."

"What did I say to you?"

"You laughed at it and said it was impossible."

"Exactly; ridiculous?"

"You did not say ridiculous."

"You got $500 from a newspaper for a story?"

"Yes."

"And $250 from another?"

"Yes."

"Will you tell me why you gave this information to the defendant's counsel before going to the police?"

"No particular reason."

"Did you have anything to do with sending a letter to Gen. Molineux saying that for a certain price, facts concerning the case could be suppressed among letter-box men?"

Mr. Weeks showed to the witness a typewritten and anonymous letter which the witness said he knew nothing about.

Next was taken up the witness's selling news to certain papers. For one story, it developed, he was not to be paid until he had testified to the facts in court.

"And not until after you told me and had sold the story to a newspaper did you tell the police?"

"Yes."

The witness remarked that he had given the information to Mr. Weeks when the lawyer had called at his place.

"You insinuated that these letter boxes were used by green goods men," said Koch.

"And so you told me about your suspicions as to the defendant?" replied Weeks.

There had been talk, the witness said, of his going up to the Knickerbocker Athletic Club to see if he could identify the man who had rented the box. Gen. Molineux was a member.

"You remember my saying," said Mr. Weeks, "that I did not like to send you up there with Gen. Molineux, and did not I also say to you something about not wanting to take anybody into the club as a spy?"

The witness said that he did not recall it. He was then excused.

HECKMANN ON THE STAND.

Nicholas A. Heckmann was then called and his examination occupied the remaining hour of the morning session of court and all of the afternoon, the court sitting until nearly 5 o'clock.

Heckmann said he was born in New York forty years ago; had lived in Long Island City for a time; that he had been in the letter box business for five years; had an account with the Mutual Bank; that he was married and had two children.

"Do you know the defendant?" asked Mr. Osborne.

"For five years."

"How many times have you seen him?"

"About 150 times."

The witness said his Forty-second Street place (that at No. 257) was near Eighth Avenue, but that he also had an advertising office at Sixth Avenue and Forty-second Street.

"Did you ever see the defendant in your office at 257 West Forty-second Street?" asked Mr. Osborne.

"Yes."

"Tell me all about it."

"On May 27, at about 6:10 P. M., the defendant came in and asked to rent a box. He asked the price, and I told him it was 50 cents a month. I gave him a slip. He gave me his name as H. C. Barnet. I wrote it with two 't's.' He said it had one 't,' and I marked out one 't.'"

This was entered in a book which the witness brought in after recess. He said he assigned Box 217 to the new customer, and he saw him step up to a shelf desk, and taking some letters from his pocket make some changes in them with the pen kept there.

"How many times did he visit your place?"

"About twenty times."

The witness then described the mail which arrived for him.

DID NOT GET ALL THE MAIL.

"Did he come to get all his mail?" asked Mr. Osborne.

"No, not all."

"What did you do with it?"

"I gave it to the police later."

The witness explained that when a rental had expired and two or three months had passed without a call for mail, he had offered it back to the postman, who had generally said to throw it away.

In this case when two or three months had elapsed he had opened the packages containing the patent medicines. The envelopes of the letters saved thus were placed in evidence. He had sent some of the pellets in one of the boxes away for identification. This box was also shown, and marked for identification.

The letters were received in December, 1898, and January, 1899, and this was brought out as showing that the patent medicine firms continued sending their circulars and samples of remedies for a long period.

After recess, Mr. Osborne asked of the witness when he had first identified Molineux as the man who had rented the box under the name of Barnet.

Heckmann replied that it was on Jan. 31, 1899, when he had gone to Molineux's place in Newark, with a reporter. They sent in to see Mr. Molineux, the reporter telling a clerk that he was from the Post Office. When Molineux came out, Heckmann said, he looked as though he wanted to strike him. This was promptly ruled out by the Recorder.

The reporter told Molineux that he was from a certain paper, and Molineux said, according to the witness, "I do not want to talk with any reporters. I will be glad to see Mr. Heckmann any time."

The witness said he had told the reporter that it was Barnet.

Mr. Weeks then took the witness in hand for cross-examination.

UNDER MR. WEEKS'S FIRE.

Mr. Weeks drew from the witness a record of his career, embracing all of the places in which he had ever lived and all of his various places of employment. He was at different times an errand boy, a tobacco worker, in the shoe business, and a conductor on the Forty-second Street Street railroad for nine years.

"What name did you go under then?" asked Mr. Weeks.

"Nicholas Heckmann."

"Were you not discharged for knocking down fares?"

"No."

"You were next employed?"

"In the money order department of the Post Office."

"Why did you leave?"

"I was suspended."

"Still under suspension?"

"Yes."

"Were you married then?"

"Yes. My wife died in 1885, and I married again in 1895."

"Ever married to Annie Marie Webber?"

"No."

"Sure?"

"I am sure."

"Ever represent her as your wife?"

"No, Sir."

Heckmann said he next worked on the Court Street line in Brooklyn. He lived on Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn, then, and worked for the road for nine months, being discharged for being absent on election day. That was in 1885. He next went into the cigar business for himself on Avenue B, this city, was then a bookkeeper in Broad Street at $6 a week, and he left that place for one as clerk at $7.

Mr. Weeks then directed his questions to the present case.

"You know the defendant"

KNOWN DEFENDANT FIVE YEARS.

"Yes, for five years."

"How many times have you seen him?"

"About 150 times."

"Ever speak to him?"

"No."

"Ever see him with any one you knew?"

"No."

"What do you mean by saying you knew him?"

"I knew him by sight."

"When he came into your place, his face was familiar?"

The witness said he had been accustomed to meeting him on the street—on Forty-second Street and on Broadway.

"When was the last time he came into your place?"

"About June 20, 1898."

"Any change in his appearance at that time?"

"No."

"On Jan. 26, 1899, did you give any description to a newspaper man?"

"Yes."

"Did you say he had a red mustache?"

"No."

"And the hair was lighter than the sandy mustache?"

"The hair was lighter."

"When did you first receive any money in connection with this case?"

"On Jan. 27 Detective Carey paid me $10 at the Gilsey House."

"When next?"

"On the Tuesday following, from a newspaper man."

"Where were you on Sunday, Jan. 29?"

"At my home."

VISIT TO THE SINCLAIR HOUSE.

"Did you go to the Sinclair House?"

"Yes."

"At whose request did you go there?"

"Capt. McClusky and Detective McCafferty."

"Did you go into the hotel?"

"Yes, I sat in the lobby."

"When you left there what happened?"

"Detective McCafferty told me to go back and see if I could see Mr. Molineux there."

"How long were you in the lobby?"

"About three hours."

"When you went back in the lobby, did you see me there?"

"Yes."

"And Mr. Battle?"

"Yes."

The witness thought that Molineux was one of the party, but the man he thought to be him had no mustache, and he wore an overcoat and a silk hat. He had never seen him that way before. It was later that he had decided that it was Molineux. He furthermore had not been able to see him full face.

Heckmann said at this time he was employed by a paper at $15 a day. Mr. Weeks brought out the details of his arrangements with the newspapers. He was to get $350 from one paper if he identified the man who had rented the box. He had gone out to Newark for that purpose. He had told the reporter it was "Barnet all right," but refused at that time to give his identification to the paper. An interview with another member of the paper's staff at the Astor House was described, in which it had been sought to learn from the witness the color of the man's eyes and hair.

The witness said if any one had said that he had admitted the identification at that time, he had not told the truth.

"You mean to say that he lied?" asked Mr. Weeks. "Don't you lie?"

There was a temporary uproar here, in which the Assistant District Attorney took part, and the Recorder had to restore order.

ASKS ABOUT AN INDICTMENT.

"Did any one ever tell you that if you would make an identification of this defendant an indictment against you would not be moved?"

"No, Sir."

"Is it not a fact that you are now under indictment for bribery that has not been moved?"

"I object," said Mr. Osborne.

"I sustain the objection," replied the Court.

"Do you know Thomas Rathman of 21 Clinton Street of this city?"

"I did know him."

"Did you know him as a member of the Board of Aldermen in 1884?"

"Yes."

"Did you know Hyman Shipman of this city, of 530 East Fifth Street?"

"No, Sir."

At this point Recorder Goff questioned the witness, and Heckmann said he knew nothing of the case of Mrs. Adams's death by poison until late in January.

"When you learned of the fact that Mrs. Adams had died," asked the Recorder, "and that it was rumored and charged that she was murdered, and you learned that the letter box you rented to a man giving his name as H. C. Barnet formed a link in the case, why did you not go to the police and the District Attorney's office and give them your information instead of attempting to sell it?"

"That is just what I did do, your Honor," answered the witness, and he then told again of the steps taken by him when he learned he had information that might lead to a possible solution of the case.

"You say," interposed Juror Foster, "that your conscience began to trouble you after the Coroner's inquest?"

"No, Sir," replied Heckmann, "my conscience began to bother me before that. It commenced before the inquest was over, because at that time all the evidence tended to show that Cornish was going to be accused of having caused Mrs. Adams's death, and I did not think that was right. So I told them all I knew about the case, and said I was certain that the man who hired the letter box of me in the name of H. C. Barnet was Mr. Molineux."

Another series of questions and answers came, and then Recorder Goff said: "If there be any more questions to be asked they must be asked now, for I will not permit this witness to be recalled."

There was no answer, and no one questioned the witness. It was then that the Recorder, turning to the witness, began the questioning as to his certainty of the identification and possible influence that led up to the climax of the day's proceedings.

FAILED TO END HIS LIFE.

Despondent Musician Plays Dirges While Awaiting Death After Cutting One of His Wrists.

Discouraged by failing health and loss of his pupils, Carl Hild, a German violinist, attempted to commit suicide yesterday afternoon by cutting one of his wrists with a razor in his room at 147 East Twenty-seventh Street. Then he sat down and played funeral marches and other melancholy airs on his violin, until his condition was discovered. He will recover.

Hild is forty-five years old, but looks to be sixty. He played first violin at one time in orchestras of merit, and had many pupils. His health failed, however, and he lost his mastery of the instrument. He gave up his orchestral positions, and his pupils gradually dropped away until only one was left. He owed back rent on his little room, which, though scant in furniture, was hung with pictures of old masters of the violin and the photograph of a Stradivarius, the original of which he had once known. The man's hair had turned gray, and he was ill from the lack of proper nourishment.

When Hild's remaining pupil called yesterday to take his lesson, the landlady said:

"Old Hild has been playing more than usual to-day. He must be getting more cheerful."

When the pupil opened Hild's door, he found the latter jerkily playing his violin, the blood from his cut wrist flowing over the instrument and dropping to the floor.

"Go away and let me die," gasped the musician, without looking up from his instrument or ceasing to play.

The pupil ran out into the street and shouted for a policeman. An ambulance was summoned from Bellevue Hospital, but the surgeon, Dr. Christian, after binding up Hild's wrist, decided that it was not necessary to remove him to the hospital. Hild was arrested later, however, and locked up at the East Thirty-fifth Street Station, charged with "attempted suicide." He insisted on taking his violin and bow with him, saying that he had no other friends.

SAVANNAH CONTRACT SCANDAL.

Hearing of the Case of Carter's Alleged Co-Conspirators Goes On.

The examination in proceedings against Col. John F. Gaynor, E. H. Gaynor, W. T. Gaynor, and B. W. Greene, who were indicted at Savannah, Ga., last December for conspiracy to defraud the Government in connection with the Savannah River and the Cumberland Sound contracts, was continued yesterday before United States Commissioner Shields.

Lieut. Col. Mackenzie of the United States Engineers was again placed on the witness stand to identify the signatures and indorsements of Government officers and employes on the many papers material to the case which have been drawn from the files of the War Department. J. W. Peacock, was also called by the defense to identify his signature as a subscribing witness to the contracts between the Atlantic Contracting Company and ex-Capt. Carter. He identified also the signatures of Col. John F. Gaynor and W. T. Gaynor.

Mr. Rose, counsel for the defendants, said the papers proved that Capt. Carter and the contractors had not entered into a conspiracy; that the contract was awarded to the Atlantic Contracting Company after competitive bidding, and that the indorsement on the bills and papers made by others than Capt. Carter stated that the work had been performed according to the provisions of the agreement.

It is understood that when all the documentary proof has been offered by the defense Mr. Rose will attack the legality of the Grand Jury which found the indictments. This intention, it is said, is part of the general plan of the defense to continue proceedings until July, when the conspiracy charge shall have lapsed by the operation of the Federal Statute of Limitations. The examination will be continued this morning.

The Lord stable is near Dr. Jenkins's home, and Mrs. Jenkins claims that a restless horse kicking in its stall keeps her awake nights. No summons was issued, as Magistrate Croak advised that some means other than court proceedings be resorted to in order to bring about relief.

PASSING OF THE TORPEDO.

Lieut. Commander Colwell Says New Wireless Electric Steering Device May Revolutionize Defenses.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Lieut. Commander J. C. Colwell, United States Naval Attache in London, witnessed to-day at Yoevil the test of an invention offered to the United States Government for steering torpedoes and submarine craft by means of a wireless electrical device, on the lines of the Marconi system. The invention, however, is in no way connected with Signor Marconi. The patents are held by Cecil Varicas, an English inventor, an employe of A. C. Higgs, United States Consular Agent at Weymouth.

The experiments left no doubt that craft can be directed by means of an ether wave, the model being controlled by a shore motor, with no other connection save the current working upon the rudder. The inventor claims that this can be applied to torpedoes and submarine craft. After the test, Lieut. Commander Colwell, who will make a report on the subject to the Navy Department, said:

"I believe the experiments have fully proved the practicability of the theory, but a decisive opinion cannot be risked until the invention has actually been applied to full-sized craft and submitted to aqueous and atmospheric conditions. If after that the principle to-day evinced in miniature should hold good, then it may be said that the day of the present torpedo has passed and that the present methods of harbor defense are revolutionized."

FRANCE GAINS A VICTORY.

Gets All She Asked in Settlement of Santo Domingan Trouble.

PARIS, Jan. 17.—The French Government is pleased with the settlement of the Santo Domingo trouble, which, according to a telegram from Admiral Richard, was a complete victory for France, Santo Domingo undertaking to pay the indemnity demanded, a responsible Minister to make a public declaration that no affront was ever intended for France, and the Foreign Minister to write to the French Government expressing the regrets of his Government at the anti-French demonstrations.

The officials of the Foreign Office here deny that there is any intention of recalling the French Consol at Santo Domingo.

MARQUIS OF LOTHIAN DEAD.

Was a Famous Antiquarian and Patron of Arts and Letters.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The Marquis of Lothian, former Keeper of the Great Seal of Scotland, is dead.

The ninth Marquis of Lothian was, outside of the many dignities which belonged to him by hereditary right, famous throughout the United Kingdom as an antiquarian and patron of arts and letters. He also took great interest in educational affairs, and had held the coveted position of Lord Rector of Edinburgh University.

The Right Hon. Schomberg Henry Kerr, K. T., Marquis and Earl of Lothian, Earl of Ancrum, Viscount of Brien, Lord Newbattle, Baron Kerr of Nisbet, Baron Longnewton, and Dolphingston, and Baron Kerr, was born Dec. 2, 1833. He was the second son of the seventh Marquis, his mother being a daughter of the second Earl Talbot. He was educated at Glenalmond, Eton, and New College, Oxford, and, his prospects as a young man being only those of a younger son, he entered the diplomatic service, and was a member of Sir J. Outram's staff in the famous mission to Persia in 1857.

In 1862 the then Lord Schomberg Kerr became Second Secretary of the British Legation at Frankfort, but was afterward transferred to Madrid, and from thence to Vienna. His elder brother having died without issue when a comparatively young man, in 1870, the marquisate and estates, which consist of about 32,000 acres of valuable land in Scotland, fell to Mr. Kerr. He sat in the House of Lords by right, the barony of Ker being a peerage of the United Kingdom, and though he did not often speak, he was always regarded as a valuable man by the Conservative Party, of which he was a stanch member.

Among many other important posts which at one time or another were held by Lord Lothian were those of Keeper of the Great Seal of Scotland, Secretary for Scotland, and Vice President of the Council of Education for Scotland. He owned three splendid country places—Newbattle Abbey, near Dalkeith; Blickling Hall, Aylsham, Norfolk, and Monteviot, Jedburgh.

Lord Lothian married, in 1865, the Lady Victoria Scott, eldest daughter of the fifth Duke of Buccleuch. He is succeeded by his eldest son, Lord Jedburgh, who was born in 1874.

BURGLAR TURNS HIGHWAYMAN.

Robs a House and, Meeting a Girl on the Street, Leaves Booty with Her and Takes Her Purse.

The home of H. W. Ormsbee, advertising manager of a local newspaper, who lives at 55 Willow Street, Brooklyn, was invaded by a housebreaker early yesterday morning. The burglar subsequently distinguished himself by holding up a girl on the street near Mr. Ormsbee's house and robbing her of her pocketbook.

While hunting for valuables in the house, the burglar came upon the family watch dog in the dining room. The dog was stretched out on a rug asleep. As the thief entered the room the faithful animal looked up at him, wagged his tail lazily and good-naturedly, and went off to sleep again without so much as a bark.

The thief gathered up several pieces of silverware, and after appropriating two of Mr. Ormsbee's overcoats, let himself out of the front door. He put one of the overcoats on and filled the pockets of the other with the loot of the silver closet, carrying the coat over his arm.

At Henry and Pierrepont Streets, a block or so from Mr. Ormsbee's house, the thief met Miss Alpha Iverson of 150 Degraw Street, and promptly turned highwayman. Miss Iverson is employed on the night force of the Arbuckle Mills, and was homeward bound after her night's work. She carried a pocketbook containing her week's wages. The burglar-highwayman threw the overcoat he was carrying over the young woman's head, and grabbing her pocketbook ran off. He made his escape.

Miss Iverson hunted up a policeman and turned the overcoat, with the silverware in the pockets, over to him. At the Adams Street Police Station the garment was examined, and the name of Mr. Ormsbee's tailor was found on it. The coat was taken to the tailor's for identification. Shortly afterward Mr. Ormsbee called at the tailor's to order a new overcoat, and was told that the police had one which evidently belonged to him. He then went to the station and recovered the coat.

KILLED BY A FALLING ROOF.

Fatal Accident in a New East Side Building—The Contractor Under Arrest.

By the falling of a concrete roof on the new building at 39 and 41 East Twenty-seventh Street, shortly after 6 o'clock last evening, one man was killed, two were severely injured, and several others slightly hurt. Frank Davidson, the builder, of 529 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, was arrested after the accident occurred.

The construction of the building had been so far advanced a week ago that the concrete roof was put on. It is customary to hold such roofs in place with supports until the concrete hardens. This usually requires a week's time. Davidson assembled his workmen, numbering nine, to the top floor last evening and removed the supports from the roof. Immediately afterward there was a tremendous crash, and nearly all of the men were buried in the debris.

An alarm of fire was sent in and a messenger was sent to the West Thirtieth Street Police Station for assistance. Sergt. Conboy, Roundsman Quilty, and a dozen policemen were soon on the scene, together with the firemen of Truck No. 7. After a few minutes' work, William Bradley, a laborer, twenty-nine years old, of 455 West Twenty-eighth Street, was taken out dead. Joseph Shower, foreman, twenty-eight years old, of 538 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, and Peter Felvo, a laborer, twenty-six years old, of 334 East Eleventh Street, were taken to Bellevue Hospital. Shower's right leg was fractured and the left one bruised. Felvo was injured about the body and legs. Several of the other workmen were slightly injured and were attended by Dr. Rogers of Bellevue Hospital. They went home.

Sergt. Conboy placed Davidson under arrest and took him to the station house. He said that the roof had been laid for a week, and that it was thought to be dry enough to bear its own weight. He could give no reason why the roof should have fallen, except that it could not have been dry enough.

The building is owned by the Columbia Fireproof Company of 537 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street. The site was formerly occupied by the Stephenson Car Manufacturing Company.

The Fur Sale Continues

Or, shall we say that "it ends," for at present rate of selling the lots will be gone in a twinkling.

Remember that the pieces are of the usual Wanamaker standard—the furs came from our regular suppliers—they are stylishly fashioned and correct in every way. We try to be exact, to give news that means something—there is no attempt to class these as the finest furs in the world, for there are garments that have curio value, but these include the dependable sorts you know and love, and many exceedingly fine pieces—and we are charging

Couches, Sofas, Easy Chairs

Closing Out Samples

A third has been taken off former prices of many of these—some even more. They are show pieces, and the lines they represent are to be discontinued here. Styles are good, some really elegant pieces in the lot. Nearly all are in good condition—one or two slightly imperfect.

Twelve styles of Couches, variously covered with Oriental stuffs, velour, tapestry and leather, at $10 to $37.50. They were $13.50 to $75.

Six styles of Davenport Sofas, with frames of oak and imitation mahogany; covered with imitation leather, corduroy, velour and leather, at $25 to $75. They were $37.50 to $110.

Ten styles of Easy Chairs, some Turkish, and rockers among them, at $12 to $45. They were $18 to $67.50.

Fourth floor.

New Costumes---Show Days

Will you honor prophets in their own country? New York tailors are working with us to develop American styles. Professional women are charmed with the beauty of the new things just appearing; so is the dear little home-body who doesn't want to look like a show, or be in uniform. There is character, style, charm and very great variety.

This is not an "opening" but an informal reception—and the best proof of the desirability of the garments is that sales are passing all January records.

Dresses at $25 to $95—among the new-comers.

Second Floor, Broadway.

Trimmed Hats---Half Prices

Some left; some are chosen—you couldn't guess what guides the stockman in picking out hats to reduce in price.

Maybe he doesn't really know.

But, anyway, he says we have two hundred too many Women's Hats—and from the several groups he has chosen enough — and reduced them approximately one-half—many just a half. The new prices run from $3 to $20.

Children's Hats are an important part of this business—we take more pains with children's outfitting than does almost any one else in the land.

Little Boys' Derby Hats, $1.50 and $2.
Boys' Alpine Hats, $1.25.

Boys' Telescope Hats, $1.50.
Leather and cloth Tam o' Shanters at 75c—have been $1.50 to $3.

Second Floor, Tenth street.

$7 and $8 Trousers at $5

Very nearly five hundred of them—fine worsteds; and the favored styles of the winter. Seems strange enough to be able to reduce prices when everybody is raising them. But it's a lucky move—for all of you who share this lot.

Medium and dark colorings.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Women's Shoes---Half Price

Eleven hundred pairs at $1.40 and four hundred pairs at $2. Button and lace—clear-ups of our regular stock and of many special-bargain lots. We believe it is perfectly fair to say that the shoes are quite well worth twice to-day's prices.

Fifth floor.

The Standard Dictionary for $6.50

Everybody knows of the Standard Dictionary in a general way—that magnificent work gotten out by Funk & Wagnalls.

It is the most sensible of all dictionaries because it gives, first of all, the every-day meaning of words and shows which are to be written with capital letter. The pedigree of the word comes last—the root at the bottom, tree-fashion.

Its colored plates are ideally beautiful.

Just a dictionary, but a great one.

Too dear at the full price—one has so many books to buy; too dear at former low prices because the big volume has been wobbly.

This edition is well-bound in stamped sheepskin, and we have five hundred to sell at $6.50. Come in time.

Book Store, Ninth street.

Notes of the Muslin Underwear Sale

Seersucker Petticoats, 50c instead of 85c. Taffeta Silk Petticoats, $5 instead of $6.50. Flannelette Dressing Sacques, 50c. Ripple-eiderdown Dressing Sacques, $1.

And newly arrived lots of the Corset Covers at 8c, and Drawers at 10c and 15c, and Night Gowns at 38c.

SCHOOL BOARD AND COLER

Mr. O'Brien on the Difficulties of Preparing Pay Rolls.

AGAINST CLERKS' SUNDAY WORK

Commissioner Says Controller Is Young in Years and Experience—Appointments of Teachers.

The School Board for Manhattan and the Bronx yesterday afternoon held its last meeting in the old Board of Education Building on Grand Street. Early this morning all of its employes, including Superintendent Jasper, the Board of Associate Superintendents, and the clerks, will move, with their books, records, and belongings, into the new Board of Education Building, at Fifty-ninth Street and Park Avenue. Thomas E. Bussey, acting Secretary of the School Board, however, will remain in the old building a few days longer to wind up the business on hand. The Central Board will meet in the old building on Wednesday next, but that will be its last meeting there. The building will then remain unused until it is converted into a high school.

Owing to the absence of Borough Superintendent Jasper, the statement from him showing the number of departments which have no first assistants was not forthcoming, and, on motion of Commissioner Burlingham, the question was laid over until the next meeting.

The Committee on Teachers reported three vacancies, caused by resignations or retirement, and advised against appointing any persons to fill these vacancies until later. Commissioner Burlingham said that he would vote in favor of the report only on condition that it was rendered for the reason that there were not sufficient funds on hand to make appointments. Commissioner O'Brien said that he agreed with Commissioner Burlingham. On his motion, the matter was referred to the Committee on Finance.

A great deal of routine business having been transacted, President Little brought up the subject of teachers' salaries, and asked Acting Secretary Bussey to read his letter to Mayor Van Wyck in reply to Controller Coler's criticisms of the board's method of making out pay rolls.

MR. COLER CRITICISED.

"I think that Controller Coler in many ways is a decent official," said Commissioner O'Brien, "but his criticisms of this board are unfair and unjust. He means well, but has been led astray by some one who evidently was not posted as to our affairs. We did not do as the Controller wanted us to do because it was impossible. We, however, put our dignity aside and aided him in making out the pay rolls as he wished them to be made out. We even allowed him to take away our records. Under ordinary conditions, neither he nor any other person had a right to take away those books. He says himself it was a terrible task to have the pay rolls made out according to his wishes, and yet, mind you, he has had a force of men at work night and day. Yet the pay rolls are not ready, in spite of the fact that he came down to the Superintendent of these boroughs, who rendered him every assistance, and that he did what I wouldn't do, namely, asked people to work on the Sabbath. And, Mr. President, he kept this Superintendent up till midnight on this work.

"We want the public and the teachers and every man and woman interested in the public schools to know that if the teachers get their pay it is due to our efforts. Our books are open to public inspection, and they show that we are honest officials. The Mayor and the Controller can examine them at any time, and they will fail to find anything that casts the slightest shadow on our way of conducting business. The Controller is a capable official, but he is too young in years and in experience to try to smirch the reputation of men who have given the best years of their lives, without emolument, to the furtherance of the best interests of the public school system."

MR. LITTLE'S STATEMENT.

President Little said: "Commissioner O'Brien is right as far as he goes, but he might have gone further and declared that the Controller has found our records right, just as he found out in the court that we were right on the salary schedule question."

"I thought of that," said Commissioner O'Brien, "but I did not want to say so too soon. I have no doubt the teachers will be paid according to our records."

A prolonged discussion took place over the school bills that have been introduced in the present Legislature. On motion of Commissioner O'Brien it was finally decided to have a committee of the board favor legislation that provides for the payment of teachers' salaries on the line of the schedule adopted by the board on July 17 last.

SUPERINTENDENT JASPER A VICTIM.

Work on Pay Rolls in Cold Building Makes Him Ill.

Borough Superintendent Jasper went home and to bed yesterday afternoon suffering from a severe cold caught last Sunday while at work in the Board of Education Building, in Grand Street, aiding Controller Coler in making out the pay rolls.

The building is not heated on Sunday. Mr. Jasper and his clerks tried to keep warm by means of a gas stove, but while the clerks escaped any ill effects the Superintendent got so bad a cold that just before the meeting of the School Board yesterday afternoon he said that he felt too sick to remain any longer and hurried home.

ATTACKS BOARD'S METHOD.

Mr. Coler Publishes Complaint of a Prospective Supply Bidder.

Controller Coler yesterday made public a letter, recently received by him from James R. Carter, Treasurer of the Carter-Rice Company, wholesale paper dealers, criticising the manner of bidding for school supplies. Mr. Carter says that he withdrew his bid this year on the day before the opening of the bids because the information given as to what was required was so meagre and the requirements were so onerous, that, although he had made his estimate from 5 to 7½ per cent. higher than he would have done under different conditions, he did not consider he was safe in bidding at all. The points of trouble were, first, refusal to give any information as to the probable quantity of any one material that was wanted, and, secondly, that the bids called for the delivery of goods in five days.

"This," says Mr. Carter, "is impossible on the large bulk of paper furnished unless it is all on hand, having been manufactured in advance."

Mr. Carter says that the estimates should be closer, and if there is any paper left on the hands of the contractor the city should take it at a fair price.

TO PAY THE TEACHERS.

Salaries May Be Received Hereafter When the Month Opens.

Announcement was made at the Controller's office yesterday that the pay rolls for the teachers of the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx would be completed to-day, and that payment of salaries would begin either this afternoon or to-morrow morning. The delay was occasioned by a technicality about the certification, but this has been removed, it was said, and the trouble is now at an end.

By reason of the investigation conducted under the supervision of the Commissioners of Accounts, it was said, the teachers will hereafter receive their pay about the first of each month, instead of on the 15th, as at present.

FOR SALARY REVISION.

Teachers of All Boroughs May Confer —Committee Appointed.

A meeting of the Board of Delegates and members of the Teachers' Association was held Tuesday afternoon at the City College. The President was empowered to appoint a committee to confer with the authorized representatives of teachers of the remaining boroughs to devise a uniform basis of salaries for all boroughs.

The request of the High School teachers that they be represented in the discussion of salary revision was unanimously granted.

SCHOOL TEACHER DISAPPEARS.

Had Been Taken to Task for Punishing a Pupil.

SYRACUSE, Jan. 17.—Jessie Maltby, a teacher in the Cazenovia School, disappeared yesterday. A week ago she was taken to task for inflicting corporal punishment upon M. K. Darling's daughter, and that is the only reason known for her disappearance. She started for school and was not seen again.

Before leaving home she kissed her mother more than is her wont. She left her own ring and took her mother's wedding ring. She mailed a letter from this city to her mother yesterday, but made no reference to the cause of her departure. The Syracuse police are looking for her.

AN OLD SAILOR IN WANT.

Saved Commodore Perry's Life—Now in an Almshouse.

CHESTER, Penn., Jan. 17.—Henry Hughes, a sailor of the old navy, has been admitted to the county almshouse at the age of ninety-five years. When nineteen years old he enlisted for a three years' cruise on the sloop-of-war Levant as a sailmaker. When the Mexican war broke out he went to Mexico on the sloop-of-war St. Mary. He once saved the life of Commodore Matthew G. Perry, who had been ambushed by twelve Mexicans.

Hughes served on the Kearsarge, the brig Somers, the frigate Congress, and the sloop-of-war John Adams. He was on the Kearsarge when Admiral Schley was a Lieutenant on the same warship. After leaving the navy Hughes resumed his business of sailmaking and continued it until old age prevented him from working.

SCALDED IN BOILER EXPLOSION.

Nine Men Injured in Accident on Government Launch Caperon.

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 17.—A tube in the boiler of the Government launch Caperon, lying in the canal locks at Delaware City, exploded to-day, scalding nine men, three of them so seriously that they may die. These three are Capt. George A. Cleaver, who was burned about the face and body; Engineer John Swan, injured in the same manner, and Assistant Engineer Samuel Weaver, burned about the body and legs. The other six men sustained only slight burns and bruises. Only one man on the boat escaped injury.

The three seriously injured were taken to their homes in Delaware City. The flesh was hanging in shreds from the faces of Capt. Cleaver and Engineer Swan and they were also almost entirely blinded. Among the others injured were Sergeant Weinhold, Private Guy, and two other privates from Fort Delaware. They were taken to the hospital at the fort for treatment. Their injuries are not serious.

The Caperon is a man-of-war's launch, and was used for the purpose of conveying men between Fort Delaware, Fort Dupont and Delaware City.

State Dinner to Diplomatic Corps.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—President and Mrs. McKinley entertained the members of the Diplomatic Corps at a State dinner at the White House to-night. Covers were laid for seventy-eight persons, and owing to the large company the table was set in the main corridor. The house was appropriately decorated for the occasion, and the Marine Band played. Mr. and Mrs. Levi P. Morton were among those present.

Died While Attending a Funeral.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Jan. 17.—Joseph W. Sanford died suddenly yesterday afternoon at Cranford while attending the funeral of a child of Mrs. Frederic Martin. Mr. Sanford conducted a house furnishing store on Broadway, New York City, for several years, but retired from business some time ago. A widow, one son, and two daughters survive him.

ROBERTS OF UTAH BARRED

Special House Committee Finds Against the Polygamist.

MEMBERS AGREE ON FACTS

De Armond and Littlefield Contend Roberts Should Be Seated Before Being Expelled.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—So far as the House is concerned, the chances of Brigham H. Roberts of Utah to occupy the seat to which he was elected are gone. The special committee investigating his case reached a final conclusion to-day. It was unanimous on the question of his polygamous status and agreed upon a formal statement of facts, but upon the question of procedure the committee was divided. The majority, consisting of all the members except Littlefield of Maine and De Armond of Missouri, favored exclusion at the outset. Littlefield and De Armond will make a minority report favorable to seating Roberts on his prima facie rights and then expelling him.

The statement of facts found by the committee is as follows: "We find that B. H. Roberts was elected as a Representative to the Fifty-sixth Congress from the State of Utah, and was at the date of his election above the age of twenty-five years; that he had been for more than seven years a naturalized citizen of the United States, and was an inhabitant of the State of Utah.

"We further find that about 1878 he married Louisa Smith, his first and lawful wife, with whom he has ever since lived as such, and who, since their marriage, has borne him six children. That about 1885 he married as his plural wife Celia Dibble, with whom he has ever since lived as such and who, since such marriage, has borne him six children, of whom the last were twins, born Aug. 11, 1897.

"That some years after his said marriage to Celia Dibble he contracted another plural marriage with Margaret C. Shipp, with whom he has ever since lived in the habit and repute of marriage. Your committee is unable to fix the exact date of this marriage. It does not appear that he held her out as his wife before January, 1897, or that before that date she held him out as her husband, or that before that date they were reputed to be husband and wife.

"That these facts were generally known in Utah, publicly charged against him during his campaign for election, and were not denied by him.

"That the testimony bearing on these facts was taken in the presence of Mr. Roberts, and that he fully cross-examined the witnesses, but declined to place himself on the witness stand."

Chairman Tayler says the report of the committee will be made on Saturday, and that the subject will be taken up in the House next Tuesday.

The culminating session of the committee to-day followed many prolonged executive sessions, which left no doubt as to the attitude of the several members, with the exception of Mr. Miers of Indiana, who has been out of the city. He returned to-day, and it was determined to bring the matter to a direct issue. Accordingly when the committee met, McPherson of Iowa offered a resolution for the exclusion of Roberts. Mr. De Armond immediately proposed a substitute, recognizing the Constitutional rights of Roberts to take his seat on his credentials, and providing for his expulsion.

There was no discussion beyond informal remarks, and the vote was first taken on Mr. De Armond's substitute. Mr. Littlefield joining him in the affirmative and the others voting in opposition. The vote was then taken on Mr. McPherson's motion to exclude, resulting as follows:

Yeas—Tayler, (Ohio,) Freer, Morris, and McPherson, (Reps.;) Lanhan and Miers, (Dems.)

Nays—Littlefield, (Rep.,) and De Armond, (Dem.)

Chairman Tayler was authorized to prepare the majority report. It will be ready in a few days, and the prospects are that the subject will be brought before the House early next week.

Mr. De Armond will submit the views of the minority. He will include an exhaustive review of the law, covering about seventy typewritten pages, prepared by Mr. Littlefield. The main point of this is that the House cannot add to the requirements provided by the Constitution for admission to the House, and that the only Constitutional remedy is to admit and then expel on the finding of facts.

WHEELER'S SEAT IN CONGRESS.

It Is Asserted that the General Has Forfeited His Right to It—Should Seek Re-election.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—If Gen. Joseph Wheeler expects to return to Washington to take a seat in Congress without further formality, it looks as if he would meet with disappointment. Inquiry has been made since the announcement that he had been relieved from further duty in the Philippines, and it is found that there is very general agreement on both sides of the House that it has been clearly shown by the examination of the case of Low, and other precedents, that he has forfeited his right to a seat in Congress, and that the only thing open to him is to go back to his district and seek re-election if he desires to continue service in Congress.

No doubt is entertained that, if he seeks re-election at a special election to fill the vacancy, he will be returned to Congress, perhaps without opposition; but it will be held by the House, according to the best authorities in both parties, that the seat is now vacant, and will remain so until a special election has been held.

Some of his friends in the House hope that he may be induced not to make claim to the seat, but to go at once before his people for re-election. They think he would win greater distinction by this course, and, if re-elected, he would be entitled to pay for the entire term from March 4 last, as any one elected to the vacancy would be.

CLARK CASE AGAIN TAKEN UP.

The Action of the Montana Grand Jury Comes Before the Committee Unexpectedly.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—After a recess of four days the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections to-day resumed its investigation of the charges of bribery in connection with the election of W. A. Clark to the Senate from Montana. At the outset Senator Faulkner stated in behalf of Mr. Clark that the letters written to him during and since the session of the Legislature by Dr. Ector had been found in Butte and were on their way to Washington.

The first witness to-day was William J. Cook, treasurer of the Thomas Cruse Savings Bank of Helena, who was questioned concerning the accounts of A. J. Davidson and J. K. Toole with the bank. Davidson's account was opened Sept. 9, 1898, and closed Feb. 9, 1899. Davidson was considered a representative of Mr. Clark in the Senatorial campaign, and the effort was to show that the Senator's money was being used. Mr. Cook said that from first to last $21,800 was deposited in Mr. Davidson's name and that $15,000 of this amount came to the bank in the shape of a draft from the bank of Clark & Brother of Butte, and $3,800 on a telegraphic order of transfer from that bank. He said the money was all checked out, but he could not remember to whom any of the checks were made payable.

In the case of Mr. Toole there was an effort to connect his withdrawal from the Senatorial contest with Mr. Clark's name, but Mr. Cook said he knew nothing about politics. Mr. Cook had no recollection of any unusual number of $1,000 bills in circulation in Helena during the winter of 1898-99 when the Senatorial contest was on. The deposit slips in Mr. Toole's name showed deposits in currency amounting to $8,165 from Nov. 3, 1898, to July 31, 1899. Mr. Davidson had been in the commission business, but had made an assignment.

William F. Rector, who said he was an expert accountant, was the next witness. He testified that he had secured rooms in Helena to be used during the Senatorial contest at the instance of A. J. Steele, getting three rooms in the Power block, which met Mr. Steele's requirements of a vault and a number of entrances. These rooms the witness described as a "trap," and said they were used for consultation with members of the Legislature. He stated that he had seen several members in the room and had heard Messrs. Steele, Davidson and other supporters of Mr. Clark discuss ways and means of securing votes. He had seen a sum of money, which he thought was $10,000, paid to one of the members.

Referring on cross-examination to his relations with Mr. Steele the witness contended that the latter was no especial friend of his.

"The only sign of his friendship I ever received," he said, "was that after he had bought the Grand Jury he gave me $50 to watch them."

This assertion raised a laugh, and also a point of order which gave the committee considerable trouble. The committee, in order to keep the investigation within reasonable scope, had decided not to enter into the Grand Jury investigation. The information had been volunteered, and Mr. Faulkner insisted that if it was to stand he should have opportunity to refute it.

The committee took the matter under advisement. The witness gave the amounts which were, according to his information, paid to the different members of the Grand Jury.

Mr. Rector said he was positive that a member of the Legislature was paid for his vote in the presence of the witness and put the money in his pocket. He said this man was one of a number of Republican members who were not to vote immediately for Clark—not until "the button was touched."

The committee adjourned until Friday before Mr. Rector concluded his testimony.

TELLER TALKS FOR SILVER.

Argues Against the Senate Financial Bill—Debate Daily to Feb. 15, When Vote Will Be Taken.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—The Senate to-day decided that a vote on the Financial bill shall be taken Feb. 15. Mr. Aldrich, (Rep., R. I.,) Chairman of the Finance Committee, asked for an agreement for a vote on Feb. 1. Mr. Jones, (Ark.,) objected to that date, as the time would be too short for a full discussion of the bill. He said, however, that Feb. 15 would be satisfactory.

It was finally agreed that the vote should be taken on Feb. 15; that two days intervening should be devoted to ten-minute debates on amendments to the bill, and that the measure should be considered on each legislative day after 2 o'clock P. M.

Mr. Teller then addressed the Senate on the bill. He contended that the history of the American people showed that they were favorable to bimetallism, and that until within very recent years the two parties had contended with each other in their advocacy of this cause. He renewed his charge that the Financial bill is practically a caucus measure, and had been accepted from the junta of ignorant men who constituted the Indianapolis Convention. This he denounced as an abandonment of the legislative function and a surrender to outside influences.

Still he was satisfied that the bill would be put on the statute books as a law because they were unable to resist the influence behind the measure, notwithstanding the bill was contrary to the convictions of some Republican Senators and notwithstanding that as late as 1890 the Republican President had upheld bimetallism. The President, as a member of the House, had voted for free coinage and for the passage of the Bland-Allison act over the then President's veto.

As for himself, Mr. Teller said, few men had received greater honors at the hands of the Republican Party than himself, but this was due to the fact that he had been an advocate of bimetallism. That this attitude was in accord with the convictions of the people of his own State was shown by the platform declarations of all the political parties of his State.

Mr. Teller declared that the silver dollars had been maintained in full value, despite, as he said, all the slanders uttered in this chamber and in the House because the people demanded the silver dollars as money, and with every one of them they could procure a dollar's worth of anything to be had. He maintained that the American people and the American Nation were great enough to do anything they deemed right to do. And if they should determine to coin silver free it would be successful. He said at some later date he would undertake to prove that the United States could maintain gold and silver at a parity as money. Any statement to the contrary was in contravention of the fact of history.

Mr. Teller had not completed his speech, but desired to suspend and resume to-morrow.

PHILIPPINE RESOLUTION PASSED.

Senate Acts on Hoar's Measure Asking for Information.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—At the conclusion of routine business in the Senate the resolution of inquiry introduced by Mr. Hoar (Mass.) and amended by Mr. Lodge, (Mass.,) calling for general information regarding the conduct of the insurrection in the Philippines, was laid before the Senate.

Mr. Pettigrew (S. D.) said he desired to address the Senate upon the resolution before it was passed. He favored the passage of the resolution, believing that the information asked for was entirely proper. He declared that he had received information since the introduction of his resolutions that assured him of the facts he had asserted.

"The blood of every soldier," said he, "who has fallen since the war began is on the hands of the Administration. The blood of the sixty soldier boys of South Dakota who lost their lives after being conscripted into an unwilling service after their terms had expired lies at the door of the Administration, and there is no escape for it. I charge that the censorship of the press and the suppression of facts are for the purpose of advancing the political ambitions of Mr. McKinley."

If this action, said Mr. Pettigrew, "put the Administration in a hole," as was stated, it was not his fault. He reverted to the assertion that the acquisition of the Philippines was brought about by the act of God, but, he said, the only way he could see God's hand in the work was that God must have used Mr. McKinley as a prophet or appeared to the President in a vision.

At the conclusion of Mr. Pettigrew's speech the resolution of Mr. Hoar was passed without division.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE PETITIONS.

Congress Urged to Grant Right to Women in the New Possessions.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—The woman suffragists of the United States are apparently very anxious that whatever may be the fate of women at home, the señoras and señoritas in Cuba, Puerto Rico, and the Philippine Islands and the women of the Sandwich Islands shall be allowed to vote. On Monday Representative Allen, who represents Thomas B. Reed's old district, introduced a petition sent him by the Woman's Suffrage Association of Maine, asking that perfect equality of rights, civil and political, "be secured to the women of Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Cuba, and the Philippines."

On the same day Mr. Gamble of South Dakota presented a petition from some women of his State urging that when constitutions come to be drawn for these islands the word "male" shall be everywhere tabooed. Mr. Gardner of Michigan presented a similar petition from the suffragists of his State, and Mr. Henry of Mississippi followed his example. Mr. Ray of New York varied the proceedings by offering a petition signed by men. There were eight of them, all hailing from Rochester, and headed by William Gleason; and their request asked equality for the women of Hawaii and said nothing about the others. There was a similar petition from Washington State.

Meanwhile in the Senate some petitions were being presented by women who wanted suffrage for themselves; interest in the women of the colonies was not wanting, for a petition signed by Mrs. Beulah E. Ritchie and Mrs. Annie C. Boyd was presented in their behalf. Two women of New Hampshire named Mrs. Armenia S. White and Mrs. S. J. Whitney also petitioned against the obnoxious word "male" having any place in the colonial constitutions. Mrs. Anna R. Simmons, President of the Woman's Suffrage Association of South Dakota, declared that the association would be satisfied with nothing less than a flat-footed declaration that the island women should vote.

Yesterday a petition from the Woman's Suffrage Association of Jersey City was offered by Senator Sewell, and after him came Messrs. McBride and Wolcott, with petitions against the use of "male" in the colonies. In the House only one petition in regard to colonial women was presented.

HOUSE DEMOCRATS DIVIDED

Differences Accentuated in the Deficiency Bill Debate.

MR. SIBLEY DEFENDS MR. GAGE

Congressman Driggs Resents an Imputation Cast Upon His Democracy—Cannon Pokes Fun at Sulzer.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Democrats who have been hoping that repeated admonitions would inspire the members of the party in Congress to find a common ground of agreement before the next general campaign, were all disappointed to-day with the debate in the House over the Urgent Deficiency Appropriation bill, in which Mr. Sulzer (Dem., N. Y.,) renewed his attack upon the Secretary of the Treasury for making deposits of Government funds in National banks, and provoked Mr. Sibley (Dem., Penn.,) to reply in a straightout defense of the course of the Secretary.

This incident, taken in connection with the speech of Representative Driggs, (Dem., N. Y.,) which was made later in the day than that of Mr. Sibley, has served to again point out the difficulty of bringing the Democrats together. Mr. Sibley has no intention, it is said by his friends, in denial of a common report, to shift to the Republican Party, nor has Mr. Driggs any expectation of changing parties. Both assert that they expect to remain Democrats, and to enjoy the freedom of opinion and expression that Democrats have hitherto enjoyed.

The debate was opened by Mr. Sulzer (Dem., N. Y.,) who took advantage of the first opportunity to call attention to the resolution he introduced a few days ago for the investigation of the charges against Secretary Gage in connection with the deposit of Government funds in National banks. The committee to which it had been referred had not acted.

"I understand," said Mr. Sulzer, "that the boss of the Republican party says these charges are 'all rot,' and that the President doesn't want them investigated, and that nothing more is to be done with these grave and serious charges."

If that was so, he continued, the minority was entitled to know it. There was a remedy, he declared, and that remedy would be applied. The Secretary of the Treasury was charged by reputable newspapers and reputable men with a distinct violation of the law. He proceeded to describe the sale of the New York Custom House to the "Standard Oil Trust." While he was speaking his five minutes expired and he asked for five minutes more.

"He's got that speech on his stomach," observed Mr. Cannon, who was in charge of the Appropriation bill, "and the House had better let him proceed."

"If you don't probe this great National scandal to the bottom," retorted Mr. Sulzer, "you will hear a great deal about it on the stump."

There was no objection, and Mr. Sulzer continued, quoting the words of President McKinley while a member of Congress in criticism of the course of Secretary Fairchild in keeping Government funds in National banks. Mr. Sulzer concluded with the statement that Secretary Gage had made the humiliating confession that he is and was the mere agent of the Standard Oil Trust.

MR. SIBLEY REPLIES.

He was followed by Mr. Sibley (Dem., Penn.,) who said that while he had supported Mr. Sulzer for the leadership of the House and the second place on the Democratic National ticket, he could not agree with him in his attack upon Secretary Gage. Mr. Sibley said he had been requested to introduce a resolution of investigation. He had replied that in the hour of peril the Secretary of the Treasury had acted with promptness and prudence, and that in his opinion Congress would at all times uphold a public officer striving to uphold the honor and credit of the business interests of the country. [Republican applause.]

Mr. Sibley said he had read the answer of Secretary Gage to the House resolution and he considered it a full, free, and frank statement which completely justified each and every transaction. A conflagration had started in New York, he said, and it required courage and will to stop the panic before it had extended itself.

"I had rather see the country prosper," said he, "than to see my party succeed." [Republican applause.]

He expressed regret that the Democratic Party should thrive upon depression, and again praised the Secretary of the Treasury for coming to the rescue of the business interests of the country. He rejoiced in his action. [Renewed Republican applause.]

LACK OF CONFIRMATION.

Mr. Grosvenor (Rep., Ohio,) declared that both Secretary Gage and the Administration had been vindicated. He explained the reasons why the Committee on Rules, to which the Sulzer resolution had gone, had not acted upon it. The charges the resolution contained were simply a rehash of the same charges to which Secretary Gage had replied.

"I am authorized by the Chairman of the Committee on Rules," he added, "to say that to no one has asked to be heard in furtherance of the resolution. Not the most humble citizen would be placed upon trial upon a mere allegation. No one has come upon his own responsibility to affirm the truth of the charges."

Mr. Clark (Dem., Mo.,) was characteristically ironical in his comment upon Mr. Sibley's speech. He remembered, he said, a great day in the House when Mr. Sibley had not been obliged to go to the other side for his applause. Before he had known of Mr. Sibley's change of front he had written an article urging him for the Democratic Vice Presidential nomination. He did not wish to withdraw his personal praise, but he did desire now to withdraw the nomination [laughter] and to confer it upon Mr. Sulzer of New York, who had always been faithful to Democratic principles. [Democratic and Republican applause.]

He recalled the time when Mr. Sibley had told how he had been ostracized, socially and commercially, because he had supported silver at 16 to 1.

"We hailed him as a hero," said Mr. Clark, "because he was the only Democrat north of the Potomac and east of the Mississippi who stood true to the Democracy of the Mississippi Valley. Now he wins the applause of those who are hostile to every principle of the Democratic faith. His place in this House is on the other side of the political aisle. [Democratic applause.]

HEPBURN LETTER QUOTED.

Mr. Clark read the Hepburn letter to Secretary Gage, branding it as a disgrace. He remarked upon the "cheek" of Mr. Hepburn in addressing such a letter to the Secretary. The Secretary could not prevent Mr. Hepburn from writing the letter, Mr. Clark said, but he could have rebuked him. While he was describing the manner in which deposits had been made in National banks, Mr. Lacey (Rep., Iowa,) interrupted him.

"What did Andrew Jackson do about deposits?" he inquired.

"He took them away from a lot of thieves like these," retorted Mr. Clark, "and placed them in the hands of honest men. [Democratic applause.] Now crack away again."

"He put them in pet State banks," said Mr. Lacey.

"I don't care about State banks," retorted Mr. Clark. "Instead of rebuking Mr. Hepburn, Secretary Gage conferred upon him the greatest favor ever conferred upon a bank since banks were established."

Mr. Sibley replied briefly. Ordinarily, he said, he would be humiliated to have the Vice Presidential nomination publicly withdrawn, but he had already withdrawn in favor of Mr. Sulzer. He was more concerned with the statement that he should take his seat on the other side because he had changed his position.

"I claim equal honesty for both positions. I believed in 1896 that bimetallism was sacred, but events have so changed conditions by the enormous production of gold that the price level for which both the gentleman from Missouri [Clark] and I were striving was raised. The cause I held sacred then has become ridiculous. I believe if the Democratic Party is victorious this Fall it will not be able to write a single line of financial legislation in the next six years. I am striving to do something practical and helpful. If the Democratic Party is to live it must have a policy; it must do something besides carp and fault-find. If it will adopt a policy I will keep step with it, but if it invites me to a banquet of carping and fault-finding it will have to excuse me." [Loud Republican applause.]

Mr. Driggs spoke immediately after allusions had been made to the Gold Democrats by Williams (Dem., Ill.), in which Mr. Driggs and other Gold Democrats were referred to sneeringly as "Republicans on this side of the House."

PLEA OF MR. DRIGGS.

Mr. Driggs responded in part as follows:

"I take issue with the remarks made by the gentleman from Illinois a few minutes ago when he alluded to the Republicans on that side of the House and the Republicans on this side. I intend to apply that to myself, for he unquestionably alluded to the so-called Gold Democrats on this side of the chamber. I intend to say, if you please, that whenever the issue about circulation of money comes up, or whenever any debate may occur in this House, whenever any question is raised on any financial matter it seems that some Democrat on this side of the House takes an opportunity to attack some of his fellow Democrats who do not chance to believe with him in the theory of the free and unlimited coinage of silver. I say now, Mr. Chairman, in that much misused phrase, 'I am a Democrat,' that I am as good a Democrat as there is on the floor of this House. And my colleagues who stand with me on this side of the House in support of the gold currency measure, introduced by the other side, are as good Democrats as there are on this side of the House.

"Now, then, Mr. Chairman, to what are we entitled in our Democracy, and what do we believe in as Democrats? There is no man on this side of the House who is a firmer believer in a Constitutional amendment for the purpose of establishing an income tax than I; there is no man on this side of the House who is more bitterly opposed to the doctrines of the President, and for which the Republican Party is solid, for the passage of a Ship Subsidy bill. There is no Democrat on this side of the House who is more opposed to the increase of the standing army, and I believe absolutely that the welfare and the future integrity and the strength of this nation are to be placed in the volunteer army, that army in which Jackson and Jefferson and all our great Generals have had implicit confidence, and, Sir, there is no Representative on this side of the House more opposed to the trusts than I.

"Coming now to the present question, I hold, Sir, when certain Democrats would set themselves on a pedestal of the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of sixteen to one, and say to every class of Democrats unless you fall down and worship this idol you are no Democrat, that they are the violators of the first principles of Democracy. For these principles are free speech, freedom of action, freedom of right, and freedom of debate, and my constituents of the Third Congressional District in the State of New York, more than 21,000 of whom out of a total vote of 41,000 votes cast told me on election day of Nov. 8, 1898, that I was a Democrat, and, as a Democrat, was elected to the House of Representatives. I care not what you may say about my Republicanism, and my Democratic constituents will tell this House this coming November whether my Democracy is satisfactory to them.

"I am not a Republican, 'I am a Democrat.' As such I believe in the gold standard, and I can be as radical in that belief as you, my colleagues, in your free and unlimited coinage ideas; for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1 is not bimetallism, it is silver monometallism. Now that this debate has come up here to-day, should we of the Democracy not be willing to concede something? Why should we not be willing to say, 'You go a certain way and we will go a certain way, and surely we can meet on common ground somewhere instead of going before the country as we do, and as members have done on this side, calling us Republicans when we are not? For one, I say it is unfair to certain Democrats on this side of the House. And we are all Democrats. Not one Republican can be found sliding here excepting in the 'Cherokee Strip.' If there is any breach in our ranks let us close, not widen, it. Why not make a serious and earnest attempt to meet on some common ground that will absolutely unite and not disunite the great Democratic Party?"

Mr. Hepburn (Rep., Iowa,) caustically arraigned Mr. Sulzer for his alleged misstatements in the face of Secretary Gage's report. He denounced him for alleging that Secretary Gage had admitted violation of the law. There ought not to be an investigation of the Secretary of the Treasury, but there ought to be a public rebuke of a member who distorted the truth, who distorted the facts, and who slandered honored public officials. [Republican applause.]

SPEECH OF MR. LEVY.

Mr. Levy, (Dem., N. Y.,) following Mr. Hepburn, referred to the circumstances leading up to the deposits authorized by the Secretary of the Treasury, and said:

"I am not one of those who criticise the Secretary for depositing the internal revenue receipts in National banks—as he had authority to do—but I desire to emphasize and insist upon this fact: that his delay in making such deposits brought on the late stringency, and that he was either ignorant of the true situation or carelessly refused to heed the warnings given to him, and willfully neglected to take steps to prevent a panic. I believe, Mr. Speaker, that the Secretary, by his great and serious blunder, and by his failure to grasp the recent financial situation, has not only involved his department and this Administration in a scandal which cannot be explained, but has deliberately interfered with the progress of our prosperity. Fortunately, this country is so great and resourceful that it will only halt in its advance to wonder at the blindness of the Secretary, and then progress with renewed activity."

Later in the day Mr. Sulzer recalled attention to an editorial in a South Carolina paper attacking him which had been read by Mr. Hopkins, (Rep., Ill.)

Mr. Sulzer rebuked Mr. Hopkins for not having the courage to attack him openly. He denied that the paper was Democratic. He said it was edited by the subsidized agent of Mark Hanna. The editor had sold his political convictions in 1896 for a mess of pottage.

"If that speech is not good for the Vice Presidential nomination," observed Mr. Cannon, addressing the Democrats when Mr. Sulzer had concluded, "you are a very ungrateful lot."

Mr. Terry (Dem., Ark.,) and Mr. Cannon became involved in a controversy toward the close of the session. Mr. Terry denounced the war in the Philippines as criminal.

Mr. Cannon said the appropriation of $45,000,000 in the bill was to support the flag.

Mr. Terry said his denunciation was of the purposes of the war. He taunted the Republicans with forever wrapping the flag about them and crying "patriotism."

Mr. Cannon declared that declamation amounted to nothing. If any one was opposed to the appropriation for the support of the army here was the time and place. He defied any one on the other side to move to strike it out.

MR. WILLIAMS'S PLEA.

In response to this challenge Mr. Williams (Dem., Miss.,) replied in a brief and eloquent speech. There was not an American citizen, he declared, in or out of the House, who was disloyal to the flag of his country. The gentleman from Illinois with his accustomed shrewdness had issued a challenge, well knowing that there was not a man in the House, no matter how bitterly opposed he might be to the imperialistic policy, who would raise his hand against our soldiers fighting in the field, whether the struggle in which they were engaged was right or wrong.

"I believe," said he, "that the people out there against whom they are fighting are struggling for their liberties, but when my country lines up for the fray I am with it. He has issued a safe challenge. But I am tired of this miserable subterfuge by which it is attempted to confuse loyalty to the flag with loyalty to the policy in which the flag is disgraced." [Great Democratic applause.] Men had a right to oppose a policy of war. He cited the example of Burke and Chatham, great men who had never refused to vote supplies for war, but who had stood up in the House of Commons day after day entering their protests against the war waged against our ancestors because they believed it wrong. The history of the Old World held its lesson. As Byron had said, first came liberty, then glory, then splendor, then corruption, decay, and death.

"Whenever the people forgot that the province of Government was to make the individual happy, to make the Government splendid, and the flag glorious, the people were on the first rung of the ladder in their descent. There was a glory of the flag in devotion to what was free, right, and just, and there was a pseudo glory of the flag which manifested itself in the worship of the flag. He would vote all the men and guns and ammunition needed to restore peace. And when we had peace he would have the great American Republic say to the poor brown people across the seas:

"We will stand by you until you are able to stand alone."

Several amendments by Mr. Lentz and others to increase the appropriation for rural free delivery were voted down.

The bill was passed without division.

At 5:40 P. M. the House adjourned until 1 o'clock to-morrow.

NICARAGUA CANAL IN THE SENATE.

Amendments Made Radically Change the House Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—The amendments made yesterday by the Senate Committee on Inter-Oceanic Canals to the House Nicaragua Canal bill have been printed and circulated in the Senate. The amendments prove to be more radical than at first announced by the members of the committee. The language of the measure is practically changed throughout, and several of the House provisions are entirely omitted. The most important omissions are the provisions which are made in the House bill for the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty and for the purchase of existing concessions from Nicaragua and Costa Rica, the latter provision in the House measure carrying an appropriation of $5,000,000.

The Senate bill also removes many of the limitations of the House bill as to persons to be employed in the proposed work. The provision for a commission to act with the Secretary of War is eliminated. The Senate committee also makes specific provision that the canal shall be of sufficient size to accommodate vessels of the largest tonnage, and it increases the appropriation from $130,000,000 to $140,000,000.

MR. PLATT ON SHERMAN'S CHANCES.

Not Sure that the New Yorker Will Be Secretary of the Senate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Senator Platt did not seem to be acquainted with the whereabouts of Representative Sherman to-day when he was asked if he had received a reply from him concerning the invitation to become a candidate for Secretary of the Senate. "It seems to me that the newspapers have got ahead of the caucus in this business," said the Senator. "You have got Sherman as good as elected. I'm not so sure as that. All that I've undertaken to do is to ask him to be a candidate, after that the caucus must have something to say about it. You have made it look very easy; but it only goes to show how little wool it takes to make a yard of cloth."

There is but little doubt about the election of Mr. Sherman. The place is regarded as in some way the prize of New York, and after it has been demonstrated that Gen. Clarkson would not be as acceptable as a New York candidate it was only necessary to get some New York man who would not be objectionable to the Senate.

There is a report again to-day that the Republicans of the Senate are unwilling to put out Col. R. J. Bright as Sergeant at Arms. Col. Bright has managed his business so to the satisfaction of Senators on both sides of the Chamber that his services are not to be lightly dispensed with. While the friends of other candidates are anxious to do something for their men, the chief solicitude of most of the Senators is that the business of the Chamber shall be carried on as it has been. The best of new men would require time in which to acquire efficiency, and meanwhile the Senate would be put to inconvenience merely to "bring up" a new Sergeant at Arms.

CONGRESSIONAL NOTES.

The Senate yesterday adopted Mr. Pettigrew's resolution, calling for information from the Secretary of War as to fiscal operations in Cuba.

Representative Lacey of Iowa has reintroduced his bill for the protection of game birds, modified, however, so as to make it unlawful to ship in inter-State commerce game killed in violation of the law.

The House Committee on Appropriations yesterday agreed on the Pension Appropriation bill, and reported it to the House. It carries a total of $145,246,220, exactly the amount estimated by the Pension Office.

Representative Catchings of Mississippi has introduced a bill in the House to create a commission of five members appointed by the President to adjudicate the claims of United States citizens growing out of depredations in Cuba during the Cuban insurrection.

The Secretary of War has sent to the Senate the draft of a bill prepared by the Judge Advocate General of the Army, making it a misdemeanor to refuse to obey a subpoena from a court-martial. The bill is intended to prevent the failure of military justice by curing what is believed to be a defect in the present law.

The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations agreed yesterday to report favorably the convention known as The Hague Treaty, negotiated last year. The treaty was not amended. The committee also acted favorably upon the extradition treaties with Peru and Argentina; also the treaty to continue the Mexican Boundary Commission. The reciprocity treaties were not considered.

WELL POISONER IN JAIL.

Armonk Man Finds Person Who Put Arsenic in His Water.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Jan. 17.—People living in the upper part of Westchester County are having a good deal of trouble over their wells by reason of ill-disposed persons poisoning them or dumping refuse and filth into them so as to render them unfit for use.

Dusenberry Abrams of Newcastle was to-day lodged in the county jail here on his confession that he was the man who a few weeks ago poisoned Hobart Cox's well in Armonk by placing arsenic and paris green in it. Mr. Cox for a long time tried to find out who poisoned his well, and finally employed a Pinkerton detective, who, after circulating around the men in the vicinity, discovered that Abrams was the culprit.

Trading at Macy's averages a saving of from 20 to 40 per cent. Whether you want a Pin Cube or a Marble Cupid we'll give you the best value. Don't ignore the tiny economies. The success of our Notion Sale indicates that you are alive to our offerings.

FOURTEEN PAGES.

SO MUCH THE WORSE FOR THE FACTS.

It is now eleven months since war flagrant was begun, and it is now eleven months since Gen. Otis first, and the President afterward, refused to listen to terms of peace or to concede an hour's delay in the prosecution of the war. In these eleven months of hostilities the war has been the President's not Congress has not been consulted, and the country has not had an opportunity to speak.—GEORGE S. BOUTWELL.

If anti-imperialism were put upon its proofs, it would be obliged to spend in painful study a great part of the time that it now devotes to reckless utterance.

The world knows the story of the beginning of the war with the Filipino rebels. It knows that so far from refusing to listen to terms of peace the President gave AGUINALDO and his men every opportunity to keep the peace and every incentive to keep it. Our soldiers bore with remarkable patience the ruffianly insolence and the open acts of attack and aggression of the Filipinos. The lives of the people of Manila were endangered by our tolerance of the insults of the natives, who took advantage of the indulgent spirit we showed to plot the looting and destruction of the city.

Mr. BOUTWELL'S statements are exactly contrary to the truth. But professional anti-imperialism is a sentiment, a prejudice. If facts get in its way they have to suffer.

A NEW ERA FOR THIS CITY.

Speaking after the manner of the politicians, we should say that the Rapid Transit Commissioners ought to have "anything they ask for" from the City of New York. The present generation will hardly be able to understand the extent of our obligation to these men. For that we must wait until the underground rapid transit railroad has been in operation long enough to have demonstrated its might as a developing force, until it has brought North End real estate into the market that is now unsalable, until it has peopled the miles and miles of avenues, boulevards, and streets beyond the Harlem that are now merely country roads, and has carried the line marking the limit of convenient and agreeable residence and dense population far beyond One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, to the very boundary of Yonkers.

Twenty years ago nobody could picture forth the consequences of the building and operation of the elevated roads, our earliest rapid transit. It is only by reflecting upon the vast upbuilding influence of the Manhattan Company's lines that we can form any idea of what the tunnel road will do. The West Side, the region that used to be known as Yorkville, and pretty much the whole of Harlem have been in the greater part a growth of the period in which the elevated roads have been in operation. There would have been increase with only surface facilities for slow transit. But nobody will pretend that the city does not to-day owe several hundred thousand of its population to the elevated roads. They have made it possible for these additional hundreds of thousands to live and do business in New York.

It is by thus judging the future from the past that we measure our obligations to ALEXANDER E. ORR, WOODBURY LANGDON, MORRIS K. JESUP, GEORGE L. RIVES, JOHN H. STARIN, and CHARLES STEWART SMITH, Rapid Transit Commissioners. They are capable men. They are upright men. They are persevering men. All these high qualities they displayed in the prolonged labors they have now brought to the stage of actual construction. The city owes them honor and gratitude.

The fact that they received a bid upon which they were able to award the contract within a little more than twenty-four hours and by a unanimous vote of their board is a source of satisfaction and of confidence. The contract is the greatest ever awarded in this country, perhaps in the world. The contractor who gets it is not untried in important constructive works. We quote from our neighbor The Evening Post a convenient summary of his career:

JOHN B. MCDONALD, who has been awarded the contract for building the rapid transit tunnel, is a member of the Finance Committee of Tammany Hall, a member of the Croker club, and a friend of CROKER. He is a native of Ireland, fifty-six years old, and a cousin of JOHN WHALEN, the Corporation Counsel. He came to this country when he was fifteen years old. His education after he came to this city was continued in the public schools until, still young, he began to work for himself as timekeeper at the building of the Boyd's Corner reservoir, Putnam County. Later he was Inspector of Masonry on the building of the tunnel in Fourth Avenue; then became a contractor, got interested in the High Bridge branch of the New Jersey Central Railroad, the Georgian Bay branch of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, the Boston and Hoosac Tunnel, the Buffalo extension of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, and did extensive work on the West Shore Road. He constructed the tunnel of a mile and a half through Baltimore, for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. It was the largest single undertaking he accomplished before he secured the contract for the Jerome Park reservoir.

We think any business man would say from that record that Mr. MCDONALD has the necessary experience and has demonstrated the necessary capacity to carry out the contract he has taken upon himself. Some point is made and will be made that he is close to Tammany. That will be helpful. The City Government will not be likely to put in his way any obstacles to prompt construction. He will have in his employ engaged upon the work something like ten thousand men. Probably the Tammany organization will have something to say about the composition of this great army of the pick and shovel. But Mr. MCDONALD will have a lively interest in seeing that all the men employed earn their wages; and the care with which the contract has been drawn and the continuing supervision of the Rapid Transit Commission constitute sufficient safeguards for the public interest.

The amount of the successful bid—$35,000,000—is interesting. When the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court appointed a commission, in 1897, to advise it, after taking testimony, whether the road as planned ought to be built, the opponents of the enterprise appeared with evidence to show that the road would certainly cost fifty millions, and would probably cost a great deal more. Anyway, it would bankrupt the city. The Commissioners, Messrs. ARTHUR D. WILLIAMS, JOHN SABINE SMITH, and GEORGE W. YOUNG, reported to the court that "the cost of the road now proposed will be about $30,000,000, and will not at the extreme limit exceed $35,000,000." Iron and steel are now very much higher in price than in 1897, and labor is under the eight-hour law. But the extreme limit fixed in the report of these Commissioners, which was the estimate of Mr. PARSONS, the engineer of the Rapid Transit Commission, is the figure of the contractor's bid.

SERIOUS QUESTIONS INVOLVED.

The bill introduced in the House by Congressman RUSSELL to enable manufacturers using alcohol in the arts to recover the money due them as rebate touches only one aspect of a very serious question. The bill ought to pass. There can be no sort of question about that; for otherwise certain persons who have been wronged will be denied their just remedy. The law is supposed to provide a remedy for every wrong. As the Supreme Court construes existing law these persons are altogether without a remedy. They have paid money to the Government which Congress decreed should be repaid to them. Repayment being refused, they bring suit, but the Supreme Court declares that they cannot recover because the Secretary of the Treasury failed to prescribe the regulations under which the rebate was to be paid.

The major question here is, not whether Mr. DUNLAP and the other manufacturers interested in the alcohol rebate may recover the six millions that is their just due, but whether the laws of Congress may be successfully nullified by the executive officers of the Government. In the Dunlap case the Supreme Court has sustained a flagrant act of nullification. The question that arises, therefore, is whether Congress possesses the power to enforce obedience to its laws. It is an important question, for it is scarcely necessary to point out that if the rule of the Dunlap case is to hold good, merchants and manufacturers cannot safely make business ventures under laws of Congress until they are informed that the executive department intends to enforce them.

Section 61 of the Wilson Tariff act of 1894, under which the alcohol tax rebate is claimed, reads as follows:

> Any manufacturer finding it necessary to use alcohol in the arts, or in any medicinal or other like compound, may use the same under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, and on satisfying the Collector of Internal Revenue for the district wherein he resides or carries on business that he has complied with such regulations and has used such alcohol therein, and exhibiting and delivering up the stamps which show that a tax has been paid thereon shall be entitled to receive from the Treasury of the United States a rebate or repayment of said tax so paid.

This section unmistakably expressed the intention of Congress. It meant that the users of alcohol in the arts should not be burdened by the tax. The money was to be refunded to them by the Treasury. But Secretary CARLISLE refused to prescribe the regulations under which the users of alcohol might take advantage of the liberality of Congress. He declared that he could make no regulations because Congress had appropriated no money to enforce them. The Supreme Court held in the Dunlap case that the failure of the Secretary to prescribe regulations destroyed the right of manufacturers to receive or collect the rebate under Section 61. In doing so, it reversed some of its previous decisions, in which it had held that the words "such regulations as may be prescribed" or "such regulations as he may prescribe" were mandatory; and the decision is that of a bare majority of the court, four Justices dissenting, among whom was Justice HORACE GRAY.

The Constitution gives to Congress the power "to lay and collect taxes," which includes also the power to remit them. It also says that Congress shall have the power "to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers." When a manufacturer has entered into contracts and made business arrangements based upon the expectation that he is to pay only such taxes as the laws of Congress prescribe, it is manifestly a hardship for him to have to bring suit to compel the Treasury to obey the law. And it is a mighty poor satisfaction to him to sit in the Supreme Court chamber all day and hear the lawyers argue the question whether the language of the law is mandatory or merely permissive. If Congress should amend its phraseology and say in every act that the Executive is hereby ordered and directed to enforce this act, the decision of the court in the Dunlap case would work less mischief. Certainly that decision opens the door to more doubt and uncertainty than a prudent business man likes to encounter.

Simple justice and decency, as well as self-respect, demand that Congress shall pass the Russell bill declaring that the failure of the Secretary to prescribe regulations shall not operate as a defense to suits brought against the United States to recover the amount of the rebate. Up to the time of the repeal of the section, in June, 1896, about six million dollars was paid into the Treasury subject to the provision for repayment. That money belongs to the persons who paid the tax.

A MAGNIFICENT MARE'S NEST.

The London Spectator is a paper that combines much good sense and a very unusual conscientiousness with a warmth and vigor of imagination occasionally embarrassing. It is a faithful friend to America, and has shown in many ways an intimate and sympathetic understanding of American ideas and motives which entitles it to the grateful regard of all intelligent people on this side of the Atlantic. But it has acquired from some mode of reasoning that we cannot trace a notion as to the scope and nature of the Monroe doctrine and its influence on the action of the United States which is widely wrong, and which betrays it into speculations that to Americans seem simply grotesque.

The latest instance of this is in the current number of The Spectator, in an article which gravely sets forth the proposition that the Emperor of Germany wishes to increase his navy in order at the proper time to "take" Brazil for the extension of his empire, and compel the United States to abandon the Monroe doctrine and assent to this enterprise. The Spectator says: "He wants a fleet in order that when he puts his South American policy into operation he will not be made ridiculous by an order from Washington. Mark," it continues, "he does not want to attack America in the very least, but merely to have the proper physical backing when he asks the United States not to play dog in the manger any longer in regard to Spanish and Portuguese America."

It would be more satisfactory to one who wishes to test the soundness of this remarkable theory if it had been stated whether the Emperor of Germany intends to "take" Brazil by negotiation or by force. If the former, there is nothing whatever in the Monroe doctrine or in the policy of the United States that will require this country to intervene or to claim any voice in the matter. Our position in regard to such a state of things in a country on this continent was plainly defined in the message of President CLEVELAND Dec. 17, 1895, in regard to Venezuela. "Any adjustment of the boundary which that country may deem for her advantage and may enter into of her own free will cannot of course be objected to by the United States." What is true of adjustment of boundary is also true of any other policy involving the possession of territory. If Germany wants any part or the whole of Brazil, and can persuade that republic to convey it freely and of its own will, the United States will not undertake in any way to prevent the transaction. No navy will be needed for any such honorable business.

As to the proposition that Germany intends to try to conquer Brazil, a country of 3,000,000 square miles of territory and 15,000,000 people, that seems too absurd to discuss.

"TIPS" FOR ASHMEN.

There is nobody connected with the present Municipal Government who is more deserving of the public sympathy than Mr. MCCARTNEY of the Street Cleaning Department. We have every reason, part of it the personal testimony of the late Col. WARING, to believe that Mr. MCCARTNEY entered upon his office with the honest purpose of keeping the efficiency of the department up to the point to which Col. WARING had brought it. The very retention of Capt. GIBSON, for whose place many a good Tammany man has without doubt been greedily hunting, argues the good intentions of Mr. MCCARTNEY, and his capability of resisting pressure, up to a certain point.

Mr. MCCARTNEY'S mistake has been in supposing that Tammany would tolerate good work in any department whatever. It simply cannot do so. The instinct of self-preservation forbids. There are two Tammany office holders who have nevertheless succeeded in making good records, and in fortifying themselves in the confidence of their fellow-citizens, leaving out Mr. MCCARTNEY himself. One of them is Mr. COLER. The other is Mr. GUGGENHEIMER. But Mr. COLER, who is, we believe, a good-natured sort of person, has found it absolutely necessary to quarrel with Tammany Hall, in order to retain his own respect and that of the community, and to incur some coarse insults from the Mayor in consequence. Mr. GUGGENHEIMER seems to be a skillful and politic sort of citizen. But the time is coming when he also will have to choose between the confidence of the organization and his own respect and that of his fellow-citizens. Mr. MCCARTNEY will also find that he cannot serve two masters.

Just now, in his capacity of public servant as efficient as he dares to be, he is conducting an investigation into the conduct of his ashmen, who are accused of having demanded and received "tips" for the mere performance of their duty. We can imagine how WARING would have dealt with a situation of that kind, and how quickly the men against whom the offense was proved would have been got out of the department or else he would have got out. There is really no doubt about the facts. There are plenty of householders and servants to testify that ashmen have demanded "tips" and become abusive when they did not receive them. Doubtless Mr. MCCARTNEY would like to discharge such offenders. But will he feel himself strong enough to do so, when the "pull" of an ashman's backer is put into the scale against the testimony of a householder? That remains to be seen.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Certain individuals who call themselves "the New York Committee to Aid the United Republics of South Africa" assembled themselves and as much of their name as there was room for at the Morton House, Tuesday evening, and proceeded for several hours to aid the United Republics of South Africa by heaping superheated epithets on England and the English. This pleasant and profitable occupation was once or twice interrupted by a vague suggestion in regard to the advisability of "doing something," but of course no attention was paid to advice which threatened to bring out the embarrassing fact that there was nothing to do, and after each of these episodes the safer and therefore more satisfactory task of irresponsible denunciation was resumed with redoubled fervor in order to make up for lost time. Accuracy or moderation of language was not to be expected at a meeting of this sort, so we are not at all surprised that one of the speakers, the eminent ex-Judge GEORGE M. VAN HOESEN, said in the course of his remarks, "It is notorious that every newspaper statement is incorrect." But though we are not surprised that this accusation should have been uttered when and where it was, we cannot help wondering if the eminent ex-Judge, after he emerged into the cool outside air, did not smile gently as he recalled this particular flight of his imagination. For none knows better than he that now and then the statements of newspapers are at least nearly enough correct to be extremely effective. If ever he writes his memoirs an interesting passage in them will be that in which he tells how a newspaper—THE NEW YORK TIMES, to be explicit—once discussed with such accuracy the use a certain Judge had made of the patronage of his court that his ambition to serve another term on the bench was frustrated and brought to nothing.

—Nobody ever spoke a good word, or heard anybody else speak one, of the practice of sending out by mail tickets to entertainments of varying degrees of unattractiveness, and inclosing in the same envelope an impertinent request that if the involuntary recipient of the tickets does not wish or is not willing to buy them he will use his own good stamps and stationery and time in sending them back. Not only has praise been lacking for this custom, but it has been the object of innumerable maledictions in print and out of it. Nevertheless such tickets continue to burden the mails, and from this fact it is evident that more than a few people are weak enough to yield to a form of begging decidedly more offensive than ordinary whines from the gutters, and not altogether dissimilar to out-and-out blackmail. As long as it pays to commit this petty crime against taste and decency, of course the stream of unsolicited tickets will continue to flow, and to scold the manipulators of the fountain is utter waste of time. It relieves the mind, however, and certain bits of cardboard now lying on the editorial desk are the explanation, if not the excuse, for the present outburst. On them appears a feminine name absolutely unknown to fame. Under it is the announcement that the owner of the name is to deliver four lectures on topics about which there is no reason to suppose she knows anything not to be found in the familiar text books. And last of all on each are the suggestive words, "Five Dollars." The accompanying leaflet says that the money should be "kindly" remitted by "cheque"—whatever that may be—or postal order, and in case of clearly implied unkindness the tickets are to be returned before a carefully stated date. Now, these particular tickets will never get any further than a large and convenient waste basket. What enrages us is the thought that others like them will elicit "cheques" or postal orders, and so the miserable little abuse will go on to the continued trial of naturally sunny tempers.

—A London Magistrate has just made from the bench a statement which, if it is ever duplicated by a competent court in this city, would or might have consequences terrible even to imagine. It seems that on one of the urban railways there had been a crowded train. A woman had tried to force her way into a compartment already fully occupied, and her efforts had excited a mild protest from one of the passengers already seated. The protesting remarks were taken amiss by the woman's husband, a fight followed, and then an arrest of the pugnacious husband. It is not a matter of any consequence whether he or the other man was at fault for the scrimmage; what is at least interesting is the fact that the Magistrate before whom the case came formally announced that nobody has a right to enter a railway carriage which is already full. Those who take tickets at the starting point, he said, are entitled to seats, and tickets taken at intermediate stations are subject to there being room for the holders. If the company issues tickets in excess of the number of seats provided the holders may bring an action for damages, wait for the next train, or demand the return of their money. Persons in a carriage which is full have a legal, as well as moral, right to prevent others from endeavoring to enter it, and the sooner the public understands that the better, as no one has a right to inconvenience passengers already in their places. Such is the English law, according to this interpreter of it. Patrons of our own elevated and surface cars are not likely even to ask if there is any such law in this country. They are so well habituated to traveling in cruel discomfort that the impulse to make effective protest against it has been lost.

—Tip-taking, it has now been officially decided, is an act unworthy of garbage collectors, and if any of them are guilty of it summary discharge will be the penalty. This is encouraging. In the good time to come a realizing sense of the enormity of tips may spread through other walks of life, and there is room for hope that after a while barbers, waiters and the like will ascend, voluntarily or involuntarily, to the heights of self-respect now occupied—somewhat against their will, alas!—by the garbage men.

—Gen. JOSEPH WHEELER, according to the latest reports, has resigned from the army and is coming home. This was probably the wisest course he could have adopted, for, while it is highly improbable that he has been subjected to any real hostility from his military superiors in the Philippines, his position there was too peculiar to be pleasant to himself or advantageous to the service. We shall hear all about it, no doubt, after the General gets back, and then the chances are it will turn out that the rumored troubles were mostly the imaginings of superserviceable friends. Certainly Gen. WHEELER is not likely to pose long or much as the man with a grievance. He is not that kind of a soldier, and recent letters from him have shown no signs of personal bitterness. Writing to a friend in Memphis a few weeks ago, he said: "I regard the insurrection as substantially over. Had it not been for the action of those who are called anti-imperialists in the United States, who had deluded Aguinaldo into the idea that they would secure him independence, it would have been over some time ago. The President of the Filipino Congress, Señor BATISTO, is at this place. He tells me that the Congress and Cabinet are dispersed and Aguinaldo is a fugitive, and this information we have had from several other sources." Of the islands themselves he said: "They are very rich and charmingly delightful. All they require is a good, honest government. It will be a very great advantage to the United States to have our mercantile depots so near the vast population of Eastern Asia."

DR. STRYKER ON HAMILTON.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Dr. Stryker, President of Hamilton College, paid a glowing tribute to Alexander Hamilton at the Hamilton Alumni dinner in New York Thursday night, but did he not go further than the facts will warrant, as he spoke with so much enthusiasm and eloquence, and did those who so warmly applauded give their approval? While none of us would lessen the just fame of that extraordinary man, the truth of history should not allow us to portray him as he never appeared to those who best knew him. In being true to his memory there was no need to attempt to speak ill of the merits of Jefferson, whose admirers have as much to be proud of, with quite as good an ancestry. But let us quote this from Dr. Stryker:

"The Constitution under which we live was the child of Hamilton. As Webster was its expounder, so Hamilton was the founder. It was his eloquence during its consideration, as well as his forecast in its construction, which secured its passage."

That those who think differently may not be prejudiced and partial, let us quote from Gouverneur Morris, himself one of those illustrious men in that Philadelphia Constitutional Convention, a warm personal friend of Hamilton and one of his most eloquent eulogists, who wrote this concerning him in a letter to Robert Walsh in February, 1811:

"Gen. Hamilton had little share in forming the Constitution. He disliked it, believing all republican government to be radically defective. He admired, nevertheless, the British Constitution, which I consider an aristocracy in fact though a monarchy in name. * * *

"Gen. Hamilton hated republican government because he confounded it with democratical government, and he detested the latter because he believed it must end in despotism, and be, in the meantime, destructive to public morality. He believed that our Administration would be enfeebled progressively at every new election, and become at last contemptible. He apprehended that the minions of faction would sell themselves and their country as soon as foreign powers should think it worth while to make the purchase. In short, his study of ancient history impressed on his mind a conviction that democracy ending in tyranny is, while it lasts, a cruel and oppressive domination."

In that long letter he writes on as to Hamilton that "from his situation in early life it was not to be expected that he should have a fellow feeling with those who idly supposed themselves to be the natural aristocracy of this country," remarking that he heartily assented, nevertheless, to the Constitution because he considered it as a band which might hold us together for some time, and he knew that National sentiment is the offspring of National existence. He trusted, moreover, that, in the changes and chances of time, we should be involved in some war which might strengthen our union and nerve the Executive.

The published debates of that Constitutional Convention, meagre as they are, bear out those statements of Morris, as others appear more frequently in those discussions, and it is seen that he favored a stronger government. It was unquestionably his view which kept him from being advanced directly by the people, although he advocated in his papers in The Federalist with a masterly ability the adoption of the Constitution by the several States, and in his memorable speech in the New York Convention at Poughkeepsie.

As to the framing of that noblest of our State papers, it can scarcely be said that any one of those great minds had the preeminence. Surely, Madison was more prominent there than Hamilton, but while he was so active, and the Virginia plan was most generally followed, the glorious result grew out of the united wisdom, and it was admitted that it was carried through by the superior influence of Washington.

Dr. Stryker spoke of Hamilton's "ability as a scholar," but was he at all distinguished "as a scholar"? "He had all the faith, fidelity, and ideality of the Scotch, blended with the versatility of the French," the talented speaker said. Did Gov. John Jay think so, when he would not act on his political suggestion for party gain? Truly, if we are to trust to John Adams and his own biographers, he was not without many imperfections, to be quite a rival to Burr, but he bore a brilliant part among brilliant men, and let him have his share of praise.

BLUNDERING MILITARY STRATEGY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your editorial of Friday's issue criticising and reflecting upon British officers in general, and particularly those in command of the troops in South Africa at the present time, it seems to me that you have greatly overstated the case—especially when you assume that British officers alone are guilty of making front attacks upon strong positions where it is possible to go around them. It is a very simple and beautiful thing to sit in one's library, draw up a plan of campaign, and by a judicious use of military strategy overcome one's enemy mathematically. It is altogether another matter to carry it out in practice, for the obvious reason that one can never know exactly what the enemy will be doing in the meantime. Military criticism by either professional or lay critics is of no value whatever unless all the circumstances connected with the operation criticised are known. But my object is to point out that the British officer has no exclusive claim to stupidity, which your article implies. The campaigns of the civil war furnish numberless instances of such blunders committed by regularly educated officers. Any student of that war can lay his finger on many such cases. I will only mention one, a memorable instance of incompetency, the hero of which, a professionally educated soldier in command of the finest army, at that time, that existed anywhere. I refer to the direct attack on Fredericksburg by Gen. Burnsides, Dec. 12 and 13, 1862. Here the enemy, 80,000 strong, occupied a position of their own choosing. Strongly fortified by the best of military engineers; a position of immense natural advantages, and one which, at the time, three-fourths of the officers and men of Burnsides's command believed to be invulnerable. A few miles above or below this fortified position the country was open, feasible for military operations, and without fortifications of any kind, and there existed no reason why the army should not have crossed the Rappahannock at one or the other of these positions and fought the enemy on open ground. Instead of proceeding in this common sense manner Burnsides crossed directly in front of the strongest part of the enemy's works and dashed column after column of superb infantry against this impregnable position from noon until evening. The result was a most disastrous repulse, with immense loss of life, absolutely thrown away, the enemy suffering very small losses. Hancock's division of the Second Corps lost 2,013 out of 5,006 of whom 156 were officers. The total losses reported officially by Burnsides was 1,180 killed, 9,028 wounded, and 2,145 missing; a total of 12,353 men and officers. After such an unwarranted exhibition of generalship, is it not a rather gratuitous implication that British officers alone are lacking in skill and judgment?

The curious suggestion that the empire has almost reached its limit of resources in this African war is so absurd that it is difficult to believe one can be serious in making such assertions. Great Britain's standing army, compared to her population, is very much less, proportionately, than the United States Army. One of the great privileges of the English and American citizen is that he cannot be compelled to serve in the army against his will. Who does not recognize this inestimable advantage over every other country? But when the occasion demands the potential strength of the empire is enormous. One-fifth of the population of the globe is supposed to be ruled by the Queen, and given opportunity one-third of these would rally to the standards with delight. Our own army is, numerically, a very small affair, but who does not recognize the potential forces behind it? If this is true of the United States it is also true of the British Empire.

DEMOCRACY AND REPUBLICANISM.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read your editorial in THE TIMES of the 11th inst., commenting on the numerous letters you received concerning millionaires, and the general tone being of hostility toward them. I want to give you my opinion as briefly as possible why that is so.

When this Government was founded, under the present Constitution, it was on the plan of "equal rights to all and special privileges to none." It met with strong opposition at that time, but the equal rights party prevailed, and the Government was started off on that new and untried scheme with great hopes and some fears for its success. Thomas Jefferson was its strongest advocate. Alexander Hamilton was not hopeful, and in fact advocated the creation of a privileged class, as he said, in order to secure the permanency of the Government, and two parties came into being, the Jeffersonian, or Republican, as one was called, and the Federalist Party, with Hamilton as leader. Inside of a score of years the Federalist Party succeeded in getting control of the Government, and started out to create a privileged class by adopting a tariff for protection and a United States Bank, with the intention of establishing branch banks throughout the Union.

In 1828 Andrew Jackson was elected President, and took his seat the year following. He commenced proceedings to wind up the National Bank, and succeeded, against much opposition. He turned over to the State pro rata the proceeds of the bank and then gave his reasons therefor. He said banking was a business, and it belonged to the people. The Government was never created to do the business of the country. Besides, one of the strongest features of our Government was opposition to a privileged class. "You can," he said, "build up a banking system throughout this country, controlled by the Central Government, without building up a privileged class." From that time up to 1860 the Government was conducted mainly upon the plan formulated by its founders.

In 1860 the party now in power got control of the Government and commenced right away to create a privileged class. Among the first acts they did was to refuse to extend the reciprocity treaty with Canada, that had expired by limitation, and made a protective tariff on food supplies, farm animals, and lumber of 20 per cent., but on logs that were floated down from Canada into the States a duty of 1 cent for revenue, and that was construed to mean whole trees, so that while the Government got 1 cent for revenue the man who sawed the logs into boards got protection from $10 to $20. That one act made a score or more of millionaires, and the people paid the price for the lumber and the millionaires became such by the conditions created by act of Congress. The next act to create a monied class was to loan $55,000,000 of the people's securities to two railroad companies, besides giving outright millions of acres of Government lands to these two companies. That made a score or more of millionaires, and then by putting on 50, 60, and 100 per cent. duties on articles of necessity, a few thousand more millionaires were made. When competition became too acute, a combine or trust controlled the price, and mills that were closed up received just the same income as if they were running and supplying the public needs.

Now, this has been going on for thirty years, except the four years of Mr. Cleveland's last term. He made a tremendous effort to restore the Government to the plan of the originators, but greed was too great, and he only partially succeeded. Through Mr. McKinley we have got back to robbing the people and enriching the few. Every industry in the country, or nearly every one, has formed combines or trusts, not only to control prices, but to control production. The silver mining industry the Republican Party has left out after attempting to control it by purchasing what they supposed was the full output of the mines. The results are known, and are too recent to speak of.

Now, what are the people going to do about it? Do you wonder that they feel resentment when the name of a millionaire is mentioned? The great inequality of condition that exists in this country to-day is very largely traceable to the acts of the Republican Party, by conditions created by their public measures, without which these trusts and combines could not have been formulated, and less inequality of conditions would have been the result. What's the remedy? At present there is none. Certainly the people can't look to the Bryans or Altgelds for relief, or to any of their ilk. They can make up faces at millionaires and think. That seems to be all that is left to them.

SAFETY IN ELECTRIC WIRING.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

You have in your issue of the 10th two very interesting letters on electric wiring. Mr. Crackenthorpe's comments on Prof. Thomson's ideas are very just, yet it is a little singular that both have failed, apparently, to learn that electric wiring incased in iron ducts is extensively used, at least in this country. It is to be regretted that they did not know, because their comments on the systems in use would have been very interesting.

The opinion of the contractor or even of the insurance man is not a criterion on which to base safety. The former uses what is specified, unless it is manifestly dangerous, and it has been truly said that the latter does not want perfect protection.

I once heard an insurance man say that an occasional fire was desirable from his point of view, because if there were no fires, and the people got the idea that their buildings were safe, there would be no more insurance. The owner, however, does not look on the matter that way, and wants a system "air, water, electric, gas, and rat tight." Such a system must be even more than that. Those qualities are easily secured; but in addition the system must be fire-proof, refractory, so that not even the electric arc can fuse the materials protecting the wires. As Mr. Crackenthorpe suggests, an iron conduit is necessary for rat-proofness; but none of the iron systems I have yet seen in use is otherwise as safe as lead-covered cable. The lining of these iron ducts is not only not refractory, but is not even fire-proof, in that it is combustible, and very liable to carbonize, so that any defect in the circuit may permit an electric connection between the wires and iron pipe, permitting the latter to become a part of the circuit, and, having at the joints points of resistance, will heat there and cause fire.

The method of drawing the wires through these ducts I have known to injure the covering laid on the wire at the works to such a degree that the lining of the pipe was about the only insulation left, and if this injury should permit an arc between two wires in the same duct a destruction of the duct lining is sure to follow, with serious results.

Improvements in sanitary arrangements have made the desirability of visible pipes manifest. If it is desirable that pipes carrying water currents be visible and accessible, are not pipes carrying electric currents more so?

THE JUSTIFICATION OF WEALTH.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

An Eastern friend, who desires to straighten what he pleases to term my "crooked thinking," has kindly sent me a copy of your paper of Jan. 3, with the editorial on "The Justification of Wealth" marked large and well underlined. And still I am unconverted.

One sentence specially claimed my attention. It was this:

"When a man who is a great many times a millionaire, as Mr. Carnegie is, can demonstrate that he has done good both in the accumulation and in the scattering of his fortune, there is nothing left for the Socialist and the demagogue to say to which sensible persons will pay any attention."

Can that be true? It sounds to me like saying, "One good King leaves nothing to be said in favor of a republican form of government," or "One good master proves slaveholding right."

To my thinking, "crooked" though it may be, any number of good Kings would not prove their Divine right to rule over other men, nor would any number of good masters make me believe in slavery. Neither could any number of Andrew Carnegies convince me that any man could "have a fortune of a million dollars honestly come by." Of course, I do not use "honestly" in a legal sense. Legal honesty and moral honesty may be quite different from each other.

Considered with reference to the whole problem, and not to a small fraction of it, I cannot believe that, however much good is done by it, the ownership of so much by one has not done more harm than good. A principle is involved—dependence or independence. Any dependence which is not recognized as voluntary, mutual, and equal is humiliating to the dependent. The pith of the article on "The Justification of Wealth" seems to be that laborers must have employers and poor people need charity, and that without rich people there could be no employers and no charities.

Those who insist that society is rightly constructed on a basis which makes it necessary for the laborer to be thankful to the capitalist who "furnishes employment" have to defend a condition in which many are dependent on a few for a chance to live. This is repugnant to and destructive of every feeling of manly and womanly spirit; therefore, I cannot believe it right or permanent.

There is a good deal said about the mutual dependence of labor and capital, of employed and employer, and, in a sense, it is all true; but when a conflict comes the "mutual dependence" isn't worth a row of pins. It hasn't been put in working order. The man who works for him is quickly given to understand by the rich man that, if he is not willing to make an unconditional surrender, to submit to the terms, he is free to go and starve.

No amount of generosity or of charity by the individuals involved can justify such a condition. It is slavery; possibly a little better than chattel slavery, but not much.

State Superintendent of Insurance.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your cogent article on Payn in THE TIMES of the 16th inst. "hits the nail square on the head." When Louis F. Payn was appointed and confirmed as Superintendent of Insurance, at least two-thirds of the insurance companies in and doing business in our State knew that he was a political trickster and an unscrupulous henchman of machine politics, who might make it very inconvenient for them to do a prosperous business. The simple fact that he is a favorite with all insurance companies, and that nearly all of them have petitioned Gov. Roosevelt to retain him in office, shows very conclusively that "there is a nigger in the fence."

Insurance companies in particular need close watching and honest scrutiny. Not only Gov. Roosevelt, but every intelligent voter in the State, knows that this man Payn has neither the moral rectitude nor the political honesty to perform such an important function as State Superintendent of Insurance. I trust that our Republican Senate will not stultify itself by refusing to confirm a good and competent man in this most important office, and raise itself above the degradation of allowing a man of Payn's notoriety to hold over one minute longer than the legal expiration of his term of office.

Use of the Word "Happen."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why not consider that "happen" on which your editorial remarks means and means only to all rational beings "an act of God"—that is, not by the human will? Then the fact that the vacancy was created by the deliberate act of human wills in the Harrisburg Legislature forbids Quay's interpretation of "happen," and doubly forbids his putting the meaning "happen to exist" upon the word.

More About Barbara Frietchie.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I beg to corroborate the statements made in your columns Jan. 15 by a relative of Barbara Frietchie. At the time when the incident is stated to have happened I was in charge of the United States Army General Hospital at Frederick and had been taken prisoner by Jackson. I had been paroled and was allowed the freedom of the town. I saw the Confederate troops file through the main cross street on their westward march at a point not more than 150 yards from the bridge on the other side of which old Barbara's house stood. No firing of guns, special halting, or any excitement occurred as the "greybacks" passed, and nothing out of the ordinary was supposed to have taken place, until much later the incident of Barbara Frietchie's flag and its brave exposure was developed by the journals and immortalized by Whittier.

The Philippines and America.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is worth calling attention to the fact that, historically, the Philippines were, after their discovery, annexed to the Spanish possessions in America. The Pope had divided the world into two hemispheres, in which the Spanish and Portuguese navigators could carry on their conquests. The Spaniards took the half that contained America and the Portuguese the East Indies. The Philippines were about on the line and Spain paid Portugal an indemnity for them.

Therefore it is not as unnatural as it might seem that history is repeating itself, and the Philippines are once more under the power of American influence.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Apropos of your discussion of the oratio obliqua employed by British editors and reporters, and the resulting dullness, have you ever come across the illustration given by a youthful classicist to show how direct discourse turns out when it is altered to indirect? This careful student of Caesar's literary style chose for his effort a passage from "Maud Muller," with the following result:

PAYN CONFERENCE CALLED

Republican Leaders to Meet in This City Saturday.

NO NOMINATION THIS WEEK

Mr. Payn Will See Mr. Platt Before the Governor Does—Platt's Attitude the Question.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—It is announced to-night that a conference of the Republican State leaders will be held in New York, probably at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, on Saturday, for the purpose of reaching some decision regarding the question of the insurance superintendency, which has caused Senator Platt and his lieutenants more trouble than anything which has taken place since the Republican organization obtained control of the State Government in 1895.

It is understood here that Senator Platt will be in New York on Friday night, and Gov. Roosevelt will see him there on Saturday for the purpose of a final conference. Louis F. Payn, the man whom Gov. Roosevelt has made up his mind to remove from the Insurance Department, will also be in New York the latter part of this week, and his friends say that he will have a talk with Senator Platt before the latter sees the Governor.

Chairman Odell of the Republican State Committee returned to New York to-day. It is understood that the object of his trip to Albany was to ask the Governor to defer sending any nomination to the Senate until next week. Mr. Odell was quite satisfied with his interview with Gov. Roosevelt, and the latter announced this evening that there would not be any action taken in the Insurance Department matter for several days and that he would not send any name to the Senate this week.

Well-informed politicians are of the opinion that at Saturday's conference the entire matter will be settled and not a few persons express themselves as confident that Senator Platt, as the recognized head of the State organization, will not be forced to declare himself, either with or against the Governor, in the present fight. It has been the general impression that Senator Platt has all along been neutral, but some of those who watch the moves on the political checkerboard say that the time has now come for Mr. Platt to announce his position.

From reliable sources it is learned that the Governor has not yet been able to secure the twenty-six votes necessary to confirm the nomination of a successor to Mr. Payn. It is further said that Mr. Payn cannot count enough votes to retain his place without the support of Senator Platt, but that if the State leader refuses to assist the Governor, Mr. Payn will continue in office. Members of the Legislature and others interested in the contest are looking forward to the announcement of Senator Platt's attitude with eagerness.

RESERVES FOR TRUST COMPANIES

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—Senator Martin to-day introduced a bill providing that all trust companies in New York City shall at all times have cash on hand equal to at least 15 per cent. of the aggregate amount of deposits, and in any other city 10 per cent. of deposits. One-half of this cash reserve may consist of moneys on deposit subject to call with a bank or trust company in this State having a capital of at least $200,000.

If the lawful money reserve of any trust company shall be less than the required amount, such trust company shall not increase its liabilities by making any new loans or discounts otherwise than by discounting bills of exchange, payable at sight, or making any dividends or profits until the full amount of its lawful reserve has been restored.

The Superintendent of Banks may notify any trust company whose lawful money reserve shall be below the amount required to make good such reserve, and if it fails to do so within thirty days such trust company shall be deemed insolvent.

Assemblyman Fitzgerald has introduced a bill to provide for the filing of statements as to their financial standing by all incorporated companies in the State, including trust companies, with the Secretary of State. The reports must show the amount of capital stock, assets, and the amount of dividends declared.

GOEBEL'S FOES TO USE FORCE.

Kentucky Republicans Confer and Decide to Fight If Necessary to Hold Office.

Special to The New York Times.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 17.—At a conference at the Galt House last night, lasting until well in the morning, a plan of campaign was mapped out by the Republicans and the Brown Democrats. The meeting was attended by Gov. Taylor, Senator De Boe, nearly all the minor State officers, and most of the Federal officers in Kentucky, together with leading Brown Democrats and the attorneys for the Republicans.

From a source believed to be reliable, it is said that assurance was given Gov. Taylor, in response to his request for support, that if he will call to his aid the militia and refuse to vacate office if unseated he will be supported to the last ditch by the forces of the party as represented by the leaders present.

It is also said that little hope was held out for Federal intervention, as the Governor cannot declare martial law, that being in the province of the Legislature, which is Democratic. But, however, it is said a plan was discussed by which the Federal Court at Louisville may be induced to take note of the situation if it can be brought to such a stage, but not an inkling of the ground for such a procedure can be ascertained.

One of the men present at the conference said the Republicans would hold on to the offices until they were killed. Of course this was overstating the case, but it summarizes the situation, meaning that if the Legislature unseats them, which now seems so probable, the Republicans will refuse to recognize the Democratic officers and will by force keep them from taking possession of the offices.

In this event, it is said on reliable Democratic authority, the Democrats will not employ force. They will make a legal demand. If refused, they will set up offices in convenient buildings and will take the matter to the courts, which will uphold them, the constitutionality of the Goebel election law having already been passed upon by the Court of Appeals. Then, if it came to a question of force, the force would be used by the courts and not by the Democratic officers.

Many Democrats are said to be anxious to avoid anything like force, believing that if the resistance to the General Assembly and the courts is only on the Republican side it will be good campaign material for the Democrats, not only in Kentucky, but throughout the United States. But there are other Democrats who favor forcible eviction.

COL. BRYAN IN KENTUCKY.

Special to The New York Times.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 17.—Mr. Bryan to-day addressed the members of the Assembly gathered in joint session in the house. He said he would not discuss politics. He could not make the free silver Democracy stand any firmer and he had not time to convert a Republican.

Mr. Bryan urged the importance of the passing of a law which would make it a felony for corporations to contribute to a fund to be used for campaign purposes. Such a law should also be passed by Congress. Another law he favored was one to prevent betting on elections. Another evil which he spoke against was the watering of stock by corporations.

After a discussion of trusts in much the same words which he has used in previous speeches, Mr. Bryan said his highest ambition was to make this Government stronger and better than ever before and not to secure honors for himself.

Mr. Bryan made another speech this afternoon from the front of the Capitol. This was devoted more to the issues of the Democratic Party, but also to the duties of the Legislature to its constituents.

Speaking last night at the banquet given in his honor, and referring to the Kentucky contests, Mr. Bryan said that he had neither advised for nor against the contests, regarding this as a matter to be settled wholly by the members of the Legislature. He referred to the Tilden-Hayes Electoral Commission, and pointed to the fact that the Democrats of the country acquiesced in it, though its decision was reached by a party vote. The decision of these contests, he said, should likewise be acquiesced in, no matter to which party the decision is given by the Legislature.

Mr. Bryan left this afternoon for Cincinnati.

IBSEN'S "MASTER BUILDER."

The Symbolical Drama Acted in English at the Carnegie Lyceum.

A performance of an English version of "The Master Builder," which is, perhaps, the most obscurely symbolical of Henrik Ibsen's "social dramas," was endured with some unmistakable signs of dissent and impatience in Carnegie Lyceum last night. Yet it seems this ought to have been the most commendable effort this season of the enthusiasts who are giving these occasional performances of plays neglected by the commercial theatre. "The Master Builder" is surely a notable work by a famous dramatic poet, whose plays are wholly disregarded by the commercial theatre in this country.

The symbolism in this drama, however, is particularly occult and mystifying. The play, to be enjoyed, should be preceded by an explanatory lecture by a student of Ibsenism. In the English translation, performed last night, there are many passages which, in the mouths of the inferior actors, sounded shallow and vapid. The main points of the allegory were clear enough, but the subtleties of Solness's unsettled and crazy philosophy of life, delivered in a monotonous voice by a gentleman with a large blank countenance, were not inspiriting. In the circumstances, it is best to dismiss the subject briefly.

The only notable feature of the performance was the acting of Miss Florence Kahn as the strange girl, Hilda Wangel, a healthy, buoyant creature from the mountains, who still has a touch of the neurotic in her composition, and is united to the unhappy architect by a mystic bond; who invades his household as one answering a spiritual call, awakens the better side of his nature to a mood of self-revelation, and inspires him to the symbolical feat which causes his death.

Miss Kahn's portrayal could scarcely be called either coherent or consistent. It was full of crudity. But it possessed a certain poetical quality, was full of youthful spirit, and was not always overwrought and artificial. The cast also included W. H. Pascoe as Solness, Josephine Wyndham as his droning wife, who laments the loss of her nine dolls, and Grace Fisher as the hypnotized Kaia.

THE BOSTON ORCHESTRA.

The Third Afternoon Concert at Carnegie Hall Yesterday.

The third of the afternoon concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra took place yesterday afternoon at Carnegie Hall. The programme consisted of Rubin Goldmark's overture to "Hiawatha," the second piano concerto of Eduard Schutt, and Rimsky-Korsakow's symphonic suite "Scheherezade." The pianist was Ludwig Breitner, who has recently come from Paris to live in New York. Let us take the music in its order. Young Rubin Goldmark is a nephew of Carl Goldmark, the composer of the famous "Sakuntala" overture, and was born in this city on Aug. 15, 1872. He was graduated from the College of the City of New York and then went abroad to continue the musical studies which had been begun here. He studied on the other side of the water two years, and then, returning to his native land, had the advantage of instruction from Joseffy and Dvorak.

His overture, heard yesterday for the first time here, is the work of a young musician without many ideas. There is a woeful lack of definite figure in the work and a deal of development of nothing. This is a pity, for the composer shows a considerable feeling for orchestral color, and a very thorough acquaintance with the methods of his distinguished uncle. This is, of course, natural. If one has a good model in the family it would be ungracious to go outside for guidance. There is a well-made climax near the end of this overture, which is entirely too far from the beginning. The piano concerto of Schutt has a good first movement, a very pleasing second (the slow one), and a fairly good finale in scherzando style. The musical theme, which appears as the principal idea of the first movement, is employed in slightly modified forms throughout the work, and this gives a sort of organic union to the parts. But it should be said, in justice to the composer that his style is sufficient in itself to preserve the unity of his work. The piano part is only tolerably favorable to the revelation of a player's powers, and the orchestration is at times too thick and ambitious.

Mr. Ludwig Breitner, who played the solo part in the concerto, is a respectable middle-class pianist, who will set no rivers on fire, but who will not annoy any one. He has a neat technic, taste, and a generally polished style. His playing is deficient in distinction, fire, and color. He is probably at his best as a teacher. Rimsky-Korsakow's suite was heard again with delight. It is such a delicious piece of orchestration that any one can enjoy it even without attention to the story which it tells without too much attempt at details. As played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra yesterday, it lost not a shade of the many orchestral tints in it. The performance was notable for its perfect clarity, its absolute balance, and its finished phrasing. But it would not have been difficult to secure a reading in which there was more brilliancy. Mr. Gericke is so very polite in his methods, so averse to rudeness of any kind, that he rubs off all the angles that make reflection of the sunlight. However, we ought to be glad to hear such finish. We get precious little of it at home, and we should rejoice to hear such virtuosi as the solo violin, 'cello, oboe, clarinet, and bassoon of this orchestra.

"Faust" at the Opera.

Some persons who regard themselves as the lights which attract the moths to the Metropolitan Opera House are in a fair way to learn things which should be to their advantage, but which they, with the perversity of their species, will probably regard as the opposite. The repetition of "Faust," which took place at the Metropolitan last night, engaged the services of Mme. Emma Calvé as Marguerite, and thereby hangs this tale. That she had the capable assistance of Messrs. Saleza, Scotti, and Plançon in the most important parts will not account for the size of the audience, nor for the fact already known that on Saturday night the auditorium will be packed as it never before has been at a half-price performance.

Mme. Calvé's originality of conception and striking dramatizations of her various rôles are the potent charms that draw the public to the Metropolitan. The conventional operatic assumption of parts is fast losing its place on the local lyric stage, and only those who show intellect and feeling in their work may hope for success. There are several members of Mr. Grau's company who might profit by the story of Mme. Calvé's stage development, but if they permit their eyes to be blinded by the petty jealousy so common among singers, they may fail to see a great light. M. Saleza, who was heard as Faust for the first time this season, was painfully hoarse; but the other members of the cast were in good condition.

Horace P. Pell to Appear Next Week.

Horace P. Pell, who has decided to go on the stage professionally under the direction of Charles Frohman, has been cast for a rôle in the new play, "The Surprises of Love," which will be produced at the Lyceum Theatre for the first time next Monday night. Miss Elsie De Wolf and H. Reeves-Smith will be seen in the leading parts. It was originally intended to have Mr. Pell make his début in the professional ranks in Mr. Frohman's production of "Hearts Are Trumps." The part he will appear in is that of an English citizen.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

A truly beautiful midwinter day, with bright sunlight and bracing air, brought out yesterday a crowd of fashionably dressed women on the avenue, and the streets and avenues of the fashionable districts up town were again thronged with carriages and promenaders from morning until night. Still with this continued fine Winter weather the town is not gay, as compared with former seasons, and especially that of last year. The absence of snow enables the hunting colonies at Hempstead, Westchester, and elsewhere to keep up their runs with the hounds, and the talk of so many departures in the near future for the South and Europe deters many people who have lingered late in the country from now coming in, with so few weeks of the season remaining.

To-day will bring a few events of interest. Mrs. James Brown Lord will give a large reception at the Henry A. Barclay house, 603 Madison Avenue, which Mr. Lord has leased for the Winter, and at which the Tuxedo set will be largely represented; the third Bachelors and Spinsters' dance will take place at Delmonico's in the evening. There will be a number of "at homes," including those of Mrs. George T. Bonner and Miss Mabel Bonner, 115 East Twenty-first Street; Mrs. James Francis Ruggles, 60 Irving Place; Mrs. Robert M. Gillespie, (Miss Stokes,) 8 West Fifty-third Street; Mrs. Geo. F. Shrady, Sr., 5 East Sixty-sixth Street; Mrs. Louis F. Bishop, 54 West Fifty-fifth Street, and Mrs. Schuyler Quackenbush and the Misses Quackenbush, 142 West Fifty-Seventh Street.

Yesterday brought the smallest number of social incidents and events of any week day of the season thus far. This had the result of making the fashionable restaurants gay at the luncheon and dinner hour and increasing the crowd that would otherwise have naturally attended the wedding of Mr. Edward McVickar and Miss Edith L. Speyers, which was celebrated in the Church of the Holy Communion at 3:30 P. M., and which is described in another column. There was much calling after the wedding, and the "at homes" of Mrs. James M. Varnum, (Miss Dickey,) of Mrs. Lewis F. Whitin (Miss Morgan) and Miss Whitin, of Mrs. A. T. Van Nest (Miss Taylor) and Miss Van Nest, of Mrs. Frederic Ingersoll, (Miss Rhodes of Providence,) and Mrs. Henry Parish, Jr., (Miss Ludlow,) were especially well attended.

The coming of the Count and Countess de Castellane, who will probably arrive here on the French steamer on Sunday next, and which was discussed on Tuesday in this column, was made the text of a number of more or less imaginary stories that appeared yesterday, and was, of course, a subject of gossip wherever people met. Mr. and Mrs. George Gould may give a musicale on Feb. 10 at their city residence, 457 Fifth Avenue, in honor of the Count and Countess, but they will spend most of their brief visit here at Georgian Court, Lakewood. This is their first visit to America since their marriage, March, 1895. The story has reappeared and is being again told that the Countess de Castellane, formerly Miss Anna Gould, made herself conspicuous during the riots at the Auteuil race course last June, when Baron Christiani struck President Loubet, by marching up and down in front of the grand stand at the head of a small band of women, calling offensive epithets to the President and his friends. This story is absolutely false, is most unjust to the Countess de Castellane, and those repeating and republishing it are simply slandering and libeling the little Countess. Whatever may have been her feelings or opinions on that famous day, she did not descend from her place in the box in the fashionable portion of the grand stand, which was at some distance from that of President Loubet, nor did she take any part whatever in the demonstration against him. Any one of the many well-known New Yorkers at Auteuil that day could testify as to the falsity of this story.

B. Cotton, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Norton, Mr. and Mrs. James B. Waller, Mr. and Mrs. Colgate Hoyt, Mr. William Jay and Mrs. Jay, Augustus Jay, Craig Lippincott of Philadelphia, and Gen. W. McKinley Osborne, United States Consul General in London.

They are sailing very shortly for Europe. Miss Hinchman is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle. A dinner was given for her at the Biddles' on Tuesday evening, the party afterward going to the opera.

The ball to be given to-morrow evening by Mrs. Munnikhuysen of Baltimore for the coming-out of her daughter will be a large one, and one of the events of the Baltimore season. Miss Laura Swann of this city will be one of the guests. Miss Munnikhuysen is a beautiful girl, who was admired this last Autumn here when she came on a visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund T. Baylies will sail in March for Europe and the Riviera. Miss Edith Gray, the daughter of Judge John Clinton Gray, will be given a large reception in Philadelphia by Mrs. George Childs Drexel on Jan. 23. Judge and Mrs. Clinton Gray are in Washington, where on Tuesday evening they gave a large dinner to Gov. Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Mrs. E. M. Culver and Miss Katherine Clark, who have been visiting their father, Senator Clark, at the Arlington in Washington, have returned to town. They have cards out for the third and fourth Tuesdays in January and the first and second Tuesdays in February.

The engagement was announced yesterday of Miss Katherine Van Vechten Miller, daughter of the late Morris Miller, and Mr. James Bayard Speyers, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert G. P. Speyers, whose daughter, Miss Edith Lawrence Speyers, was married yesterday to Mr. Edward McVickar. The engagement was announced at the wedding reception of Mr. and Mrs. McVickar. Miss Miller's mother was a Miss Hurlburt, the daughter of the late Judge Hurlburt of Albany.

Mrs. Henry H. Cook has issued cards for a large reception, with music, on Thursday, Jan. 25, at 1 East Seventy-eighth Street. Mrs. Cook will also give two Thursday afternoons, Feb. 1 and 8. The cards of Mr. and Mrs. Carlos de Heredia are inclosed with those of Mrs. Cook. Mrs. de Heredia was Miss Georgie Cook.

There are cards out for quite a number of entertainments. One of these will be a large dinner to be given by Mrs. James Hude Beeckman on Saturday evening. Mrs. Willard S. Brown, who was Miss Williams of Staten Island, has a house warming at her new home, 105 East Thirty-fifth Street, on Wednesday, Jan. 24. Mrs. Collis P. Huntington will give a dinner of twenty covers on Tuesday, Jan. 23, and Mrs. Charles Coudert, who is located for the Winter at 2 West Thirty-sixth Street, will send out cards shortly for days.

Among the receptions yesterday was one given by Mrs. Charles H. Coster in her new home, 37 East Thirty-seventh Street. This house was the old Howard Potter residence. The second reception will be next Wednesday, and Mrs. Coster will besides give several dinners during the season.

The South is beginning to have its season. John D. Crimmins is making quite a reputation as an amateur fisherman in Florida, and reports come from Jacksonville and St. Augustine as to his prowess. Mr. and Mrs. James Suydam were in Bermuda. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Untermyer had just left Palm Beach this week after a fortnight's stay. Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Smith are at the Alcazar, St. Augustine. Frederic Sturgis is at Palm Beach.

Mrs. George Burroughs Torrey will give a woman's luncheon of twenty covers in Mr. Torrey's studio, at 391 Fifth Avenue, on Saturday next, Jan. 20.

Because Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish is credited with the intention of giving a minstrel show next Saturday evening, imaginary programmes have been prepared and published, and one of them has the name of Mr. John Patterson Nicholas on it. The gentleman has not been seen in New York for some time past. That the Hewitts are going to give a fancy dress entertainment, and that Mr. Howard Constable and Mr. James L. Breese will repeat their studio successes, are safe guesses, but no authoritative announcement has been made of any such entertainments in contemplation. It is not absolutely safe to depend on what has happened one year to make an announcement for another.

The Ladies' Auxiliary Society of St. Vincent's Hospital gave at the Astoria last evening a large reception in the ballroom, followed by dancing, which began about 10 o'clock in the evening. Supper was served in the Astor Gallery. There is no public endowment for this institution, and its maintenance depends almost exclusively upon contributions from those interested in the good work that the hospital is carrying on. Last year a concert was given, and proved very successful in raising funds, and this year a reception, with dancing, was decided upon. This, too, fortunately, proved very successful, as the attendance last evening was large, all the boxes not only having been sold, but extra ones had to be built on the floor of the ballroom in order to meet the demand. The President of this auxiliary is Mrs. Martin B. Brown, and the Vice Presidents are Mrs. Frederic R. Coudert, Mrs. R. B. Roosevelt, and Mrs. Charles Phelps. The Secretaries are Miss Blessing and Mrs. William Cherry, and the Treasurer is Mrs. Stephen Philbin. Among the patronesses of last night's affair, most of whom were present, were Mrs. George Bliss, Mrs. M. P. Breslin, Mrs. Brockholst Cutting, Mrs. Richard Croker, Mrs. Peter Doelger, Mrs. Francis Delehanty, Mrs. Hugh J. Grant, Mrs. George Hecker, Mrs. Alice Grace Holloway, Mrs. William E. Iselin, Mrs. William Knapp, Miss Leary, Mrs. William Lummis, Mrs. Morgan J. O'Brien, Mrs. Eugene Pitou, Mrs. Walter Roche, Mrs. C. C. Shayne, Mrs. Paul Thebaud, Mrs. Frank Travers, Mrs. George Waddington, Mrs. William Sadlier, and Mrs. Jules Reynal.

The following is Mr. Labouchère's opinion of Mrs. Arthur Paget's contemplated tableaux. It reads a bit differently from the general run of twaddle published in the London newspapers. Mr. Labouchère may be both bitter and unjust, but he is generally interesting: "A series of tableaux vivants is announced for February under the auspices of one of the American ladies who have accepted a British matrimonial yoke. The attraction apparently is that all the swagger society beauties are to figure in the tableaux, and the details of the entertainment are to be given to some friend connected with the war. I make no doubt that a considerable amount will be collected in this fashion, all the more if the newspapers, after their wont on such occasions, advertise the amount that each pushful snob pays for his box or his stall. But is it not time that all these advertising jollifications in aid of war funds should cease? There has been a perfect rage to get them up or to figure in them. They jar with the stern realities of war.

"If, however," he continues, "we must have them, I would suggest that the figurantes should follow the example of the Duchess of Devonshire at the Westminster election, when she promised to kiss all who voted for Mr. Fox. Let a line of well-dressed society beauties stand on a stage and let each one of the spectators have the right to kiss any one of them for a certain price. Or the kisses of each might be put up to public auction. This would create a healthy rivalry among their respective adorers, with much profit to the war funds. If we really consider that good taste should be eschewed for the benefit of the cause, it is as well to do the thing thoroughly."

A DAY'S WEDDINGS.

McVickar—Speyers.

Mr. Edward McVickar and Miss Edith Speyers, daughter of Mr. Albert G. P. Speyers, were married yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the Church of the Holy Communion, at Twentieth Street and Sixth Avenue. The Rev. Dr. Walton Battershall, rector of St. Peter's Church, Albany, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Mottet, rector of the Church of the Holy Communion, performed the ceremony. The bride entered the church on the arm of her father. The maid of honor was Miss Cornelia Hampden Robb, a cousin of the bride, and the bridesmaids were Miss Selina Schroeder, cousin of the bride; Miss Mabel Jones, Miss Mary Vibbert, and Miss Julia Walsh of Albany. Mr. Charles Bull was Mr. McVickar's best man, and the ushers were the Messrs. Clive Bayley, the English Consul in New York; Andrew Kibby, James Bayard Speyers, William N. Beach, Alexander Harvey, Howard Davison, and Ralph O. Ives. The bride's gown was of ivory white satin, trimmed with rose point, and chous of the same at the left side of the waist line; falling from the chou at the waist line were two long scarflike ends of the lace to the bottom of the gown. Her tulle veil was bordered with point lace and was caught to her coiffure by a diamond crescent, a gift from the bridegroom. There was also a spray of orange blossoms in her hair. She wore no gloves, and the sleeves of her gown almost covered her hands. Her bouquet was of lilies of the valley. She also wore a large pendent ornament of topazes and pearls set in Indian gold, a family heirloom. The maid of honor and the bridesmaids were dressed alike in gowns of Liberty satin of a pinkish heliotrope shade, with tucked and trained skirt. The bodices were masses of tucks draped with fichus of chiffon. These fichus were tied at the left side of the bodice over the skirts nearly to the gowns' hems. The bridesmaids wore short tulle veils instead of hats. These were secured to the coiffures by small ostrich tips of the same color as the gowns, but a paler shade. All carried bouquets of pink roses. The bridesmaids' gifts from the bride were heart of amethyst set in pearls, to be used as pendants or pins. Mr. and Mrs. McVickar went south on their wedding trip, and on their return and while living in town will occupy an apartment at 13 East Eighth Street. Their Summer home will be at Collinsville, N. Y., where Mr. McVickar has a large farm.

Virgin, pastor emeritus of the Church of the Pilgrims. The bride wore a gown of white dotted gauze over white satin. Miss Grace Leslie Wagner was the maid of honor. Her gown was of white mousseline de soie over blue satin. The ribbon girls were Miss Sarah Williams, a niece of the bridegroom, and Miss Marion Scott, a cousin of the bride. Miss Evelyn G. Graham was the flower girl. The bridegroom's best man was his brother, Mr. William Bonesteel of Albany. A breakfast was served after the ceremony. Heinemian, Miss Lowenstein, and Miss A. Woostint. The ushers were Messrs R. Keller, H. Schall, J. Young, and B. Heyn. A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents. THE MOSLER PICTURE SALE.

This evening will bring the sale at auction at the American Art Galleries, 6 East Twenty-third Street, of ninety-eight oil paintings by the well-known American artist Henry Mosler. This varied collection of studio effects and the two-score and more oils, water colors and drawings by foreign artists owned by Mr. Mosler will be sold at the galleries to-morrow afternoon.

In the review given of the collection of Mr. Mosler's own works, to be sold to-night, in the THE NEW YORK TIMES of Jan. 12, his career from a young art student in Cincinnati, as an illustrator for Harper's Weekly during the civil war, and later on as an art student and painter in Düsseldorf and Paris, with the honors won by him abroad and at home, were described and told at length. The list of Mr. Mosler's pictures owned by foreign museums and galleries, as also those in American galleries, was also given.

It remains this morning only to call again the attention of New York art lovers and picture buyers to the excellence not only of Mr. Mosler's genre work, in which he has won deserved fame and reputation, and through and by which he is chiefly known to the general art public, but to that of his landscape and his portrait work. He is, as said by the present writer in the first review, a much more versatile painter than is generally known, and this opinion has been also voiced by other and wider ones, all unite in giving Mr. Mosler not only good words, but high praise, for his conscientious, earnest and able work which has conferred honor on American art both at home and abroad, as well as upon himself. The sale to-night will begin promptly at 8 o'clock and should not be a long one. It is said that the important genre pictures "Invoking God's Blessing," "The Last Moments" and "The Ghost Story" will be competed for by several well-known galleries and museums to-night. The individual collector present to-night will, however, find many smaller genre works, as well as landscapes and coast scenes, which will add greatly to his collection.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Capt. Albert Dayton.

Capt. Albert Dayton, senior member of the ship brokerage firm of Albert Dayton & Co., died on Tuesday night at his residence, 393 Clermont Avenue, Brooklyn. He had been suffering from an acute attack of bronchitis. Capt. Dayton was born on Long Island in 1820 and took to the sea at a very early age, rising to the command of an ocean-going vessel when only twenty years old. He was master of sailing packets for several years in the service of the old house of Sturges, Clearman & Co. of this city, for whom he afterward became Port Captain, and was also in the employ of Gager, Mailler & Co.

About forty-five years ago he entered the ship-brokerage business in New York and founded the firm of Baker & Dayton, afterward changed to Albert Dayton & Co. At the time of his death he was the oldest ship broker in this city with one exception, and had occupied the same business office for forty years. FIGHTS THE GRAND LODGE

Robert Kopp Invokes Court's Aid Against Expulsion Decree.

FIRST APPEAL OF ITS KIND

Plaintiff Charges an Unjust Trial and the Admission of Evidence Forbidden by Masonic Law.

For the first time in the history of jurisprudence in this country, so far as the authorities state, a civil court is about to be asked to interfere with the decrees of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons. Robert Kopp, a manufacturer of machinery at 78 Barclay Street, who has been a member of the order for twenty-three years, has brought a suit in the Supreme Court against George W. White, as Treasurer of the Grand Lodge, F. and A. M., to compel that body to reinstate him as a member of the order, from which he was expelled nearly a year ago. The case will be assigned a place on the calendar to-morrow.

The case dates back to December, 1898, when the plaintiff, Mr. Kopp, was made Master of the Lodge of Strict Observance, No. 194, F. and A. M. The facts growing out of this election were the leading causes of the trouble. It is alleged that Mr. Kopp found conditions existing in the subordinate lodge which were not to his liking and he took steps to correct them. In so doing he opposed a number of the members of the lodge, and they brought charges against him for acting in an arbitrary manner. On these charges Grand Master William A. Sutherland suspended Mr. Kopp for a year.

Mr. Kopp took an appeal. Up to this time he was not represented by counsel and had had no advice. He was ordered to appear before the Grand Lodge in New York in June last, but he was unable to obey the summons. It was then that the chief trouble arose. While this appeal was pending, Mr. Kopp wrote, it is alleged, a letter to the Grand Master in which he said that he was not being tried with justice and that the Grand Master was resorting to political measures in Masonry to effect his (Kopp's) removal. This letter was alleged to have been abusive, insulting, and disrespectful.

The letter which it is alleged Mr. Kopp wrote was turned over to a Deputy, and on it charges were formally made. A commission consisting of three members of the order was appointed to try the charges, and before that body for the first time Mr. Kopp had the advice of counsel, John S. Hill of Hill, Sturcke & Andrews appearing for him. The first act of counsel was to challenge the commission on account of bias and prejudice. To this challenge the commission made claim that it had been insulted in having its honesty impugned, and absolutely refused to entertain the challenge in any form.

The commission then called Mr. Kopp to the witness chair and attempted to interrogate him about the authorship of the letter, to make him, in fact, as alleged, a witness against himself. Under advice of counsel, Mr. Kopp refused to answer any questions. The commission thereupon announced that it had no other testimony by which to prove the authorship of the letter and adjourned. Two weeks later the members convened again and put on the stand Grand Secretary E. M. L. Ehlers, who testified that Grand Master Sutherland had sent him the letter in question, telling him that it had been received from Mr. Kopp. On this alleged hearsay evidence the commission voted to expel Mr. Kopp from the order.

Mr. Kopp then appealed to the Grand Lodge from the order of expulsion. Capt. C. S. Andrews represented him before the full Commission of Appeal when both appeals were argued. The action of the trial commission was upheld and the report adopted without discussion. The order of expulsion was thereupon promulgated, and Mr. Kopp, who on account of his membership of twenty-three years in the order was also a member of the Association of Veteran Masons, was expelled.

Having exhausted all appeals within Masonry, there being no hope beyond the Grand Lodge, Mr. Kopp took the step that makes his case notable in the opinion of lawyers, and brought a suit for reinstatement in the Supreme Court. It is claimed for him that the trial commission committed error in three instances under its own laws. The first of these is that it refused to hear argument on the challenge, and that, second, it erred in attempting to compel an accused person to testify against himself. The third count is that in admitting the testimony of Mr. Ehlers it heard hearsay evidence, which is distinctly forbidden by Masonic law.

The case to be presented to the Supreme Court will embody the records of the Masonic commissions, and the court will be asked to pass upon the question whether or not, under the facts as they exist, Mr. Kopp had a fair trial under Masonic law.

The question, therefore, as to whether Mr. Kopp actually wrote the letter will not be gone into, it being contended that the authorship has never been proved. Yet the contention will be made that even if Mr. Kopp actually wrote the letter, the expulsion cannot be justified, as it has been held repeatedly in the courts of last resort, the complaint states, that a letter written to a governing individual or body, no matter of what character, is not in itself enough to warrant such a course.

A peculiar complication has arisen in the case, owing to the fact that under the Masonic law no attorney can appear before the Commission of Appeal who is not himself a Mason. The attorneys for the Grand Lodge in the action are Grady, Smith & Crandall, the junior member of which firm is Elbert Crandall. Mr. Crandall is Chief of the Commission of Appeal which heard and passed on Kopp's case. He is therefore put in the position of defending as attorney a decision which he made. The attorneys on the other side are also Masons.

The alleged disrespectful letter will be a part of the record, but neither of the attorneys would allow the papers or the letter to be seen. It is known, however, that no matter which way the case may go, it will find itself at last in the Court of Appeals for final adjudication.

OFFERS BOUNTY ON RATS.

Bremen Wants Them Killed to Prevent the Spread of Plague.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Vice Consul Murphy at Bremen reports to the State Department that vigorous efforts are being made by the authorities and people of that city and community to arrest the progress of the plague.

One of the measures adopted upon the recommendation of the Medical Department is the extermination of the rats. To encourage the people to employ every means to this end, a premium of 1¼ cents will be paid for every rat delivered at the port of Bremen caught in that city or in the surrounding country districts.

THE PLAGUE IN MANILA.

Surgeon General Van Reypen Says Americans Need Not Fear Disease.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Surgeon General Van Reypen of the navy said to-day in relation to the outbreak of the plague at Manila that he anticipates no serious results of its appearance there to our countrymen. The General states that the plague so far is confined strictly to the lower classes, people who live under horrible sanitary conditions, and that persons taking precautionary measures as to water, diet, &c., need have no fear of the contagion.

GRUBER SECONDS OPPONENT.

Praises Also State and National Administrations at a Meeting.

The Republicans of the Twenty-first Assembly District held a meeting last night, at which Abraham Gruber presided.

William B. Bennett, who was elected a delegate at the primaries at the request of the New Amsterdam Club, resigned. Emil Twyeffort named George C. Austin to fill the vacancy, and Mr. Gruber, from the chair, seconded the nomination in a very happy speech.

Mr. Austin, who is contesting with Mr. Gruber for the district leadership, was unanimously chosen.

Mr. Gruber also made a speech eulogistic of President McKinley and Gov. Roosevelt, in which he expressed his sincere belief that they would be re-elected to their present positions at the election next November.

In some political circles, Mr. Gruber has been reported as opposed to the re-election of President McKinley and Gov. Roosevelt.

WANTS STATUTES REVISED.

The State Bar Association Urges Action by the Legislature.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—The New York State Bar Association at its meeting to-day adopted a resolution that the Legislature be required to provide for the completion of the work of revising the statutes, and for full examination and proper action as to the revision of the code of procedure by a commission to be selected by the Governor, the members to serve without compensation. It is recommended that no action be taken with reference to code revision until the subject can be fully examined and proper recommendations be made by the commission so appointed.

It was also decided that the Law Reform Committee should select a sub-committee of five of its members, of which the Chairman of the Law Reform Committee should be Chairman, to represent and act for the association in this connection.

It transpired during the preliminary discussion that for the last two or three years the Legislature has taken no action on any bills presented by the Revision Commission, and that the amount appropriated for several years past has been $22,000. No one advocated the retaining of the present Revision Commission or the adoption of any of its work.

The association devoted this afternoon to the consideration of a resolution presented by Tracy C. Becker of Buffalo declaring the Bar Association approves of the general scope and purpose of the bill pending in Congress for the division of the Federal District of Northern New York and the creation of a new district of the parts divided, and asking Congress to pass either the bill under consideration or a similar measure. The resolution was warmly debated and was finally adopted.

GAS INSPECTION BILL.

Measure Introduced by Assemblyman Harburger Specifies Tests.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—Assemblyman Harburger to-day offered an amendment to the charter of Greater New York, providing that the illuminating gas of every company shall be inspected at least twice a year, or may be inspected as frequently as the Commissioner of Public Buildings, Lighting, and Supplies shall direct.

The gas shall be tested for illuminating power by means of the disk photometer or other improved apparatus, and during such tests shall be burned from a burner best adapted to it, which is at the same time suitable for domestic use, and at as near the rate of five feet per hour as is practicable. The gas shall be tested as to its safety and as to public health in such a manner as the Commissioner may direct.

If the gas does not comply with the reasonable and proper standard of purity and standard of safety to public health as fixed by said Commissioner, a fine of $100 shall be paid by such company to the city.

EDUCATIONAL BILL INTRODUCED.

Likely that Two Others on the Same Subject Will Follow.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—The bill prepared by the special commission for the unification of the educational system of the State was introduced in the Senate to-day by Senator White and in the Assembly by Mr. Lewis.

It is by no means certain that this bill will become a law, as it is understood that the Statutory Revision Commission intends to prepare another measure, and Senator White says that it is probable that when the two bills have been submitted he will prepare still another embodying some of the provisions of each as a compromise between the two.

The bill introduced to-day is identical in all its essential features with that announced as the determination of the commission at its last meeting in this city. The only additions are a few sections to provide for the transfer of records and the application of existing statutes to the newly created Board of Regents.

METROPOLITAN MUSEUM OF ARTS.

Bill Introduced for an Appropriation of $200,000.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—Extensive improvements to the Metropolitan Museum of Arts in Central Park are contemplated in a bill introduced to-day by Senator Elsberg. In it the Controller is authorized to raise by the issue of bonds $200,000 to equip and furnish the east extension of the building and according to plans made by Trustees of the museum and approved by the Commissioners of the Department of Parks.

Mr. Ryttenberg introduced the same bill in the Assembly.

Penalty to the Eight-Hour Law.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—Assemblyman O'Connell of New York to-day introduced a bill amending the eight-hour law so as to provide for a penalty. His amendment makes it a misdemeanor for any person to compel or require a person to work more than eight hours a day. There is no mention of misdemeanor in the old law. Mr. O'Connell appeals to all organized labor to rally to the support of his bil.

Street Cleaning Measures.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—Senator Mitchell to-day introduced two bills relative to the Street Cleaning Department in the Boroughs of Queens and Richmond. One provides that contracts for the removal of snow and ice may be entered into for a period of five years, and the other that the act shall not prevent the Commissioner of Street Cleaning from performing the work of his department either by contract or otherwise.

Woman's Suffrage in Villages.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—Bills introduced by Senator G. A. Davis and Assemblyman Hill provide for a lump appropriation of $600,000 for an armory for the Sixty-fifth Regiment, Buffalo, $150,000 available this year, $250,000 in 1901, and $200,000 in 1902.

An Anti-Policy Bill.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—Mr. Fallows of New York will to-morrow introduce a bill making the finding of slips or other paraphernalia of policy playing about the person of an accused presumptive evidence of guilt.

Other Bills in the Senate.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—The following bills were introduced in the Senate to-day:

Senator CULLEN—Authorizing the Police Commissioners of New York City to rehear and determine the charges against Philip Ryan, a policeman of the first grade, for reinstatement in the department.

In the Assembly.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—The following bills were introduced in the Assembly to-day:

LEGISLATURE'S PROCEEDINGS.

In the Senate.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—The Senate this morning confirmed the nomination of John G. Dorrance of Camden, to succeed himself as State Commissioner of Prisons from the Fifth Judicial District. The Governor sent in the following nominations of Managers of the New York State Women's Relief Corps Home:

Edward J. Mitchell of Yonkers, Laura B. Clark of Oxford, to succeed themselves, and Mary E. Seely of Syracuse in place of Margaret A. Hibbard.

A number of bills were introduced and reports received. The Senate then adjourned until to-morrow.

In the Assembly.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—In the Assembly this morning after the introduction of a bill, Mr. Harburger, of New York, secured recognition from the Chair. He explained that his relations with Mr. Witter of Tioga, Chairman of the Committee on Gas and Electricity, were somewhat strained, owing to the fact that his bills had received bad treatment last year at the hands of that Committee. He referred to Mr. Witter as the "sleepy Tiogian," and said he trusted he would wake up during this session.

Mr. Witter arose and solemnly assured Mr. Harburger that he would wake up in time to attend to Mr. Harburger's bills.

"Did he say he would take his time?" ejaculated Mr. Harburger, glancing over suspiciously at Mr. Witter.

"He said he would be glad to take ample time in deliberating over your bills, Mr. Harburger," replied the Chair, at which a general laugh ran around the chamber, and Mr. Harburger sat down not looking overpleased with the result of his sally.

Assemblyman Bradley, of Erie, attempted to offer a resolution of sympathy with the Boers, but was compelled by objection to lay it over until Monday night. Leader Dr. Barnes of the minority rose to a question of personal privilege and said that the statement in a New York paper that he was in favor of the English was without foundation.

After the introduction of a number of bills an adjournment was taken at 11:30 o'clock until Thursday at 11 A. M.

Reception at Governor's Mansion.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—Gov. and Mrs. Roosevelt to-night held their annual reception to State officers, Judges of the Court of Appeals, and Supreme Court, and members of the Legislature and their wives. The Executive Mansion was the scene of a large and representative gathering. Mrs. Roosevelt was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Timothy L. Woodruff.

Pay of Paris Exposition Secretary.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—The Ways and Means Committee of the Assembly has reported favorably Mr. Allds's Paris Exposition bill, which increases the salary of the Secretary to the commission from $2,500 to $5,000, and permits the commission to take that sum from the $40,000 appropriated for the exhibit.

Hearing on Horton Law Repeal.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—Assemblyman Lewis of Monroe appeared before the Assembly Codes Committee this morning and asked for a hearing on his bill repealing the Horton law permitting scientific boxing contests. The committee set down next Wednesday at 2 P. M. as the date for arguments.

THE CHICAGO CANAL OPENED.

Fear of an Injunction Hastens the Consummation of the Big Drainage Ditch.

LOCKPORT, Ill., Jan. 17.—The dam separating the Chicago Drainage Canal and the Desplaines River was lowered to-day, and the water of the former rushed through on its way to the Mississippi and the Gulf of Mexico. The ceremonies marking the consummation of the great enterprise were brief and marked with something like undignified haste.

Early in the day the Drainage Trustees became fearful that action by injunction to prevent them carrying out their plan might be taken by the enemies of the canal, and after a hurried consultation at Joliet they decided to avoid the risk of further delay. Before anything could be done it was found that it would be necessary to secure permits from the commission and Gov. Tanner. Permission from the commission was secured, but it was not till 10:15 o'clock that the Governor signed the permit. He immediately wired notice of his action to the Trustees, and they hurried to this point in a special car. Arriving here they went at once to the dam.

President Boldenweck of the Trustees' Board made a short speech, introducing Col. Isaac Taylor of the Canal Commission.

Col. Taylor made a five-minute speech, in which he said the opening of the canal was but the beginning of a greater work which would connect the great lakes of the Northwest with the Mississippi River. He added that he authorized the Trustees on the authority of Gov. Tanner to lower the dam.

At 11:16 A. M. the dam was lowered.

The gates at the sides of the dam, which are to be used for regulating the flow, were not opened when the dam was lowered, and may be kept closed until to-morrow.

The flow over the dam to-day was between 250,000 and 300,000 cubic feet per minute, and when the gates are opened this flow will be increased.

PERMANENT INJUNCTION ASKED.

Missouri's Attorney General Appeals to the Supreme Court.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—The State of Missouri, by its Attorney General, E. B. Crow, made application in the Supreme Court to-day and asked leave to file a bill praying for an injunction against the State of Illinois and the City of Chicago to restrain them from operating the recently opened drainage canal. The court took the motion but did not indicate when action would be taken.

The principal ground of objection raised by the bill of complaint filed by Mr. Crow is that the sewage from the canal will pollute the water of the Mississippi River. The contention is urged that Lake Michigan is the natural receptacle for the drainage of Chicago and that unless operation of the canal be enjoined not only will the current filth of 1,500,000 people be turned into the Mississippi through the canal, but also that which has accumulated on the banks of the Chicago River for years past, amounting daily to 1,500 tons of "poisonous and noxious matters."

"If this be permitted," he says, "the waters of the Mississippi will of a certainty be poisoned and polluted and rendered wholly unfit and unhealthful for drinking and domestic uses." He adds that it will render useless the various water works plants on the Mississippi below the entrance of the Illinois. He asks for both a temporary and a permanent injunction.

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—Attorneys representing the City of St. Louis to-day made application before Judge Kohlsaat of the United States District Court for an injunction to restrain the Board of Trustees of the sanitary district from turning the sewage of the Chicago River into the Desplaines River. Judge Kohlsaat set Saturday, Jan. 20, as the date for hearing arguments on the question, when it is probable a lively legal battle will take place.

SCHWAN TAKES A PROVINCE.

Batangas Is Cleared of Insurgents—Byrne Defeats Filipinos in Negros, Killing a General.

MANILA, Jan. 17.—The Tagalos Gen. Mauricio recently landed at Negros from the Island of Panay and requested a conference with Col. Byrne. He proposed that the insurgents be let alone and permitted to wear side arms and uniforms in the towns until the war in Luzon was ended, when they would surrender. Col. Byrne refused to agree to this, however, and said they would be considered as bandits and shot if they were found armed.

The same night Col. Byrne surprised the insurgent camp and scattered the Filipinos, killing thirty of them, including a General.

Col. Kobbé, with the Forty-eighth Infantry, sailed on board the transport Hancock to-day, with gunboats escorting. The objective of the force is probably the important Islands of Samar and Leyte, which the insurgents hold.

The American blockade and the levies of the Tagalos Army have caused great suffering among the people, and hundreds of persons are in an almost starving condition.

Gen. Otis to-day cabled to the War Department as follows:

"Manila, Jan. 17.

"Schwan's troops in possession of Batangas Province about to move eastward into Provinces of Tayabas and Laguna; Wheaton moving on Lemerk and Taal and has navy co-operation; casualties slight; insurgent loss considerable in men and property, as kept up constant opposition; expedition under Kobbé leaves for hemp ports to-night.

"Gen. Hughes absent on western coast Panay, policing section. Band eighty-six Tagalos, which landed Negros December, struck by Byrne in Negros mountains, who killed nineteen, captured twenty-eight rifles and ammunition; no casualties; troops in Northern Luzon busy pursuing robber bands with good results."

MORE TROUBLE ABOUT FRIARS.

Filipinos Say the Priests Will Be Driven from the Parishes—Gen. Otis Makes a Statement.

MANILA, Jan. 17.—The presence here of Archbishop Chapelle, the Apostolic Delegate to the Philippines, is greatly stirring the Catholics of all nationalities. The Filipinos have gained the impression that Mgr. Chapelle came as the joint agent of President McKinley and the Pope to reinstate the friars in their former power.

One cause of the excitement is a statement which the Dominicans furnished to the Spanish press, that Mgr. Chapelle, in visiting the heads of the order, told them he favored the retention of the brotherhoods and that President McKinley shared his views, which were that if the friars returned to their parishes they would be considered elements of good order, and therefore American agents.

Mgr. Chapelle denies the accuracy of these statements, and Catholics of all sections are petitioning Mgr. Chapelle and Major Gen. Otis against the friars returning to their parishes, repeating the charges of oppressions, extortions and immoralities which, they assert, caused the revolution of 1896. The Catholics request that they be given priests not connected with the brotherhoods. Delegations from many of the towns are visiting the provincial governors for the purpose of making the same request, and prominent Manila Catholics are cabling the Pope on the subject.

The people say the friars will be driven out if they return to their parishes, and that there will be continual trouble if the Administration attempts to protect them. To quell the excitement, Major Gen. Otis consented to the publication in the local newspapers of a statement which he had made to a delegation of Filipinos, as follows:

"If the Church authorities assign friars to curacies who are obnoxious to the people they will not be compelled to accept them. The individual liberty guaranteed by the American Constitution will not be denied the Filipinos, and the Government will not force upon them any ecclesiastical denomination contrary to their wishes."

WARM PRAISE FOR AN OFFICER.

Gen. Miller Recommends Capt. Jeffery for Brevetship.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Capt. John B. Jeffery, who was an Acting Quartermaster of Volunteers, has been recommended for brevetship for gallant and distinguished service by Gen. Marcus P. Miller in a letter addressed to Quartermaster Gen. Ludington. The officer was attached to the staff of Gen. Miller as Brigade Quartermaster and afterward as Depot Quartermaster at Iloilo.

Gen. Miller says that Capt. Jeffery rendered very valuable services when Iloilo was captured. The Captain courageously took possession of a steel vessel, the Samar, lying directly under the guns of the fort, and with this vessel towed the small boats containing the troops to the shore. The officer also went ashore at considerable personal risk and seized material with which the engines of the Newport were repaired, saving the Government from $10,000 to $50,000. Later on he saved the Samar from recapture by the natives.

When the troops landed Capt. Jeffery hoisted the Stars and Stripes over the Spanish Bank and established a hospital, drove out a body of insurgents, and saved property valued at $1,500,000, according to the testimony of a wealthy Filipino merchant. It happened, curiously enough, that Capt. Joffery was court-martialed on a charge of looting as a result of this salvage of property, but he was triumphantly acquitted, the owner of the property, Señor Eztaban de la Rama, certifying that it was solely through the Captain's efforts that his property was saved.

To add to his brilliant record, the officer is credited by Gen. Miller with having saved Iloilo from a water famine when the city was burning; with cleaning up the city after the fire through the employment of a large number of Chinese, enabling travel to be opened up; with procuring transportation for the army, supplying the troops, and with being the first Depot Quartermaster at Iloilo. Gen. Miller says in conclusion:

"I wish to say that when there was any hazardous or important duty to be done, he showed marked executive ability, promptness, and readiness in executing my orders. That he well succeeded is a matter of record."

Capt. Jeffery was honorably mustered out July 13 last, and has just arrived in Washington.

Postage Rate to the Philippines.

The postage on letters, one ounce or less, addressed to the Ladrone or Philippine Islands, under the postal regulations, has been reduced to two cents. This is the domestic letter rate which also applies to Canada, Mexico, and Puerto Rico. The foreign rate of five cents for each half-ounce or fraction thereof is still in force to Cuba and the Hawaiian Islands.

GEN. WOOD SPRINGS A SURPRISE.

Subscribes for Havana Newspapers and Insists on Paying.

HAVANA, Jan. 17.—The newspapers comment favorably upon the fact that Gen. Wood has subscribed for each and given instructions that the bills for the same shall be presented to him each month personally. The Diario de la Marina says:

"It is the first time in the history of the island when a Governor General has either paid or offered to pay a newspaper subscription. Hitherto it has been the custom of Governors General to order, not one copy of each issue, as Gen. Wood has done, but several copies. This departure from the precedents gives Gen. Wood a unique distinction. Native officials of minor rank holding office in the city might with propriety do likewise."

Arrivals and Departures at Havana.

HAVANA, Jan. 17.—Last year 22,301 Americans, 16,200 Spaniards, and 7,521 persons of other nationalities landed in Havana, while 21,158 Americans, 12,352 Spaniards, and 3,704 persons of other nationalities sailed from Havana.

Fort Bayard Discontinued.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Fort Bayard, New Mexico, has been discontinued as a garrison post and the buildings will be turned over to the Surgeon General of the army for use in connection with the general hospital to be established there as a sanitarium for the treatment of officers and enlisted men of the army suffering from pulmonary troubles.

Capt. Sigsbee to Leave the Texas.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Orders were issued to-day formally detaching Capt. Sigsbee from the command of the Texas and assigning him to the head of the Naval Intelligence Bureau.

HYPNOTISM FAILS IN COURT.

John D. Blanchard Tries in Vain to Bend Judge, Jury, and Witnesses to His Will.

Judge Foster successfully resisted an attempt to hypnotize him, yesterday, in Part II. of the Court of General Sessions. John D. Blanchard, a tall, thin, and pallid young man, with piercing black eyes and a tangle of long, unkempt black hair, who attempted to subdue the Judge by his hypnotic powers, says he failed because the Judge wore glasses, which shielded him from the baleful radiance of Blanchard's eye. Blanchard also tried his skill on the jury, Assistant District Attorney Blanchard, and several of the court attendants. The jury became somewhat uneasy under his earnest scrutiny, but at the close of the trial had sufficient will power left to convict him on the charge of robbery in the second degree.

Blanchard, who had previously been convicted on several charges, took $1.25 from Harry Barcal, an eleven-year-old boy, of 316 West Twentieth Street, on New Year's day. The boy had taken a bill into a saloon to get it changed. Blanchard caught sight of it, and following the boy into his hallway, knocked him down and took a part of the money from him.

When the trial began Blanchard beckoned to Assistant District Attorney Blumenthal and told him he was going to hypnotize him.

"I'll hypnotize you, as well as the Judge and jury," he said, "and any witnesses who are called on the stand. I will never been convicted. I am just telling you this so that I will have no unfair advantage over you."

All through the trial the prisoner made passes and stared fixedly at the various people in the courtroom. It became known outside that a hypnotist was on trial, and the courtroom was soon filled with curious persons waiting for an exhibition of his powers. Blanchard's appearance was so suitable to his reputation as a hypnotist that the spectators dropped their heads whenever he swept his eyes in their direction.

Although the witnesses who appeared against him were somewhat embarrassed by his alleged hypnotic glances they stuck to their testimony against him without exception, and the jury finally brought in a verdict of guilty.

"I hear that you're a hypnotist," said Judge Foster, as the prisoner came forward to receive his sentence.

"That's what I am," said Blanchard. "Just fix your eyes on me and I'll prove it." He made a few passes in the air and then stared intently at the Judge.

Judge Foster shifted his chair around and waved Blanchard away with his hands. "I sentence you to twelve years in Sing Sing," he said.

SAYS RAMAPO FOUGHT IT.

Bill Repealing Law Against Suffolk Water Supply Officially Indorsed.

The Ramapo water matter was referred to again at yesterday's meeting of the Board of Public Improvements during the discussion of a resolution offered by Bridge Commissioner Shea indorsing the bill introduced in the Assembly by the Mazet committee, which has for its object the repeal of Chapter 942, Laws of 1896, which prohibits the greater city from taking water from Suffolk County. In his resolution, Mr. Shea stated that the water alone in Suffolk County, if properly housed, would relieve Brooklyn of all danger of a water famine.

Commissioner Dalton of the Department of Water Supply asked that the resolution be referred to his department for a report, to be made next week.

"This law ought to be repealed," Commissioner Shea exclaimed. "One week's delay might make considerable difference."

Mr. Dalton objected to any action being taken without giving him a chance to report on its advisability, and concluded by saying:

"If the report is not made as I have said in one week I will resign my position."

"The Ramapo Water Company fought a similar measure in 1887, and it will use all of its influence against it again," said President Grout.

"You mean the old Ramapo Water Company," President Holahan suggested.

"No, I don't," Mr. Grout replied. "I mean the present Ramapo Company."

After further discussion the resolution was unanimously adopted.

New Park in the Bronx.

The Board of Public Improvements yesterday approved a resolution changing the new map of the Borough of the Bronx so as to locate a public playground and park on the ground occupied by the Bensonia Cemetery, in East 156th Street. The property owners in the neighborhood have agreed to pay for the change.

BADGES FOR LOBBYISTS.

Bill Requiring Them Debated in Massachusetts Legislature.

BOSTON, Jan. 17.—The first executive hearing of the year was held before the Judiciary Committee of the Massachusetts Legislature to-day, when Representative Carey, Socialist-Democrat of Haverhill, appeared in support of his measure to require lobbyists to wear badges. He urged the committee to make a speedy report, saying that he hoped eventually to drive all agents and promoters from the State House. Mr. Carey maintained that badges like those used by newsboys or conductors should be worn. Senator Chamberlain of Brockton and Representative Stone of Springfield criticised the bill.

Representative McCartney, Socialist, of Rockland, supported the measure, but said it was too harsh in its terms. Frank J. Ladd, a legislative agent, representing the Massachusetts Street Railway Association, opposed the bill. He said he was a willing victim. He stated that legislators never would have been bribed if they had not first held out signals that they were willing to be bribed.

THE LAMB GIRLS RELEASED.

Father of ex-Inmates of "Lord's Farm" Angry, Failing to Get Them.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Jan. 17.—The release of the two Lamb girls caused an exciting scene in court this morning. They were formerly inmates of the "Lord's Farm" at Woodcliff. They have been confined in jail for several months as witnesses against Huntsman T. Manson and others, who were arrested on a charge of keeping a disorderly house.

Prosecutor Stagg moved that the Court take a bond furnished by Freeholder Riley of Hillsdale, who would be responsible for the girls and produce them in court when wanted.

A. H. G. Maidment, who appeared in the interests of the father of the girls, opposed this. The Court fixed the bail of the girls at $50 each from Riley, but demanded $1,000 each from the father, who is from Connecticut, and could not furnish the security.

Judge Zabriskie asked the girls if they wanted to go with their father, and both shook their heads in the negative. Then the father sprang up and said: "Your Honor, I'm their father, and I want the children." The Court ordered him to be seated, and then said he proposed to give the girls into the custody of Mr. Riley.

The bond of Riley was then accepted, and later in the day he took the girls to his home, which is about two miles from the "Lord's Farm." Mr. Lamb made a formal demand upon Riley and the Sheriff's deputy for the girls, but received no satisfaction.

The father became greatly excited and threatened to shoot Judge Zabriskie and Freeholder Riley, but was calmed by his lawyer. He declares he will obtain possession of his daughters at all hazards.

"Settled" Pill with a Club.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 17.—Peter Daniels has been arrested on a charge of atrocious assault upon Theodore Van Fleet, and has been committed to jail to await the action of the Grand Jury. Daniels owes Van Fleet an old bill, and last week Van Fleet, it is alleged, received a letter from Daniels saying, "Come down and I will settle with you." Van Fleet drove to Daniels's home, at Rowland's Mills, and, after persuading him to enter the house, Daniels locked the door and, it is alleged, brutally assaulted him, using a club as a weapon.

WEST PLAINS, Mo., Jan. 17.—County Jailer Alfred Henry, while feeding the prisoners in the Howell County Jail to-day, was overpowered and killed by two prisoners, Ben Richardson and Ed Grady. Henry's body was found in a pool of blood on the jail floor. The prisoners escaped and locked the door after them. A posse was immediately organized and a reward of $1,000 is offered for their capture.

THREE KILLED IN A TUNNEL.

Lackawanna Engine Going South on the North-Bound Track Runs Into a Section Gang.

BELVEDERE, N. J., Jan. 17.—Three men were killed and six injured in a railroad accident in the Oxford tunnel on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad this morning. One of the injured men will probably die. The men, who were track workers, were run down by a locomotive which was bound south on the north-bound track. The dead are Andrew Kilpatrick, Lewis Dahlberg, and a Hungarian known as John Smith.

A coal train, bound north, broke in two at the south end of the tunnel. Fearing the rear part might run him down, Engineer Wilcox put on steam and hauled the forward part of the train to Washington, where he put the cars he had with him on a switch. Knowing that the rear section would block the track, he then ran back on the same track for the remainder of the cars.

The men at work in the tunnel heard the approaching locomotive, but thinking it on the south-bound track, as it was coming from the north, stepped on the north-bound track. They were standing on the track in a group, and did not realize their danger until the tender of the engine was upon them. They were knocked down and hurled in every direction.

Kilpatrick and Dahlberg were thrown under the wheels and horribly mangled. Smith was also badly cut up. He lived a short time after being taken out. Frederick Burns was the most seriously hurt of those surviving, one of his legs having been cut off.

The engineer said he did not see the men at work when he passed through with the first part of his train, and did not see them on his return until his engine was close to them. Before he could give warning he was upon them. He came to a stop within a few lengths, but the damage had been done.

THE DIET KITCHEN'S WORK

Frying Pan Denounced at the Association's Meeting.

Blunder of Dr. Rainsford Develops the Fact that It Is the Enemy of Civilization.

Curious details concerning the life of the poyglot population of the east side were brought out yesterday afternoon at the twenty-seventh annual meeting of the New York Diet Kitchen Association for the Relief of the Sick Poor, which was held in the United Charities Building, and incidentally misapprehension of the work and aims of the association led one of the persons invited to address the meeting into a blunder, which developed the fact that the frying pan is the bane of the poor and the enemy of civilization. Hamilton W. Mabie presided at the meeting, and the other speakers were Oswald G. Villard, who read the report of the President of the association, Mrs. Henry Villard; Mrs. Joseph W. Tilden, the Treasurer, who read her report, and Dr. Annie S. Daniel, Dr. Abraham Jacobi, and the Rev. Dr. W. S. Rainsford.

Mrs. Villard, in her report, said: "I have no doubt our coffers would be overflowing if the public really understood the nature of the work we are doing, but the ideas about it are very vague and mostly wrong, for it is confounded with soup kitchens, with cooking schools, with a vegetarian diet, and other things. The fact is that milk, broth, rice, and all the things we dispense from our kitchens are given free of charge to such patients as hold requisitions from the doctors of the dispensary districts. During the last year 111,915 quarts of milk were distributed at a cost to us of $4,907.32, our total expenses being $7,536.91."

Dr. Daniel recounted some superstitions prevailing among the poor foreign elements in the city, the most striking of which was the belief that when a person dies the soul remains beside the body and that if the soul is buried with the body the body will not rise at the Resurrection. In order to avert this they resort to stratagem to separate the soul from the body. On the day of the funeral the soul is supposed to precede the body as it is being carried out. The hearse and carriages go around the block and return to the house, and the soul, supposing the body is going to be taken back to the room in which death occurred, returns there to await it. Meanwhile the hearse and carriages drive off.

Dr. Rainsford, who had entered late, and had not heard the remarks in Mrs. Villard's paper about the mistaken impression of the association's work, spoke of the danger attaching to the loose form of dispensary management obtaining among the poor, which he said it was impossible to exaggerate, and urged upon the association the necessity of widely teaching domestic economy and the art of properly cooking food. He of course failed to see the point of the amusement to which his remarks gave rise.

"There is not one family in a thousand in the tenement districts," he continued, "who know the first thing about cooking. The eternal frying pan everywhere holds sway. The frying pan is the enemy of civilization. The frying pan drives women to despair and men to drink. The standard of living is increasing, but the standard of wages is not. No better work could be done than that of teaching young men and women how to spend their money to the best advantage and keep house properly. It would promote marriage and the blessings of domestic life among them."

Dr. Rainsford said that during the seventeen years he had been in New York immense changes had taken place, and they were all for good. He said he wished to make the statement in view of the assertions made so often of late as to the proportion of unchurched people in New York, that in his district it was found that out of 1,200 families only 45 were not connected with some church or other.

Dr. Jacobi spoke of the great importance of the work done by the association. "You require more money," he said. "There's plenty of it in New York, and you'll get it if you act as your own missionaries. Your China, your Africa, your India, your Luzon, are right here at your own doors." [Applause.]

Mr. Mabie said he agreed with a remark made by Dr. Rainsford that "no one is respectable who doesn't give to the poor," and added: "If the frying pan is a terror to the well it is death to the sick, and this association certainly would rejoice in its abolition."

DROPPED DEAD IN CHURCH.

Heart Disease Ended Lawrence Enander's Life at a Prayer Meeting.

The regular Wednesday night meeting of Scandinavians in the Mariners' Church, at Madison and Catharine Streets, was interrupted last night by the death of Lawrence Enander, who had just sat down after relating his experience in being converted many years ago. About 100 men and women had gathered to relate their experiences, and Enander, who was a regular attendant there and at many other missions, got up to speak. His voice choked with emotion, and at first it seemed that he would have to stop, but he recovered and addressed himself to those present who had not been converted.

After he had finished another man arose, but he was interrupted by Enander, who suddenly leaned back in his chair and then slipped to the floor unconscious. Dr. Manning and an ambulance surgeon, who were summoned, pronounced him dead. The body was taken to the Oak Street Police Station. Enander lived at 168 Bergen Street, Brooklyn. He leaves a wife and two grown children. Heart disease is supposed to have been the cause of death.

Those present at the meeting were much affected by Enander's death, and the service was soon brought to an end.

BALTIMORE AND OHIO MEETING.

No Known Action Is Taken on Combination—All Officers and Directors Are Re-elected.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 17.—William Salomon, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, was the controlling spirit at the annual meeting of the stockholders to-day. He and J. Kennedy Tod of New York, representing the interests now controlling the big trunk line, voted the stock in favor of the re-election of the old Board of Directors, which in addition to themselves consists of Edward R. Bacon, New York; Alexander Brown, Baltimore; Louis Fitzgerald, New York; Edward H. Harriman, New York; James J. Hill, St. Paul; H. Clay Pierce, St. Louis; Norman B. Ream, Chicago; Jacob H. Schiff, New York; Charles Steele, New York; James Stillman, New York; H. Crawford Black, Baltimore; John V. L. Findlay, Baltimore. Black and Findlay were elected on the part of the State of Maryland, which retains its stock in the Washington Branch.

John K. Cowen was re-elected President and all the other officers were re-elected. It had been expected that the meeting would enlighten the public on the mysterious relations existing between the Pennsylvania, the Chesapeake and Ohio, and the Baltimore and Ohio, but it did not so far as any public statement is concerned.

Chairman Saloman, when asked if the Pennsylvania-Vanderbilt combination now controlled the Baltimore and Ohio, insisted that so far as he knew there had been no legal transfer of stock of the Baltimore and Ohio recently to the Pennsylvania or any other interests. He practically admitted, however, that there was an understanding. This is interpreted to mean that assurances had been received from all the trunk lines to strictly adhere to tariff rates. With the Baltimore and Ohio in their grasp, the Pennsylvania-Vanderbilt combination controls practically every railroad of importance in the East.

President Ingalls will probably soon retire from the management of the Chesapeake and Ohio, and be succeeded by some one to be named by the new combination. Oscar G. Murray, First Vice President of the Baltimore and Ohio, is regarded as one of the most capable traffic officials in the country, and will likely be the next President of the Chesapeake and Ohio, although ... not now admit it.

RAILWAYS ADVANCE WAGES.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 17.—Firemen, and possibly conductors and engineers, all over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad system proper are to be the subjects of a substantial wage advance dating from Jan. 1. The advance will be close to 10 per cent. It will vary, it is understood, on different parts of the system, so as to equalize the scale and for the most part the advance will be about 8 per cent. It goes to all firemen, however, the men of the yards, and the men of the road.

To-day the Pittsburg and Lake Erie management sent out notices to the various division headquarters, announcing what will be a sharp advance to all its yardmen. This is also in the nature of a readjustment of wages, the plan being to advance as near a common standard of all the yards as possible. In general, the advance averages about 10 per cent. All yardmen, including conductors, engineers, firemen, and switchmen of the yards, will be paid the advanced scale from Jan 1. It is understood that the new scale will fix the wages for the men of the local yards of the Pittsburg and Lake Erie as follows:

Day conductors, 25 cents an hour; night conductors, 26 cents an hour; day brakemen, or switchmen, 19 cents an hour; night brakemen, or switchmen, 20 cents an hour; engineers, 29 cents an hour.

JOINT COMMITTEE REORGANIZED.

At a meeting yesterday of the General Passenger Agents of the railroads in the trunk line territory, the joint passenger committee of the association, which lately has been inactive, was reorganized to enforce the agreement for the maintenance of rates and the abolition of commissions, which was adopted at a meeting of the agents about a month ago. The committee is made up of members of the trunk lines and general passenger line associations, and in it the following roads are represented: New York Central, Erie, Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern, Baltimore and Ohio, Pennsylvania, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis; Chesapeake and Ohio, Delaware, Lackawanna and Western; Michigan Central, Lake Shore, Lehigh Valley, Grand Trunk, West Shore, New York, Ontario and Western; New York, Chicago and St. Louis; Wabash, Toledo, St. Louis and Kansas City, and the Vandalia Line.

The reorganization of the committee, Commissioner Farmer explains, is on the single basis that rates shall be maintained and commissions be abolished. At the meeting a series of rules designed to facilitate the operation of the agreement was submitted by a special committee consisting of J. R. Wood of the Pennsylvania, D. I. Roberts of the Erie, D. B. Martin of the Baltimore and Ohio, and C. S. Crane of the Wabash. These rules, which were adopted, bind the roads concerned not only not to cut rates and to pay no commissions, but also, in case of disagreement, to submit all disputes to arbitration. A standing committee of five will from time to time make any changes or additions to the rules necessary.

MR. CALLAWAY ON THE ERIE CANAL.

President S. R. Callaway of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company gave some of his views yesterday in regard to the proposed improvements to the Erie Canal. He said there seemed to be a misapprehension in the minds of the people of New York regarding the decadence of the traffic of New York.

"Statistics show," he said, "that last year the railroads brought 36 per cent. of all the Atlantic tidewater grain to New York, and the canal but a little less than 5 per cent., making a total of over 40 per cent., leaving but 60 per cent. to be divided among the other seven ports. The statement made by an editorial writer some days since that 2 cents per bushel might be saved by the enlargement of the canal was made under a great misapprehension, as the bulk of the grain is carried at a rate between 2 and 3 cents per pushel, this including the cost of elevation at Buffalo and lighterage at New York.

"The total export of grain by all ports is about 310,000,000 bushels a year. Of this over 140,000,000 bushels were handled through New York last year. Assuming that the improvement of the canal would cost $50,000,000, the interest on that amount and the expense of working the canal would amount to almost as much as the total railroad earnings on the entire grain shipments, Buffalo to New York."

WESTERN RAILWAY CHANGES.

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—The Chronicle tomorrow will say:

"H. R. Williams, General Superintendent of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway, is to be appointed General Manager of that system, vice Mr. Collins, who relinquishes the duties of that office tomorrow. W. J. Underwood, now Assistant Superintendent of the same road, with office in Minneapolis, will be installed as General Superintendent in Chicago.

"Though these appointments have not been announced officially, they have been agreed upon by the executive management of the company. Roswell Miller, Chairman of the Board of Directors, has decided to move his headquarters from Chicago to New York June 1."

The Proposed Fitchburg Lease.

BOSTON, Jan. 17.—Gov. Crane to-day sent a letter to President Codman of the Fitchburg Railroad Company in regard to the proposed lease of the Fitchburg to the Boston and Maine Railroad, saying in effect that the attitude of the Commonwealth would not be made known officially until the question has been submitted to the stockholders for action.

Chicago Elevated Loses a Case.

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—In the case of the Lake Street Elevated Railroad Company against William Ziegler and other bondholders who seek to foreclose a mortgage for $6,500,000 on the property, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals to-day ruled in favor of the defendant stockholders and found their bonds to be valid. This disposes of all the contentions of the Lake Street company and leaves the way clear for the stockholders to continue their proceedings to foreclose on the property.

WAS SWIMMING TO HOBOKEN.

Man Found in the River Missed the Boat and Decided Not to Wait.

About an eighth of a mile out in the river and swimming with bold strokes for the New Jersey shore the tug Nyack last night found a man, who was unwillingly pulled aboard and taken ashore. He was given over to a policeman of the steamboat squad, who called an ambulance from St. Vincent's Hospital.

When the surgeon reached the Sixteenth Street pier, where the policeman and his charge were waiting, he declared that the man taken from the river was simply intoxicated. Instead of taking him to a hospital, he was taken to the West Twentieth Street Police Station, where he was dried out and locked up.

He gave his name as James A. Coulter, said he is a Finn, thirty-eight years old, and a commission merchant in Newark, N. J. He admitted having been drinking the greater part of the day. He went down to the ferry to go home and found the boat had just pulled out. He decided not to wait for the next boat, but to swim to Hoboken.

He declares he would have made it had he not been stopped. He was once a sailor and declares a five-mile swim is nothing to him. He even denied that the water was cold. He said he did not mind it at all.

TENDERLOIN POLICE SHAKE-UP.

A number of transfers of Police Sergeants was made yesterday by Chief Devery, the Tenderloin precinct being the centre of the change. Sergeant Jacob Welsing, who was Captain Price's right-hand man at the West Thirtieth Street Station, was sent to the East Sixty-seventh Street Station, and Sergeant Frederick Carson, from West Thirtieth Street to the West Forty-seventh Street Station. They will be replaced by Sergeants Joseph Burns and John Townsend, both of the West Forty-seventh Street Station.

The detectives connected with the West Thirtieth Street Station have also been transferred to other precincts. Detective John Henderson goes to the West Forty-seventh Street Station, Detective Patrick Curry to the West Sixty-eighth Street Station, and Detectives Cornelius O'Donnell and Herbert M. Tompkins to the East Sixty-seventh Street Station. Their places at the West Thirtieth Street Station will be taken by Detectives Lockwood, Sheehan, Faulkner, and O'Neill, all of the West Forty-seventh Street Station, Capt. Thomas's old command.

SEVENTH REGIMENT SHOOTING.

The competition for the Edward Kemp and the Col. Emmons Clark trophies was continued last night at the Seventh Regiment Armory by the teams from Company C. The scores, while better than those made on the previous evening by the teams of Companies G and E, are below the records. The high-water mark in the Clark match was set at 2,144 by Company F in 1897, and the highest score in the history of the Kemp competitions is 1,124, made last year by Company B, which now holds both trophies. Company B's marksmen will shoot to-night.

The high scores last night were 46 for the Kemp trophy, made by Sergt. E. C. Robinson, Corp. C. J. Austin, and Private W. H. Hanley, and 44 for the Clark trophy, made by Private W. H. Schwegler. The team scores were: For the Kemp trophy, 1,052; for the Clark trophy, 967.

SCHAEFER FALLS BEHIND.

Ora Morningstar increased his lead over Jacob Schaefer yesterday in their billiard match at the latter's academy. Schaefer played a good game at both the afternoon and evening sessions, but was unable to concede the large handicap to his opponent, who also played well. The latter resumed his unfinished run of 47 made on the day before, and did not stop until he had clicked off 47 more, making a total of 94. This is the best run of the game. Schaefer made one run of 71 in the afternoon, and also equaled his best run of 92 at the evening session. Play will be continued to-day. The score:

Morningstar—47 28 1 92 4 11 32 2 22 5 10 23 3. Total, 200. Average, 16 8-12. Grand total, 600. Grand average, 8 16-73.

Schaefer—2 29, 19 71 32 2 6 30 67 1 92 1. Total, 352. Average, 29 2-12. Grand total, 1,075. Grand average, 14 67-72.

PENNSYLVANIA'S RELAY TEAM.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 17.—Trainer Murphy announced this morning the men from whom he will select a relay team to represent Pennsylvania in the race against Harvard at the indoor meet of the Boston Athletic Association, Feb. 3. The men are Leary, Drumheller, Cook, Bushnell, Allen, De Armat, Metzger, and Francis. Only Leary, Cook and Drumheller are reasonably sure of being on the team and the fourth man will be selected after the 440-yard handicap to be run off on Franklin Field Jan. 20. In the race against Harvard each man will run 370 yards.

Several other men will be entered in different events. Latham will be entered in the fifty-yard dash, and, judging from the form he has been showing, he has a chance to win. In the two-mile race the Quakers will be represented by "Alec" Grant and W. G. Stuart. This event will determine the amateur indoor championship of America.

Murphy intends to take more men with him to New York in the indoor meeting of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club. The Knickerbocker has announced an inter-collegiate championship relay race, and Pennsylvania, in common with all the large universities, is making a strong effort to win the event. The Quakers will also be represented in the 50-yard dash, 220-yard run, 880-yard run, and the mile, all of which are handicap events.

PETTITT WINS FROM MILLS.

Special to The New York Times.

TUXEDO PARK, N. Y., Jan. 17.—A large gathering of tennis cracks from all over the country witnessed a grand game of tennis to-day between the two champions, Eustice Miles of England and Thomas Pettitt, professional, of America. The match was very exciting, Pettitt winning by three sets to one. He gave Miles fifteen and a bisque handicap, and he played with perfect confidence. Miles showed great power in returning Pettitt's force drives, he volleyed perfectly, but could not resist Pettitt's attacks, which to the spectators seemed his best game.

The first set was taken by Pettitt, 6—1. The second was more evenly contested, but finally went to him at 6—5. In the third set the Englishman braced up and playing favorite strokes stopped the American and won the set by a score of 6—4. The fourth set was a struggle, Pettitt having reached 3—0, which looked bad for Miles, who put up the score 3 all, and then 4 all, but the superb playing of Pettitt finally won the set by 6—4.

Thursday morning Pettitt will meet Stockton and Cecil Baring will play Tompkins. In the afternoon the two English champions, Miles and Latham, will meet. Latham will concede Miles half thirty. This, it is said, will be one of the finest matches of the year and many prominent players and lovers of the sport will witness it.

This morning T. Suffern Tailer and Lawrence Stockton of Boston played an exhibition match for best five out of seven sets, Tailer losing.

FINANCIAL.

January 15th, 1900.

TO THE STOCKHOLDERS OF THE

CONSOLIDATED GAS CO.

In January, 1899, at the time of your last Annual Meeting, the Consolidated Gas Company was profitably engaged in the business of manufacturing gas and retailing the same at the price of $1.10 per thousand cubic feet. The stockholders were receiving dividends upon their investment at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, and the stock, by reason of these satisfactory and prosperous conditions, enjoyed universal favor and confidence on the part of the investing public.

On the first day of May, 1899, your directors saw fit to reduce the price charged to consumers for gas to 65c. per thousand cubic feet, its rivals and competitors perforce meeting this act by similar reductions in price. A ruinous rate war, thus entered upon, has resulted in serious loss to the stockholders of the Company, and in a reduction of their dividends to one-half of the amount previously paid.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Consolidated Gas Company, to be held on the 22nd day of January, 1900, finds a demoralized condition of its affairs prevailing. Dividends have been gradually reduced until they are now one-half of those formerly received, and the stockholders are confronted with the possibility that if the Company continues its present policy respecting the price of gas to the consumer for any period of time, the restoration of more favorable conditions may be prevented by the enactment of hostile legislation on behalf of a public that, having become accustomed to the present price, will tolerate no change.

A matter fraught with so much of vital consequence to those whose capital is invested in the securities of the Company is one that merits the serious and thoughtful consideration of every stockholder, especially in view of the fact that a continuance of the present disastrous policy of the directors may produce further reductions in dividends and even place the Company in a position where it cannot continue to earn its fixed charges. The stockholders are copartners with each other in the business of manufacturing and selling gas, and they owe a duty to themselves to demand and obtain at the annual meeting of the stockholders full information concerning the business policy of the Company, and before re-electing any of the directors to know whether a continuance of the course adopted by the present directors is warranted by existing conditions, or is to the best interests of the Company.

One competitor of your Company has already restored the price of the gas sold by it to $1.10 per thousand cubic feet. The other competitors of the Consolidated Gas Company, not being charitable institutions, would doubtless be exceedingly glad to co-operate with the Consolidated Gas Company in restoring the price of gas to a normal and proper level.

In the absence of very positive information to the contrary, this course would seem to be to the best interests of the Company, and no selfish aims or private purpose of any officer of the Company should prevail at the expense of the stockholders.

Your directors have recently purchased, by a certain private arrangement, a large number of shares of the capital stock of the New York Mutual Gas Light Company. It is believed by many that the price paid for this stock was enormously in excess of its actual or prospective value.

This transaction may have been a profitable one for the Company, but the surface facts disclosed warrant a close investigation into its details, and satisfactory assurance that it was not dominated by the individual interests of any person in a position to shape the affairs of the Consolidated Gas Company to the accomplishment of his own ends.

It appears by a publication contained in The New York Herald of Jan. 4th, the correctness of which is admitted by the President of your Company, that on or about that date your Directors acquired control of the New York Gas and Electric Light, Heat and Power Company. This transaction is one of great magnitude, and the details of it should be scrutinized with great care by the stockholders of the Consolidated Gas Company before ratification by them. The New York Gas and Electric Light, Heat and Power Company is a consolidated or parent company of a number of electric light companies, most of them absorbed on a most extravagant basis of valuation. As an instance of this: $21,000,000 purchase money bonds of the present Company were issued to acquire $9,200,000 of the Common Stock of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company. The assumption by the Consolidated Gas Company of the control of the New York Gas and Electric Light, Heat and Power Company, with its enormous bonded indebtedness, and its $36,000,000 of Capital Stock, marks a radical step in the history of the Consolidated Gas Company, and the stockholders can certainly ask in all fairness that they be given a most thorough opportunity to consider this momentous financial operation after a submission to them of the full details thereof, before being called upon to ratify it.

It is understood that your Company has also purchased control of another great electrical company, but the persons directly interested are emphatic in their refusal to state anything concerning the price paid.

The belief is beginning to be held by many stockholders that they would receive much larger returns upon their investment, and their stock would have a much greater market value, were the affairs of the Consolidated Gas Company divorced from the control of men having vast personal ambitions to serve. The stock of the Company is selling for much less than its actual worth, because its affairs have not been in the hands of men who have administered their trust with a sole view to the earning of as much money as possible by the manufacture and sale of gas, and the resulting payment of large dividends to the stockholders.

It is beginning to be felt that the stock of the Company is being used as a mere factor in vast and involved financial intrigues and in attempts at the accomplishment of far-reaching personal ambitions by men who, in their lust for financial power or the gratification of personal desires, have become indifferent to the interests of the stockholders of this gas company.

The stock of the Consolidated Gas Company is held very generally by legitimate investors, who have purchased the stock of the Company with the intention of permanently holding it for the dividends to be earned from the manufacture and sale of gas in New York. It is not fair that their interests should be subservient to those of men who, having many diverse and complicated interests, serve them at the expense of the stockholders. There are on the board of your Company many men of uprightness and integrity who are conscious of their responsibility as trustees for the stockholders, and who, it is believed, will respond at once to the just demand of an expressed public opinion that they conduct the business of the Company in the sole and exclusive interests of their stockholders.

The stockholders have it within their power, by an insistence upon conservatism and of their rights to be fully informed concerning the business of the Company, to greatly enhance the market value of their stock and to obtain much larger returns upon their investment, by way of dividends.

The attention of guardians, trustees, executors, administrators and those acting in a judiciary capacity for stockholders of the company is especially called to this communication. A duty is imposed upon them of seeking full information concerning these matters which may affect the value of the securities held by them, and of asserting and enforcing the full rights of stockholders in the management of the Company.

It is desirable that as many stockholders as possible shall attend the annual meeting in person. Those who cannot do so, and believe that the directors should be called upon to furnish information concerning the affairs of the Company, are requested to sign the proxy which has been sent to them, and to mail the same to International Zinc Co., Ltd.

Yields 16% on the Present Cost of Shares.

This is the only Zinc-Mining Company in the United States giving regularly to its stockholders exact reports and full knowledge of the condition of their property. The well-known Chartered Accountants, BARROW, WADE, GUTHRIE & CO., of New York and Boston, supervise the company's accounts, and issue quarterly to the stockholders statements of earnings and net profits, certified by them as correct.

It is now earning 22 per cent. on its capital, and will nearly double this as soon as the four new mills now under way are completed.

It is now paying dividends equal to those paid by the highest capitalized companies in the zinc fields, yet on a much smaller investment, which allows even the smallest investors to participate in the rich returns from zinc mining.

The low price of its shares also affords investors an unusual opportunity for profit by the enhancement in value of their holdings, and through its plan of supervising accounts it furnishes absolute security to its stockholders' interests.

300,000 SHARES

are now offered for public subscription at

to complete the balance of the purchase price and pay for the new mills now being built.

The shares are of the par value of $1.00 each, and are fully paid and non-assessable.

SEND FOR PROSPECTUS, and note carefully the detailed accounts and BARROW, WADE, GUTHRIE & CO.'S reports on the properties.

Applications dated not later than Jan. 25 will receive the dividend payable Feb. 1.

Applications for stock, accompanied by remittance, received at either of the following offices of the fiscal agents.

Hamilton Bank Election.
The stockholders of the Hamilton Bank, at their annual meeting last week, elected these Directors: William H. Caldwell, Cy it will be borne first and last by the depositors, whose savings have heretofore been exempt from taxation.

It may be that after the interest upon mortgage bonds and upon savings bank deposits had become adjusted to the new tax there would be no material addition to the burdens of anybody but the real estate owner who borrows money upon his property, but it is urged that this will still bear unduly upon those who are struggling for the investment of small savings. The capitalist who obtains large loans upon valuable property which he uses for profit will not suffer, but those who are working to acquire farms or homes of their own will find their difficulties increased by the higher interest on bonds secured by mortgage. In fact, the tax is regarded by those concerned with savings institutions as an extra burden upon thrift and a new penalty upon struggling poverty.

It is said, for instance, that this will be simply an additional tax upon that part of one's real estate which he is not yet able to pay for. Unincumbered property will pay the regular local tax upon its assessed value. That which is subject to mortgage will pay this tax upon the whole property, and also contribute to the State an extra half of one per cent. on the part which the owner is still striving to pay for, taking just so much more out of his savings to pay interest on the mortgage. While this may not directly concern the savings bank or the life insurance company, it gives them an argument which is likely to be more effective than any that only touches their own immediate interest. They profess also to see difficulties in the way of collecting this tax, especially from non-residents of the State, and complain that it is a hardship for the owners of mortgages to have practically to assess the tax upon themselves in order to get the benefit of partial payments made after the instrument was recorded. This mortgage tax seems on the face of it to afford an easy way of raising a large revenue for the State, but there are indications that it will meet with strenuous opposition.

OPINIONS OF BUSINESS MEN.

The Taxation bill introduced at Albany by Senator Stranahan on Monday, and providing for a five-mill tax on mortgages was received variously by those interested in trust companies, savings banks, and real estate dealings. Leading real estate men yesterday were disinclined to be interviewed, several brokers saying that they had not read the full text of the bill yet and were not prepared to express any opinion as to the effect of a tax on mortgages.

Henry Morgenthau, President of the Central Realty, Bond and Trust Company, strongly commended the mortgage clause of the new tax bill.

"I believe," he said, "that, if it were distinctly understood to-day that such a tax would be all the tax to be imposed on mortgages, they would take the same position in the eyes of investors as city bonds or United States bonds, which are selling on a basis of less than 3 per cent.

"There are annually a large number of estates created in this city which cannot escape taxation, as their inventories are filed in the Surrogate's office, and are accessible to the Tax Commissioners. These estates have to resort to all sorts of subterfuges to avoid taxation, and they will gladly avail themselves of the opportunity to invest their funds in mortgages which would net them 4 per cent.

"The only objection of a great many large capitalists to mortgages is the fear of taxation. They are afraid of local taxation—of the personal tax. No present mortgage investors will cease purchasing mortgages on account of the new tax, whereas at present the large loaners on mortgages are life insurance companies and savings banks, which are exempt from paying taxes on their assets. If the new tax law is passed, the capitalists who are at present largely investing in railroad bonds will turn their attention to mortgages, instead of industrial stocks and shares, which have been so freely invested in, principally because there was an absolute shortage in the supply of safe railroad bonds.

"No one will question that a good mortgage on New York real estate, free from taxes, ought to sell as freely as and at the same or a lower rate of interest than New York City gas, bank, trust company, or traction stocks, and they are all selling on a basis of 4 per cent. or less, and are so very popular because New Yorkers like to see the things in which they invest.

"Any person buying 4½ per cent. mortgages runs the risk of having to pay 2¼ per cent. of that 4½ per cent. to the city for taxes on his personal property, and, to my knowledge, this has prevented a great many from purchasing real estate mortgages.

"I feel assured that companies like the Central Realty, Bond and Trust Company, the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, the Bond and Mortgage Company, and other trust companies, like the United States Mortgage and Trust Company, and the Knickerbocker Trust Company, could readily sell annually from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 worth of 4 per cent. bonds, secured by mortgages on New York real estate, if they could guarantee to the holders that they would be exempt from all taxation, the companies paying the tax."

James McMahon, President of the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank, declared that he was opposed to the proposed tax on mortgages. He said:

"I am opposed to the bill as a savings bank man, because I believe it to be the entering wedge for the taxation of the securities held by savings banks, to which I am opposed on principle.

"I shall ask, if needful, that a meeting of the Savings Banks' Association of the State of New York be called to pass on the merits of the measure. I do not care to talk about this particular bill until I have seen the bill itself. I will, however, say this:

"When the great bulk of personal property of the very wealthy escapes taxation it seems too bad that the great Empire State shall tax the savings of the thrifty classes.

"I will oppose the enactment of any bill which has for its object the taxation of savings banks."

BALTIMORE AND OHIO'S YEAR.

There was more or less surprise in the Street yesterday that the new interests in Baltimore and Ohio did not receive representation on the Board of Directors at the annual meeting held yesterday in Baltimore. It is understood that almost at the last moment it was decided for a matter of business policy that under the circumstances a change in the board would be inadvisable at present, though it is not attempted to disguise the fact that the Pennsylvania holdings in Baltimore and Ohio are considerable, and that the relations between the roads are now very close.

There was some disappointment because no action on dividends—about which lately there has been so much talk—was taken at the meeting. The excellent earnings of the road, however, shown in the annual statement, to a great degree offset this disappointment. In the first half of the present fiscal year it is shown by a supplemental report that the company earned a full dividend on the preferred and $841,-560 in excess—the excess being equivalent to 1.78 per cent. on the authorized common stock.

PAYING BACK DIVIDENDS.

Colorado Fuel and Iron showed exceptional strength yesterday on the anticipation that at the meeting of the Board of Directors, held at Denver during the day, favorable action in respect to dividends might be taken. These expectations were realized. Just before the close of the day's business it was officially stated that at the meeting resolutions were adopted to the effect that a dividend of 8 per cent. be declared upon the preferred stock of the company for the year ending June 30, 1898, such dividend to be payable Feb. 15, 1900, in cash, to the stockholders of record Jan. 26, 1900. The Directors also adopted a resolution indorsing the policy of continuing the declaration of dividends upon the preferred stock at short intervals as the earnings of the company warrant, until all the arrears have been paid in cash.

As will be noticed, the dividend declared is for the year ending June 30, 1898; and it is stated that the company's intention to pay up its overdue dividends will be lived up to. Earnings are reported very satisfactory.

On sales yesterday of 2,900 shares the common stock advanced 1½ points, and on sales of 700 shares the preferred made a gain of 3½ points.

HOW THE STREET VIEWS IT.

The definite statement by President C. P. Huntington of the Southern Pacific that stock of the company was at his advice bought by E. H. Harriman and Jacob H. Schiff, representing the Union Pacific, is regarded in the Street as very significant, and indicative of the closer relations which may from this time on be expected between the two roads. The developments will, it is thought, be much on the same line as Pennsylvania-Baltimore and Ohio relations—that is to say, harmony and cordial understanding, but no formal consolidation of Interests.

It was a noticeable fact yesterday that both Southern Pacific and Union Pacific scored advances.

LEATHER AGAIN BUOYANT.

The most active stock on the list yesterday was United States Leather common, over 50,000 shares of which were traded in at prices ranging from 17½ to 18¾, with the close at 18—a net gain for the day of five-eighths. The opening was rather suggestive of what might be expected, the tape recording it at "3,500 shares at from 17½ to 18," the more significant for the reason that even the lower figure was above the closing price of the previous day.

There was continued talk of Rockefeller interests in the company, and it is said the developments at the meeting next month will be of no small consequence. Standard Oil interests were buyers of the stock yesterday.

TWO REASONS FOR STRENGTH.

In spite of the fact that London yesterday sold about 1,000 shares of Norfolk and Western common, that stock advanced a full point, while the preferred continued its advance and bettered itself by a half point.

The recent strong buying of the stock which has sent it up is due not alone to the dividend action to be taken on the preferred next month, but also on the belief that Norfolk and Western will be materially benefited by trunk line developments, and that even now the stock is being quietly bought up by inside railroad interests.

SUGAR AND TOBACCO.

American Sugar and American Tobacco kept fairly well together yesterday in point both of the number of the shares of each dealt in and of the advance made by each. And, singularly enough, the buying and the appreciation in both cases were attributed to the same reason—profit taking and covering by shorts who are known to have had a considerable line of each stock.

There was no news in respect to either property.

LOCAL TRACTION STOCKS.

With the exception of Third Avenue the local traction stocks had a good day of it yesterday, though for a time Metropolitan was under considerable pressure, and at one time actually showed a loss of nearly two full points. In the afternoon it rallied on a repetition of the statement that the interests back of the underground road were favorable to the Metropolitan people, and closed for the day with a net gain of a half point.

Manhattan gained 1¼ points, and Brooklyn Rapid Transit seven-eighths, the latter on rumors of favorable developments at the meeting on the 26th inst.

MORE PENSION PAYMENTS.

The Sub-Treasury was yesterday a debtor to the Clearing House to the amount of $1,200,000, of which between $500,000 and $600,000 was on account of pension payments, represented by some 1,500 checks. The total amount paid out on account of pensions on Tuesday was $800,000 on 2,300 checks. Assistant Deputy Treasurer M. L. Muhleman points it out as an interesting fact that when pension payments begin in the early part of the month they continue on an ascending scale until about the second Tuesday after the opening day, then decline, only again to increase for a day or two, and then finally and gradually fall off until the last payment is made.

EARNINGS HELP A STOCK.

There was good buying of St. Paul yesterday following the publication of the report of the company for the second week in January, which showed earnings of $716,490, as compared with $684,920 in the same week last year. Since July 1 the earnings have been $23,901,340, and the increase over last year $2,295,040.

ELECTED A DIRECTOR.

Theodore Cox, formerly of the Stock Exchange house of Hatch & Cox, has been elected a Director of the Brunswick Land Company.

IRON AND METAL TRADES.

Discussing the condition of the iron and metal trades, The Iron Age will to-day say:

"It has been apparent again that large buyers of undoubted standing have been able to pick up bargains in foundry iron. In such cases a number of sellers have sought the opportunity, which is equivalent to guaranteeing their profit. While it may be argued that this is a sign of weakness, it is true on the other side that such concessions as have been made would not tempt experienced buyers unless they recognized the inherent strength of the situation. It is worthy of note that purchases of this character have been made by melters who are covered far into the second half of the year.

"The fact is that men possessing long familiarity with the iron trade appreciate the fact that iron production is proceeding under a tremendous strain, and that any weak link destroys the integrity of the whole chain. The coke scarcity has been the latest specter. Although there seems little danger that we shall undergo the experiences of iron makers on the Continent of Europe and in England, still the danger of temporary, annoying shortage is pretty close upon us. A blizzard might disorganize the industry for weeks. In the Eastern markets there has been quite a movement in basic pig lately.

"Bessemer pig in the Central West is quiet. The Valley Association has lately decided to take care of the sales of mill irons also.

"The steel situation is still undefined. The largest transaction during the week seems to have been the purchase of 10,000 tons of steel by a mill in the Philadelphia District from a Pittsburg steel maker. Reports have been current that one of the largest consumers has bought a large block of billets. We understand that, while conferences have taken place, no sale has been effected. The large makers continue to hold on the basis of $35 at Western mills, but that price is being shaded by others, and $34 is closer to the market.

"Reports came from the West to the effect that further steel rail orders of some magnitude have been placed, among them being one lot of 50,000 tons for export. It may be of interest to note in this connection that a new maker has appeared in the market, the Ohio plant of the National Steel Company having recently solicited rail business.

"The railroads seem to be buying bridge material quite heavily. Chicago reports the closing of one contract for about 3,000 tons, with another for 5,000 tons pending. In the East the thirteen-thousand-ton order for the New York Central Road will probably be closed this week.

"The tonnage for the New York rapid transit tunnel, of course, is very large—probably close to 60,000 tons, but it will be extended over a number of years. The work will necessarily be distributed among several mills. So far as we can learn, the material is not yet covered, wholly or in part.

"It appears that some of the large interests are making sacrifices to hold a good share of the export trade. Our German correspondent refers in his letter to the disturbing effects upon the German wire interests of the competition from American sources."

WALL STREET TOPICS.

Sale on the Stock Exchange of 25 shares of Importers and Traders' Bank stock at 525.

NEWS OF THE EXCHANGES.

The trading on the Consolidated Exchange was rather dull yesterday. Stocks were fairly firm. Wheat was a little better, March, May, and July all regaining some lost ground. The export sales of wheat on the Produce Exchange was moderate. Corn was firmer and made a fractional gain. Oats were steady.

There were some 200,000 bales in the total of yesterday's trading on the Cotton Exchange. The market improved two or three points after opening about at Tuesday's close. Liverpool advices were also somewhat better. Receipts at the enumerated towns continue light. It is still an important question whether cotton has been held back at the unenumerated towns through an agreement among the planters.

Coffee opened about ten points up, and after a day of steady trading closed with about that gain. May deliveries were largely traded in. The total of transactions was 35,250 bags.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Jan. 17.—Prices started firm on the Bourse to-day, afterward became easier owing to the uncertainty of the fate of Gen. Buller's force in South Africa, and toward the close became steadier. Spanish 4s and Brazilian securities were maintained. Rio Tintos fluctuated, but closed firm. Kafis, after the close of regular business on the Bourse, became strong on London advices. BERLIN, Jan. 17.—Prices were dull at the opening of the Boerse to-day, owing to the absence of war news, but closed firmer on the expected imminnt liberation by the British authorities of the seized German steamer Bundesrath. Exchange on London, 20 marks 50½ pfennigs for checks. Private rate of discount, 4¼ per cent.

FRANKFORT, Jan. 17.—On the Boerse to-day prices were undecided in the earlier portion of the trading, but afterward foreign securities hardened. Spanish 4s were the particular feature of the transactions. Americans were steady.

MADRID, Jan. 17.—Spanish 4s closed to-day at 76.80. Gold was quoted at 28.15.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Trading was a little more active in the market for outside securities yesterday than on the previous days of the week, yet the amount of business was small compared with the more active trading of a few weeks ago. In the early trading the market was irregular, and inclined to recede from the previous day's closing bids, but the volume of transactions was so small that few movements of any consequence resulted. At the close the market showed more strength, and advances over the prices recorded in the morning were made in a number of issues. Quiet buying of a kind that suggests a desire to accumulate stock appears, and there are other signs that confidence in the future of the market is not lacking, but present conditions offer few inducements to traders, and the disposition that is still generally shown to await developments leaves the market in the dull condition that has been practically its only feature for two weeks past.

CALIFORNIA COPPER.—More than half of the day's business was supplied by the trading in California Copper, which sold from 3 up to 3⅞ and closed at 3¼ bid. At one time this stock was very active on the curb, but after a few weeks of trading last Summer business in the stock ceased almost entirely, and up to a day or two ago practically none but a nominal market was had for the stock. There was some trading in the stock on Tuesday, and yesterday the market for the stock broadened, and transactions in it aggregated probably not less than 3,000 shares. It is said that a dividend will probably be declared on the stock in April, and the demand for California Copper was attributed to this report. When the stock was active last Summer it sold considerably above yesterday's figures, but most of the trading was in the neighborhood of 4, or about the best price recorded for the stock yesterday.

AMALGAMATED COPPER was active to the extent of only 400 or 500 shares, and it showed no net change in price. Most of the trades were made at 83½, and it closed at 83¼ bid. There was practically no trading in the other copper stocks.

CAST IRON PIPE common sold at 9, and closed at 8½ bid. The amount of this issue offered has become less as the price has advanced, and at the close no stock was offered under 12, although 9 was the highest sale for the day. No transactions were recorded in the preferred stock, which closed at 42 bid, against 42½ on the previous day. Brokers who have been prominent in the recent trading in this stock say that there is good inquiry for it, and that within the last few days very good buying of both issues has appeared. Compared with other stocks, of which the preferred issues have become dividend payers, Cast Iron Pipe is selling relatively low, and this fact has attracted considerable attention to the stock and brought about the buying referred to.

DISTILLING OF AMERICA preferred sold at 22¾, a quarter point recession from the previous day's lowest sale, but no net change appeared at the close, when, as on Tuesday, 22 was bid, with stock offered at 23. Transactions in the common stock were very small, although the price of that issue fluctuated somewhat sharply down to 6⅛ and back at the close to 6½, showing a net gain of half a point.

ELECTRIC AXLE was traded in to the extent of several hundred shares between 4¾ and 4½, and closed with a quarter point loss at 4½ bid. It was said that much progress is being made in the development of the company's devices, and that very satisfactory earnings are shown in the operation of the cars which the company has already equipped with its lighting apparatus.

GENERAL CARRIAGE lost one point net, closing 6 bid. Sales of the stock were made from 6¾ down to 6½. At the close 6¾ was bid for 1,000 shares, but at the same time 6 was the best bid for 100-share lots.

NEW YORK TRANSPORTATION sold down to 9½, but at the close had recovered to 9¾ bid, a net gain of three-quarters of a point, and little stock was offered near that figure.

Closing quotations were as follows:

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 17.—To-day's market was extremely dull. The only stock in which the dealings assumed considerable proportions was Western New York and Pennsylvania. That stock, which closed at 6⅜ yesterday, touched 6⅝, the highest reached since its little boom in the Fall months. The balance of the market was devoid of snap. Cambria Steel maintained its strength of yesterday, selling as high as 21½, although it receded a trifle later. United Gas Improvement advanced 2 points. Philadelphia Electric and Electric Company of America were without change.

DANISH WEST INDIES PURCHASE.

Capt. Holmfeld of Denmark Offers to Supply Information.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Capt. Christmas Dirknigh Holmfeld of Denmark called at the State Department to-day to talk with Secretary Hay over the proposition to sell the Danish West Indies to the United States.

The officer had no credentials and did not claim to appear in a representative capacity. He stated that he had studied the subject for many years, and could claim to be an expert. Therefore he appeared only to supply any information the Department of State might desire on the subject of the Danish islands.

Secretary Hay thanked Capt. Holmfeld, and promised that the department would avail itself of his offer if at any time it had occasion to look for information.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Charles T. Barney Sells Broadway Block Front for $365,000.

McCreery Deal Said to be a Trade for Nevada Apartment House—Wooster Street Building Sold.

Charles T. Barney has sold the block front on the west side of Broadway, between Eighty-fifth and Eighty-sixth Streets, 204.10 by 112 and irregular. Mr. Barney said yesterday that the price was $365,000. The buyer's name is withheld for the present, but it is understood that he is a builder, who will erect seven-story apartment houses on the property.

The sale of the McCreery block front on Fifth Avenue, between One Hundred and Sixth and One Hundred and Seventh Streets, continues to be a subject of many rumors, and likewise one of strict silence on the part of those interested. In addition to the block front, Mr. McCreery also sells five lots on the south side of One Hundred and Seventh Street, 190 feet east of Fifth Avenue. It is also reported that Flake & Dowling are the buyers, and that the transaction also involves the sale by them to Mr. McCreery of the Nevada apartment house, at Broadway, Amsterdam Avenue, Sixty-ninth and Seventieth Streets. On this latter feature of the deal, however, no statement could be obtained from any of the principals.

Oppenheimer & Hamershlag deny a report that they have sold their plot of five lots at the northwest corner of Broadway and Seventy-first Street.

The Frank L. Fisher Company has sold for O. H. Olsen, for about $125,000, the six-story business building, 201 Wooster Street, 36.9 by 100.

W. G. Park, President of the Park Steel Company of Pittsburg, has bought through Pease & Elliman from the Barney-Sheldon Syndicate a plot 32 by 100 on the north side of Fifty-first Street, just east of the Union Club's site, at the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue. Mr. Park will erect a handsome residence on the plot.

Charles Buek has sold to Mrs. B. F. Romaine, for $44,000, the five-story American basement dwelling 32 East Fiftieth Street, 20 by 58 by 100.5, one of a row now nearly completed on part of the old Columbia College site.

Daniel B. Freedman has bought from the McMartin estate the four-story dwelling 32 West Seventeenth Street, 21.6 by 92.

It is reported that George F. Pudigon has sold the apartment house at the northwest corner of Amsterdam Avenue and One Hundred and Forty-second Street, 25 feet front, and extending through to Hamilton Place.

The Collins Company has sold for Frederick Oldhouse, for $25,000 each, the two five-story limestone-front flats 233 and 235 St. Ann's Avenue, each 25 by 87 by 100; also, to a client, for $24,500, the five-story double flat 539 East One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Street.

John Peters has sold for Martin L. Rickerson to Miss I. Rothschild the leasehold properties 406, 408, and 410 West Fifty-fifth Street, four-story single flats, on a plot 50 by 100.

COTTON.—The volume of business, as well as price pendulations, on the Cotton Exchange yesterday were insignificant. Though room traders entertained more or less decided ideas as to the course prices should take, few operators showed the least disposition to back up their convictions in a substantial manner. The outside public made practically no effort to increase or decreaso its interest, while the South and Europe were content to trade in a listless fashion on both sides of the account. The early cables from Liverpool were quite satisfactory and, in conjunction with light foreign buying orders, sent prices up 1@6 points on the call. The market was barely steady at the advance, however, and soon after the opening preliminaries had been dispensed with prices slowly settled back to an early Tuesday night's final figures. A report gained circulation near midday that Neill of New Orleans was about to reduce his crop estimate, and on this information prices worked up a peg or so, only to react under a reported that denial by that statistician that such was his intention. The total clearance at all ports of the day was 41,224 bales, or almost double the amount anticipated. Near the close the market ruled more active, and was finally steady at a net gain of 16@¾ points. Southern spot markets were officially reported by wire as follows: New Orleans, 7¾c; Mobile, 7 5-16c; Savannah, 7 5-16c; Charleston, 7 5-16c; Wilmington, 7¾c; Norfolk, 7¾c; Baltimore, 7⅝c; Augusta, 7 7-16@7¼c; Memphis, 7⅝c; St. Louis, 7 7-16c.

WOOL.—BOSTON, Jan. 17.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say to-morrow of the wool trade: "The wool market is still quiet, although the volume of business transacted during the past week has slightly exceeded that of the previous week and during the past two or three days, especially, some of the manufacturers have manifested a little more interest in the market. But they are not free purchasers of wool by any means, and the entire week's business foots up a total of less than 3,000,000 pounds. As a result of the dullness experienced since the beginning of last December there has been more pressure to sell, and, as a matter of fact, it has been possible to purchase wool in a few instances on terms slightly below what it had been previously selling for. In other cases, however, wool has sold at as high prices as were obtained during the recent boom. The London sales which opened on Tuesday were a disappointment, as merinos experienced a decline of 5 per cent, and crossbreds were slightly weaker. The sales of the week in Boston amounted to 2,570,000 pounds of domestic and 395,000 pounds of foreign, making a total of 2,965,000 pounds, against a total of 2,565,000 pounds for the previous week, and a total of 2,685,500 pounds for the corresponding week last year. The sales since Jan. 1 amount to 8,035,600 pounds, against 9,692,000 pounds for the corresponding time last year.

BREADSTUFFS.—WHEAT—Surprised at the firmness of early cable news yesterday, the bear element in wheat started in to cover at the opening and gave the market a firm undertone, which continued all day with the exception of a few reactions in the afternoon, leaving final prices ⅛@⅜c net higher. Starting at 72¼c, the May option sold up during the forenoon to 72 5-16c, and in the afternoon broke to 71 13-16c, closing at 72½c. The market was fairly active all day, with transactions mostly for local account, although in the early session foreign houses bought to some extent. The undertone seemed to be a little more healthy, if for no other reason than the less aggressive attitude of short sellers, who were somewhat restrained by the firmness in corn and provisions, and the unexpected strength abroad. The latter was most noticeable at Paris, where quotations closed 15@30 points net higher. At the same time Liverpool showed a substantial gain, closing only ½d net lower, against ½d decline at the opening. Several times during the day bear operators tested the market by a slight pounding, but they found much less response than on the day before. Export business showed decided improvement in about sixty loads here and outports, which made not a few traders believe that prices were near bottom for the time being. A wholesome export demand would undoubtedly go a long ways toward placing the market in a more satisfactory position for bull operations. A cable estimate by an Australian grain authority placed the wheat crop of that country as 10,000,000 bushels larger than last year's, indicating an exportable surplus of 20,000,000 bushels for Europe. Seaboard clearances were again very small, but the interior movement was also light, reaching only 341,000 bushels, against 689,000 bushels a year ago.

COFFEE.—Business in Brazil coffee futures was fairly active at full and generally higher prices. The market started at an advance of 5@10 points, with sales of 4,750 bags on this basis on the opening call. Europe, outside speculators, and local shorts were buyers, and sales by noon had reached 14,000 bags. At that hour prices showed a net gain of 10@15 points. The improvement was due to an unexpectedly substantial class of cable news. The Hamburg market at one time was ¼ pfg higher, but lost the improvement. Havre, after opening ¼f lower, showed a net advance of ¼f by 3 o'clock, and closed without further change. Rio closed firm at an advance of 75 reis, while Santos held unchanged on the basis of 9¾200. But the fact that Rio and Santos reported smaller receipts, 24,000 bags, while warehouse deliveries in the United States were heavy, 31,430 bags, gave the market a very steady undertone throughout. Transactions for the entire session reached 85,250 bags, with the market finally firm at a net advance of 5@15 points. Trading basis on spot coffee was 8¼c.

THE GAS WAR SITUATION

Comment on Call for Proxies of Consolidated Stockholders.

Mr. Lamb Says Change in Management and Better Returns Are Demanded—Standard Developments.

The advertisement signed George Alfred Lamb of Lamb & Voss of the Equitable Building, which called on the stockholders of the Consolidated Gas Company for proxies to be used at the company's annual meeting next Monday to secure reform in administration, an insight into recent transactions of the company, and increased dividends, provoked comment in the financial district yesterday. Mr. Lamb's partner is George A. Voss, and they have been active in the affairs of several corporations on behalf of stockholders. Some of their efforts to obtain relief in the courts for stockholders with grievances have been on behalf of Frederick F. Marquand, who has office room with F. H. Smith, a member of the Consolidated Stock and Petroleum Exchange, at 8 Broad Street. Last Summer Mr. Marquand, through Lamb & Voss, obtained two injunctions against the Federal Steel Company in relation to its dividends, and more recently he applied for a mandamus against the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company to compel the production of its books for his inspection. In the latter suit he was defeated.

Mr. Marquand is regarded as the chief client of Lamb & Voss in their appeal for proxies. He said of a report to this effect:

"I do not care at present to admit or deny that I am back of the movement to secure reform in the Consolidated Gas Company, as set forth in Mr. Lamb's advertisement, which should speak for itself. I am Lamb & Voss's client. I am not a holder of Consolidated Gas stock. I do not care to say if I have relations with any of this company's stockholders."

Of his advertisement Mr. Lamb said last evening: "It speaks for itself, and could not be more explicit. I have no need to elaborate on it. It amounts to this: Many Consolidated stockholders want a change in the management of the company for the reasons given in the call for proxies. In other words, they would like to get 8 per cent. for their investments, and I don't see why they shouldn't get it.

"I am not at liberty to say who is moving to this end, or how many proxies I have received in response to the call. I can say, however, that developments of interest may be looked for in a few days. As to Mr. Marquand, I do not say, mind you, that he is back of the movement against Consolidated Gas. Our relations for years have been that of lawyer and client."

Directors of the Consolidated Gas Company who were asked to discuss Mr. Lamb's appeal for proxies and his arraignment of the company's administration, declined to identify themselves with any expression of opinion, while they spoke forcibly of the character of the advertisement from their point of view. One of the most important members of the Consolidated directorate said:

"I do not think it an evidence of good faith to spring on the public a flaming advertisement in the newspapers. If there was anything really wrong with Consolidated, you would find J. Pierpont Morgan and men of his stamp forming quietly and in a business-like way a protective committee in the interest of the stockholders. I cannot understand this movement except in one way, and do not know how it can obtain enough indorsement to be a strong factor at the annual meeting of the company."

Another Director commented on the appeal as follows:

"I do not think that Mr. Lamb represents a dominant interest in Consolidated. On the contrary, from my knowledge of its affairs, I should infer that the Directors hold a dominant interest in the stock, and I am sure that their relations are harmonious.

"While I am doubtful about the success of Mr. Lamb's plan to secure proxies enough to influence the annual stockholders' meeting, it should be conceded that the distribution of Consolidated stock is not accurately known. In my judgment much of it is pretty widely distributed. The issue of stock is about 390,000 shares, and some large blocks are held by individuals and estates. The most important, if my memory serves me, is the holding of the Moses Taylor estate. Then there are the Pyne, Rockefeller, Baker, Sloan, and, as I understand it, Vanderbilt blocks. At our last dividend meeting no Director intimated that any of our constituents, the stockholders, were disposed to rebel."

The Protective Committee of the Standard Gas Light Company's Directors, formed in the interest of the stockholders to secure united action and control of the stock, met yesterday at the National Bank of the Republic. None of the committee would say if the subscribers to the agreement not to sell stock without first offering it to the committee at the market price constituted a majority of the stock, or 47,000 shares or more. B. B. McAlpin of Tyler, Platt, Hibberd & McAlpin, counsel for the committee, said last evening:

"I will not tell you to-day if we have control of a majority of the stock of the Standard Gas Light Company. But we will have a majority."

There were several reports in Wall Street yesterday in regard to the acquisition of the 5,700 shares of Standard sold by Mr. Sage and the 12,300 shares sold for the estate of Wallace C. Andrews. One that the principal in each case was the New Amsterdam Gas Company was denied on authority. Another story that New Amsterdam had practically acquired control of the Standard Gas Light Company was disposed of in the same way. The general Street opinion was that both blocks were acquired by Standard Oil interests. John T. Terry, one of the Directors of the Standard Company, said that control of it had not been acquired by William Rockefeller, as if he had acquired the Sage and Andrews holdings he would have but one-fifth of the stock.

Russell Sage would not yesterday discuss the sale of his stock or the attitude of his fellow Directors toward him. He said, however, of the negotiations for the Standard stock:

"While it may not be strictly correct to say that negotiations are still on for the consolidation of the Standard and Consolidated Companies, it is more than likely that they will again be taken up. I believe in the value of the Standard Gas Company, as it is a good property."

GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY'S HOME.

Plans Submitted for Its New $100,000 Building.

The American Geographical Society submitted plans yesterday for its new house to be erected on the plot 50 by 100 at 15 and 17 West Eighty-first Street. Howells & Stokes, the architects, estimate the cost of the building at $100,000.

A large lecture room will occupy the first floor, while the second story will be devoted to the library. The upper part of the house, which will be five stories in height, will be subdivided into smaller rooms. The style of architecture will be the French Renaissance, the exterior of the building being of brick, granite, and terra cotta. Above the entrance there will be an ornamental balcony of carved stone, and beneath the top row of windows will be panels bearing the names Columbus, Marco Polo, and Magellan.

TENDERLOIN WOMEN ARRESTED.

Capt. Thomas Determined to Get Rid of "Badger" Workers.

The men under Capt. Thomas, the new commander of the Tenderloin Precinct, Tuesday night, in conjunction with several Central Office detectives, arrested nearly three dozen women found in the streets. They were all arraigned in the Jefferson Market Court yesterday morning, charged variously with being disorderly persons and suspicious characters. Capt. Thomas's chief object is to run down the women who carry on "badger" games. He said he intended to rid his precinct of them.

Eleven of the women, who were thought to be concerned in recent "badger" games and robberies, were taken to the Detective Bureau at Police Headquarters, where they were looked over by the detectives and eight of them photographed. When arraigned again in court six of them were discharged on account of lack of evidence, but the remainder were held over until this afternoon.

New Brooklyn Hospital Building.

Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new building to replace the central section of the Long Island College Hospital, at Henry and Pacific Streets, Brooklyn. The new structure, which will cost about $150,000, will be four stories in height and fireproof.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN.

"Up-to-date shopkeeping is a source of constant surprise to people who have their own shopping to do," remarked the man who had been out to have a pair of shoes fitted because he couldn't very well send any one to have them fitted for him. "I went to one of the largest and most pretentious shoe stores in the city, and, finding a pair of shoes that fitted me well enough for comfort, told the man who waited on me that I would buy them if he would have a lift put on the heels, as they were a trifle too low for my use. Moderately high heels are one of my idiosyncrasies, if you will call it so. The adding of these lifts is something I always have done where I have bought my shoes. It is generally a matter of but an hour or two at most. So I told the clerk that I would call for the shoes in a couple of hours when I would have occasion to be around that way again. 'But we couldn't have them for you in that time, Sir,' he said, and when I wanted to know the reason for a longer delay for so trifling a bit of work, he told me that the shoes would have to be sent out to a cobbler to have the lifts put on. Then it appeared that in that great store there was no person, from cellar to garret, as a cobbler, and that I would have to wait two or three days to get the shoes if the change was made. That system may be modern and up-to-date and all that sort of thing, but it strikes me that it is a mighty poor sort of business policy, and that the old-fashioned shoe shop has a decided advantage over the new-fangled ones."

"Which reminds me," said a listener, "that I, too, have had a bit of experience with ready-made shoes. Since the ready-to-wear shoe has knocked the old-time shoemaker out of business, every factory seems to have its shoes made from the same style of lasts, and every one of these lasts seems to be made for flat-footed men. I tried on a dozen pairs of shoes before I was able to find one that would at all fit me, and there was the same trouble with each kind. The manufacturers had apparently forgotten to make shoes for men with high insteps. None of the shoes had that graceful curve of the sole that makes the shoe set snugly to the curve between the ball of the foot and the heel. It is certainly strange that such shoes are not made for the man with a properly shaped foot, and the aristocratic curved instep is by no means an unusual patron of these shops. With the almost universal use of the ready-made shoes in these days, and with all the shoes made on the flat-soled last, it seems to me there is danger that Americans are in danger of being converted into a race of flat-footed people."

"Speaking of the methods of the modern shops, I had a rather singular experience the other day," put in the man who keeps his eyes open. "I bought a smoking jacket at one of the fashionable establishments in the shopping district, and I noticed that the little tag at the back of the neck used as a hanger had a very elaborate design with the name of the firm woven in it in silk. The jacket was sent to my house, and when I unpacked and prepared to hang it in my closet, I noticed that the hanger with the firm name was missing, and a common silk band substituted. I could not quite understand the change, but in the course of the evening concluded that there must be something wrong about it. Then it struck me that perhaps the hanger might have some sort of value if taken from my jacket and sold to some other firm that dealt in an inferior line of goods who might perhaps put the tag of this well-known firm on their goods and so get a higher price for them. The idea was worth running down, at least. So I explained the incident to the Superintendent of the house where I made my purchase, told him my suspicions, and he instituted an investigation. A few days later I met him and then found that my suspicions were confirmed. He had discovered that one of the men in the packing department had been in the habit of removing the tags put by the firm on the goods manufactured by them, and substituting for them plain hangers, such as he had placed on my smoking jacket. This had been done with ladies' wraps and dresses as well as with men's goods. The packer had sold these bits of silk to a house in a less fashionable quarter. These people had placed them on goods that they were selling as 'misfit garments' from the establishment of their more fashionable rival. Beyond the discharge of the offender, they did not go, so far as I know, at least. This petty swindle was unknown to the managers of the store until I told them of it, and only added one more to the many annoyances that the big establishments are subjected to by the dishonest ones among their employes."

"It has been a queer lot, the representatives of her nobility that England has sent over to us this season," remarked a Union Club man while Anglo-American marriages were being discussed. "Primarily, all of them have been fortune hunters, willing to give a title to almost any woman who would give them in return an assured and handsome income. One of the first to come was a Lord who was nothing but a book agent in disguise, and who managed to dispose of a lot of the books for which he was the salesman. A second was a Duke who was here as a newspaper reporter brought over by one of your 'yellow' contemporaries. A third member of Britain's nobility is an actor; another is the recognized agent for a wine house and for a firm that handles a certain brand of cigarettes, while still another is nothing in the world but a model for a firm of London tailors, whose other agent was at one of the Broadway hotels with his samples booking orders for Summer clothing, and who has now returned to London with his noble model. None of these noble fellows so far as heard from has volunteered to go to the Transvaal to fight for his country, but there are ugly stories as to unpaid loans negotiated by at least two of the visitors."

Cunha, the three-hundred-pound Hawaiian student at Yale, who was the centre rush on the football team until Wright of Columbia "made a monkey of him" in the game between the two colleges at Columbia Field, will be seen in this city in a new rôle when the Sportsman's Show is held at the Madison Square Garden. Cunha is one of the best swimmers in the university, and is to be a member of the water polo team that the Yale boys are organizing to take part in the games here this Winter under the leadership of Frederick A. Wenck of this city, who is a law student at Yale. Cunha learned to swim among the natives of the Hawaiian Islands, who are among the best swimmers in the world. So he swims fast and well, and does better at the water game than he did at football. Another member of the team will probably be George Hall, the young man who took part in the swimming contests at the Garden last March. He is a student at the Sheffield Scientific School, and with a fellow-student invented the submarine electric searchlight that has recently been tested by the Government in Newport Harbor.

"Much snow up your way now?" was the first query of a gray-mustached and gray-haired man, as he effusively greeted another man rather over fifty when the two met at the Franklin Street Station of the Sixth Avenue elevated road last evening. There was a hearty laugh from the party addressed as he looked at his friend and replied, "Not too much to prevent you from getting out on the links, I reckon, for I presume a game of golf is at the back of your question." "Yes, it was golf that prompted the query, and I confess I am anxious to get out on the links again, for I miss my exercise more than I can tell. You haven't got the fever yet, I imagine, but you'll get it all right before you are a year older. It's an old man's game, you know, and you want to get in it with the rest of us and renew your youth and add a few years to your life." And then the train came along.

"I have just finished a Christmas story for one of the magazines, to be published next December, and the artist has been showing me some rough drawings intended to illustrate it," remarked one of our popular short story writers at the Arts Club last evening. "I have another, of about 5,000 words, practically completed, and have an order for a third, which I shall get to work at next week, as it must be delivered before Feb. 15. My friend, the poet, over there, has just completed a Christmas carol for the beginning of the new century. The market for Christmas literature of a year hence seems to have been well supplied, for the editor of one of the popular magazines informed me to-day that he has the material for his next Christmas issue all in hand, though the artists have still a month's work or more to clean up the job."

For two years we've been sermonizing on the advantages and merits of the medium weight overcoat for New York.

TO SAVE THE PALISADES

Recommendation to Include Them in a Public Park.

STATE COMMISSIONERS' REPORT

The Property Required Can Be Purchased for $260,000 and May Be Made Self-Sustaining.

The commission appointed at the instance of Gov. Roosevelt by the Hon. A. H. Green, President of the Society for the Preservation of Scenic and Historic Places and Objects, to act on behalf of New York State in conjunction with a like commission of New Jersey, appointed by act of Legislature, for the preservation of the Palisades, has made public its report.

In brief, the report recommends the passage of an act forbidding the granting of further riparian rights on the west bank of the Hudson within the limits of the strip to be protected; the passage of an act providing for the acquisition of the land between the edge of the cliffs and lower water mark, running from Fort Lee on the south to Piermont on the north, and its maintenance by a commission for a public park, and the amendment or modification of such legislation as interferes with the objects sought to be attained. The general plan of the legislation recommended is the same as that of the Niagara Falls Park act.

The report in its present form has been approved by both Gov. Roosevelt of New York and Gov. Voorhees of New Jersey. Its recommendations embodied in legislative form will shortly be brought to the attention of the respective Legislatures of the two States. The report was unanimously adopted by the New Jersey commission yesterday and by the New York body Tuesday night.

The first section of the Commissioners' report is devoted to the means and extent of the defacement of the Palisades. Stone is removed from the cliff proper by blasting, and the talus is carried off from the foot of the slope. The business of procuring stone for street paving or to be crushed for road purposes was formerly confined to the talus of broken rock at the foot of the cliffs, but at the present time the rock is worked for the manufacture of crushed stone, and not only the loose rock is taken, but the cliffs themselves are blasted away. The report names the firms engaged in this work.

The recent adoption of asphalt pavements in New York, the report continues, and the great extension of steel cage construction building, requiring concrete foundations, and other uses of concrete, has created a great demand for crushed stone. The ease with which the cliffs may be destroyed by a few blasts and thrown down at the water line ready for transportation makes the Palisades peculiarly attractive to contractors. The quarries now in operation are being worked night and day, and the report predicts that the section above Fort Lee will soon become as badly mutilated as the old section near Bull's Ferry.

A second means of destroying the scenic value of the section under consideration the report finds to be the filling in of land under water and the building of factories and docks thereon. The shore opposite One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street is already thus occupied, and any further extension must take place beneath the Palisades. On the ground of destroying its utility and beauty as a public park and marring the charm of nature the commission recommends the prohibition of commercial aggression upon the section.

With a passing reference to similar efforts in the past, the report declares the most simple and direct method of preserving the Palisades to be the condemnation and acquisition for use as a public park of a tract of land along the Hudson and the Palisades of such extent that its State ownership will forever prevent the destruction and defacement complained of. The probable extent is given as 13½ miles, or 737 acres, and the cost as $260,000. The Commissioners conclude that the land above the edge of the cliffs may be eliminated, since it is commercially inaccessible. The essential tract is made up of two natural divisions—the face of the cliffs and the rock slope and the strip lying between the foot of the slope and low water mark. The acquisition of these is urged, together with that of a narrow strip from the northern limit to the river road at Piermont. This last is to make the park accessible from Nyack and the surrounding section. In conclusion the report intimates that the park might be made self-supporting by the leasing of ferry franchises and roadhouse and boathouse privileges.

HENRY MARCUS IN JAIL.

Son of Baltimore Millionaire Sued by Wife for a Separation.

Henry Marcus, one of the sons of the late Baltimore millionaire, Martin H. Marcus, is in Ludlow Street Jail in default of $2,000 bail as the result of an action instituted against him by his wife, Musa, for a separation. Marcus was arrested yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Strauss on an order issued by Justice Andrews of the Supreme Court.

Since their marriage, on Oct. 31, 1896, Marcus, it is said, has deserted his wife no less than four times. Three times she has forgiven him, and upon his pleadings she again went to live with him.

The last separation took place a few weeks ago, when the couple were living at the home of Mrs. Margaret Smith on West Seventy-third Street. Marcus left the house, and, according to Mrs. Marcus's affidavit, returned to Baltimore. Before leaving, however, Mrs. Marcus says that without her knowledge he paid a $56 board bill to Mrs. Smith with a check which came back from the bank marked "N. G."

Mrs. Marcus asserts that after the death of her husband's father his entire fortune, amounting to $3,000,000, was divided among the defendant and five brothers in equal parts. Mrs. Marcus not only asks for a legal separation, but that he husband be compelled to contribute liberally to her support.

Jeweled Badge for Mr. Jetter.

J. Edward Jetter, who was recently appointed as a member of the Municipal Statistical Commission, was the recipient yesterday of a handsome diamond-studded gold badge, the gift of a number of his friends. Magistrate Zeller made the presentation address, and among those present were Sheriff Grell, Aqueduct Commissioner Ryan, John M. Riehle, Samuel S. Steiner, and William M. Schwenker.

LEGAL NOTES.

EXPRESS AND IMPLIED WARRANTY.—In June, 1898, John Cabot received from the American Ink Company an order for a quantity of carbon black, to be used in the preparation of ink. The goods were manufactured, delivered, and paid for. As soon as the carbon black was received, the company began to use it in making ink, which it sold to printers. A month later the company's customers presented complaints of the quality of the ink furnished, and on the complaints being reported to Cabot, he offered to exchange the unused ink for an equal amount of new goods. The new goods were accepted, but the old goods were not returned. Then Clarence J. Osborn, as Cabot's assignee, brought suit in the Second Municipal Court to recover the purchase price of the new shipment. The Justice, on a counter-claim for damages for breach of an express warranty as to the quality of the former shipment, allowed the damages, and gave plaintiff a judgment for the difference. That judgment has been affirmed on plaintiff's appeal, by the Appellate Term of the Supreme Court. The Court held, by Justice Leventritt, that the express warranty of the quality of the carbon black to be manufactured, survived acceptance, and the ink company might set off damages for the breach, without returning or offering to return the defective goods. The question was held to be one of fact on the issue whether defects in the ink to be manufactured were patent or latent, and if they were found to have been patent, there could have been no recovery. But if they were found to have been latent, the implied warranty survived acceptance and was actionable.

COMMON CARRIERS.—A contract to carry ocean freight from Galveston to New York for John A. Graves for six months from March, 1898, at a fixed rate, was signed on behalf of the Miami Steamship Company by R. H. Vaughan, its authorized soliciting agent, in his own name. The agreement was subsequently ratified by the General Freight Agent of the company. A judgment awarded by Justice Lynn to Mr. Graves in his action brought in the First Municipal Court for damages for breach of the contract was affirmed by the Appellate Term of the Supreme Court. Justice Leventritt, giving the opinion, held that the contract, upon the facts stated, was binding upon the company, and was not abrogated by the declaration of war between the United States and Spain. The Court held that it was therefore no answer to the breach of the contract for the carrier to allege that its sailings were discontinued because of "lack of safety of the vessel," and because the carrier had "disposed of its ships by charter," it appearing that such disposition was both voluntary and profitable.

BILL OF SALE BY AN INSOLVENT CORPORATION.—A suit brought in the Supreme Court in this city by John McQueen, as receiver of the Powerville Felt Roofing Company, to recover goods alleged to have been wrongfully converted by the defendants, was dismissed, the court holding that the action should have been in equity for an accounting, and not at law for a conversion. The defendants claimed title under a bill of sale made by the roofing company. The plaintiff insisted that the bill of sale was void, because given by an insolvent corporation in contravention of the statute of 1897. The First Appellate Division directed a reversal and new trial, holding, by Justice O'Brien, that an action at law for conversion was proper against persons who had unlawfully taken possession of property of an insolvent corporation, though an equity suit might also be instituted.

F. J. VAN ORDER, DEFENDANT.

Bank Cashier Accused of Being Partner in a Defunct Firm—His Attorney Calls It a Spite Suit.

A suit is now pending in the City Court in which Frank J. Van Order, cashier of the Gansevoort Bank, is sued as a partner in the defunct butter and egg commission house of Garner & Co. of 844 Washington Street. The complainants in the action are Martin & Murray, commission merchants, who seek to recover $517.40.

The complainants charge that Cashier Van Order early in 1898 entered into a partnership agreement with Robert J. Garner, who was already in the butter and egg business and a depositor in the bank, and that by virtue of this agreement and Van Order's position in the bank, Garner was enabled to secure large loans from that institution and to obtain extended credit from other firms. Garner & Co. failed last November for about $6,000, and this is the first suit growing out of the failure.

The suit was brought in the City Court on Nov. 8, and Van Order, through his attorney, filed an answer denying that he was ever a partner in the firm of Garner & Co. When the case came up for trial yesterday the plaintiffs were confronted by an order from Judge Kirkpatrick of the United States Court at Trenton, N. J., staying all proceedings because Van Order had filed a petition in bankruptcy in the New Jersey Court. City Judge Dwyer adjourned the case until to-morrow, while one of the plaintiff's attorneys went to Trenton to ask for a vacation of the order.

Mr. Wilder of Wilder & Anderson, plaintiff's counsel, in discussing the case yesterday exhibited two documents upon which is based the claim that the bank cashier did embark in the butter and egg business with Garner. One of these letters, purporting to bear Van Order's signature, is dated New York, Feb. 9, 1898, and reads as follows:

I agree to allow R. J. Garner $35 per week on account of running the business, and agree to stand one-half the expenses of running the same, after which we will share and share alike until I take an active part in the business by giving all my time to same, at which time this is to become void. I also agree to put into the business $500 to continue said partnership after a note of $1,500 is paid.

The second instrument is a letter purporting to have been written by Van Order in September of last year. It is addressed to Garner as "Dear Bob," and among other things says: "I wish you would furnish me with a statement of your business since Jan. 31, 1898, as per agreement of that date and Feb. 9, 1898, in which you were to receive $35 per week as manager of the buisness and divide half profits." Mr. Wilder threatens to prosecute Van Order for perjury for swearing in his answer that he was not a partner in the firm.

Mr. Van Order referred all inquirers on the subject to his attorney, Edward Swann, who is also a Director and member of the Loan Committee of the Gansevoort Bank. "It's simply a question of spite on the part of Garner, said Mr. Swann. In January 1898, Garner, who was a neighbor of Van Order, at Cranford, N. J., was in need of $1,500, and Van Order, to help him out, negotiated a loan, Garner giving a mortgage on some property in Cranford and signing this agreement:

In consideration of F. J. Van Order negotiating a certain note for $1,500 dated Jan. 31, 1898, for fourth months, I, R. J. Garner, agree to give the said F. J. Van Order, as security for payment of said note, a mortgage on a house, barn, and three lots in Cranford, N. J., a chattel mortgage on all the contents of said house, and one-half interest in all the profits of the business of Garner & Co., without liability as partner.

"Garner went along without paying this note until last October, when foreclosure proceedings were threatened, and the note was paid. I have submitted the reports of two mercantile agencies made on three different occasions last year, in which Garner admitted the firm of Garner & Co. consisted of himself alone. Mr. Van Order filed an application in bankruptcy at my suggestion because he refuses to have all of Garner's debts thrust upon him."

CIVIL ENGINEERS IN SESSION.

American Society Elects Officers and Holds a Reception.

The forty-seventh annual meeting of the American Society of Civil Engineers was begun yesterday morning in the house of the society in this city, at 220 West Fifty-seventh Street. President Desmond Fitzgerald of Boston presided at the opening session. The report of the Committee on Standard Time, recommending the adoption of the French system of counting hours from one to twenty, was accepted, and the committee was thanked and discharged. No definite expression of the society on the recommendations of the report was made.

William Barclay Parsons of this city delivered an illustrated lecture at the afternoon session describing the survey recently made by him in China, and giving an account of Chinese life as he found it on a journey of 1,100 miles, 500 of which were through the unexplored Province of Hunan, the most anti-foreign section of the Chinese Empire. In the evening a reception for members and their families was held. The sessions will be continued to-day.

The following officers were elected at the morning session: President—John Findlay Wallace, Chicago; Vice Presidents—Rudolph Hering, New York, and Alfred Noble, Chicago; Treasurer—Joseph M. Knap, New York; Directors—John F. O'Rourke and Henry B. Seaman, New York; Thomas H. Johnson, Pittsburg; Joseph Ramsey, Jr., St. Louis; Henry B. Richardson, New Orleans, and George A. Quinlan, Houston, Texas.

CONGRESS.—In the Senate yesterday Mr. Teller of Colorado made a speech in opposition to the Currency bill. Mr. Wellington of Maryland opposed the retention of the Philippines. The House passed the bill relating to the census without the amendments allowing the printing work to be done by private contract. Mr. De Armond of Missouri introduced a bill to repeal the bankrupicy law.—Page 5.

NEW YORK LEGISLATURE.—In the Senate the Brackett bill directing the Court of Claims to hear the claim against the State for printing was passed. Senator White's Old School bill, with changes agreed to by some of the interests involved, will be introduced in the present Legislature. Assemblyman Brennan presented a measure providing for a Bridge and Tunnel Commission. Another bill appropriates $12,000,000 for the improvement of the water front by the Department of Docks and Ferries.—Page 3.

FOREIGN.—It was reported from Durban, Natal, last night, that reports had reached there that Gen. Buller's flanking force had engaged the Boers, and that heavy fighting had taken place. This was not confirmed. Belated advices show that the Boers retired from Potgieter's Drift upon the approach of the British. Gen. Buller yesterday sent a dispatch confirming the crossing of the Tugela River. He intimated that Gen. Warren was preparing to attack the Boer flank west of Potgieter's Drift. The British are preparing to send more troops to South Africa. A scouting party of Australians fell into a Boer trap, and several were killed or wounded. A Cape Town rumor that Ladysmith has been relieved was discredited last night by the British War Office. Some of yesterday morning's Paris newspapers had reports to the effect that Count Boni de Castellane had lost large sums in stock speculations. The Marquis de Castellane indignantly denied the truth of the reports, and has offered to fight a duel with the editor of the Figaro, one of the papers which gave publicity to them. A vote of confidence in the French Government was passed by the Chamber of Deputies yesterday by a vote of 329 to 74. The vote was on an interpellation of the Government's attitude toward the strikers of St. Etienne. The Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, in a speech at Birmingham, said that England had a great deal to learn from America, and unless she learned it quickly she was bound to fall behind in commerce. The Russian ironclad Poltava went ashore near Libau, on the Baltic, and is in a dangerous position. The political and financial crisis in Venezuela, involving tension between the Bank of Venezuela and the Government, has apparently passed. The French Court of Appeal has reversed the decision of the lower court, which gave 100,000 francs damages to the widow of a victim of the Bourgogne disaster.—Pages 1, 6, and 7.

QUIGG DEFEATED GRUBER

Power of Appointing the Election Officers Strongly Affirmed.

WAR IN COUNTY COMMITTEE

A Comma an Obstacle to Gruber's Success—Hatchet Buried in the Twenty-first District.

The regular monthly meeting of the Republican County Committee at the Murray Hill Yyceum last night, developed personalities between President Lemuel E. Quigg and Abraham Gruber, the leader of the Twenty?first Assembly District. It was marked also by a fight, long-predicted, between these two, which hinged upon Mr. Gruber's resolution, providing that the appointment of election officers should be vested i na majority of the delegates to the County Committee from the Assembly District, instead of lying in the hands of the President of the County Committee, as is the case now. Quigg won decisively when it came to a vote.

The meeting was further noteworthy as the occasion for announcing that Mr. Gruber and George C. Austin, who had been fighting him in his own district, had buried the hatchet. His district voted solidly for Mr. Mace, its candidate for the Elections Commitee.

When Mr. Gruber was ready to present the resolution he had prepared, he stated that it had been previously adopted by the Twenty-first Assemebly District organization. He was explaining its purport when Quigg interrupted him, and told the Secretary to read it. It provided that "all election officers and Inspectors of Election to act at unofficial primaries," were to be appointed from a list in writing presented to the President of the County Committee by a person designated by a majority of the delegates to the committee from the Assembly District; where a majority could not agree on a list the Executive Committeeman from the Assembly District was to name one. The resolution was, as was well understood, an attempt to curtail the power of Mr. Quigg.

The instant it was read "Fred" Gibbs moved "to refer it to the Executive Committee without date."

"I move the resolution take the regular course of all amendments to the constitution," cried Mr. Gruber, "and lie over—"

"The Chair would suggest," broke in Mr. Quigg, "that the gentlemen point out what amendment to the rules this resolution makes. There is no rule which touches in any way on the subject of unofficial primaries."

Mr. Gibbs demanded that his motion be put, but the Chair replied that it would "hear the gentleman from the Twenty-first" as to whether his resolution were an amendment or not. If not it would be in order to be voted on at once.

"Under the rules as interpreted by the President he has the right to designate the election officers," said Mr. Gruber. "That right is conceded, as the rules are now read in conjunction with the State election law. Will the Chair correct me if I am in error?

"The question is not whether the gentleman is in error," retorted Mr. Quigg, and when Mr. Gruber went on to discuss the rule about official primaries he exclaimed, "What has that got to do with this question?"

"The right to appoint election officers," was the reply, "for official days carries with it the right to appoint them for unofficial days."

The Chair ruled that the resolution was not an amendment.

Mr. Gruber appealed from the decision and then, before anything had been done, he walked forward to the platform, took his resolution from the Secretary, and insisted that the latter had read it with the wrong expression, making the words "election officers" apply to "unofficial primaries," which was not his intention.

"It should be read this way," said he, after scribbling on it with a pencil: "'All election officers, comma, and inspectors of election to act at unofficial primaries.' That makes the resolution apply to election officers for official primaries also, as it is meant to."

"It seems to me," said Mr. Quigg, "that the gentleman is frivolous. I don't know whether he means to be taken seriously or not."

"The gentleman who presides may take himself seriously, as I don't," said Mr. Gruber, while a titter ran round the meeting, "but I will have him understand that I know enough to read my own resolution, and I protest against its being read so as to alter its meaning."

"I'd like to ask what becomes of that appeal," shouted some one from the rear.

"I withdraw my appeal," said Mr. Gruber.

"Then I withdraw my motion," said Mr. Gibbs.

"I move," said Mr. Gruber, "that the resolution take the usual course."

"The Chair will not entertain that motion," was the reply, "because the resolution would take the regular course, anyway."

When it came to a vote Mr. Gruber wanted a roll call, but could not get it. The resolution was overwhelmingly defeated. Then Mr. Quigg surrendered the chair, and, descending to the floor, made a speech in defense of his treatment of the question of appointing election officers.

Mr. Gruber presented another resolution requiring all election officers for official primaries to be named by the Executive Committeemen from the Assembly Districts. John Sabine Smith declared the resolution was opposed to the State law. It was defeated.

Mr. Gruber was the victim of a great many jokes after the meeting, on his manner of drawing resolutions. It was even hinted that the comma he laid such stress on he had forgotten to put in till he took the resolution from the Secretary.

Mr. Quigg was asked about a report that he intended to resign. "I am tired denying that," said he.

DEMOCRATS AGAINST BRYAN.

Maryland House of Delegates Refuses to Pass a Resolution Inviting Him to Address That Body.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 18.—The Maryland House of Delegates, which is overwhelmingly Democratic, to-day refused to indorse William Jennings Bryan as "the recognized leader of Democracy in the United States," and practically killed a resolution introduced by a free-silver advocate to invite Mr. Bryan to address the body. The resolution follows:

Whereas, William Jennings Bryan is the recognized leader of the Democracy in the United States, and

Whereas, He, the recognized leader, is to make an address in Baltimore on Jan. 20 under the auspices of the Maryland Democratic Association, therefore be it

Resolved, That as a mark of respect on the part of the Maryland Legislature an invitation be extended to him to address the Legislature at any time that he may see fit during his visit to the State of Maryland.

Mr. Willis of Talbot County, who introduced the resolution, asked that it be considered without reference, but the proposition was voted down, and the Speaker referred it to the Committee on Federal Relations, where it probably will find an early grave.

Congressman Bailey on Bryan.

Special to The New York Times.

DALLAS, Tex., Jan. 18.—Congressman J. W. Bailey, in a letter to W. T. Hawkins of Gatesville dated Jan. 10, says:

"In 1896 I disagreed with Mr. Bryan upon some questions and frankly said so to my constituents. The questions on which I differed with Mr. Bryan were outside the Chicago platform, and could not, in my judgment, be put into any Democratic platform.

"Since then he has kept within the declarations of his party, and so long as he does that he will find no more loyal supporter than I. I have not, however, changed my opinion in the least about the questions on which I formerly differed with him, and if he should attempt to commit the Democratic Party to the support of those propositions I undoubtedly would oppose him again."

DEMOCRATIC PARTY'S FUTURE.

Gen. Buckner Says It Must Get Rid of Bryan—Advocates Expansion.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Gen. Simon B. Buckner of Kentucky, who was the Vice Presidential candidate on the Gold Democratic ticket in 1896, was in Chicago to-day, and said in an interview:

"The Democratic Party has no future until the element now in control has been wiped out, and this promises to be done at the elections of this year. Expediency, not principle, is the motto of this element; the energies of its leader, Mr. Bryan, are engaged in hunting for an issue which he hopes will attract votes, and not in the promulgation of those great principles on which the Democratic Party rests.

"With his defeat, which promises to be more overwhelming than in 1896, there is reason to believe the conservative element of the party once more will come into power.

"The controlling element of the party to-day would commit it to opposition to expansion, when expansion was the essence of Jeffersonian Democracy. As a practical proposition there can be no doubt in my mind as to the wisdom of this country retaining the Philippines."

BLACKBURN'S SENATORSHIP.

Governor of Kentucky May Refuse to Give Him His Certificate.

Special to The New York Times.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 18.—It is reported that Gov. Taylor hopes to bring about complications in the matter of the Senatorship by refusing to sign Blackburn's certificate. It is not believed, however, that by such a course the Governor could give Blackburn much trouble. The report cannot be verified.

If such action is taken it will be in the interest of the proposed contest of Blackburn's seat by ex-Gov. Bradley.

President Invited to San Francisco.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Representative Julius Kahn of San Francisco, accompanied by the other members of the California delegation in Congress, will call on the President to-morrow and present to him a unique invitation from the Bohemians of America, a fraternal organization with headquarters at San Francisco. The invitation is on a silver card, 6 by 4 inches, and asks the President to attend a banquet at San Francisco on Jan. 29, the occasion being Mr. McKinley's birthday. The Bohemians of America hold a banquet annually on the birthday of the President in office.

Monetary League Convention.

DENVER, Col., Jan. 18.—The Executive Committee of the Monetary League has decided to hold a National convention at the same time and in the same city as the Democratic, Silver Republican, and Populist conventions. The object of the league is to write the financial plank of the Democratic National platform.

Citizens' Union Reorganization.

The Citizens' Union is making active preparations for reorganization. There is to be an organization in every Assembly District and each must contain not less than twenty-five members. The present Central Committee will continue in power until the new committee is organized. The City Committee will consist of the District Chairmen and one delegate for every twenty-five enrolled voters. Borough and County Committees will be formed later.

MASONS WHO BECOME TRAMPS.

Grand Secretary Barlow Warns the Fraternity Against Them.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Jan. 18.—The Masonic Grand Lodge now in session at Hartford, of which Judge George G. McNall of Greenwich is Grand Master, has taken a stand against Masonic beggars. Grand Secretary John H. Barlow, in his report to-day, says: "I desire to caution the lodges and brethren against those who, for want of a better name, I have classed under the heading 'Masonic tramps.' They travel from place to place, craving in many ways the assistance of the fraternity. They are usually well posted in the ritual and have no doubt at times received Masonic degrees. Many of them have been suspended from their lodges, either for un-Masonic conduct or non-payment of dues. Our jurisdiction has been unusually invaded by such characters during the past year, and I have sent out several warning circulars to the lodges."

WANTS $800 FOR DEAD DOGS.

Suit Against Express Company That Allowed Two Collies to Die.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Jan. 18.—Judge Barnard, as referee, took evidence to-day in an action brought by Charles M. Taylor of Matteawan, a breeder of dogs, to recover $800 damages from the American Express Company for the loss of two Scotch collies, Beacon Chief and Beacon Flossie.

The animals were shipped from Pittsburg to Fishkill Landing, where the plaintiff resides, and by some mistake were sent to Cranstons. When the dogs finally arrived at Fishkill Landing Beacon Chief was dead, and Flossie died the next day. The plaintiff claims that the agents of the express company neglected to feed his pets. The defense was that the crates containing the dogs were misdirected.

Mr. Taylor paid $350 for Beacon Chief, buying him from R. B. Armstrong of Cranstons. During the hearing the counsel for the express company asserted that there could be no market value to a dog. "I have always held that a dog is property," ruled Judge Barnard. "You can't separate a dog from man; they have been together since the world began, though sometimes it would be well if you could."

GLASS TRUST RECEIVER ASKED.

Depauw University Is Responsible for the Action.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 18.—A conference between Dr. W. H. Hickman, Chancellor of Depauw University, and A. L. Mason, attorney of the institution, resulted to-day in the filing of a suit by Depauw University against W. L. Kann, President of the American Plate Glass Company, and the Board of Directors of that corporation, the Penn Plate Glass Company being made a co-defendant. The appointment of a receiver for the American Plate Glass Company was asked, as well as an accounting and measure of damages.

The Depauw University derived as part of its bequest from the estate of the late Washington Depauw a block of stock in the Depauw Glass Works, afterward absorbed by the American Plate Glass Company, to the value of $21,000. In the reorganization of the Plate Glass Trust not long ago the American Plate Glass Company sold out to the Penn Plate Glass Company.

In the complaint filed to-day, which was immediately removed from the files, it was charged that the affairs of the American Plate Glass Company had been mismanaged by the defendant officers to such an extent that the interests of the Depauw University and other minor stockholders had been made to suffer. It was also charged in evidence of this fact, that the stock had been sold at less than its real value.

COLOSSAL RAILWAY DEAL

All Great Lines East of Mississippi Said to be Involved.

A BOARD OF CONTROL HERE

Separate Ticket Offices and Freight and Passenger Agents to be Replaced by Joint Agencies.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—It is stated that as a result of the recent consolidations and agreements among the owners of the great trunk railways east of Chicago, the entire transportation system between the Mississippi River and the Atlantic seaboard is to be reorganized, involving numerous important changes.

The reported scheme contemplates the abandonment of the city ticket offices of all the roads in the syndicate in Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Buffalo, Baltimore, Washington, Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, Indianapolis, Peoria, and St. Louis, and the substitution of joint offices in each city. In Chicago there will, it is said, be a joint office in the down-town district, one on the west side, and a third on the north side, at which tickets will be sold for all the roads in the pact.

Another expected result will be the discharge of all city, general, traveling, and district freight and passenger agents and solicitors of the Eastern roads in all parts of the United States, Canada, and Europe. This would affect nearly 50,000 men. The abolition of all forms of commissions heretofore paid for the sale of tickets over these roads is also expected. This would affect the incomes of 10,000 agents, and eliminate the scalpers.

There will be established, it is said, in Chicago and New York joint auditing agencies that will apportion to each road an agreed percentage of the total competitive business. The discharge of all superfluous assistants to the heads of departments would follow. Later the heads of the departments may be abolished and the work done by clerks, who will report to the two joint agencies.

Among other changes said to be decided upon are the following:

The establishment in New York of a Board of Control, made up of persons representing the Vanderbilt, Pennsylvania, Morgan, and Harriman properties, the rulings of this board on all questions to be final.

The abandonment of a number of through fast passenger trains put in service during the past few years as the result of sharp competition.

The establishment of common schedules for passenger trains between Chicago and New York, and between all of the principal terminals of the combination's roads in the territory east of this city and St. Louis.

The abandonment of all fast freight trains and the fixing of common time for these trains between competitive terminals.

Following are the names of the roads said to be in the combination: New York Central, Pennsylvania, Boston and Albany, Boston and Maine, Fitchburg, New York, New Haven, and Hartford, Erie, Lehigh Valley, Lackawanna, West Shore, New York, Ontario and Western, Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg, Lake Shore, Michigan Central, Nickel Plate, Baltimore and Ohio, Wabash, Big Four, Chesapeake and Ohio, Lake Erie and Western, and Monon, and all auxiliary lines of these systems.

When all details for the future management of the roads in the Eastern combination have been perfected the leaders in the consolidation movement will, it is said, turn their attention to the territory west of Chicago and attempt to deal with the Chicago-St. Louis-Rocky Mountain country in like manner. The combining process may extend ultimately to the Pacific Coast.

ADDS TO DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Plan Devised to Take in a Strip of Virginia's Territory.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—When the District of Columbia was first established it was ten miles square, and took in the City of Alexandria. After some years Virginia desired to have the part in that State receded, and the part of the square in that State was turned back to the jurisdiction of Virginia. Recently there has been shown a disposition to let part of the old territory in Virginia come back, possibly because the Government is likely to expend more money in improvements if it holds the territory than Virgima is ever likely to do.

Gen. J. M. Wilson has approved in his official capacity a proposition to retrocede Virginia territory up to two miles of the original Virginia line of the District. This will, if agreed to, put under the jurisdiction of the United States a strip of Virginia which it is dearned by several persons to subject to a plan of extensive improvement.

PULLMAN WAGE REDUCTION.

Cut in Pay of Conductors of 20 Per Cent. in Some Cases.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—In a circular which has been posted on the walls of the Pullman sub-office at the Union Depot, a reduction in the wages of sleeping-car conductors is announced. The amount of the cut is said to be, in many cases, as much as 20 per cent. It is asserted that this reduction will place the wages of many of the oldest conductors back to the schedule at which they started.

Whether the reduction is to be made among all employes of the company or is to be applied only on some lines is a question. August W Glitzow, District Superintendent of the Pullman Company, admitted to-day that a circular ordering the cut has been issued, but would not discuss the terms or scope of the order.

THE SOLDIERS' HOME INQUIRY.

Prosecution Closes Its Case After Hearing a Few Witnesses.

Special to The New York Times.

BATH, N. Y., Jan. 18.—The prosecution of Col. Charles O. Shepard, commandant of the Soldiers' Home, rested their case to-day. Fred McConnell, a clerk in the Quartermaster's office was recalled at the opening of to-day's session, and explained the vouchers for the private bills of Col. Shepard, which were paid by the State.

The Rev. Charles N. Frost of the Presbyterian Church of Bath testified that he had seen Col. Shepard under the influence of liquor many times while he wqas at the home on official duties. E. S. Underhill said Col. Shepard went to his office and dictated an interview for publication to his stenographer in regard to the controversy then going on at the home over the appointment of Resident Chaplain. In that interview Col. Shepard said he was not a Christian but a Deist. Col. Shepard claimed he did not know that he was being interviewed.

Other witnesses swore to having seen Col. Shepard under the influence of liquor.

AN AUTOMOBILE RUNS WILD

Union Square Alarmed, Then Amused, at Strange Spectacle.

The Horseless Vehicle, First Ridding Itself of Driver and Passenger, Steers a Mad Course.

An electric automobile, driverless, dashing down Fourth Avenue, around the curve of Union Square into Fourteenth Street, finally brought to a standstill against the equestrian statue of Washington, where it continued the harsh grinding of its wheels as though in rage at having its course checked, furnished a spectacle that first alarmed and then amused a throng of people late yesterday afternoon, when the streets were most densely crowded.

The cab was owned by the New York Electric Cab Company, and operated by Walter Yarrow, a young man who lives at 896 Eighth Avenue. The vehicle was spinning down Fourth Avenue with a passenger inside yesterday afternoon at a sober rate of speed, and conducting itself as quietly as the ordinary automobile usually does. At Fifteenth Street, however, Yarrow was seen to jump straight up from his seat with a half-suppressed scream as though he had received a shock.

At the same moment the vehicle leaped forward at an accelerated speed, apparently sharing the impulse of its driver. As Yarrow came down from his upward spring, he lost his balance, and was on the point of falling from the cab. The automobile had by this time almost reached the curve of the square at Fourteenth Street. As Yarrow was about to fall he grabbed the steering rod in his effort to balance himself, turning the vehicle toward the southwest.

The effort failed him, however, and he was toppled headforemost over the board directly in front of the machine. It passed over his body and dashed ahead.

At the same time the passenger, who had the appearance of a physician, opened the door of the cab and leaped out, sprawling on the pavement. Recovering his feet, he was swallowed up in the pursuing crowd, which had collected at the rear of the vehicle as rapidly as those in its course had scattered.

The machine dashed on. It was now headed for Keith's Union Square Theatre, with a general air of determination which would have put to flight even the gorgeously attired guardians of the doors at that place. The peanut vendors along the Fourteenth Street side of the Square gathered up their wares, and carts, wheeling confusedly in all directions. Men in the pursuing mob excitedly yelled "Whoa!" and then stopped to laugh at themselves.

But almost before any one knew it, the automobile's wild career had come to an end. The statue of Washington intervened. With a "whirr" the machine dashed into the surrounding iron rails. There was a crash, and ten feet of the rail were torn away. One of the firmly planted iron corner posts was uprooted. Against the solid base of the statue, however, the vehicle came to a stop, its heavy wheels still grinding and gnashing away until the rubber tires had disappeared.

Finally one bystander got up sufficient courage to climb aboard the machine and quiet its apparatus. It was later hauled back, with a mutilated front, to the company's barns by another automobile.

Yarrow, the operator of the runaway vehicle, was removed to Bellevue Hospital, suffering from internal injuries.

40,000 MINERS MAY STRIKE.

Men in Anthracite District Said to Have Decided to Do So.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 18.—News has reached here that about 40,000 miners in the anthracite district of Pennsylvania, near Scranton and Shamokin, who have been in a restless state for some time, have decided to strike.

Delegate T. D. Hayes of the Ninth District, with headquarters at Scranton, Penn., says a strike is unavoidable, as the men have been restive for some time, and entertain a very bitter feeling toward the operators, who have declined to recognize them.

MUNICIPAL ASSEMBLY ACCUSED.

Alleged Demands for Permit for the Long Island Railroad Tunnel.

Edward F. Linton, Secretary of the Atlantic Avenue Board of Improvement of Brooklyn, said yesterday that the reason why work on the Long Island Railroad Company's proposed tunnel under the East River had not been begun was because the Municipal Assembly had not been paid to adopt the necessary resolution.

"They have not asked for money in so many words," he said, "but there have been very significant actions when the matter has been referred to which a blind man could not fail to understand. While the officials have not asked directly for money, certain persons unofficially attached have said that the resolution would not go through unless money was paid for it. The necessary resolution to permit the work was introduced in the Municipal Assembly last June and was backed up by the most important business and financial institutions in Brooklyn. For three months nothing was heard of the resolution. I am delegated by the Atlantic Avenue Commission to look after the resolution, and I went to the Municipal Assembly to see the members about it. I never ran up against such a 'frost.' I could not get a hearing. I tried to talk with individual members, and that was the most difficult thing."

President Baldwin of the Long Island Railroad said last evening that he had only just returned from a trip to the South, and was not in a position to talk about the matter. "However," he said, "if the Municipal Assembly does not take some action in the matter soon, we will know the reason why."

RURAL FREE DELIVERY.

Popularity of the Law Shown in Debate on Deficiency Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The popularity of the rural free delivery service was manifest in the House, when the deficiency of $150,000 for that service for the fiscal year was under discussion. The last Postal Appropriation bill set aside for this experiment $300,000, and it was because the actual expenses promised to be $50,000 greater, and that demands for the extension of the service were made, calling for $100,000, that the appropriation was so heartily supported. In the bill for 1900-1901 it is estimated that the appropriation will be from $800,000 to $1,000,000 for this service.

Those who have tried the rural free delivery system, particularly farmers, who were in the habit of making two or three trips to the Post Office in a week, and now have a free delivery at their homes daily, much prefer to have mail matter brought to them. Formerly they obtained a newspaper as often as they went to the Post Office; now they have a paper every day. More papers are taken, and some newspapers have systematically improved their circulation by using the free delivery service for their deliveries.

A commercial advantage reported by a Western man is that of providing the farmers with daily reports of prices of commodities, enabling them to demand something nearer the market rate for products instead of assuming that prices have remained as they were on the last trip to market.

FOR A SUCCESSOR TO PAYN.

The Governor and Mr. Platt May Select a Candidate To-morrow—Payn's Friends Confident.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 18.—Gov. Roosevelt announced to-day that he would go to New York to-morrow afternoon, and he admitted that the object of his trip was to have a talk with the leader of the State organization in regard to the Superintendency of Insurance. It is believed that at this conference the man whose name is to be sent to the Senate to succeed Louis F. Payn will be decided upon. It is said here that Messrs. Platt and Odell will submit to the Governor a list of Republicans favored by the organization for Mr. Payn's place.

Mr. Payn's friends to-night declare that if Senator Platt refuses to stand by him in the present fight it will result in the ending of a personal and political friendship which has existed for many years, and further that the Payn people will make a fight against Senator Platt with a view of driving him from his position as head of the organization. They are confident that Payn will defeat the Governor.

The situation to-night is that the Senators, or many of them, are waiting for word from Senator Platt before they commit themselves. Neither the Governor nor Mr. Payn controls enough votes in the Senate to win. Senator Platt holds the balance of power and will decide the contest which is agitating the Republican chiefs.

A new name has been added to the list of possibilities, that of Charles Davis, Surrogate of Ulster County. It is rumored to-night that the Governor has made up his mind not to send the name of ex-Lieut. Gov. Saxton to the Senate.

Those who claim to know say that when the Governor comes back from New York the question will have been finally settled, and that those Senators who owe allegiance to the organization will know what position they must take.

Senator Ellsworth informed Gov. Roosevelt to-day that it would be impossible for him to attend the sessions of the Senate next week until Wednesday. This will delay the submission by the Governor until that day at least of a candidate for State Superintendent of Insurance.

Gov. Roosevelt's Programme.

ALBANY, Jan. 18.—Gov. Roosevelt will go to New York City to-morrow and in the evening he will dine with Col. Franklin Bartlett. On Saturday morning he will breakfast with Senator Thomas C. Platt and B. B. Odell. He will take luncheon with Gen. Francis V. Greene, Capt. Alfred T. Mahan, and Gen. Avery D. Andrews.

He may return to this city on Saturday afternoon, but if he remains in New York City until evening he will attend the dinner given at the Metropolitan Club by Capt. Goddard.

MR. CARNEGIE TO YOUNG MEN.

Tells of the Advantages of Poverty and How He Started on His Successful Career.

Andrew Carnegie was the principal guest and speaker at a social evening of the Young Men's Bible Class of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church last evening, when he spoke on "Stepping Stones to Success in Business." Nearly every seat in the church parlors was occupied, many of them by men no longer young, when Mr. Carnegie arrived in the same carriage with John D. Rockefeller.

Mr. Carnegie pointed most of his remarks at Mr. Rockefeller, and told his hearers that that gentleman was in sore need of partners. He said in part:

"Before I had any stepping stones I had the most magnificent foundation for them. I was born to the blessed heritage of poverty. I hope I speak to poor young men. I hope the burden of riches has not been laid upon any of you at your time of life. When it is laid upon a young man, and, notwithstanding all its great temptations, he acts his part well, he is entitled to double honor. He is the very salt of the earth.

"We hear a good deal in these days about poverty—oh, abolish poverty! But the saddest day that civilization ever saw will be that in which poverty doesn't rear its way. The poor, thank God, we will always have with us. God doesn't call His great sons from the palace. The first thing that a young man can do as a stepping stone is to resolve to do more than his duty. If he doesn't do that he is not in the race."

Mr. Carnegie said he considered that his real start in life was when as a telegraph operator on the Pennsylvania Railroad the road was tied up by an accident and he took the responsibility of giving train orders and straightening out the tangle, although for days he feared it would cost him his position. "The best thing, boys, that you can do," he exclaimed, "is to get a chance to contradict your employer and fight it out with him. He'll tell his wife about it—and maybe she's got a daughter." This little hint caused much laughter.

Mr. Carnegie spoke of "this awful war, this disgraceful massacre that is going on in the Transvaal," as having a great effect on the business world, and said that the worst work a man could put himself to was shooting men. "You should never go abroad to do it," he said. "As for a man who pursues wealth or fame as an end, his breast will be filled with poisoned arrows as he grows older, older, older. The real advantage of wealth is that it enables you to do so much for others—not in charity, for $950 out of every $1,000 spent in that way had better be thrown into the sea. Don't help the submerged tenth, help the struggling tenth."

After his address Mr. Carnegie was made the central figure of an informal reception.

PREFER CAR SHOPS TO PRISON.

Sing Sing People Hope the Vanderbilts Will Buy the Property.

SING SING, Jan. 18.—It is reported that the Vanderbilts are negotiating to purchase Sing Sing Prison to turn it into shops for the New York Central Railroad. Similar negotiations which have taken place in the past came to nothing, but it is said the railroad company is anxious to get the property, which lies along the railroad and has a fine water front.

The people of the village hope the report is true, and that the prison will be removed to some other place. Car shops would be regarded as a decided advantage to the place, while the location of the prison has retarded the growth of the town.

WOMAN LAWYERS BARRED.

Cannot Practice in Delaware, Where All Officers Must Be Voters.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 18.—The State Supreme Court, at Dover, to-day ruled that no woman lawyer can practice her profession in this State. Horace C. Knowles asked that Mrs. Carrie B. Killgore, the well-known attorney of Philadelphia, be allowed to appear with him in a suit. Chancellor Nicholson, for the court, replied that while they would like to extend every courtesy to attorneys from a sister State, the request could not be granted because of a provision of the new Constitution.

That instrument provides that officers of the State shall be voters, and the lawyers have interpreted this to mean that attorneys are officers of the court, and must therefore be males. Mrs. Killgore was very indignant over the decision and will call it to the attention of the Philadelphia courts.

BULLER ATTACKS THE BOER FLANK

Rumored that Hard Fighting Has Already Taken Place.

MANY SAID TO BE WOUNDED

An Official Report Confirms the Crossing of the Tugela River.

The British War Office Discredits a Cape Town Rumor that Ladysmith Has Been Relieved.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The War Office has issued the following:

"From Buller, Spearman's Camp, Jan. 18.

"'One field artillery, howitzer battery, and Lyttleton's Brigade are across the Tugela at Potgieter's Drift. The enemy's position is being bombarded by us.

"'Five miles higher up Warren has crossed the river by a pontoon 85 yards long. He hopes his force will, by evening, have advanced five miles from the river to his right front. The enemy is busily intrenching.'"

The following dispatch from Gen. Roberts, dated Cape Town, was also given out:

"I have received a telegram from Gen. Buller stating that one brigade and a howitzer battery have crossed the Tugela River at Potgieter's Drift.

"Five miles further west, at Trichard's Drift, Gen. Warren has thrown a pontoon bridge over the river. By this part of his force crossed yesterday. The remainder is expected by this morning to be on the north bank. Warren hopes he will be able to turn the enemy's position, which five miles off to his right front is being strongly intrenched.

Military critics in affiliation with the War Office consider that the expected battle along the wide arc south and west of Ladysmith can hardly be delayed beyond to-day.

From Durban comes the following report:

"Advices from Potgieter's Drift, dated yesterday, (Tuesday,) say that Sir Charles Warren has arrived within seventeen miles of Ladysmith and that British wounded are arriving at Mool River field hospital by every train from the front, indicating that there has already been severe fighting.

"Neither report has yet been confirmed."

Taken all in all, the whole tenor of the news points to Gen. Buller's second advance having begun with good prospects of success. But it is generally recognized that with an enemy so resourceful as the Boers have proved themselves to be, it is idle to indulge in overconfidence.

The officials of the War Office here are satisfied that the tide has turned, and that news of a more hopeful character from a British point of view will hereafter be the rule instead of the exception. That the British advance in a northeastwardly direction will be fiercely resisted is fully anticipated. The Boer strength is probably superior to the British, and the dispatches show the burghers occupy strong positions.

There is some doubt as to whether the Sproenkop occupied by Gen. Warren is identical with Spionkop. If so, the British are within a few miles of Acton Homes, the scene of the earlier, conflicts between Gen. White's forces and the invading Free Staters, whence there is a good road direct to Ladysmith.

While Gen. Warren's force was crossing the Tugela River the Boers occupied a thickly wooded plantation a mile north of the river and sent several volleys into the advance guard. The British replied and the artillery the enemy. The column advanced to Mount Alice, facing the enemy's mountain fortress.

The Boers had been at Potgieter's Drift the previous day, but a body of South African Horse swam the stream under fire and brought over the pont from the Boers' side.

The Boers were evidently surprised at the appearance of the British on the scene. A large camp could be seen on Tugela Heights, facing Mount Alice, but the enemy quickly struck camp and cleared off into the mountains. A buggy was seen leaving for the hills on the right, presumably with Gen. Joubert or some other Commandant.

Gen. Buller took up his quarters in a pleasantly situated farmhouse belonging to Martinius Pretorius, who had disappeared.

On Friday a loud explosion was heard. Subsequently it was found that the Boers had destroyed a bridge under construction seven miles above Potgieter's Drift.

Gen. Buller has issued a spirited appeal and instruction to the forces, beginning:

"We are going to the relief of our comrades in Ladysmith. There will be no turning back."

The order proceeds to advise the men, when they charge, regarding the conditions under which they should receive the surrender of any of the enemy. It also warns them that the Boers are treacherous in the use of the white flag.

This order has been received with enthusiasm in every camp.

The march was very trying, but the troops are now encamped amid very pleasant surroundings. Their health is excellent, and all are confident.

SPEARMAN'S FARM, Natal, Jan. 18.—Gen. Lyttleton's brigade, with a howitzer battery, crossed the Tugela River at Potgieter's Drift on Tuesday, Jan. 16. The water rose above the waists of the men. The Boers fired two shots and then recalled their forces to the trenches, the passage being uninterrupted.

The British advanced in skirmishing order, and the small kopjes on the summits were occupied by 6:30 P. M. During the night it rained heavily.

Yesterday (Wednesday) the Boer trenches were vigorously shelled in front of Mount Alice, while the British remained in possession of the kopjes and plain. Heavy mists enveloped the hills, but the naval guns and the howitzer battery made good practice, thoroughly searching the trenches. On the Boer right a breach was made in a sand bag emplacement, where it is supposed Boer guns had been placed.

The cannonade was heavy and continuous, and the Boers were observed leaving the trenches in small parties. The hill facing the British position was shelled next.

Gen. Warren has forced a passage of the Tugela seven miles to the left.

BRITISH LOSS TO DATE, 7,987.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The British losses in killed, wounded, and captured up to date, are 7,987 officers and men. A

Sir William MacCormac, in The Lancet, says that of the 300 wounded in the hospitals visited by him only 8 had been hit by shells.

AUSTRALIANS IN AN AMBUSH.

RENSBURG, Cape Colony, Jan. 17.—A patrol composed of sixteen men of the New South Wales Lancers and South Australians was ambushed yesterday by the Boers. This morning a patrol visited the scene of the fight and found one dead Australian and one wounded man. A number of dead Boer horses also were found, showing that the Australians made a gallant fight before surrendering.

It appears that when the Australians encountered the first body of Boers and found their retreat cut off they galloped for a nearby kopje, hoping to beat off the Boers, but on arriving they found another force of burghers concealed there.

Eight of the Australians returned to camp later. The rest of them were captured.

Oom Paul Asks for Mediation?

NAPLES, Jan. 18.—Charles E. Macrum, former United States Consul at Pretoria, who left Lorenzo Marques on Dec. 18, bound for New York, landed here to-day.

It is reported that he bears a letter from President Krüger to President McKinley, asking the latter to mediate between the Transvaal and Great Britain.

CABINET TO STAND AS A UNIT.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Sir Matthew White-Ridley, the Home Secretary, speaking at Blackpool this evening, said:

"On behalf of my colleagues and myself I would say that we all share the full responsibility, for the Cabinet, like the nation, has been united from the beginning. There is no doubt that when the proper time comes for the Cabinet to justify its course, the justification will be sufficiently ample.

"What gives me the most pleasure is the determination of the country, no less than the Government, that, having a quarrel forced upon us, we must bring it to a successful issue.

"It is not the business of the press to criticise the actions of our gallant Generals in the field. There is none of them who does not possess the full confidence of the country and the Government."

MARLBOROUGH MADE A CAPTAIN.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The War Office announces the appointment of the Duke of Marlborough as a staff Captain in connection with the Imperial Yeomanry, being organized for service in South Africa.

It is further announced that next week will be embarked 72 guns, 3,710 men, and 2,210 horses. This is the largest consignment of artillery ever sent abroad. The War Office invites 500 volunteers to form a sharpshooters' battalion of yeomanry.

DANGER IN DUTCH DISLOYALTY.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The Cape Town correspondent of The Times, discussing Afrikander disloyalty, says:

"I believe the sympathy of every Dutchman in South Africa is with the two republics, and that a general rising is still quite possible. However, there is nothing to implicate the Bond Party as a whole in an officially organized conspiracy against the imperial Government, although the Bond leaders have winked at or pandered to sedition in order to preserve their popularity.

"The British failures and the appearance of the Boers on British territory have fomented rebellion; but even now a decisive British victory would prevent its further spread."

This correspondent testifies to the value of the services rendered by Mr. Schreiner, the Cape Premier, in an embarrassing position. He speaks less highly of Mr. Hofmeyr, the real leader of the Bond party, and severely condemns the Dutch press of the colony, which, he says, "is doing its utmost, while keeping on the windy side of the law, to promote rebellion and to envenom racial antagonism."

CRADDOCK, Cape Colony, Jan. 18.—On Saturday, Jan. 13, the Boers, with a commando of colonial rebels, occupied Prieska, a village on the Orange River, about 107 miles northwest of De Aar.

KIPLING TO GO TO CAPE TOWN.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Mr. Rudyard Kipling and his family will sail for Cape Town tomorrow.

Mr. Kipling has written the following characteristic letter to the British Guiana Branch of the Navy League, in recognition of a contribution to the war fund:

"Bravo, British Guiana! Seeing what they have had to contend with lately in the sugar line, they have done uncommonly well. Please convey to them my best thanks—first, as Vice President of the league; second, as perpetrator of 'The Absent-Minded Beggar,' and, third, as a fellow-contributor to the big jackpot which we are boiling up on Thomas's behalf. Have you seen Brazil and Trinidad come into the game?"

TO BUY AMERICAN HORSES.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 18.—From a source which has hitherto proved trustworthy it is learned that Great Britain will soon begin the purchase of cavalry horses in this country. The British cavalry is now greatly in need of horses, and is unable to procure the kind desired to advantage anywhere except in the United States. How many horses they will buy cannot be estimated, since, in addition to the needs of the regular cavalry organization, the oft-repeated suggestion that mounted infantry in the Transvaal would prove highly effective is believed to have borne fruit at the War Office and improvements in this direction decided upon. If this is true, the number of horses required will be very large. It is also learned that only the small Western horses will be purchased. The shipments are to be made from New Orleans in the same manner as the shipments of mules now being made to South Africa.

The officer who is to have charge of the purchases has arrived and is now at the St. Charles Hotel. He is Lieut. Col. Stevens of the Indian cavalry service, and his mission is entirely apart from that of the other officers, who are still buying mules. Speaking of the matter to-day, Col. Stevens said that he is awaiting orders from the War Office. It is understood, however, that the purchase of the horses will be commenced within a few days. So far the British Government has spent between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000 for Southern and Western mules. There are three transports here now waiting to be loaded with them, and more are coming.

Canada Has Many Volunteers.

HALIFAX, N. S., Jan. 18.—Dr. Borden, Minister of Militia, said to-night a sufficient number of Canadians had already volunteered to raise a force of 10,000 for service in South Africa. Officers enough for an army of 25,000 men had sent in applications for active service.

Another Boer Resolution Submitted.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—In the Senate to-day Mr. Allen (Pop., Neb.), offered a resolution directing the Secretary of State to inform the Senate if any person had been accredited from the Transvaal to the United States Government in any capacity, and if such person were officially accepted and recognized, and if not, why not. Objection was made to immediate consideration of the resolution, and it went over under the rules.

GERMAN PRESS IS PACIFIED.

Excitement Over the Recent Seizures by Great Britain Is Now Fast Dying Out.

BERLIN, Jan. 18.—The German press adopts a more quiet tone regarding the seizures of German vessels by British warships, printing with satisfaction extracts of a similar tenor from London papers. Owing to the prospect of a speedy settlement, satisfactory to Germany, to-morrow's interpellation is expected to be calm and non-sensational.

The Berliner Tageblatt is informed from St. Petersburg that Russian statemen are trying to get the support of the French Cabinet for calling an international congress to revise maritime law and to clarify the idea of contraband.

The owners of the Hans Wagner, which was stopped in South African waters on Dec. 19 by the British gunboat Fearless, and ordered to go to Port Elizabeth to unload, were informed that the bark would be released as soon as the search of her cargo had been completed, assuming that no contraband was found.

The papers print a Lisbon despatch announcing that many Portuguese shippers have revoked contracts by the German East African Line, owing to the seizures. They point out that the effect of this is to favor the competing French line, which has not been molested.

LOCATING THE SEIZED FLOUR.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Mr. Choate is prosecuting his efforts to learn just where the provisions are that were seized off Delagoa Bay on the Mashona, the Maria, and the Beatrice. He has reported that the goods on the Maria are in the Custom House at Durban subject to the disposition of the owners. The goods carried on the Mashona are believed to be still on board that ship at Cape Town, but owing to imperfections in the ship's papers it has not yet been possible to clear up the facts in that case. The Beatrice is at East London, and the British Government is trying to learn from its officers the status of the cargo.

It is authoritatively stated that there is no difference whatever between the Governments of the United States and Great Britain as to the legal aspects of the seizures of goods in these three cases. The British Government has admitted without reserve that these goods were not liable to seizure. That has given complete satisfaction to the State Department. It does not follow that the department accepts as binding the view of the British Government as to the conditions under which flour and food stuffs may become contraband, but the department prefers to follow the usual rule of international law and avoid passing on hypothetical cases and contenting itself with the full acceptance of its views by the British Government in the present instance.

RUTGERS LEAGUE MEETING.

At the educational conference of the Rutgers League of New York held yesterday in Genealogical Hall, 226 West Fifty-eighth Street, Prof. D. S. Martin of the Presbyterian College for Women, Columbia, S. C., was the principal speaker.

"The small college," said Prof. Martin, "brings education home to rural communities, and its commencement interests a whole countryside. The association between professors and students is closer, and the general atmosphere in a small college is different from that of a university. In the large institution the individual is lost in the mass, and college spirit expresses itself merely in yells. The small college is the hope of the country. In the more advanced grade of education the large university is necessary."

Passing to the subject of higher education for women, the speaker said that it was not a modern idea.

"A good deal of it existed among the present grandmothers and great-grandmothers. The wives and daughters of the cultured men of Colonial days were cultured women, but it was not a culture gathered in institutions.

"New York State was practically the first State in which educational institutions for women were founded."

Prof. Martin expressed himself as being opposed to co-education and to that spirit of woman's college life that found expression in the adoption of college yells and gowns.

Chancellor MacCracken of New York University took exception to Prof. Martin's remark concerning gowns.

"I like the idea of gowns," said he, "and I fail to notice that the fact that my daughter wore one in her classroom made her like pretty dresses for other occasions than the classroom any the less. It places all upon a footing of equality in the classroom, and is to be desired upon that account."

The Rev. Dr. David G. Wylie, pastor of the Scotch Presbyterian Church, pleaded for the need of more religious instruction in public institutions.

The Rev. Leighton Williams expressed the hope that the friends of the former Rutgers Female Institute would ultimately secure the financial backing necessary for the reopening of the school.

MISTAKEN FOR HIGHWAYMAN.

Special to The New York Times.

ASHTABULA, Ohio, Jan. 18.—In a tunnel under the Lake Shore Railroad near Grand River, at Painesville, at an early hour this morning, three men met J. D. Connell, the Marshal of that town, returning home in his carriage. According to the reports of the occurrence, one of the men took hold of the horse's head and demanded the driver to stop.

Mr. Connell, who is also a candidate for the office of Sheriff of Lake County, thought that the men were highwaymen, and, fearing for his safety, he fired his gun. One of the men fell to the ground and died in a few minutes. It was then found that the man who had been shot was William Weinbrener, a prominent citizen of Painesville. His home is but a few rods distant from the tunnel. The other two men are also prominent. They claim that they had no intention of holding up Marshall Connell. Connell claims that in the dark he was unable to recognize them.

Fire in Shaker Village.

CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 18.—Shaker Village, at East Canterbury, was visited by fire this afternoon, entailing a loss of $20,000, with no insurance. The fire started in a large barn of the Middle family, which was destroyed, as were also a large brick dwelling house, a tool house, and twenty-three head of cattle. The cause of the fire is unknown. The barn where the fire was discovered was one of the largest owned by the Shaker community.

Killed His Wife for a Burglar.

HILLSBOROUGH, Ill., Jan. 18.—Edward Moore, an employe of the Hillsborough Coal Company, mistook his wife, Rose, for a burglar last night and killed her. Moore and a friend named Lannigan were playing checkers. Moore says he thought his wife had retired. Hearing a noise at the kitchen door, he entered his wife's bedroom, not noticing her absence, secured his revolver, and, seeing a form in the kitchen, fired, the ball entering the brain of his wife.

HOLLAND SOCIETY DINNER

Transvaal War Gives a Text for Some Speakers.

MR. WISE PRAISES BOERS

Justice Gildersleeve Rebukes Those Who Would Cast Slurs Upon the City of Their Homes.

Nearly 400 members and guests sat at table at the fifteenth annual dinner of the Holland Society of New York, held at the Waldorf-Astoria last night, in the grand ball room, which was decorated with the American and Dutch colors, with the arms of the society conspicuously displayed on an orange banner in rear of the Chairman. Many members of the society wore orange-colored ties. Tunis G. Bergen, President of the society, presided. On his right was Justice Henry A. Gildersleeve; on his left ex-Justice Augustus Van Wyck.

The other guests at the table of honor were George Gray Ward of St. George's Society, John R. Planten, Consul General of Holland; Robert B. Roosevelt, William E. Dodge, New England Society; Senator C. P. Vedder, Frederick de Peyster Foster, St. Nicholas Society; Frederick J. de Peyster, Society of Colonial Wars; Julien T. Davies, St. David's Society; Dr. D. B. St. John Rodss, Justice Henry R. Beekman, Dr. A. Vanderveer, John S. Wise, Justice Charles H. Truax, Commissioner of Charities John W. Keller, Andrew McLean, Louis Wiley, Society of the Genesee; Milton I. Southard, Ohio Society; William M. Polk, Southern Society; ex-Judge George M. Van Hoesen, Justice P. Henry Dugro, and Justice James A. O'Gorman, Friendly Sons of St. Patrick. Others present included Montagu White, Consul General of the Transvaal in London; Eugene Van Schaick, Dr. H. R. Vedder, D. H. Houghtaling, Albert V. B. Voorhees, Jr., H. W. Van Wagenen, S. D. Coykendall, A. T. Clearwater, Arthur H. Van Brunt, John R. Van Wormer, Warner Van Norden, the Rev. J. Howard Suydam, Augustus Rapelye, William H. Vredenburgh, John H. Starin, Gen. Warren M. Healey, Henry L. Boogert, Eugene T. Van Valin, George W. Van Siclen, M. Roosevelt Schuyler, and Peter F. Meyer.

The menu was prepared on an elaborate scale. One of the cards had the menu in Dutch, with the programme of the speeches, and bore a portrait of William of Nassau on the back. The orchestra, between the speeches, played Dutch patriotic airs.

President Tunis G. Bergen, in his introductory speech, made a reference to the war in South Africa, and the theme was taken up by nearly all the speakers. Said President Bergen:

"Of course, on this occasion, I do not wish to claim the earth for the Dutch. Still wherever the Dutch do touch the earth they like to stay. There they generally do stay until they choose to move. You may coax them and they will hustle. But if you try to drive them you can't get a move on them.

"It has lately been discovered by one of the greatest empires that sometimes you can't make a few Dutch move on. But, no, I won't enter upon this subject in the presence of my old friend, the President of the St. George's Society, for I like the real thing in an Englishman. But in his presence I am willing to say I would rather stroke the handsome mane of the British Hon than pull his royal tail.

"To-night, however, let us see the old vision of the little land of the mighty few. We see again those strong-willed men whose eyes looked you straight, and whose hands gripped you true! And by the hearthstones we see again the broad benignant brows of those grand dames of ours where love and purity and tender mercy sat on their throne! Oh, you men from Jersey hills and meadows and the Catskills, from the Hackensack, the Rondout, the Mohawk, from Long Island's bays and shores, from Hudson's mighty river—will you forget? [Cries of "No, never!"] No, by the God of our fathers and these colors that float above us!—we shall remember!" [Applause.]

Justice Gildersleeve, in responding to the toast "Nieuw Amsterdam the Bud, New York the Full-Blown Flower," gave some facts and reasons that warranted a New Yorker in feeling proud at being able to say, "I am a resident of the metropolis of the world," and incidentally he paid a tribute to the Rapid Transit Commissioners.

"I am permitted to name but a few of the advantages, objects, incidents, and sentiments that appeal to the pride of loyal New Yorkers," he said. "Bearing these things in mind, should not the citizen of our municipality, living under laws that he has had a voice in making, when he thinks something has gone wrong confidently file his complaint with the proper tribunal and seek without misgivings those remedies the constitution and laws are ample to give? When has a charge of corruption or an accusation of crime been made, supported by competent evidence, where the guilty went unwhipped of justice? The Grand Juries before entering upon their duties solemnly swear to present no person from envy, hatred, or malice, nor to leave any one unpresented through fear, favor, affection, or reward, or hope thereof, but to present all things truly, according to the best of their understanding. What does this imply? Honest thought and honest action, the beacon lights that guide men to prosperity and happiness and municipalities to wealth, power, and glory.

"It is with these principles before them that our courts undertake the responsibility of administering the civil and criminal laws. By this method we get the benefit of good laws, and pernicious laws are soon abolished. A man accomplishes no good by villifying and reviling his fellow-citizens. If our municipal home needs cleaning, the law provides a way. Perfection should not be expected in any municipal government. Let those who love New York and are proud of its history thank God that its defamers are few and unpotential."

John S. Wise spoke to the toast of "Dutch Civilization." Alluding to the South African trouble, he said:

"I have seen the little fellow tackle the big fellow before, and I know the result. I feel that in this gallant fight the ultimate verdict may be like that in the case of the Western Indian who lassoed a locomotive. While he was being whirled through the air at the rate of forty miles an hour the engineer put his head out and remarked, 'Well, I admire yer pluck, but you've got darned poor judgment.'"

He lauded the intelligence, kindness, catholicism, and breadth of view with which, he said, the Dutch had for seventy-five years administered their colonies in Java, and he submitted that their methods ought to be followed in dealing with the Filipinos.

Mr. Wise said he grieved to see the sacrifice of life that was going on in South Africa. The nobleness and bravery with which the Boers fought, the unbragging way in which they won their victories, appealed to him, and their whole demeanor recalled irresistibly to his mind the verses of Kipling's "Recessional."

Commissioner of Charities John W. Keller responded to the toast of "The True American," and Andrew McLean spoke briefly in eulogy of "Breukelen" (Brooklyn).

IRISHMEN CHEER THE BOERS.

Hundreds of Diners at Sherry's Applaud Sentiments of Hostility to Great Britain.

Pro-Boer sentiments met with a rousing reception at the annual dinner of the American-Irish Historical Society held at Sherry's last night. There were several hundred of the members present, and the speechmaking after the banquet began so late that several of the addresses had to be cut from the programme. There were no set toasts. A feature of the evening's proceedings was the harp playing of Miss Sullivan, a daughter of the late Lord Mayor of Dublin. The entire company rose after her playing and drank her health.

Thomas J. Gargan of Boston, the President General of the society, presided, and after an introductory speech, he introduced as the first speaker Senator Thomas H. Carter of Montana. Mr. Carter aroused the first enthusiasm of the evening by saying that it had become the fashion to call the people of this country an Anglo-Saxon race, but the great achievements of the century were not the results of puny Anglo-Saxon endeavor.

Mr. Gargan next introduced George W. Van Siclen of the Holland Society, and when he mentioned the Transvaal the members rose and cheered him to the echo. Mr. Van Siclen announced his intention of speaking plainly, which evidently met with the approval of his hearers. He said that he was glad that what had been said and what was to be said was not controlled by British sentiment or British gold, and that it was a shame that New York, the greatest city of the New World, was dominated by British feeling.

"It makes me sick," said Mr. Van Siclen, "to see the American descendants of Dutch and French ancestors toadying to that damned British crowd. That's plain talk, but I hope you will forgive it. [Applause.] I won't take off my hat to them, and I don't think you will. Don't let us do it." [Applause.]

The speaker then detached the Boer flag that he had worn in his button hole and, waving it aloft to great applause, told his auditors to note how it was made up of a combination of the colors of their country, to which was added "the green of eternal hope and of Ireland." He spoke at length on what he termed the "humbug of British friendship for America."

Ex-Gov. Waller of Connecticut and Justice Washope Lynn also spoke, the latter wishing Queen Victoria good luck on what her troops were getting in Africa.

Telegrams of regret were received from Gov. Roosevelt, who said he hoped the society would find it possible to hold a meeting in Albany so that he could have the pleasure of entertaining the members at the Executive Mansion; from Vice President John D. Crimmins, Patrick A. Collins of Boston, and ex-Assistant Secretary of the Navy McAdoo.

At a business meeting that preceded the dinner, reports were read showing the prosperous condition of the society, which now has branches in every State in the Union, and the following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year: President General—Thomas J. Gargan, Boston; Vice President General—John D. Crimmins, New York; Secretary General—Thomas Hamilton Murray, Woonsocket, R. I.; Treasurer General—John C. Linehan, Concord, N. H.; Librarian and Archivist—Thomas B. Lawler, New York.

HUNDRED YEAR CLUB MEETS.

About sixty members of the Hundred Year Club met last night at Tuxedo Hall, Madison Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, and discussed the newest wrinkles in the art of living to a ripe old age. One young woman suggested as a cure for consumption a treatment of late hours and late suppers, and in fact a general disregard for all the rules generally observed by invalids. "If a person finds that he has inherited consumption," she said, "he shouldn't think about it at all. He shouldn't stay in bed but should get up, run around at night, eat lobster salad and Welsh rabbits for supper, and enjoy life generally. That's the only way of curing it."

The announcement of the death of Frank H. Leavenworth of Detroit, Mich., one of the Councilors at Large of the society, caused general regret. The sorrow caused by the loss of an associate was heightened by the knowledge that a prominent member of the club had failed signally in his ambition to become a centenarian.

Dr. G. H. Patchin read a paper advocating the use of gymnasium exercise as an aid to medical treatment. Frankland Jannus followed this with a speech against the evils of modern cooking.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: President—Dr. H. W. Wiley; Vice President—Theodore Sutro; Historian—Mrs. L. W. Gerstle; Secretary—G. W. Smith; Treasurer—G. W. Dithridge; Assistant Secretary—Frankland Jannus. Directors—Dr. Carleton Simon, Dr. W. R. Davidson, Mrs. Almon Kinsley, and Mrs. Anna M. Lawson.

AMERICAN RAILWAY IN CHINA.

Clarence Cary of Cary & Whitridge, the counsel for the American China Development Company, of which the late Senator Calvin S. Brice was a moving spirit, has recently returned to this city, after an absence of some months in China. He has been engaged at Shanghai, Peking, and elsewhere in conference with Chinese officials, with a view to having the contract which was made between the company and the Chinese Minister at Washington put into more workable shape, as well as to adjusting certain outstanding rights in China. It is believed that work on the railway from Canton to Han-Kow, which the company is to construct, and which will be, with its branches, some 950 miles long, will soon be begun.

"The benefits to American trade which will accrue by reason of this railway," said Mr. Cary, "will be very great. Most of the materials for its construction will have to be bought in America, and the railway will itself keep the door open to American commerce."

WOMAN AFIRE IN STREET.

Mrs. Teresa Goodman, thirty-five years old, was fatally burned at her home, 453 Chestnut Street, Brooklyn, yesterday morning, and died in an ambulance that was taking her to St. Mary's Hospital. Her husband, Charles, and her eldest son are employed in the Brooklyn Navy Yard. While she was raking the fire in a front room a red-hot coal dropped unnoticed on the carpet at her feet. The burning carpet set Mrs. Goodman's wrapper afire. She screamed for help and ran into the street.

After the woman had gone 50 feet she fell unconscious on the sidewalk outside the residence of Charles Bickel, 457 Chestnut Street. He ran out and threw blankets over her.

Bickel and several other neighbors ran into the Goodman house, which was on fire, and rescued three children. Bickel then rang a fire alarm. The firemen quickly put out the flames. The damage to the house was less than $100, and to the furniture less than $50.

Prof. Amos G. Warner Dead.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 18.—Prof. Amos Griswold Warner, Professor of Applied Economics at Leland Stanford Junior University, is dead. He was born at Elkader, Iowa, Dec. 21, 1861, and was graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1885. Three years later the degree of Ph. D. was granted to him by Johns Hopkins University. From 1887 to 1889 he was general agent of the Charity Organization Society of Baltimore. From 1889 to 1891 he was a lecturer on economics at the University of Nebraska, and in the latter year was appointed Superintendent of Charities in the District of Columbia. In 1893 he was appointed to the professorship in Leland Stanford Junior University which he held up to his death. He was the author of "American Charities" and other works on economic subjects.

Woman Found Dead in Air Shaft.

Mrs. Milfred Farrell, seventy years old, was found at the bottom of the airshaft of her home, 139 East One Hundred and Tenth Street, last night, dead. The woman lived with her husband and two sons on the fifth floor of the building. Late last night the janitress was awakened by a peculiar noise. She investigated and discovered the body of Mrs. Farrell. Policeman Smith of the East One Hundred and Fourth Street Station aroused the Farrells, who were all asleep, and informed them of the accident. An investigation showed that a window opening on the shaft had been raised. The family believe that the woman fell asleep and accidentally rolled out of the window.

A Smallpox Epidemic in Texas.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 18.—Dispatches from Houston say smallpox is prevalent in many parts of Texas and in the Indian Territory. There have been a number of infected points in Texas since December, 1898, and the disease has appeared in nearly every section of the State. The first infection and several subsequent cases were traced to Sedalia, Mo. There have as yet been but few deaths in the infected regions, but a general quarantine is threatened again at the territory by north Texas towns.

Daniel Doody Gets Bail.

Daniel Doody, the contractor who was indicted for perjury by the Kings County Grand Jury on Wednesday in connection with the City Works trials in Brooklyn, was yesterday released on bail of $5,000, furnished by Alexander G. Calder, a builder of 420 Eighth Street, and John Murphy, a granite dealer of 20 De Sales Place.

Boston Brokers' Accounts Attached.

BOSTON, Jan. 18.—The accounts of the brokerage firm of Clark & Coolidge in various brokerage offices were attached to-day in a suit brought by E. C. Hovey, assignee for Dillaway & Starr, to recover any equities in Clark and Coolidge accounts. The bill in equity asks for the appointment of a receiver for Messrs. Clark & Coolidge.

Russia to Lend Korea $12,000,000?

LONDON, Jan. 19.—A dispatch from Shanghai says: "It is reported here that an agreement has been concluded under which Russia will lend Korea $12,000,000, of which $5,000,000 will be paid immediately. Korea having unsuccessfully applied to Japan for a loan."

GIFTS TO FLOWER HOSPITAL.

Widow and Daughter of Roswell P. Flower Present $100,000 Each to the Institution He Founded.

Flower Hospital has just become richer by $200,000 through the generosity of Mrs. Roswell P. Flower and Mrs. Emma Flower Taylor, her daughter, each of whom has presented $100,000 to the institution on the sole condition that the name Flower Hospital shall be retained in perpetuity. In addition, a legacy of $5,000 was received yesterday from the estate of Miss Ray.

Dr. William Tod Helmuth, Dean of the Faculty of the college and senior surgeon of the hospital, said yesterday that the money now in possession of the Trustees would enable the hospital to carry out in the near future a scheme for the addition to the institution of a school for nurses and a new dispensary, the need of which is badly felt. The hospital, both in the medical and surgical sections, is so crowded that large numbers of applicants for beds have to be turned away.

"The Flower Hospital," said Dr. Helmuth, "not only does an immense charitable work among the poor of New York, but also renders important service in the matter of instruction to the medical classes of the college, and thus accomplishes the utmost good that can be expected from hospital work."

The hospital was founded in 1889 by Roswell P. Flower, who gave it an endowment fund of $65,000. This was supplemented by W. B. Ogden with a gift of over $70,000. Henry R. Kunhardt constructed a men's ward in the medical section of the building, which received the title of the Kunhardt Ward, and E. C. Benedict came forward to furnish a woman's ward. Over $55,080 has been given to endow beds in the institution. Dr. Timothy F. Allen is President of the Board of Trustees, which includes James M. Cannon, F. M. De Voe, Anson R. Flower, James McLean, Justice Rufus B. Cowing, Wheaton B. Kunhardt, and Henry Kearney.

DIED WITH RELIEF AT HAND.

Comenseu, Fearing His Lodge Would Refuse His Appeal for Aid, Took a Poisonous Acid.

After looking vainly for work for two months Oscar Comenseu, thirty-five years old, a bookkeeper of 410 Washington Street, Hoboken, committed suicide last evening. He had a wife and three young children, and it is said that when he left home yesterday morning he declared that he would not return again empty-handed, as he had been doing every night for weeks. After vainly trying to obtain employment at his regular occupation, he had tried to get work as a common laborer, but his physical unfitness prevented.

Yesterday he tramped the city looking for a job, but could find nothing to do. Last night Mount Sinai Lodge, a Hebrew benevolent society, to which Comenseu belonged, met in Atlantic Hall, at 26 Delancey Street. The disheartened bookkeeper decided to use his last resource by going to his lodge brothers, stating his case and asking them for help. He attended the meeting, and when the proper order of business came he took the floor and told of his plight.

"I would not ask you for help, but I and my children are starving," he told the members of the lodge. Several were moved to tears by his appeal, and one member moved that the rules be suspended and that the application be granted. This would have been carried but for a constitutional provision making it impossible. The Chairman asked the applicant to step into the ante-room until his case could be considered. Comenseu did so, several of the members assuring him that he would receive aid.

There was a small peep hole in the door shutting the lodge room from the one where Comenseu waited. Listening through this he evidently heard something that discouraged him. What was said the lodge members would not say. In the midst of their discussion they heard the sound of a body falling in the ante-room, and a groan. Several at once rushed to the door. Comenseu, believing that his application was about to be refused, had swallowed three ounces of carbolic acid. He died in a few minutes.

The President of the lodge said it was Comenseu's imagination that led to his act. He had just been ready, he said, to ask for the vote, and the application would have been granted unanimously.

TO COMPETE WITH MATCH TRUST.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Negotiations are under way by which the National Match Company, another concern in opposition to the Match Trust, will open its first factory in Evanston, Ill., early in March. The most modern machines, on which the American and foreign rights have been purchased outright, will be installed, and the first output will average 160,000 boxes a day.

Plans for immediate extension have been perfected, and within the year three more plants, it is stated, will be established in the Middle West. Patents on improved box-making apparatus also have been secured, and a 400-acre tract of timber land in Georgia purchased. Boston capital is heavily represented in the new competitor.

FIGHTING THE TOBACCO TRUST.

RALEIGH, N. C., Jan. 18.—The tobacco growers of North Carolina, in State Convention to-day, adopted an agreement whereby they are not to sell the American Tobacco Company a pound of their leaf tobacco for five years.

The contract, in part, is as follows:

"We agree to enter into a contract with J. F. Jordan and his associates to sell to them our tobacco raised during the next five years at an advance of not less than 15 per cent. over the prices of the same grade of tobacco during the last five years, the said price to be fixed by a commission.

"And we further recommend for our mutual benefit that the farmers of North Carolina reduce their crop at least 25 per cent. below the past year's production. We invite the co-operation of Virginia, South Carolina, and other sections which grow bright leaf tobacco."

This contract will be submitted to individual farmers for approval. When 90 per cent. of them have agreed to it, another State Convention will be held. The final contract then adopted will also be referred back to the individual farmer. If signed by 90 per cent. of them it will be binding and become operative at once.

An effort is being made to arrange a joint convention of North Carolina and Virginia tobacco men with a view to securing the co-operation of all tobacco growers in those States.

PROTEST AGAINST FIRE HOUSE.

A delegation of property owners from West Ninety-second Street and a committee from the West End Association called on Fire Commissioner Scannell yesterday to petition him not to establish a fire house in West Ninety-second Street between Amsterdam and Columbus Avenues, as had been planned by the department. Walter Stabler, Chairman of the committee, had a petition signed by a large number of property owners in the neighborhood which requested that another site be selected, as the establishment of the house at the place selected would greatly depreciate property in the vicinity. This property, the petition said, had been purchased at high prices because there were no undesirable features in the locality.

Commissioner Scannell said he did not wish to do anything objectionable, but as Commissioner of the department he was instrusted with the protection of the lives and property of all the people in the district, as well as in other parts of the city. He hinted that the petitioners, if they desired, could purchase another site for the fire house and present it to the city.

Chief Croker, who was present, said that it was absolutely necessary to have a fire house in that district, as there was none on the north nearer than One Hundred and Third Street, and none on the south nearer than Eighty-second Street. There were a number of tenements in the neighborhood, he said.

At Commissioner Scannell's suggestion the members of the committee said they would have a talk with Mayor Van Wyck to-day, at 3 o'clock.

NEW ROUTES TO BROOKLYN

Bill in Legislature Providing for Tunnels and Bridges.

A COMMISSION IS PROPOSED

Tunnel to Start Between Wall and Whitehall Streets—Bridge Over Blackwell's Island.

ALBANY, Jan. 18.—Assemblyman Brennan of Brooklyn has introduced a bill providing for more bridges and tunnels between New York City boroughs. It provides that immediately after the passage of the act the Governor of the State of New York shall appoint six citizens of the City of New York a commission for the purpose of constructing, as agents of the State, permanent suspension bridges over the East River, and a tunnel or tunnels between the boroughs of the City of New York.

The commission shall proceed at once to prepare a plan for a permanent tunnel between some convenient and eligible point in the Borough of Manhattan, between Whitehall and Wall Streets and a convenient and eligible point in the Borough of Brooklyn, between Atlantic and Hamilton Avenues. Such tunnel is to be of sufficient size to admit of the construction and operation of not less than one nor more than four railroad tracks of standard gauge, and with such loops at the terminus of such tunnel in said boroughs as may be necessary for its safe and convenient operation; and the commission shall have the right and is empowered to construct said tunnel under and across the East River and across any intervening land belonging to the City of New York or to private persons at such places as it may determine, provided, however, that such tunnel shall be so constructed and maintained as not to obstruct or impair navigation, commerce, or anchorage of any navigable waters without the consent of the Secretary of War.

The commission is to have the right to acquire by condemnation or purchase such real property, public or private, or right, or interest of easement therein for the construction and maintenance of the tunnel as may be necessary in the exercise of the powers conferred. Such property when acquired shall be deemed to have been acquired and held for public use.

The entire expense of constructing the tunnel shall be borne by the City of New York, and in order to meet the same the Controller of said city is directed to sell or issue from time to time, upon the requisition of such commission, corporate stock of the City of New York sufficient to realize the sum certified by such Commissioners to be then required, which shall be issued and paid over to the Commissioners.

The commission is also authorized to construct a bridge or tunnel over or under the East River between the Boroughs of Manhattan and Queens between the two ends of Blackwell's Island. Such bridge, when completed, shall be a public highway for the use of street, surface, and elevated railroad cars, trucks, carriages, bicycles, and foot passengers. No car of any railroad company shall cross such bridge except upon the following terms: All track structures, wires, posts, supports, machinery, and structures of every kind necessary for such cars or the operation or transportation thereof shall be paid for by the company or companies using such bridge.

Any street, surface, or elevated railroad company that has made such a contract, and that has a railroad in operation in the Borough of Brooklyn, within 1,000 feet of the terminus of such bridge, may purchase or acquire by condemnation any land or interest in land necessary for a proper approach by its cars to such bridge, or for a proper exit therefrom in the Borough of Manhattan, and any such railroad company that is operating a street, surface, or elevated railroad in the Borough of Manhattan east of Broadway may also purchase or acquire by condemnation any land or interest in land necessary for a proper approach by its cars to such bridge and tunnel.

The commission after granting hearings to the citizens of the Boroughs of Manhattan and Queens are empowered in their discretion to construct a bridge or tunnel between the said Boroughs of Manhattan and Queens in addition to the other bridges and tunnels provided for. All moneys required in its construction shall be expended under the direction of the commission, and the Controller shall issue all corporate stock in sufficient quantities to meet all of the expenses.

All plans, specifications, moneys, or other properties now in the hands of the authorities of the City of New York providing for the erection of the bridges and tunnels between the boroughs of the City of New York shall be turned over by the said authorities to the commission.

THE WHITE SCHOOL BILL.

Last Year's Measure to be Introduced with Changes Agreed To by Various Interests.

ALBANY, Jan. 18.—Senator White will reintroduce his Educational bill of last year in an amended form. An agreement has been reached between the Catholic schools and institutions, the State Department of Public Instruction, and the Statutory Revision Commission as to what the bill should contain. This agreement removes many of the points of difference on this bill which existed when it was before the last Legislature.

The agreement was reached at a conference at which were Deputy State Superintendent of Public Instruction Danforth E. Ainsworth, Statutory Revision Commissioner Lincoln, and former Supreme Court Justice Daly of New York City, representing Archbishop Corrigan and the Catholic interests of the State. Justice Daly presented at the conference the objections which those interests had to the White bill of last year.

It was agreed that the schools for the deaf, dumb, and blind should be made a part of the common school system of the State and subject to the laws governing that system, limiting, however, the age at seven years, instead of five, when children should be sent to those institutions. The provisions of the compulsory education law were made to apply to these defective children, as to all other children of school age in the State.

The age when the compulsory education law shall apply is now between eight and sixteen years. It was agreed to make it seven and sixteen years. The provision in the law permitting children between twelve and fourteen years to be employed after they have attended school for eighty days in any school year is to be stricken out, and it will be provided that children between fourteen and sixteen years shall be compelled to attend school unless regularly employed.

The State Superintendent of Public Instruction is to be clothed with power to prescribe the form of punishment in all schools, public and private, and in all institutions which are a part of the common school system. It was also provided that each child in an institution for truants shall be permitted to receive religious instruction in the religion of its parents.

LIQUOR LICENSES FOR CARS.

Assembly Committee Reports Favorably Mr. Apgar's Bill.

ALBANY, Jan. 18.—The Assembly Excise Committee to-day reported favorably Assemblyman Apgar's bill, which amends the Raines bill so that a foreign corporation operating parlor or sleeping cars in this State may obtain liquor licenses. This will enable the Pullman Car Company, which has absorbed the Wagner Company, to sell liquor on its cars.

State Superintendent of Excise Lyman attempted to have added to the bill this section: "And in case any car for which a liquor tax certificate is held shall be withdrawn from the service for repairs or leave the State, such certificate may be temporarily transferred to a substitute car, in accordance with such rules and regulations as the State Commissioner of Excise shall prescribe, without payment of any transfer fee."

Assemblyman Harburger attacked the amendment as vicious. He said the excise law did not grant the privilege of transfer to individuals and there was no reason why it should be granted to this corporation.

The committee decided to report Mr. Apgar's bill without the State Department amendment.

STATE BOARD OF BARBERS.

Assembly Bill Gives It Supervision Over All Shops and Workmen.

ALBANY, Jan. 18.—Assemblyman Brennan of Kings to-day introduced a bill which provides for the appointment of a State Board of Examiners to regulate barbering in the State, to be composed of two master barbers and two journeymen, who shall issue certificates of qualification. The members of the board are to receive as compensation $5 per day when in session, together with mileage allowance.

All the barbers in the State within three months after the passage of the act must secure the certificate provided for in the bill on the payment of $1. The board has the power to revoke any certificate on conviction for using towels, cups, or any other utensils used by barbers which are liable to spread contagious or infectious diseases. In the event of a barber shop being declared in an unsanitary condition by a member of the board, the board shall be empowered to call upon the State or municipal Boards of Health to declare said shop a public nuisance.

INHERITANCE TAX FEES.

Bill Introduced to Turn Them Over to the State Controller.

ALBANY, Jan. 18.—The suggestions made by State Controller Morgan in his annual report to take away from the Controller of New York City, and the County Treasurers and Surrogates of Kings and Erie, the right to compute and collect the inheritance tax, and placing it in the hands of the State Controller, were embodied in a bill introduced to-day in the Assembly by Mr. Fallows of New York.

The bill provides that the State Controller shall appoint, and may at pleasure remove, five persons in the County of New York, two persons in the County of Kings, and one person in the County of Erie, to act as Appraisers therein. The Appraisers so appointed shall receive an annual salary, together with their actual and necessary traveling expenses and witness fees. The salaries are to be: In New York County, $4,000; in Kings County, $3,000, and in Erie County, $2,500.

TO BAR OLD CANNED GOODS.

Assembly Bill Requires Date to be Stamped on Every Can.

ALBANY, Jan. 18.—Mr. Farrell has introduced a bill intended to prevent the sale of old canned goods. The bill provides that every manufacturer of cans used, or to be used for the canning of vegetables, fruits, fish, and liquids of all kinds, description, and sorts, shall imprint upon the bottom and sides of said cans, the year in which said can was made. Each manufacturer shall pay a tax of 1½ cents on each and every can manufactured, sold, or exposed for sale in this State.

Every person selling or exposing for sale canned goods of the kind, description, and sort mentioned in this act, which have not the year imprinted on each can, shall pay a tax of 10 cents for each and every can so exposed for sale.

SPECIAL SESSIONS JUDGE.

Assembly Bill Authorizes the Mayor to Appoint Another One.

ALBANY, Jan. 18.—Assemblyman Morris introduced a bill in the Assembly to-day which authorizes the Mayor of New York City to appoint an additional Justice of the Court of Special Sessions in the First Division, who shall hold office for ten years. It further provides for the appointment of an additional deputy clerk for each of the Special Sessions divisions of the city, who shall hold office for a period of five years. The Justices are empowered to appoint an additional stenographer and interpreter if deemed necessary.

The Court of Special Sessions of either of said divisions is to be divided into two parts, one of which must be held by three Justices and the other by one Justice and a trial jury. Service of a juror at a court of Special Sessions for a full term shall exempt such juror from service in the court for the remainder of the year.

RAILWAY TRANSFER MEASURE.

All Elevated and Surface Roads in This City Included Under It.

ALBANY, Jan. 18.—Mr. Farrell has introduced a bill compelling giving of transfers on all elevated and surface railroads.

The bill provides that all railroad companies, surface, or elevated, operating in the City of New York, shall, upon the payment of one fare, issue transfers on demand, good upon each and every line of the said company, whether said line of railroad be owned, managed, controlled, or leased by the said company.

In every failure so to do the said company shall be liable to a penalty of $100 for each offense or refusal, to be recovered by the person refused the transfer.

Another Anti-Cigarette Bill.

ALBANY, Jan. 18.—The third Anti-Cigarette bill of the session was introduced today in the House by Assemblyman Fordyce. The measure makes it a misdemeanor to sell or manufacture cigarettes and prescribes a penalty in case of conviction of not less than $50 or more than $1,500 and imprisonment for not more than six months.

Tax on Non-Residents' Property.

ALBANY, Jan. 18.—Senator Ambler has introduced a bill making the property of non-residents doing business in the State amenable to a local tax as well as a State tax.

Other Bills in the Senate.

ALBANY, Jan. 18.—These bills were introduced in the Senate to-day:

Senator Ford—Cancelling and refunding 50 per cent. of the assessment for the opening of Wadsworth Avenue, New York, to such property holders as have already paid the full amount.

Senator Elsberg—Fixing the salaries of the Judges of the Municipal Court in Queens and Richmond at $7,000 per annum, in Bronx and Brooklyn at $8,000 per annum, and in Manhattan $9,000 per annum. This increases the Queens and Richmond Justices' salaries by $2,000 a year.

Senator Ford—Allowing the Commissioners of the Police Department of New York City to rehear the charges against Policeman Adolph S. Wasserman.

Senator McCarren—Allowing the Justices of the Supreme Court of the Second Department to appoint and at pleasure remove a confidential clerk, at a salary of $2,000, and repealing Section 97 of the Civil Code in so far as it permits the appointment of individual clerks by individual Justices.

Senator D. F. Davis—Amending the Code of Civil Procedure increasing the salaries of interpreters in Kings County from $1,200 to $1,800 per year, to be paid by the Controller of the City of New York, instead of by the County Treasurer as heretofore.

In the Assembly.

ALBANY, Jan. 18.—These bills were introduced in the Assembly to-day:

Mr. Gleason—Fixing the salary of the Coroners of Monroe County at $2,000 per year.

Mr. Allds—Appropriating $2,106.40 for completing the east wing, kitchen, and dining room at the Dannemora State Hospital for Insane Convicts.

Mr. O'Connell—Prohibiting the issuance of trading stamps and making it a misdemeanor to so do.

Also a bill amending the State Charities Law so as to provide that a member of the State Board of Charities shall be a representative labor man, upon the next vacancy occurring in such board.

Mr. Maher—To prohibit a certain class of furniture sales in private houses. The bill provides that all furniture sales in private shall be under a trade name conspicuously exposed.

Mr. Sands—Reducing the number of official ballots to be provided at a general election from two to one-and-a-half times as many ballots as there were names of electors on the register of electors of such district.

Mr. Wilson—Fixing the court fees in the municipal courts of New York City as follows: In an action where no jury trial is demanded, $1; where a jury of six is demanded, $4.50, and where a jury of twelve is asked for, $7.50.

Mr. Seamlon—Creating a new Aldermanic district in New York City to take in certain districts south of Harlem River which have a voting population of some 8,000.

Mr. Guider—Two bills to prevent the operation of railroads on Carlton Avenue and Ashland place in the City of Brooklyn.

Mr. Holstein—Transferring the Eighth Ward in Brooklyn from the Second Judicial District to the Fifth district.

Mr. Adams—Authorizing the New York City Board of Estimate and Apportionment to audit and allow the interest on assessments to the owners and persons interested in the land assessed by the city for the paving and grading of Logan, Berriman, Richmond, Ashford, Vermont, Hinsdale, Seckman, Market, and Essex Streets, Snediker, Belmont, Miller, and Shutter Avenues.

Mr. De Graw—Appropriating $200,000 for enlarging and to furnish the State Armory of the Forty-seventh Regiment.

Mr. Morgan—Abolishing the office of County Treasurer of Kings County, now held by John Kimball.

WATER FRONT IMPROVEMENTS.

Senate Bill Provides for Work by the Department of Docks and Ferries to Cost $12,000,000.

ALBANY, Jan. 18.—Senator Ahearn to-day introduced a bill to provide for the improvement of the water front of New York City by the Department of Docks and Ferries, and the extension of docking facilities for the protection of the city's commerce. It was contended that the passage of the bill would tend to bring back to the City of New York steamships which now ply between European countries and Boston, Philadelphia, Jersey City, and other ports of entry, and to recover commerce which has left the city because of inadequate facilities.

To provide means for the improvements the bill provides that the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund of New York shall prepare to issue corporate stock bearing interest at the rate of not more than 4 per cent., redeemable from time to time, but not more than thirty years from the date of issue. The amount of such stock shall not exceed $12,000,000 and none of it shall be sold for less than par value. The money so received shall be deposited in the treasury of New York City and shall be drawn out and paid by the Controller.

Senator Norton to-day introduced a bill amending the County law so as to allow town within a county adjoining a city of the first class to borrow money to construct and repair a dock or bulkhead within its boundaries. The bill is especially intended for Queens County.

AGAINST THE HORTON LAW.

Church Committees Decide to Urge the Repeal of the Measure.

A joint meeting of committees appointed at ministerial meetings of various churches, to work for the repeal of the Horton law, was held yesterday afternoon in the Presbyterian Building. Those present decided unanimously for the repeal of the law. A special committee, consisting of the Rev. Dr. Madison C. Peters, Gen. R. E. Prime, and the Rev. Dr. S. P. Cadman, was appointed. It will go to the proper legislative committee to urge the law's repeal. The following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, That we condemn the full and attractive way in which some newspapers report and advertise these scandalous prizefights, and beg the privilege of introducing these papers into our homes without defiling the domestic circle with so many faces suggestive of brutality."

BRIEF LEGISLATIVE SESSION.

ALBANY, Jan. 18.—In the Senate this morning, after the introduction of bills, several nominations which were reported by the Finance Committee yesterday, were confirmed.

Senator Brackett's bill to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, audit, and determine the alleged claim of the Wynkoop, Hallenbeck & Crawford Company against the State for printing, and to render judgment, was passed. This bill is to allow the Court of Claims to examine and determine all claims for printing against the State.

The Senate then adjourned until to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

In the Assembly the bill of Mr. Wilson permitting Commissioners of Deeds in Kings County to take acknowledgments in any part of New York City was passed after which an adjournment was taken until 10 A. M. Friday.

TO AID STREET CLEANING.

Department Approves Recent Bills Introduced in the Legislature.

The Department of Street Cleaning has approved the five bills introduced in the Legislature regarding its management, and there is no doubt that all these measures will receive the sanction of the Tammany Hall organization. Of these bills, the most important is one enabling the Board of Estimate to authorize bond issues to provide for the purchase of stock or plant needed by the department without concurrence by the Municipal Assembly. The work of the department, especially in Brooklyn, has been greatly impeded by the failure of the Municipal Assembly to act favorably on bond resolutions, and the legislative bill referred to is intended to obviate similar delays. Another of these bills gives the Commissioner the right to make contracts for removal of snow and ice for periods of five years, and a third empowers the Dock Board to set aside the piers at West Seventy-ninth Street and West Ninety-sixth Street as dumps for the removal of ashes and garbage. This bill, if it becomes law, will save the department hauling refuse to the east side and to One Hundred and Thirty-third Street, as is now required by an act passed some years ago at the instigation of the West End Association.

FITCHBURG LEASE MAY FAIL.

Opposition of the Directors Representing Massachusetts Likely to Prevent Agreement with Boston and Maine.

BOSTON, Jan. 18.—From statements made to-day by President E. D. Codman of the Fitchburg Railroad, Robert Codman, the senior Director, and Joseph B. Russel, one of the Executive Committee, it appears that the Fitchburg Railroad will not be leased to the Boston and Maine, owing to the opposition of the Directors representing the State of Massachusetts, which holds $5,000,000 worth of Fitchburg stock.

President Codman said to-day: "I understand by the Governor's letter, sent yesterday, that he leaves to the State Directors the responsibility of representing the Commonwealth in disposing of the lease in the board, reserving to the Governor and Council, however, the right to vote on the lease if it should be aproved by the boerd and submitted to the stockholders. The Governor is satisfied to have a negative action, if taken by the board, stand without revision. While I cannot anticipate the formal action of the Board of Directors, I think it impossible, in view of the position taken by the Governor, that the board would go contrary to a negative conclusion of the State Directors, should they announce that for the State."

Robert Codman, the senior Director, said: "I think that, under ordinary circumstances, we should not have favored the proposition of the Boston and Maine Railroad, but, in view of the peril to our property in case the Legislature should approve the Costin and Albany lease, our stockholder Directors were almost unanimously in favor of the lease to the Boston and Maine. At our recent meeting we were informed by the State Directors that, after full conference with the Governor, they had decided to vote against this lease. We are very reluctant to antagonize the State Directors, and, besides this, we are aware that, with the vote of the Commonwealth against the measure at the stockholders' meeting, it would be impossible that the lease could be rutified, except possibly by a bare majority, which we should have much deprecated."

FAITH CURIST INDICTED.

Held Criminally Responsible, with Patient's Mother, for a Death.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., Jan. 18.—The Grand Jury has returned true bills against S. P. James of South Omaha, the "Divine Healer," and Mrs. P. B. Yates of Tabor, Ia., on the charge of being criminally responsible for the death of the latter's daughter, Ethel Yates, which occurred in this city Jan. 5.

The post-morten examination held on the body of Miss Yates showed that death was the result of appendicitis. A physician who had been in attendance upon the case was discharged and the girl was treated by faith cure. A Deputy Sheriff has gone to Tabor to arrest Mrs. Yates.

Dying Boy Shielded His Playmate.

CAMDEN, N. J., Jan. 18.—John Crawford, eleven years old, is dead as a result of injuries he received by being struck in the stomach by a brick thrown by another schoolboy. No arrest has been made. Crawford's parents refuse to give the name of the boy who threw the brick, because their boy while dying obtained a promise that they would never tell who it was that caused his injury.

COMPANY B TAKES THE LEAD.

Good Scores in the Seventh Regiment Shooting Contest.

The marksmen of Company B made a strong argument last night, at the Seventh Regiment Armory, in favor of their being allowed to retain for another year the Edward Kemp and the Col. Emmons Clark Trophies. The scores made by the teams, while not very close to the records, nevertheless surpass those made thus far in the present competition.

The highest score was made by Lieut. O. M. Beach, Jr., the only marksman who has made a full score in the history of the two matches. For the Kemp Trophy, Company B's team scored 1,089 points. The team score for the Clark Trophy was 947, Private F. J. Clarkson leading, with 45.

MORNINGSTAR'S LEAD GROWING.

His Chances in the Billiard Contest with Schaefer Improving.

Ora Morningstar increased his lead in his match with Jacob Schaefer at the latter's billiard academy yesterday, and now has an advantage of 289 points. Schaefer, who has to make 200 points at each session to his opponent's 100, played a poor game in the afternoon, making only 112 points. His playing was little better in the evening, though he redeemed it with one pretty run of 96. He followed this up with another for 31, and succeeded in gathering 144 for the session. Morningstar played his usual consistent game, and averaged over 10 for the day's play. The match will be continued to-day. The score:

Morningstar—0 3 18 6 1 1 2 52 6 0 29 9 21 11 24 0 9 0 8. Total, 200; average, 11 2-18; grand total, 800; grand average, 8 72-91.

GOOD TENNIS AT TUXEDO.

E. H. Miles Defeats Latham, Professional Champion of the World.

Special to The New York Times.

TUXEDO PARK, Jan. 18.—Those who saw the Tuxedo court tennis match at the fourth day's play at the new Tuxedo Tennis Club witnessed one of the grandest games of tennis of the season. Two Englishmen, Peter Latham, professional champion of the world, and Eustace H. Miles, amateur champion of England, were pitted against each other, and the latter defeated Latham in three sets to one. The play was very fast. Latham seemed the best in the first, in which he returned everything, using great accuracy in his stroke. His service, however, was not up to his usual style, he appearing to be a little tired after Tuesday's game, but he pulled out the set at 5—2. In the second set Mr. Miles, who is in excellent form, did some clever playing by his forcing and hard volleying, securing the set after a hard struggle by the score of 7—5. The third set also fell to Mr. Miles, although at one time Latham had it in hand, the score being five games to four in Latham's favor. The amateur, bracing up, improved as he went on, and finally pulled out the set at 7—5. The fourth set was 5 all, and was very evenly contested. Mr. Miles, straining every nerve, took the last two games, thus winning the match.

The play was very much appreciated by the spectators, who applauded the players at each good point, the rallies, composed almost entirely of hard strokes, being almost interminable. Latham's strength was in his return, especially when Miles had cut the ball heavily in the corners and did not expect its return.

In the afternoon Champion Pettitt had a practice game with Stockton, and Cecil Baring and Alfred Tompkins played an exhibition match, which resulted in Tompkins winning by 3 to 1. This was a very pretty match. Tompkins seemed at his best, and played very good tennis.

Many games are scheduled for to-morrow. Those who will play are George Standing, Teddy Johnson, Richmond Fearning, Peter Latham, and Thomas Pettitt. The two amateur champions, Miles and Stockton, will rest for the great international match, which takes place on Saturday.

GOLF CONTEST IN FLORIDA.

Jacksonville Club Lose in a Team Match at St. Augustine.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Jan. 18.—In the golf match here to-day the Florida Country Club of Jacksonville lost the match by two points. Watson was slightly off his usual game, and topping his first driver went into the fence, but Burnett teed off with a clean drive that carried well toward the first hole. He kept up good golf for the first seven holes, and his opponent had six down. Watson was unlucky in getting in every bunker on the first round; he warmed up a bit, however, on the second nine and played fine golf, although his game was practically lost by that time. At the twelfth hole Barnett's lead was reduced to two up. On the fourteenth they were even, and halved the fifteenth and seventeenth, but Barnett won the sixteenth and eighteenth, making him victor over Watson by a score of two up.

Dixon played his usual game, except in putting, which was rather short, but he and MacDonald seemed evenly matched on the whole. The game simply see-sawed along, neither gaining much over the other, and Dixon at last held his own. They scored at the end. Findlay's game was confident and steady. He beat Mitchell four up. Score:

St. Augustine—R. C. Watson, Jr., Westbrook Country Club, 0; Clayton Dixon, University of Pennsylvania, 0; Alexander H. Findlay, Florida East Coast Golf Club, 4. Total, 4.
Jacksonville—B. H. Barnett, Florida Coautry Club, 2; M. G. MacDonald, Florida Country Club, 0; John Mitchell, Florida Country Club, 0. Total, 2.

The medal scores of Findlay and Mitchell were 76 and 82 respectively.

The Wanamaker Store

THIS store needs no general advertising now-a-days. We have done with that. You ask for News—and that it shall be: daily talks about new things we have for personal and household use; daily talks about special prices at which you can buy very many things that you need now or presently.

The store is as newsy as your favorite newspaper, and each day's batch is worth reading—every word of it.

We do not talk of paltry lots, but even big lots go out quickly, so if you would be sure to get your share of any article we tell of, come during the day the news is printed.

Hosiery and Glove Sale

The once-a-year thorough clearance of Hosiery, Knitted Underwear and Gloves started yesterday with lots that counted up this way—

17,688 pairs of Gloves—men's, women's and children's.
17,000 pairs of Stockings—men's and women's (there were children's, too, but all gone now).
10,764 pieces of Wool and Merino Underwear—men's, women's and children's.

The selling was very great—too great to allow of accurate census taking at the time we wrote this—but subtracting the dollars we received from the dollars' worth we put out, we state with some accuracy that you will have to choose from to-day—

Three thousand and seven hundred dollars' worth of Hosiery and Underwear.
Twenty-nine hundred dollars' worth of Gloves.

Prices Third to a Half the Usual, with a few exceptions, where the reduction is a little less than one-half.

Men's Gloves—for driving, walking and dress—First Floor.
Women's and Children's Gloves—including women's long gloves for evening wear—Fifth Floor.
Men's Half-Hose and Underwear—First Floor.
Women's Hosiery, up to $1 a pair, on Fifth Floor. The other lots on First Floor.
Women's and Children's Underwear—First Floor.

Paris Dress Goods Reduced

Robes—mostly of broadcloth and more or less elaborately embroidered or braided. You know the skirt is shaped and partially made—maybe the sewing you save doesn't amount to much, but, being shaped, the embroidery or braiding is completed in effective design which couldn't be done on plain piece-goods.

Fine as ever, and good in form and fashion—but no goods shall stay here longer than a few weeks. Otherwise this store would become like other stores. A loss? Yes, but not a waste—you who buy will like the store the better for its ways and its bargains.

Here's one: Black broadcloth, with designs in silk and braid and appliques of colored satin—you know the effects that Francis, of Paris, gets in his suits. Well, $25 instead of $35.

$25 instead of $38. $30 instead of $40. $40 instead of $58.

Quite a number in all.

More Golf Capes Have Come Plenty of them! Yet likely as not you'll prove us wrong in that statement—and take the lot in a day. These we tell of are all made from double-face cheviot and are entirely correct in cut and finish.

$6—Plain outside, bright plaid on reverse side; the hood and the ruffle around skirt showing plaid.
$10—Black and Oxford gray outside, the reverse black and white plaid; ruffle around skirt finished with stitched cloth strap; deep hood showing plaid.
$12—Plain outside, new handsome plaids inside; hood and ruffle showing plaid; stitched cloth strap at top of ruffle.

Second floor, Broadway.

Gold Chairs and Divans Fancy pieces remaining from the holiday selling. Perfect goods and all in desirable designs. Priced fairly enough originally, but reduced further, about a third. Not many—they will doubtless brighten up corners other than ours, in a hurry.

GOLD CHAIRS—25 styles, at $2.75 to $30; were $4 to $55.

GOLD DIVANS—12 styles, at $13.50 to $130; were $20 to $180.

Fourth Floor.

Oriental Rugs and Carpets
PRICES REDUCED ONE-THIRD

Selling commenced on Monday. It will end to-day or to-morrow—as soon as you have taken the lots we tell of.

Not museum pieces—but quite elegant specimens for all that—the finest in this group being a Persian Hall-Strip at $585 instead of $850.

There are Persian and Turkish Rugs at $45 to $140.

But the bulk of the goods we tell of at the reduced prices are Ghiordes Rugs at $28 to $76—the biggest is 10 ft. 4 in. by 14 ft. 8 in.
India Rugs (not the Japanese counterfeits), at $71 to $102—regularly $150 to $223.

The rug selling here was more a sentiment than a business—now it is a business that interests all lovers of the beauty-weaves of the Orient—a poetic business done without the bosh of deception or extravagant prices.

Women's Muslin Underwear
OTHER SECOND FLOOR NEWS

Of course, in a sale embodying so wide a range of qualities and styles, only a few kinds can be mentioned at a time. And they can only be hinted at. So to-day there's only a style, here and there, with its price, but we're willing to have the whole collection judged by them, as to excellence and cheapness.

Petticoats

35c—Muslin; deep ruffle of cambric, with fine plaits. Not more than 3 to a buyer.
50c—Muslin; deep ruffle with hem and fine plaits above; yoke band.
65c—Muslin; deep ruffle of lawn edged with embroidery.
75c—Muslin; deep cambric ruffle, hemstitched.
90c—Muslin; deep umbrella ruffle of lawn, edged with wide embroidery.
$1—Muslin; deep ruffle with wide torchon insertion and fine plaits.
$1.25—Muslin; deep umbrella ruffle with wide ruffle of fine embroidery.

Gowns

A style at 38c, of which you may have but 3.
50c—An excellent quality of muslin; Empire; embroidered shield; lawn ruffle.
75c—Cambric; yoke of fine plaits, torchon insertion and lace trimming.
Excellent garments at 85c, $1 and $1.25.

Drawers

Some at 10c, at 15c and at 18c—Values so good that not more than 3 of each kind will be sold to any one buyer.
25c—Of good muslin; deep cambric ruffle.
35c—Muslin; deep ruffle of embroidery; fine plaits above.
50c—Muslin; deep ruffle of cambric; row of torchon insertion; lace edge.

Elderdown Sacques—Still another lot at 35c each. There were disappointments at both previous sales. Here's a consolation sale. Prettily striped eiderdown, various colorings; made with fitted back; edges crocheted with zephyr. A good 75c sacque for 35c. Ready at 10 o'clock—Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Elderdown Robes—They are of ripple eiderdown, finest quality; full front, fitted back; large collar and sleeves bound with satin; closing with silk frogs. The regular $5 quality. Price, $3.50.

Wrappers—One sort of black sateen, attractively plaited and trimmed with satin ribbon at $2—they were $3.75.

Several styles in striped and figured flannelette. Some at $1 that were $1.75 and $2. Other good qualities at $1.25 and $1.75.

Shoes We can produce men's shoes to sell at $3 or $3.50 with greater safety than we can produce shoes at $6, because the lower-price shoes would be made of rugged leathers while the high-price shoe must be almost as soft as a glove. The all-purpose horse is less likely to get sick than is the high-bred animal. Do you catch the simile?

Well, we've done a still harder thing—produced Men's Shoes of the dressiness and general fineness of $5 shoes, and made them safely good. The price is $3.90.

Enough sorts to meet all usual demands of careful dressers. And we've done this, season after season.

Women's Shoes have been as intelligently looked out for. Many choices at $3—though of the general fineness and styles furnished by the better grade shoes stores at $4.

Fourth avenue and Ninth street.

Corsets Choose among these at 45c and 65c. Values up to $1.25. Some of strong jean—others sateen; short, medium and extra long waists; white, drab, pink, blue, black; 18 to 30 in. Second floor.

A New Nut Candy Really fine black walnuts were chosen and the "goodies" picked out in the biggest pieces possible. Boiled in sugar, the candy then cut in squares that look like little pillows and given a covering of satin—not hard but not sticky.

Any other candy maker would say 50c a pound.

But we class it a "special" and charge 20c.

This candy store is an economizer of time, or, rather, our factory is—and we run one or two "specials" each week as stop-gap orders. You see we keep plenty of people at work—and these specials use up what would be largely wasted time.

Satin Walnut Squares, 20c pound.

Basement.

Carpet Sweepers We've a hundred Bissell Sweepers—you know Bissell is the leading make, and the company makes for us "The Wanamaker"—a hundred Bissell Sweepers to sell at 75c. instead of $1.50. No, indeed, none for dealers—to be sure of it, we shall sell only one to a customer.

Basement.

Men's Suits and Overcoats
EVERY ITEM A BARGAIN

There's been a round-up of suits—newly branded with the mark $12. Among them, not a suit worth less than $15, the most of them $18 values, not a few that were moderately priced at $20. The fabrics are stylish cheviots and medium-color worsteds. Mostly with the popular double-breasted vests. All sizes.

Men's Overcoats—Blue and black kerseys that were $18 and $20, are now $13.50.
Men's Ulsters—A new style. An authority on ready-to-wear clothing says it's a good $25 value. It's a fair $22.50 coat according to our standard of valuation, but the price is $15. Of silver-gray cheviot, lined with pure worsted suiting; satin sleeve lining.
Another good value is an ulster of all-wool Oxford frieze, wool lined, at $15.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Standard Dictionary, $6.50

Told of the good fortune yesterday—that we had a few hundred copies of the regular standard-bound Standard Dictionary to sell at $6.50. This second word, merely to let you, you who've been thinking it over, know that you can get a copy to-day. The working library of to-day has the Century for brief encyclopedic and exhaustive dictionary features; it has also the Standard for quick reference.

But the Standard has not been obtainable at $6.50 until now.

Book Store, Ninth street.

The Sale of Wall Papers This is a clearing-up small lots—mostly single room quantities. Medium and high-class goods, many in patterns exclusively ours—tasteful all. Reductions in price of a third to a half. Bring room measurements with you.

Third floor.

White Lawn Aprons, 25c The price is considerably lower than their actual value, as judged in the market to-day. Inferior goods have been sold at double this price.

The lawn is an excellent quality. Trimmed with insertion embroidery, or finely plaited, or both. Choice at 25c. each. Broadway.

CONTRACTORS EAGER TO BID

Mr. McDonald Receives Numerous Applications—Mr. Sage Not Sanguine About Rapid Transit.

Alexander E. Orr, President of the Rapid Transit Commission, said yesterday afternoon that the board had nothing further to do in the matter of the tunnel construction until John B. McDonald, the contractor, was ready with his cash and bonds of $7,000,000.

"He has acknowledged the receipt of our notification that he has been awarded the contract," said Mr. Orr, "and when he is ready to go to work we will aid in pushing the construction ahead as fast as possible.

"There will be no meeting of the commission until Mr. McDonald has been heard from again."

Edward M. Shepard, counsel for the commission, in speaking of the legal status of the contract, said:

"The form of notification holds Mr. McDonald to the contract. At the expiration of the ten days from Wednesday, the commission will hold, at its option, that he has either made or abrogated the contract. In the latter case, his check for $150,000 will be forfeited; indeed, it will be forfeited in either case. But if he shall fail to qualify with his cash and his bond and the commission shall hold that he has made the contract, then the city may proceed against him for whatever damages may be evident. In other words, the contract may be let for any sum and Mr. McDonald may be held for damages in the difference between his bid and the figures at which a new contract may be let.

"Of course, there is no danger of any such contingency arising. Mr. McDonald is a responsible man and will qualify."

Mr. McDonald was not at his office, at 100 Broadway, yesterday. There it was said that he was busily engaged in looking over his Jerome Park reservoir contract work. A telephone messake from his office at the reservoir stated that he had not been there and was not expected.

Mr. McDonald has stated that he does not intend to operate the rapid transit lines after the tunnel is completed. If he should desire to lease or mortgage his operating interest he would have to obtain the unanimous consent of the Rapid Transit Commission.

One of Mr. McDonald's competitors, in speaking of this phase of the contract, said yesterday:

"If Mr. McDonald can succeed in getting the commission to allow him to lease the tunnel he will be in a position to realise a very handsome profit. The actual cost of constructing the tunnel will be about $30,000,000. It will take at least $5,000,000 more to equip it with the rolling stock. There would be many interests which would gladly lease the tunnel and in part payment furnish the equipment."

It is not unlikely, it is said, that some of the financial backing which was interested in rival bids will in the end be ready and anxious to aid Mr. McDonald in his present undertaking. In fact, one combination suggested yesterday that it might have something to give out in regard to this situation within a day or two.

Applications from all over the country are pouring into Mr. McDonald's office from men who are desirous of taking sub-contracts under him. The applications already received are sufficient, if they were all accepted, to place two contractors at work on every block on all parts of the tunnel.

Expression of the views of prominent men on the projected tunnel are now being sought. Two divergent opinions expressed yesterday were those of Russell Sage and Richard V. Harnett of the Rapid Transit Committee of the Real Estate Exchange.

Mr. Harnett said:

"The Real Estate Exchange has all along advocated a tunnel as the proper means for furnishing rapid transit. We have been working for it for eighteen years.

"The day is not far distant when there will be tunnels under the East River and one to Staten Island as well.

"The benefits to real estate from this new tunnel will be incalculable. Property along the line of the tunnel will increase at least 10 per cent, and further up, where prices are low, the increase will be at least 25 per cent. It will create an era of building prosperity such as New York has never before seen, and furnish work to thousands and thousands of workers in this city. It will bring here a floating population that will pour their money into the coffers of the merchants of the city and make prosperity in every branch of trade."

Russell Sage's comment yesterday on the prospects of rapid transit was:

"I didn't think the transportation necessities of New York had arrived at a point where a tunnel was a crying need. But, as a good citizen, I will acquiesce in whatever may be done. I believe that the traveling public would rather ride in the open air than in a tunnel thirty feet under ground. I do not believe that the interests of the Manhattan Railway Company would be affected by a rapid transit tunnel. As to the tunnel scheme, I regard it as experimental, and doubt that it will be successful."

THE METROPOLIS DIRECTORATE.

List of the Backers of the Defeated Company Published.

The officers of the Metropolis Company, which failed to get in its bid for the construction contract of the underground rapid transit system in time, made public yesterday a list of the Directors of the corporation. It was given, it was said, owing to the rumors afloat concerning the difficulties which attended the preparation of the company's bid.

The list is as follows: W. Seward Webb, George S. Scott, Charles Miller, Edward Lauterbach, Cambridge Livingston, J. Wesley Allison, Henry L. Sprague, and F. B. Esler.

Mr. Esler, who is President of the company, said:

"We were incorporated for the sole purpose of building and operating this railroad. We expected to use the money of the city to build the road and our own money to operate it. Our original capital was only $10,000, but it was increased by resolution of the board to $5,000,000. All subscriptions were to be paid in to a trust company and to be held in trust for the purchase of the equipment and the operating expenses.

"On Monday we were ready with our check, but the representative of one of our strongest backers came ten minutes too late. As David L. Hough and the interests he represented declined to go ahead without this financier being in with us, we were compelled to ask the commission for more time. Mr. Hough was perfectly justified in the position he took.

Indicted for Building a High Fence.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Jan. 18.—Henry E. Hawkey, a music teacher of this city, was indicted to-day for maintaining a public nuisance. Hawkey owns a vacant lot on Montgomery Street in an important residential section. Next to the lot resides C. P. Dorland, Surrogate of Dutchess County. Hawkey cut off the branches of some of Dorland's fruit trees, which hung over his lot, and the Surrogate had him arrested. He was not punished, and his next act was to build a fence ten feet high around his lot to cut off Dorland's view. The Surrogate and five other neighbors went before the Grand Jury and had him indicted. Hawkey was arrested and gave bail to appear at the February court.

Iron Famine Closes a Foundry.

BURLINGTON, N. J., Jan. 18.—The A. H. McNeal Pipe and Foundry Company shut down its works to-day. The foundry employs between 600 and 800 men, and has a payroll of nearly $10,000 a week. Only the machine shops remain open. The shut down is caused by inability to procure iron. There are orders on hand sufficient to keep the foundry running on full time for a long time, but no material can be obtained.

Unknown Suicide at Little Falls.

LITTLE FALLS, N. Y., Jan. 18.—A man registering as George Holmes of Middletown was found hanging to a bedpost in the Clinton Park Hotel to-day. On the inside of his collar was written "Don't try to find out who I am because it's useless." The man was about forty years old, well dressed, and had a small amount of money in his clothes. The writing was in a business hand. He came here on Tuesday night, but remained in bed yesterday.

MRS. BARWICK A SUICIDE.

The Woman Had Accused Husband and an Acquaintance of Robbing Her of $3,500.

Mrs. Josephine Barwick of 57 Lawrence Street, Brooklyn, after causing the arrest on Wednesday night of her husband, Frederick Barwick, Jr., and Joseph Martin, on the charge of stealing thirty-five $100 bills from her trunk, killed herself yesterday by swallowing a dose of carbolic acid. The trunk was kept in the cellar of her house and the money was a legacy from her uncle, Theodore Weber, general agent of the Thingvalla Line of steamers in Christiansand, Norway, who died last May. She married Barwick last Summer. He is twenty-nine years old and a painter. She separated from him, but said that on Monday night he called at her residence and tried in vain to get her to drink wine and whisky. While he was talking to her, she said, Martin carried off her trunk.

The police found the trunk in Barwick's room, but it was found to contain only some of his clothing and a golden spoon. He denied that it had contained any money, and said that he had taken it to get his things, which had been withheld by his wife. Martin also denied knowledge of any money in the trunk.

Both men were arraigned in the Adams Street Police Court yesterday morning, pleaded not guilty, and were held for examination this morning. In court Barwick's mother, Mrs. Margaret Barwick of 107 Fleet Place, accused his wife of assaulting her on Jan. 10, and the hearing of this charge was also set down for this morning.

Shortly after 2 o'clock P. M. a woman raised a bottle to her lips in front of Anderson's tea store, 149 Myrtle Avenue. Dr. Marcus C. Stout of 207 Bridge Street took the bottle from her. It was labeled "carbolic acid." The woman fell to the sidewalk. An ambulance took her to the Brooklyn Hospital. In her pocket were found papers showing that she was Mrs. Josephine Barwick. One of the papers was an insurance policy on the life of her husband for $500. She died soon after she arrived at the hospital.

Some time ago Mrs. Barwick caused the arrest of a boatman, saying he had stolen a diamond from her. He proved that the diamond was his own.

SMASH-UP AT HIGH BRIDGE.

Collision of Two Trains Caused by a Misplaced Switch.

A misplaced switch on the Putnam Division of the New York Central and Hudson River Railway yesterday morning caused a head-on collision between a freight train and a passenger train at High Bridge station. The engine of the passenger train was badly damaged, one passenger coach was smashed, and the freight train, consisting of a box car and a coal car, was entirely destroyed. The fireman and engineer of the passenger train escaped injury by jumping. James Maloney, twenty-six years old, of 304 West One Hundred and Fifty-fourth Street, was thrown from the box car by the force of the collision and severely hurt. There were no passengers on the former train at the time.

The shock of the collision was heard for some distance, and it was reported that a number of passengers had been killed. As many of those who take the train live near the station, an excited crowd of women and children, looking for relatives and friends, soon gathered, but it was quickly learned that no one had been injured on the passenger train. The débris from the collision obstructed both tracks and stopped traffic during the busiest hours of the day. How the switch came to be misplaced is not known.

DRAGS WIFE TO HOSPITAL.

Mrs. Freda Roessner, thirty-two years old, the wife of a tailor, drank a mixture of paris green and water yesterday at her home, 18 Judge Street, Brooklyn, after a quarrel with her husband, and is now in St. Catharine's Hospital, where her condition is said to be critical. When Roessner learned that his wife had taken the poison he dragged her from their apartments to the hospital. The woman fought hard to be allowed to remain in the house to die.

Several times Roessner appealed to the crowd that was following him to assist him in getting his wife to the hospital, but no one would volunteer. The distance from Roessner's home to the hospital is several blocks. He carried his wife part of the way. When he reached the institution he rang the door bell with great violence, and when the door was opened he cried:

"For God's sake save my wife, she has taken poison."

"I don't want a doctor, I want to die," gasped the woman.

Mrs. Roessner was carried to a ward. When the physicians applied remedies she fought with all her might. It is said there is little chance of her recovery. Twice before Mrs. Roessner tried to kill herself.

WOMEN SUED FOR DRESSES.

The suit of Haas Brothers, tailors and milliners, against Mrs. Lillian Ullman, the wife of E. S. Ullman, who lives at 179 West Seventy-ninth Street, came up yesterday before Judge Joseph in the Yorkville Court. Mrs. S. A. Hammerslough and Mrs. E. L. Reinhardt, sisters of the defendant, were in court with their husbands, and a host of Mrs. Ullman's friends, both men and women, were also present.

According to the plaintiffs, on Dec. 15 Mrs. Hammerslough, Mrs. Reinhardt, and Mrs. Ullman ordered gowns for evening wear. The gowns were furnished on Dec. 18. The following day they were returned as being misfits and unsatisfactory. Haas Brothers brought suits against the women, and last week Judge Joseph rendered judgment against Mrs. Hammerslough for $200 and Mrs. Reinhardt for $128.

Mrs. Ullman made answer in court that the dress had been not only a misfit, but had been rudely finished, the seams being visible at a distance. Her husband testified to the same effect, and Judge Joseph reserved decision.

Mrs. Anna Bellinger, who had also been served with a summons in a suit for $80 on an unsettled account with Haas Brothers, appeared in court yesterday, and settled the case without a hearing.

GIRL PREVENTS A SERIOUS FIRE.

Considerable damage might have been caused by fire in the residence of William Hepburn Russell, 145 West Ninety-seventh Street, last night, but for the coolness displayed by Mr. Russell's ten-year-old daughter Agnes. When the firemen arrived they found the girl directing the work of extinguishing the flames, while everybody else in the house was greatly excited.

The girl had gone up stairs to dress herself for dinner. She struck a match to light the gas, and threw the stem to the floor. The stem fell at the bottom of a lace curtain, which instantly took fire. She pulled the burning curtain from its fastenings, and then called to her mother that there was a fire. The members of the family responded with pails of water. In the meantime the blaze had been seen from the sidewalk, and Roundsman Mason had turned in an alarm. Battalion Chief Castle, with the members of Hook and Ladder Company No. 22, responded. They found the girl directing the work of putting the flames out. Castle and his firemen applied a few more buckets of water, and extinguished the fire. The damage amounted to $75.

Battalion Chief Castle said that but for the bravery and coolness displayed by the girl a serious fire might have resulted.

CENSUS BILL IS PASSED

Amendment Authorizing Outside Printing Defeated.

LIVELY DEBATE PRECIPITATED

By an Overwhelming Vote the House Decides that the Public Printer Must Do the Work.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The House to-day passed the Senate bill to extend the powers of the Director of the Census after striking out the committee amendment to authorize the Director to contract for extra printing with private contractors. The whole fight was upon that amendment. The influence of the Public Printer and the labor organizations of the country were employed against it, and after a lively debate of several hours, it was overwhelmingly defeated. The publication of the reports of the twelfth census, therefore, will be made by the Public Printer as in the past.

Mr. Hopkins, (Rep., Ill.,) who was in charge of the bill, in opening the debate explained that the bill, with the exception of the fourth section, met the unanimous approval of the Census Committee. This section authorized the Director of the Census to contract outside of the Government Printing Office for printing the census reports.

Mr. Hopkins, in defending the section, said the Public Printer would be given as much of the printing as he could do. The rest could be done as well and cheaply in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and other large cities. He assured the House that the work done outside would be performed by union labor.

In response to a question from Mr. Shattuck (Rep., Ohio,) he said he would be willing to incorporate an amendment requiring that the work should be done by union labor. He said he and other members had been bombarded by telegrams from labor organizations instigated by the union here, to oppose this section under the supposition that the work outside was to go to non-union men. This was an illusion.

Mr. Wheeler (Dem., Ky.,) asked why, if Government work was to be let to the lowest bidder, there should be any provision restricting it to firms employing union labor?

Mr. Hopkins replied that he would accept the amendment to show there was no hostility to union labor.

"Limiting this work to union offices," observed Mr. Sims, (Dem., Tenn.,) "is rank ass legislation."

"Each member must determine that for himself," replied Mr. Hopkins.

Mr. Babcock (Wis.) asked what there was to prevent a "rat" office, if it was the lowest bidder, from obtaining the work.

"There is not a 'rat' office in America," retorted Mr. Hopkins, "which can do this work."

Mr. Flynn (Rep., Oklahoma,) offered an amendment for the apportionment of the employes of the census equitably among the States and Territories. He said every Representative had been allowed six appointments. He had only two appointments.

"If that amendment is adopted," asked Mr. Lentz, (Dem., Ohio,) "will it be possible to have a Democrat appointed enumerator in the North?"

"If I had my way," replied Mr. Flynn, "there would not be a Democratic enumerator North or South." [Applause and laughter.]

The bill was then passed without the amendments.

MR. TELLER ON THE CURRENCY.

Colorado Senator Criticises Secretary Gage and Opposes the New Financial Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—In the Senate to-day Mr. Teller (Silver Rep., Col.,) resumed his speech on the financial bill, in the course of which he arraigned Secretary Gage for his negotiations with the National City Bank of New York. He had not concluded his remarks when he suspended them for the day.

Mr. Teller began with a criticism of the pending bill because it afforded opportunity to banks to issue paper money.

"This surrender of the great power of the Government," said he, "the right to make money, should bring our legislation into absolute contempt. This bill, I know, will be crystallized into law. When the Republican caucus declared that this legislation must be enacted there was nothing else to be done.

"There was a time in the history of the Republican Party when no caucus would have attempted to say to an independent Senator: 'You must follow the majority.' There are men on this floor who know that they would never vote for this bill except under the influence of party caucus and party force."

Mr. Teller then read the now famous letter of Vice President A. B. Hepburn of the National City Bank of New York to Secretary Gage. He thought it a most remarkable letter.

"I do not speak ill willingly of those in authority," he said. "I want to think kindly of them. But here is a letter which ought to have gone back to the writer with a stinging reply. From subsequent events, however, it is evident that the Secretary intended to grant the request."

Mr. Teller said that when he saw bank Presidents taking such actions in politics as were indicated by the Hepburn letter he was satisfied that the situation demanded severe criticism, if not drastic action.

"Is there any necessity for this legislation?" inquired Mr. Teller. "I'd like to ask the Senator from Rhode Island (Aldrich) whether there is any trouble with American credit. Is there any other country which can sell its securities at such prices as we can? All of our bonds are higher than those of any other country. So badly is questioning our honesty. And yet we have legislation here, the avowed purpose of which is to strengthen our credit and relieve taxation. The Senator from Rhode Island did not tell us how our credit is threatened, nor did he tell us how this bill could relieve us from the burdens of taxation."

In conclusion, Mr. Teller reviewed the monetary conditions in foreign countries and said that this was not a safe time to effect a change in our monetary system. Notwithstanding the so-called prosperous condition of the country, there was a serious money panic in New York which forced the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase about $22,000,000 of United States bonds. In addition to that, the Secretary had put into National banks throughout the country about $120,000,000, in order to maintain the financial equilibrium.

"A financial condition," declared Mr. Teller, "which requires to be bolstered up by the Treasury Department is a bad condition."

He thought it unwise to be experimenting in our finances when we were very well off at present.

Mr. Chandler (Rep., N. H.,) interrupted Mr. Teller to say that one question which seemed to make the adoption or rejection of the pending bill a moral question was the probable destruction of values in silver-using countries.

"I have never said," continued Mr. Chandler, "much about the 'crime of '73,' because I have been inclined to think the demonetization of silver then was accidental and not intentional, but the reduction by England and the United States of the value of the silver hoards of India and the Oriental silver countries was a crime and an offense against morality."

Without completing his remarks, Mr. Teller suspended for the day, promising to continue at some later date. The Senate then, at 4:55 P. M., went into executive session, and at 5:10 adjourned.

PHILIPPINES IN DISCUSSION.

Senator Wellington of Maryland Opposes the Permanent Retention of the Islands.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—In accordance with previous notice Mr. Wellington (Rep., Md.,) addressed the Senate to-day on the Philippine question. The text of his speech was the joint resolution which he introduced on Tuesday last, declaring that it is not the purpose of the United States to deprive the Filipinos of their right of self-government, and the war now being waged is not for the permanent possession of the islands, but for the establishment of peace and order, and further declaring that the Filipinos shall have the privilege under the protection of the United States, of establishing a republic.

"I for one," said Mr. Wellington, "am not ready to enter upon a policy of expansion, the first exemplification of which is to be the taking, by force of arms, of the lands, persons, and privileges of the Philippine Islanders."

He believed that one of the greatest blessings that ever befell England was the loss of the American colony. Referring to Great Britain's war with the Transvaal, Mr. Wellington said:

"She has not met the Caucasian race since the Crimean war, and now, when for the first time for half a century she attempts to send her army to destroy a brave and courageous, but unfortunate people, she all at once rudely awakens from the dream of her power because she finds that corruption has eaten to her very vitals, and her army, which she deemed was still like that of Cromwell—invincible—has been belabored and defeated every day since it attacked the Boers."

Mr. Wellington referred to the part the people of his own State had taken in the Spanish war, saying:

"On that July morning which by its rising sun heralded the destruction of the Spanish naval power in Santiago Bay, as it illuminated the line of American warships advancing to deal death and destruction to the Spanish fleet, surrounded by a halo of glory the martial figure of a son of Maryland, Winfield Scott Schley, who guided and directed the great contest. And though now it seems to be the policy of a cabal of one of the departments of this Administration to rob him of the glory which justly is his, the verdict of the American people has been recorded, and he will go down to history as the true hero of that naval battle.

"A year and a half has passed since the great battle, and yet there is no indication that we intend to keep faith with the Cubans, but there is every indication that by the power of syndicates, cabals, and combinations there is to be continued in Cuba the despotism of a military government, in which the Cubans themselves have no part, which is beyond the pale of any law save that of force, and is not recognized by our Constitution.

"But the great question that now confronts us as a result of this war is the question of the Philippine Islands.

"It is neither fair nor just to attack the President or the Administration for the conduct of the present war. When the unfortunate contention began he could not do otherwise than uphold American authority and stand by American arms, and during the months of the interregnum between the two sessions of Congress it was his duty to continue this war for the upholding of American authority in the islands. But the period of the interregnum has passed; the responsibility of the President has ceased, for Congress is now in session, and it is the duty of Congress to provide such legislation as will proclaim to the world in a manner emphatic and free from equivocation the design and purpose of our Government with reference to the Philippine Islands.

"I oppose the permanent annexation of these islands for the reason that I believe it is an opposition to the basic principle of our Government; also because I believe it is unrighteous and unjust to deprive any people of their right of governing themselves."

Mr. Turner (Rep., Wash.,) announced that he would speak on the Philippine question next Monday., and Mr. Bacon (Dem., Ga.,) gave notice that he would discuss his resolution on the Philippines next Wednesday.

Mr. Ross (Rep., Vt.,) offered a resolution declaring that the provisions of the Constitution do not, unaided by act of Congress, extend over Puerto Rico and the Philippine Islands: that by the Paris treaty the United States takes sovereignty over Puerto Rico and the Philippines under the duty to exercise it for the general welfare of the inhabitants; and that a separate department of the Government is demanded to take charge of all outlying dependencies.

Mr. Ross gave notice that he would speak on the resolution next Tuesday.

NEED FOR AN ISTHMIAN CANAL.

Senator Morgan Points Out the Advantages to Accrue.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Senator Morgan, as Chairman of the Senate Committee on Inter-Oceanic Canals, to-day presented a written report upon the Nicaraguan Canal bill. The following extracts from the report indicate its general purport:

"As a provision for the naval and military defense of our country, whether insular or continental, this canal is indispensable, and the closer its location is made to our States on the Gulf of Mexico, the more efficient will be its protection to our coasts on the Atlantic and Pacific.

"Measured by the income of the Suez Canal, at a corresponding cost, the Nicaragua Canal should yield, with equivalent rates of tolls, at least 12 per cent. on $140,000,000.

"It is too severe a tax upon credulity to ask the adoption of the precarious water supply at Panama in preference to the two grand lakes of the Nicaragua route, one of which is 100 miles long by 45 miles broad, and affords nearly seventy-two miles of fresh water navigation for the largest ships as part of the canal route, and together they supply more than ten times the water needed to supply the canal line from Lake Nicaragua to both oceans. We owe it to ourselves and to the whole world that whatever canal we shall build and control on the Isthmus of Darien shall be as open, free and neutral to all nations as its corresponding gateway, the Suez Canal."

MR. SHERMAN DECLINES.

He Will Not Accept Nomination for Secretary of the Senate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The Senate caucus of Republicans will meet again to-morrow, when Senator Platt of New York, unless he has secured a new candidate, will announce to the Senate his attempt to secure B. B. Odell and Representative Sherman to stand as candidates for the office of Secretary, and his failure in both instances.

Mr. Sherman brought his declination to-day when he returned to town, stating that it was in compliance with the wishes of his constituents that he had decided to remain in the House. This soon became known in the Senate. Since then there has been much speculation as to who shall be offered as New York's candidate, and among the intimate friends of Gen. J. S. Clarkson it was assumed that he would be elected after it had been found impossible to get another candidate.

The prospect is that the caucus will adjourn again without choosing officers for the Senate. The opposition to Clarkson on the part of Republican Senators is such that Clarkson could not afford to accept the election.

SOUTH WANTS PAY FOR COTTON.

Favorable Legislation Expected at This Session of the Congress.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Southern Senators express themselves as hopeful over the prospect of securing legislation during the present session of Congress looking to the refunding of money paid into the Treasury of the United States soon after the civil war as the result of the sale of cotton captured by the Federal forces. There was originally about $30,000,000 of this money, but a portion of it was paid to the owners of the cotton soon after the close of the war. The remainder was left in the Treasury, and has remained there ever since.

Senator Money, (Dem., Miss.,) who is giving especial attention looking to the reopening of the subject, says that the sum left amounts to about $11,000,000. A bill introduced by Senator Davis (Rep., Minn.,) gives one year additional time for proof of such claims before the Court of Claims. It has been favorably reported by the Senate Committee on Claims, and Senator Money thinks the outlook very good for favorable action. Most of the claims are held in the Southern States.

REPORTS IN THE ROBERTS CASE.

Both Majority and Minority to be Submitted Next Week.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Chairman Tayler of the Roberts committee and Representative Littlefield of Maine are busy preparing the majority and minority reports respectively in the Roberts case. They will be filed together on Saturday. It is not expected that the case will be called up in the House until Tuesday or Wednesday of next week. The debate is expected to occupy two or three days. Mr. Roberts will be given an opportunity to be heard upon the floor in his own defense.

Mr. Littlefield and Mr. De Armond of Missouri, who will sign the minority report, are hopeful that the mode of procedure which they favor—to allow Mr. Roberts to be sworn in and then expel him—will be followed. The majority of the committee, on the other hand, are confident that their report will be adopted, and that Mr. Roberts will be excluded without being sworn in.

Bill for a Pacific Cable.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Representative Corliss of Michigan has introduced a bill for the construction and operation, under the Government of the United States, of a cable between this country, Hawaii, Guam, the Philippine Islands, and other countries. The President is empowered to determine the route, the maintenance, operation, &c., of the line being placed under the control of the Postmaster General, the Secretary of War, and the Secretary of the Navy. The bill appropriates $500,000, and limits the cost of the cable to $8,000,000. Authorization is given the President to arrange with Japan and China for cable-landing points.

To Reform the Consular Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The House Committee on Foreign Affairs to-day entered upon the consideration of the bill for the reformation of the Consular Service—for the promotion and continuous service of Consular officers. It is identical with the bill favorably reported by the Foreign Affairs Committee in the last Congress. Next Thursday the committee will hear the representatives of the Business Men's League of Chicago, the Merchants' Association of New York, and other commercial bodies.

Would Repeal the Bankruptcy Law.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Mr. De Armond of Missouri has introduced a bill in the House for the repeal of the bankruptcy law with a reservation that proceedings now begun may be closed up.

WEBSTER'S STATUE UNVEILED.

Secretary Long Receives It for the United States and Senator Lodge Delivers the Oration.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—A distinguished gathering of public officials, including President McKinley and his entire Cabinet, representatives of the Senate and House of Representatives, the judiciary of the United States Supreme Court, and other branches of public life, participated to-day in exercises attending the unveiling of the colossal bronze statue of Daniel Webster, executed by the Italian sculptor, Trentanove, and presented to the United States by Mr. Stilson Hutchins of the City of Washington. The statue occupies a position on Scott Circle, but prior to the actual unveiling, the ceremonies of presentation and acceptance were held at the Lafayette Opera House. The President occupied a seat at the front of the stage, and back of him sat the members of the Cabinet.

After prayer by the blind Chaplain of the Senate, the Rev. Dr. Milburn, Senator Chandler, in behalf of the two branches of Congress, read Mr. Hutchins's presentation letter, and added a tribute to the statesmanship, the oratory, and the patriotism of Webster.

Secretary Long then accepted the statue in behalf of the United States. He said in part:

"To George Washington and his associates who in 1787 framed the Federal Constitution, we owe that great paper. It bound the thirteen independent colonies into a union, and created the United States of America. In it they gave us the ample letter and frame of government.

"To the overwhelming arguments, nearly half a century later, of Daniel Webster in the Senate, and the luminous judgments of John Marshall on the bench, we owe its development by interpretation and construction into the great charter of powers which now constitute the National authority. They illuminated its letter with the National spirit. They breathed into its frame the life of National sovereignty. In the momentous debate in which at that time they participated over the measure of its grant of power—a debate of giants—the issue was between a limitation on the one hand, which would have narrowed the growth of the young Republic, and endangered the Union, and on the other, an expansion which insured the indestructibility of the Union, and left free the Republic to its largest development.

"I am deputed by the President to speak his acceptance of this statue for the United States with the highest appreciation of the man it commemorates and of the gift thus added to the reproductions in enduring bronze of those to whom she has said, Well done."

Secretary Long's remarks were warmly applauded, and then, amid another outburst of applause, Senator Lodge delivered the oration of the day. Senator Lodge said, among other things:

"Webster gave form and expression, at once noble and moving, to the National sentiment of his people. In what he said men saw clearly what they themselves thought, but which they could not express. That sentiment grew and strengthened with every hour, when men had only to repeat his words in order to proclaim the creed in which they believed. And after he was dead Webster was heard again in the deep roar of the Union guns from Sumter to Appomattox. His message, delivered as he alone could deliver it, was potent in inspiring the American people to the terrible sacrifices by which they saved the Nation when he lay silent in his grave at Marshfield. Belief in the Union and the Constitution, because they meant National greatness and National life, was the great dominant conviction of Webster's life. It was part of his temperament. He loved the outer world, the vast expanses of sea and sky, all that was large and unfettered in nature. So he admired great States and empires, and had little faith in small ones or in the happiness or worth of a nation which has no history, and which fears its fate too much to put its fortunes to the touch when the accepted time has come.

"In a period when great forces were at work, which, in their inevitable conflict, threatened the existence of the union of States, Webster stands out above all others as the champion as the very embodiment, of the National life and the National faith. More than any other man of that time he called forth the sentiment more powerful than all reasonings which saved the Nation. It was a great work, greatly done, with all the resources of a powerful intellect and with an eloquence rarely heard among men."

The formal ceremonies concluded with a benediction by the Rev. Mr. Couden, Chaplain of the House. The drawing of the veil was performed by Jerome Bonaparte, a great-grandson of Webster, assisted by Mrs. Hutchins and Miss Katherine Deering.

LOCAL GAS SITUATION.

Standard Framing Measures to Prevent Breaches of Good Faith — Mr. Sage Will Not Resign.

The local gas situation yesterday had few new features, while it was evident that, so far as the Standard Gas Light Company is concerned, Russell Sage's fellow-Directors and stockholders are not idle in furthering measures that will be a bar to breaches of good faith by the President of the company or any one else.

The Directors of the New Amsterdam Gas Company held their regular monthly meeting yesterday, and it was stated that nothing was done beyond the transaction of ordinary business. One of the Directors made, however, an authoritative statement on rumors about the company. He said that it had not acquired the Sage and Andrews holdings of 18,400 shares, and that it was not back of the appeal of George A. Lamb of Lamb & Voss to the stockholders of the Consolidated Gas Company to attend the annual meeting on Monday in force or to send their proxies to Mr. Lamb.

"We are," he added, "attending strictly to business at a $1.05 rate. As to the Consolidated's stockholders, it is hardly to be wondered at that they are dissatisfied with a 4 per cent. dividend."

B. B. McAlpin, Secretary of the Standard Gas Light Company's Protective Committee, said last evening of the progress toward obtaining control of the stock: "Things are coming our way. So a Director says that we have control of 42,000 shares out of the necessary 47,000? He's too low. That's all I can say on the subject, except that we will not stop at a bare majority."

Members of the Protective Committee were not disposed to talk of their plans or of the progress made toward securing majority control of the stock of the company. John T. Terry said that while such information was at the disposition of any stockholder, it would not be prudent to make it public. Mr. Terry refused to discuss Mr. Sage. "Let him talk all he will," he said. "I have nothing to say in reply to him. As to our endeavor to secure control of a majority of Standard stock, we've pretty nearly got it, and we're going to have it."

Russell Sage's chief care yesterday afternoon was reading and repudiating published interviews with him on the gas and rapid transit questions.

"I am made to say," he complained, "that I did not care if the Protective Committee got control of the majority of the stock of the Standard Gas Light Company or not, and that I couldn't be turned out of the Presidency of the company until next April. I said nothing of the sort. I do say, however, that I do not propose to resign."

Of the result of his appeal to the stockholders of the Consolidated Gas Company, Mr. Lamb said that many have called on him and tendered their proxies. He intimated that he would have something of unusual interest to make public to-day.

STATE TRUST COMPANY FIGHT.

$900,000 Paid on the Whitney Syndicate Loan—The Two Official Examinations.

There was somewhat of a lull yesterday in the fight which Abram Kling, one of the stockholders of the State Trust Company, is making against the concern, but Charles P. Bacon, Mr. Kling's counsel, declared that he was going to push the fight on any grounds that his opponents chose, personal or otherwise.

Some of the loans made by the company on securities alleged to be insufficient have been paid off. Of the $2,000,000 loan made to Mr. Shea, Thomas F. Ryan's employe for the Whitney syndicate, $900,000 has been paid.

Mr. Judson of the State Banking Department, speaking yesterday of the fact that Gen. Andrews had been appointed by the Governor to make an investigation of the State Trust Company's affairs, said: "We know nothing about Gen. Andrews's report. That was the result of a special investigation ordered by the Governor, and we had nothing to do with it. We made our own investigation, and last night I sent to Mr. Kilburn, at Albany, the report of the New York office in the matter." Gen. Andrews declined to discuss the matter beyond the statement that he had reported things as he saw them, and would stand by his report.

Walter S. Johnston, President of the company, said last evening: "It is a remarkable circumstance that from Albany we hear that the official reports are confidential, and doubtless are treated so by the officials, but all the same the proceedings against this institution have been conducted in such a way that there has come into the possession of persons anxious to use them to our injury, records which, instead of being treated as confidential, are daily distorted for the morning press with false imputations and reflections. Meanwhile, the company has not called a loan since this proceeding began, its deposits have not been affected, and its cash balances are larger than at any time within three months."

TRIPLETS WEIGH TEN POUNDS.

Tiny Specimens of Humanity Born at Gouverneur Hospital.

Triplets, two boys and a girl, were born yesterday to Mrs. Joseph Schausly, wife of a wrapper maker of 111 Norfolk Street. The mother and children are in Gouverneur Hospital. Schausly makes $6 a week, and the family, which includes two other children, lives in three small rooms.

Though ten pounds six ounces is the combined weight of the triplets, the doctors have hopes that all of them will live. The mother and father have already named them, calling the boys Jacob and Allen and the girl Frances.

Millionaire's Heirs Attack Trustee.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 18.—Testimony was heard by Vice Chancellor Stevens to-day in an action brought by the heirs of Edwin Lister to have William R. Weeks removed as Trustee of the Lister estate. The heirs are Robert P. Lister and Mrs. Esther G. Selby, children of Edwin Lister, and his four grandchildren. The estate is worth about $1,500,000. In their bill the complainants alleged incompetency and neglect. They also allege that Weeks conspired to sell his trust and that he still has in his possession $240,000 in money that should be divided as part of the residuary estate and a large amount of rents which he has collected from real estate. Mr. Weeks denies all the allegations.

Senator-Elect McLaurin Better.

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 18.—Senator-elect McLaurin, who has been dangerously ill of pneumonia, is considerably better to-day and is now considered out of danger.

SAYS HE IS A BIGAMIST.

Hart, Admitting He Has Three Wives, Begs to be Arrested—Court's Proposal Adds Complications.

Henry Hart, of 95 Perry Street, Manhattan, yesterday called on District Court Judge Seymour, in Hoboken, and asked to be arrested on a charge of bigamy. He said that he married Mary E. Howe in a Methodist Church in New York on Jan. 27, 1888. Two years later she became addicted to drink and he left her. A year afterward he read a notice of her death in a New York newspaper, and on Sept. 5, 1894, he married Annie Corbett in a Roman Catholic Church in Twenty-third Street, near Sixth Avenue. Two children were born to them. Then the first Mrs. Hart appeared, and Mrs. Hart No. 2 returned to her parents. Again Hart was told that his first wife was dead, and he then married Annie Dede, of Hoboken, the ceremony having been performed at Union Hill by Recorder Hauenstein. One child was born of this marriage, and then wife No. 2 found them, and wife No. 3 returned to her parents.

Hart said he had twice asked the New York police to arrest him, but they refused to do so.

The Judge said he could not take cognizance of the case, he having only civil jurisdiction. He also told Hart that the criminal courts would not act unless a complaint were made against him by one of the three wives. He said that neither the second nor the third wife would do this, and he did not know where the first wife could be found.

The Judge advised him to get a divorce from the first wife and then remarry one of the other women. Hart said that would leave him in as great a quandary as ever, for he did not know which of his later wives he loved best.

COTTON.—There was a greater stir in cotton circles yesterday, the general positions assuming a decidedly better form. Private cables were unanimous in ascribing an advance of ½@2½ points on futures and 1-16d on spots to reported English victories and the unavailing efforts of representatives in this country to secure much-needed supplies of raw material at old prices. Our market made a steady start, with prices sympathetically higher. Active covering by room shorts and fairly good buying for Wall Street account, supplemented by large purchases of March and May cotton by arbitrage houses, led to a further slight improvement, after which the market quieted down and prices slowly fell back. The South was a fair operator on the bull side from time to time during the day. Although commission houses complained as to the volume of orders, sentiment, as a rule, was unmistakably more confident than for a week or more. The impression here is general that European spinners are badly off for spot cotton, while having contract orders in yarns and cloths for months ahead. This impression was intensified by private accounts from Southern points, stating that exporters were heavy buyers, purchasing 10,000 bales at 1-16c advance in New Orleans alone. Receipts were considerably inside of predictions, and instead of the outlook favoring an accelerated movement, all indications point to general contraction in this respect during the rest of the season. The market at the close was steady, with near months 4@7 points higher, and far months 1@2 points lower. Southern spot markets, middling quoted, were officially reported by wire as follows: New Orleans, 7 7-16c; Mobile, 7 5-16c; Savannah, 7 5-16c; Charleston, 7 5-16c; Wilmington, 7¼c; Norfolk, 7 9-16c; Baltimore, 7⅝c; Augusta, 7¼c; Memphis, 7⅜c; St. Louis, 7 7-16c.

BREADSTUFFS.—WHEAT—The wheat market was guided yesterday by the weakness of Liverpool cables and the astonishing depression in Northwest markets. The local element, rather prepared for a rally in the market instead of a break, had considerable wheat to sell throughout the forenoon. It was not apparent that the short interest was much enlarged during the session, however, care being taken to act cautiously on that side, as was demonstrated in the last fifteen minutes, when prices advanced sharply from the lowest point of the day and closed rather firm, although still ⅝@⅞c under the previous night's figures. The drop at Duluth amounted to 1½c, at Minneapolis about 1c, and Chicago and St. Louis ¾@⅞c. The only occasions of steadiness during the day came in the afternoon, when once or twice the market rallied on covering. Contrary to expectations the Liverpool market opened ⅛@¼d lower, and closed ⅜d below the previous night. French markets at first were 5@20 points up on frost news, but unable to withstand the heaviness elsewhere, weakened in the afternoon, and closed 5 points lower to 10 points higher. In the way of statistics it was believed that visible supply figures might show a small decrease Monday. Northwest receipts amounted to only 282 cars, against 350 cars a year ago, and are not expected to improve much at the present level of prices. Seaboard clearances were very light.

THE ROBERTS CASE.

It is a great pity that such a question, or, rather, such a series of questions, as was put by the Roberts case should not have received a more respectable and authoritative solution. The report of the majority, it will be agreed by all who have followed the case, is simply disreputable. It is not unjust to describe it as a "henpecked" report, and this, of course, without reference to the domestic relations of its signers. It shows the willingness to "pander to the better element" in spite of law, in spite of precedents, in spite of consequences, in spite of everything by which a legislative committee, conscious of its responsibilities and conscious of the far-reaching effect of improvident precedents, ought to be guided.

The report of the minority is in most gratifying contrast. In comparison we should describe it as a monument of civic and parliamentary courage. It is that in comparison. It would be that in fact if the protestants of the minority had not weakened their case by the suggestion that ROBERTS could be turned out after he had been put in.

That has nothing to do with the case at this stage of it. At this stage of it the question is simply of the credentials of a man who presents himself and demands to be received as the representative of his constituents. ROBERTS's case is, prima facie, perfect. It as much entitles him to take his seat as the credentials of any member of the committee entitled him to take his seat. If ROBERTS is personally a malefactor, that is a matter which may justify his expulsion but cannot properly be considered at all at this stage.

This is not a mere question of form. It is a question of substance. It is a question, not of the ultimate, but of the "prima facie" right of a constituency to be represented by the man of its own choice. And we have already pointed out the enormous power which a precedent, once set in the Roberts case, may have hereafter in some case in which there is no question of morals at all, but only the question of retaining power by a narrow majority.

The majority of members of the House and of the committee are lawyers. As such they are "charged with knowledge", that a case like this is not to be disposed of in a gust of moral hysteria. That is why we say that the report of the majority of the committee is disreputable. That is why we hope that the House will rise superior to that disreputable recommendation.

THE CHIEF BENEFIT.

The increase in real estate values which Mr. HARNETT points out as one of the sure consequences of the operation of the underground rapid transit road is an effective and eloquent argument for the project.

A 10 per cent. increase in valuations all along the line, rising to as much as 25 per cent. in the case of North End property not yet built upon, will add millions to the wealth of the city. It will make many owners of realty richer. The assessable valuations upon the tax books will reflect the increase, so that the city will not only be richer by the road and its structures, which it will ultimately own, but by an immeasurable increment in the value of the property upon which taxes can be levied.

This is not the primary object of the construction of the road, however, nor is an increase in the values of real estate the greatest of the benefits it will confer upon the people of the city.

It is for its utility and convenience in the immediate purpose of its undertaking, the carrying of passengers, that the tunnel road will be chiefly prized and most beneficial. The people of New York have commanded this road to be built in order that they may be carried at great speed and with reasonable comfort from their homes to their business and from their places of business to their homes. They have never enjoyed such a privilege. They have suffered great discomforts and loss by not having it. The growth of the city has been retarded by the long delay in getting rapid transit. Every man or corporation who has put obstacles in its way has hindered the development of New York. Every man who has helped it has been a friend of the city.

The passenger traffic of New York—Manhattan and Bronx—was increasing at the rate of 20,000,000 passengers per annum in the decade 1887-97. The present rate of increase is much greater. All the new facilities for travel that have been created in the last four years are already overburdened. The city has outgrown them almost before they have been completed. The pressure for greater accommodation is now a source of crowding, delay, and discomfort. In a few years it would be maddening if there should be no addition to the machinery of transportation.

The tunnel road will not be in operation a day too soon for its customers. If it is completed and has trains running in four years it will be in time to avert the worst consequences of a "car famine" in the city passenger business. And it will be put to a good test of its capacity almost from the start. It is more than probable that new underground roads will be begun, notably one on the east side, before Mr. MCDONALD has completed the work under his contract.

THE NEW SUFFRAGE PLAN.

There are signs that the Crumpacker scheme for reducing the representation of the South in Congress and the Electoral College is gaining some support among the Republicans, and that an organized effort will be made to get the idea of it included in the Republican platform at Philadelphia this Summer. It is a pretty foolish scheme politically, and it is most risky for the general interests of the Nation.

It is based on the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution. This declares that "when the right to vote at any election for the choice of Electors for President and Vice President of the United States, Representatives in Congress [and some State officers] is denied to any of the male inhabitants being twenty-one years of age and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens in such State." Of course this is a very sweeping provision. It was adopted immediately after the civil war, when men's minds were in an extremely excited state, and when words and acts were not carefully weighed. The language of the Constitution is mandatory, and it is the plain duty of Congress to carry it out. Yet since it was passed there have been three censuses of the population taken and the requirements of the Constitution in regard to representation based on the census have been utterly ignored.

Indeed, it would make sad havoc with the suffrage laws of most of the States if the language of the amendment were strictly applied. That would make it necessary to reduce the representation of every State that denied the right to vote to male inhabitants not guilty of rebellion or other crime, because they could not read or write, or because they were paupers, or idiots, or insane, or under guardianship. Yet there are thirty-five of the States of the Union which do deny the suffrage for one or another of these causes. Connecticut, Massachusetts, Mississippi, and Wyoming impose an educational or intelligence test; Arkansas, Georgia, Mississippi, and Tennessee require the payment of taxes; ten States disfranchise paupers, and twenty-eight States refuse the suffrage to idiots or insane persons or those under guardianship. Michigan denies the right to duelists and accessories, and Vermont will let no man vote who has not obtained the approval of the Board of Civil Authority of the town in which he resides. If the second clause of the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution is to be carried out as its language demands that it shall be, there is going to be an enormous amount of bother for other than Southern States.

Let us suppose, however, that it is the purpose of the newly-hatched scheme simply to reduce the representation of those States in which an attempt has been made to deprive the negroes of their votes by tests of illiteracy or intelligence that in practice are not applied to the whites. Unquestionably that is a most unfair and unwise measure in any State. It comes within the language of the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution, and within the spirit of the fifteenth. Congress has a right to take steps to prevent or punish such a measure. But how can that right be exercised without doing far more mischief than the measure itself? It would tend to reunite the South, which is now fairly beginning to divide. What is worse, it would tend to stimulate the race prejudice, which is the one peril of the section. If this question is left to be settled by each State it is possible and even likely that in the long run intelligent and fair public opinion in the State will secure right action, and this opinion will be made by both races. If the Federal Government is to interfere, this force is neutralized. The two races will be incited to quarrel, and will quarrel, and both will suffer, while the whole country will suffer with them.

THE RICH RICHER AND THE POOR RICHER

That was a striking epigram which Senator WOLCOTT made in the Senate the other day, in reply to the bilious and pessimistic remarks of the Senator from South Dakota. To the contrary of these observations, said the Senator from Colorado, the rich are growing richer and the poor are growing richer also. The form of the statement is, so far as we know, Senator WOLCOTT's own. It was evidently suggested by the complaint which is, in this country at least, a full generation old, that "the rich are growing richer and the poor are growing poorer." That has been a taking statement, and has captivated a large number of persons who have not taken the trouble, or, perhaps, have lacked the disposition, to inquire into the facts.

Senator WOLCOTT's statement of the opposite contention is equally epigrammatic. It has the advantage of being the epigrammatic statement of a fact. There has never been a time in the history of this country, and, therefore, there has never been a time in the history of man, when a man who had nothing but an able body and a willingness to work has been so well off as he is in the United States of America to-day. It is true that he is not so well off as the man who has also "learned a trade," that is to say, who has learned how to employ his able body and his willingness to work in some pursuit that produces things that mankind need. But there also has never been a time or place when and where the facilities for learning how to supply these constant demands were so plentiful as they are here and now. Mr. CARNEGIE's recent gift to the Cooper Institute is the latest instance of that. But it is only one instance out of a thousand.

But let us stick to the case of the man who has only strong arms and a willing heart wherewith to support himself and his. Where else in the world can that man get so fully all the necessaries of life as here and now? Where else can he get so many comforts which at any other time and place would be counted as luxuries? If he be ambitious, where and when else could he get or could he ever have got, leisure in which to work for the improvement of his condition by increasing his own producing power? It is his loss and his affair if he wastes this leisure, instead of improving it. It is simply true that, in this country, "the rich are growing richer and the poor are growing richer also."

TWO UPRIGHT MEN.

When Mr. CLARK of Missouri told Mr. SIBLEY of Pennsylvania that "his place is on the other side of the political aisle" in the House of Representatives, he spoke for many of his friends, but he was foolish. Mr. SIBLEY has seen light on the question of free coinage of silver. "I believed in 1896," he said, "that bimetallism was sacred, but events have so changed conditions by the enormous production of gold that the price level for which both the gentleman from Missouri and I were striving was raised. The cause I held sacred then has become ridiculous." If this were the only thing in which the Democrats can differ from the Republicans Mr. SIBLEY might properly go across the aisle. It would be improper for him to stay with Mr. CLARK and the rest. Mr. CLARK thinks that free silver is all there is in Democracy, and that a man who abandons that ought to go across the aisle. We should advise him not to press that doctrine too far. Mr. SIBLEY says that he "will keep step with the party if it will adopt a policy, but if it invites him to a banquet of carping and fault-finding it will have to excuse him." That is fair, and it is the way a great number of Democrats feel on the eve of the Presidential election.

Mr. DRIGGS of the Third Congressional District of New York is one of these. He, too, repudiates the free-silver doctrine and declares that it is not Democracy. He says:

I am not a Republican; "I am a Democrat." As such I believe in the gold standard, and I can be as radical in that belief as you, my colleagues, in your free-and-unlimited-coinage ideas; for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1 is not bimetallism; it is silver monometallism.

THE MASSACRE IN KENTUCKY.

Nobody, at least no civilized person, who read the report of the shooting of SCOTT by COLSON in Kentucky, and incidentally of several persons more or less remotely related to the quarrel between SCOTT and COLSON or not related to it at all, can have failed to experience the emotion of disgust as well as the emotion of regret. The community in which such things can happen cannot be, such a reader will say, admitted to be a civilized community.

But it does not follow that the man who did the fatal shooting was guilty of murder or guilty of any crime, as assuredly there is no chance that he will be convicted of any. No man who observes the code of ethics in vogue in the community to which he belongs can properly be described as a criminal. And this, and no more than this, is what Col. COLSON appears to have done. He had had a quarrel with SCOTT, about the merits of which we have no trustworthy information, and they do not matter. He was a respectable and even a distinguished citizen. SCOTT seems to have been a ruffian. COLSON knew that SCOTT was "looking for him." He might perhaps have got out of SCOTT's way, though this would have subjected him to the charge of cowardice. He might have sworn out a warrant against the truculent SCOTT, which would certainly have subjected him to that charge. Or he might have armed himself and, without "hunting for trouble," prepared himself to encounter it if it came, exhibiting, as the law says, "that diligence which a prudent man will exercise in the conduct of his own business." From the point of view not of New York, N. Y., nor yet of London, England, but of Frankfort, Ky., there is no just fault to be found with the behavior of Col. COLSON. And certainly there is no fault to be found, on public grounds, with the disappearance of SCOTT, which is the only one of the casualties of the occasion which COLSON intended.

But what about the point of view of Frankfort, Ky.? What about the social compulsion which lay upon COLSON, for that is what it amounted to, either to kill his enemy or to allow his enemy to kill him? We must not forget that in the feeling which produced this compulsion there is also something of genuine and human. The sentiment behind the compulsion is the sentiment that there ought to be something dearer to a man than his own life, and that a man to whom his own life is the greatest good is not a man at all. There is in this sentiment something fine, something chivalrous, something noble and fruitful. But when it goes the length of putting the life of the most respected citizen of a community at the mercy of the least respected, of any loafer who has the merit of a willingness to risk his own life, even though he has no other, and even though this merit may be either assumed, or induced by strong drink, then a noble sentiment has been perverted, to the grievous injury of the community which acquiesces in the perversion. "Pessima corruptio optimi." It is true that no harm is likely to come to COLSON for having killed SCOTT, and there is no reason for lamentation on that account. But it is also true that no harm would have been likely to befall SCOTT for killing COLSON, whom he sought for the purpose of killing him. And who would have dared to call that an exemplary result? The simple truth is that communities in which the sense of personal honor goes the length of condoning homicide, whenever homicide results from a personal quarrel, are out of line with "the opinions of mankind," and are not entitled to be called civilized. That is a consideration for the good people of Frankfort, and for the good people of Kentucky in general. The world is against them.

THE GEORGE JUNIOR REPUBLIC.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you permit me to call the attention of the readers of THE TIMES to the importance of the work being done by the George Junior Republic at Freeville, N. Y., in its bearing upon one of the problems growing out of our city life?

The Junior Republic is an attempt to diminish pauperism and crime by instilling into neglected children lessons of morality, responsibility, and self-control, taught in such a way that the children see or learn by experience the inevitable results of laziness, disorder, and disobedience of moral laws. That they may learn these lessons as naturally as possible, and in a way to make them most useful in after life, the children are allowed to form a system of society of their own, modeled so far as possible upon the great Republic in which they will ultimately become citizens, and the largest practicable measure of self-government is allowed them.

As every citizen helps to make the laws, every citizen has a pride in maintaining and enforcing them. As every citizen is guarding his own possessions and his own Government, the breaker of law offends him personally. As every citizen is taxed for the support of the Government, he finds that pauperism and crime are expensive. Much is thus learned of the essential nature and reason of law.

The motto of the republic is "Nothing Without Labor," and it is intended to be fully carried out. The republic has a tin currency of its own, and the citizens are paid for all work done. Nothing is gratuitous. There are various kinds of work—school, farming, under the guidance of an experienced and educated farmer; carpentering, painting, shoemaking, care of the place, and also domestic service, for the care of the hotels, cottages, restaurants, and kitchens, the ordinary housekeeping of the republic, occupy much time and labor, especially of the girls.

Prominent among the lessons taught, aside from self-government, obedience to law, and the responsibility of citizenship, already mentioned, is the necessity and dignity of work. Every citizen of the republic must work, for upon work depends his ability to feed, lodge, and clothe himself. As has already been said, nothing is given away. He will soon find also that upon his work depends his standing in the community.

The results already achieved justify the belief in the efficiency of this work held by such careful students of social problems as Jacob A. Riis, the Rev. Washington Gladden, Prof. J. W. Jenks of Cornell University, Prof. W. T. Blackman of Yale, and President Charles W. Eliot of Harvard University. Of permanent citizens who have left the republic not one has yet been in trouble with the authorities, and the majority are doing more than well, many of them being engaged in farm or factory work, and some even preparing for college.

It remains to be said only that the children are under the charge of Mr. W. R. George, the Superintendent, with an assistant, housekeeper, and teachers. The institution is managed by a Board of Trustees elected by the George Junior Republic Association—an incorporated association, drawing its membership from philanthropists and persons interested in the work carried on by the republic. The Board of Trustees delegates its authority in the intervals to an Executive Committee, which meets monthly at the republic. The full Board of Trustees meets once a year at the republic.

The Treasurer of the association is Mr. A. G. Agnew, 7 Nassau Street, who will be glad to furnish your readers with any further information desired or to receive applications for membership in the association.

The Reformation of Inebriates.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Robert Graham has, I think, failed to appreciate my suggestion, which is simply that, as brewers and distillers make drunkards, brewers and distillers should be taxed to reform drunkards.

I have never heard of the revenue derived from taxation on liquor being specially devoted to the reformation of inebriates. If so, there will certainly be no difficulty in establishing and maintaining that very desirable means of which Mr. Graham writes, viz., the "Farm Colony."

It must always be remembered that all prohibitory legislation as to the liquor traffic is legislation against a recognized evil. A tax upon an evil should only be used to correct that evil, and only in this way can it benefit a community.

DROPPING PEBBLES IN THE STREAM.

From The Bismarck Tribune.

Drop a pebble in th' water—jes' a splash an' it is gone,
But th's half a hundred ripples circlin' on an' on an' on,
Spreadin', spreadin' from the centre, flowin' on out to the sea,
An' th' ain't no way o' tellin' where th' end is goin' to be.
Drop a pebble in the water—in a minute ye forget,
But th's little waves a' flowin' an' the's ripples circlin' yet,
All th' ripples flowin', flowin' to a mighty wave has grown,
An' ye've disturbed a mighty river—jes' by droppin' in a stone.

Drop an unkind word or careless—in a minute it is gone,
But th's half a hundred ripples circlin' on an' on an' on,
Th' keep spreadin', spreadin', spreadin' from the centre as th' go,
An' the' ain't no way to stop 'em, once ye've started 'em to flow.
Drop an unkind word or careless—in a minute ye forget,
But th's little waves a' flowin' and' the's ripples circlin' yet,
An' perhaps in some sad heart a mighty wave of tears ye've stirred,
An' disturbed a life et's happy when ye dropped an unkind word.

Drop a word o' cheer an' kindness—jes' a flash and it is gone,
But the's half a hundred ripples circlin' on an' on an' on,
Bearin' hope and joy an' comfort on each splashin', dashin' wave,
Till ye wouldn't b'lieve th' volume o' th' one kind word ye gave.
Drop a word o' cheer and kindness—in a minute ye forget,
But th's gladness still a' swellin' an' the's joy a' circlin' yet,
An' ye've rolled a wave of comfort whose sweet music can be heard
Over miles an' miles o' water—jes' by droppin' a kind word.

PHILIPPINE SECRETS OUT

Senator Davis Tells Why the Islands Were Retained.

GERMAN AGGRESSION FEARED

Peace Commissioners at Paris Learned That the Kaiser Was Preparing to Seize the Territory.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Senators who attended the executive session of the Senate before which Senator Davis made a speech touching the acquisition of the Philippines and the purpose of the Government toward those islands have managed to let out some interesting explanations made by Senator Davis concerning the reasons that actuated the Paris Commissioners in deciding to take over the islands and the policy of the Administration toward them in the future.

It seems that one reason why the executive session was demanded was that facts had been stated which could not have been discussed in the open Senate without provoking a friendly nation and leading to a disagreeable newspaper discussion on a situation now passed, so far as that nation is concerned. In order to make it clear to the Senate that the Paris Commission was not controlled by any desire to acquire territory, the instructions to the commission were read.

At the time that the negotiations at Paris were proceeding, and it was a matter of doubt whether the United States would take up the burden of responsibility for good order and peace in the Philippines, there was reason to believe that Germany stood ready, upon the intimation of our intention to abandon our territory there, to make a dash and gain a footing at Manila, and eventually upon such islands as were deemed desirable to extend Germany's colonial policy. This was not only a menace to our prestige, but it might have created ill-feeling in Great Britain, where the sentiment favoring our retention of control in the islands was strong, not unselfishly, but also not jealously, so far as the United States were concerned.

It is represented that Senator Davis made this plain, and that he showed that the Administration thereupon changed the instructions to the commission, abandoning the idea of partial occupation and deciding that for the time at least it was the duty of the United States to assume complete control of the archipelago. Further, the Senator is reported as having declared that the plan of the Philippine Commission to extend civil government throughout the islands, with native participaton as great as possible, is for the purpose, and that there is to be no cause for regret on the part of the Filipinos that have ceased to be subjects of Spain and required to yield temporary obedience to the United States.

A "400" FOR HAVANA.

New Social Organization Called the Assembly Formed.

Foreign Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Jan. 15.—Havana is now to have a Four Hundred, and every one in society is on the qui vive to know whether his or her name will be accepted for membership. Officers of the American Army and Navy will be accepted without questions, but all other names will go before a committee. The names of all Cubans will be presented to a Cuban committee, consisting of three members of the smart set; the names of all Americans and of other foreigners will be subject to the scrutiny of a committee of three Americans. For obvious reasons the names of those comprising these committees remain unknown.

This society will be known as The Assembly, and will give subscription balls every few weeks at the Maestranza. Gov. Gen. Wood is the President, Perfecto Lacosta Vice President, and Capt. Bellairs, Secretary. Señor Lacosta is the Mayor of Havana. Capt. Bellairs is an ex-officer of the English Army.

Every one is planning his or her costume for the first ball of the series, a fancy dress affair, to take place on Feb. 2. Officers may wear uniform in place of fancy dress if they wish. The idea of The Assembly grew out of the brilliant success attending the Wanderers' entertainment on Jan. 5.

MANY CLAIMS FOR PENSIONS.

Those of Spanish War Volunteers Outnumber Those of Regulars.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—A large number of claims for pensions are being received by the Pension Office as a result of the Spanish-American war. Statistics prepared by the bureau show that the percentage of applications from volunteers is much larger than from the regulars.

The battle of San Juan was selected by the bureau as a basis for calculations, as the greatest number of casualties occurred there. There were 192 regulars killed, 1,097 wounded, and 55 missing. Claims for pensions from the regular army number 2,962. At the same battle 34 volunteers were killed, 177 wounded, and 45 were missing. The claims for pensions from volunteers number 3,558. There were twenty-three regiments of regulars and three regular batteries engaged, as against nine regiments of volunteers. One regiment lost none in killed, wounded, or missing, but has 419 claims for pensions pending.

MUST LEAVE BATTERY PARK.

It Has Been Decided that the Manhattan Elevated Structure Cannot Be Hidden by Shrubbery.

Another conference between representatives of the Park Department and the Manhattan Elevated Railway Company was held yesterday morning at the office of President Clausen of the Park Board, to reach, if possible, a solution of their differences regarding the presence of the elevated railway structure in Battery Park. President Clausen announced that the structure would have to be removed from the park, the proposed plan of screening it by means of shrubbery and vines having been declared impracticable by N. J. Rose, landscape gardener of the Park Department, and John S. De Wolf, landscape architect of the department. Although admitting that such a growth might be maintained to a certain extent on the south side of the structure, Mr. Rose said that it was physically impossible to force a growth of shrubbery on the north side.

The subject was discussed at length, G. H. Pegram, Chief Engineer of the railroad company, insisting that the proposed State Street route would require so many sharp turns that the present traffic of the road could not be accommodated. It was finally suggested that the railroad company be permitted to build a long curve, cutting through the northeast corner of the park. The Manhattan representatives agreed to draw up plans on this basis. At the close of the meeting President Clausen said he was confident that the present attempt to oust the road from the park would be successful. He said, however, that nothing would be done hastily, and that public convenience would be considered at all times.

When inquiry was made at the office of the General Manager of the Manhattan Railway Company as to what was to be done about the Park Board's action, it was said that there was no statement to be made. No special meeting of the Board of Directors or of the Executive Committee has been called to consider the matter.

The new members were then initiated, including Dukes Albrecht and Nicolaus of Wurtemberg, and Count von Bülow. The Chapter was held behind closed doors, the table being of horseshoe shape, with the Emperor occupying the centre.

"But even if a satisfactory solution of the arbitration question should be reached, no country would be absolved from the duty of taking defensive measures. Nor will the existence of an arbitration tribunal release any country from the obligations imposed by the maintenance of neutrality."

SPEECH BY MR. CHAMBERLAIN.

Carefully Avoids Speaking of the War—Says Britain Must Keep Up to American Commercial Level.

BIRMINGHAM, Jan. 18.—The Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, the Secretary of State for the Colonies, presiding to-day at a meeting of the Mason University College here, referred to a variety of subjects, but carefully eschewed the war.

Mr. Chamberlain emphasized the necessity for specialized training, and, referring to the deputation which recently visited the universities and colleges of the United States and Canada, he said it found all classes of the community there enthusiastic in the support of education, which enthusiasm, he added, was lacking in Great Britain.

Continuing, Mr. Chamberlain remarked that there was no doubt England had much to learn from America, and unless she learned it quickly she was bound to fall behind in commerce. He foresaw competition in the future with America such as had never before been experienced, and, he declared, unless Great Britain kept up to the American level, she would lose her position in the world of commerce.

Touching on the success of the Birmingham University scheme, Mr. Chamberlain said that already £325,000 had been promised toward the endowment of the institution, and that of this sum Andrew Carnegie had anonymously given £100,000.

FRENCH GOVERNMENT WINS.

Vote of Confidence Passed by 329 to 74 in Chamber of Deputies—Millerand Answers His Critics.

PARIS, Jan. 18.—The promised interpellation of the Government's attitude toward the strikers of St. Etienne, directed against M. Millerand, (Socialist,) the Minister of Commerce, came up in the Chamber of Deputies this afternoon, and resulted in a victory for the Government.

The interpolator, M. Gay, Progressive Republican, representing St. Etienne, withdrew his motion at the last moment. M. Millerand, however, rose at the opening of the session and said he refused to rest under any allegation against him to the effect that he acted in favor of the strikers. He emphatically denied he had intervened in the strike without the knowledge of the Premier, M. Waldeck-Rousseau.

M. Dejeante, Socialist, then interpellated the Government respecting the strike in the Belfort region, alleging that the Prefect interfered in favor of the employers and summoned the military to protect the workmen from striking. He complained that during the exodus of the strikers to Belfort the women and children were compelled to sleep in the fields.

M. Salignac-Fenelon, Republican, here remarked: "Yes, but the wire-pullers of the strike slept at the best hotels."

M. Dejeante concluded his speech by demanding protection for workmen and shouting, "Down with Capitalists!" "Long Live the Labor Republic!" This was greeted with loud Radical cheers.

M. Gay here resuscitated his interpellation, accusing the Government of tolerating strikers' demonstrations, which, he added, were due to its indecision, and insisting that M. Millerand intervened and encouraged strikers to resist their employers' demands.

M. Millerand replied, repeating his original statement, and declaring that he intervened only to explain the operation of the law regarding accidents to workmen.

M. Waldeck-Rousseau read the instructions sent to the Prefect of the Loire, ordering respect for the right to strike and liberty of labor. He concluded by eulogizing the conduct of the workmen's unions, which, in directing the strike, prevented excesses, from which the mining strike was laudably free.

The Chamber then passed a vote of confidence in the Government by 329 yeas to 74 nays.

RUSSIAN WARSHIP ASHORE.

Big Ironclad Poltava in a Dangerous Position Near Libau.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 18.—The Russian ironclad Poltava is dangerously ashore near Libau, on the Baltic.

The Poltava was laid down in 1892 at the St. Petersburg Naval Yard and completed in 1894. She is a sister ship of the Sevastopol and the Petropaulowski, the three vessels having been ordered in 1892 owing to a spasm of alarm over the increase of the German Navy.

The Poltava is of 10,960 tons displacement. She is built of steel and is 367 feet 6 inches long and 69 feet wide, and has a depth of 26 feet. Her indicated horse power is 11,255. She is protected by a 15¾-inch belt at the water line. The armament consists of four 12-inch guns, eight 8-inch guns, and sixteen quick-firing guns of small and medium calibre. These guns are distributed in a fashion different from that of most of modern warships. The 12-inch guns are mounted in pairs in turrets forward and aft on the centre line of the ship. The 8-inch guns are also mounted in pairs in small turrets on the broadside. The large turrets are protected by 10-inch armor and the small turrets by 4¾-inch armor. Six torpedo-launching tubes complete the armament. The Poltava's speed is over 17 knots.

The cost of the construction of the Poltava was $5,490,000.

There is a large naval arsenal at Libau.

THE BOURGOGNE DISASTER.

Verdict of French Court Giving Damages to Victim's Widow Reversed.

PARIS, Jan. 18.—The Court of Appeal has reversed the decision of the lower court, which awarded 100,000 francs, as compensation, to Mrs. Resal, widow of P. Resal, a cabin passenger who perished in the disaster to La Bourgogne.

In stating the grounds of reversal, the Court holds that the disaster was not the fault of the Compagnie Générale Transatlantique or of Commander Deloncle.

La Bourgogne was sunk on the morning of July 4, 1898, after colliding with the British steamship Cromartyshire off Sable Island. After the disaster there were many accusations that the Captain and crew had not acted properly. On June 28, 1899, the French court gave 100,000 francs damages to Madame Resal.

The grounds stated by the Court for awarding damages were that Capt. Deloncle was at fault in not bringing the ship to a standstill after the collision; in losing time in launching the boats, and in not furnishing lifebelts to the passengers. The plaintiff was debarred from claiming any money which Resal might have had on board, and which might subsequently be recovered.

As soon as this decision was announced many other relatives of passengers who had lost their lives declared their intention of suing the Compagnie Générale Transatlantique.

RUMOR ABOUT CASTELLANE

Paris Papers Say He Lost Heavily in Stock Speculations.

HIS FATHER DENIES REPORTS

The Marquis May Fight with the Editor of the Figaro—The Soir Says Statements Are Malicious.

PARIS, Jan. 18.—Some of to-day's papers had more or less guarded reports as to alleged heavy losses in stock speculation on the part of Count Boni de Castellane, who married Miss Anna Gould of New York, and who, with his wife, is now on the way to the United States. It was even declared that the Count had been posted on the Bourse for failing to settle. The latter assertion is manifestly untrue, as only members of the Bourse are posted under such circumstances.

The Marquis de Castellane, Count Boni's father, has indignantly denied the truth of the rumors, and late to-day it was announced that the editor of the Figaro, one of the papers which printed them, would have to fight a duel either with the Marquis or the Count.

To-day's Tempe and Figaro had articles speaking of the collapse of a bull speculator, whose position was said to have been badly shaken at the last settlement by the decline of certain stocks in which he was said to have plunged.

The Figaro clearly indicated Count Boni de Castellane, by describing the speculator as a member of the Chamber of Deputies and a prominent society man who had not disguised his sympathies for uncompromising nationalism. Moreover, it was added, he had started on a long voyage "to find resources to repair his broken fortunes," and that his friends hoped he would not meet with disappointment. The paper remarked:

"Some 'patriotic' causes are very expensive, and for want of a better excuse this pretext can always be put forward to those who, owing to distance, are ignorant of many things."

The Matin openly mentioned Count de Castellane's name, saying: "Our own inquiries show his losses do not exceed three millions, he having succeeded in getting 'straight' on seven or eight transactions. Count Boni de Castellane left here for New York a few days ago with his wife, and it is probable the assistance of his brother-in-law will not be found wanting, and that he will tide over the situation of momentary embarrassment."

Later in the day the Marquis de Castellane, father of Count Boni, denied most emphatically the story that Count Boni has failed to meet his obligations due to Bourse transactions. The Marquis added that his son had never taken part in the alleged speculations. He declared that the fact that Count Boni and his wife are on their way to America has been taken advantage of and furnished the opportunity for false rumors.

The Count's father afterward gave a fresh turn to the affair by writing a letter to the editor of Figaro, Fernand Derodays, intimating that he must be prepared to fight a duel with the Count on the latter's return, or with the Marquis himself. In the course of the communication, after denouncing the statement of the Figaro as "canaillerie," the Marquis says:

"If my son were not on the sea for New York he would undertake to demonstrate to you the emptiness of this tittle-tattle, and would request from you reparation on grounds he would choose. In his absence I take his place. Your scandalous insinuation is a mere political trick, which others would describe as Dreyfusard."

The Matin's assertions were the leading topics of conversation at the clubs and other social meeting places throughout the day. The evening papers reproduced the story, although without in any way guaranteeing its accuracy.

The Soir, which was previously owned by the Castellanes, and which is a strong Nationalist organ, bitterly opposed to The Figaro, which championed Dreyfus, after speaking in fulsome terms of the Count's character as a gentleman and a patriot, says:

"It is not difficult to see the origin and motives of M. Deroday's manoeuvre. It is wished to injure him who drove Joseph Reinach from his seat in Parliament. This is a vile additional vengeance, which all good men will denounce."

The Matin took the opportunity to make some remarks concerning Count Boni's position here. It informed its readers that his wife's dot was $15,000,000, which gave an income of over $800,000, and that even at Paris he could cut a figure with that, adding:

"All Parisians know the grandiose mansion on the Avenue du Bois de Boulogne, which is the hobby of his wife, who dreamed to outvie the Vanderbilts' palace on Fifth Avenue by a perfect reproduction of the celebrated Castle of Blois. Count Boni's well-known generosity probably explains his contribution of 50,000 francs to M. Déroulède, which figured in the Police Chief's report on the anti-Republican conspiracy."

In spite of the statement by the Marquis, inquiries indicate that Count Boni was involved in speculation in anticipation of a rise in stocks on account of the expected easy British victory in the Transvaal, and the British reverses caused such a depression that it was impossible for him to meet his losses with ready money. The speculations are understood to have been through private sources, and, therefore, it is difficult to secure absolute confirmation of the reports. The matter will probably be settled privately.

THE PICKNELL PICTURE SALE.

Some sixty landscapes by the late William L. Picknell will be sold by order of his executors at the Fifth Avenue Art Galleries, 366 Fifth Avenue, this evening, and this announcement should stir the artistic blood of all New York lovers and buyers of American pictures, for the lamented Picknell, who died in 1897, at the comparatively early age of forty-three, was one of the best of the younger American landscape painters this country has yet produced, and his promise cut off by his death was abundant. Although a pupil of Gérôme, and beginning as a figure painter in Paris, Picknell's love of nature was too great to keep him in the studio, and when only twenty-six years old he sent to the Salon perhaps his best-known work, "The Route de Concarneau," that splendid transcription of a dusty road in Southern France, with its perspective, color, and especially that wonderful clearness of atmosphere, which is always a characteristic of Picknell's landscapes. This canvas was one of the features of the Clarke collection sold last Winter, where it brought a good price.

It is not necessary to describe in detail the canvases to be sold this evening, for all who have followed the progress of American art are familiar with the characteristics of the dead artist, and all who love true and good landscape art, and especially plain air painting at its best, will hasten to visit the exhibition, and, if possible, secure a canvas from this sale. Picknell was essentially a landscape painter. He did not neglect marines, and those which he painted, notably his "Man in a Boat," a picture of an Antibes fisherman, has all his strength and depth of color and keen sympathy with the life and glow of such tropical climes. His choice of subjects was most varied, now he painted the rock-bound Maine or Massachusetts coast as truthfully as the lighter and warmer fields, vales, and beaches of Southern France or Lower California.

THE MOSLER PICTURES SOLD.

A Total of $11,737.50 Obtained for Ninety-eight Canvases.

The ninety-eight pictures by the well-known American artist Henry Mosler, which have been on exhibition at the American Art Galleries for a week past, were sold there at auction last evening, and for a total of $11,737.50. The attendance was large. Every seat in the spacious up-stairs gallery where the sale took place was filled when the sale began, soon after 8 o'clock, and a number of women as well as men stood the auction through.

While the interest evidently felt in the sale was evidenced by the large attendance, the bidding was at no time spirited, and the prices realized were only fair as is apt to be the case in the sale of one artist's sole work. The large genre pictures, which have brought Mr. Mosler many artistic honors and deserved reputation, were sold for unexpectedly low figures. Mr. I. D. Eichenhausen secured the dramatic "Ghost Story" for $850. Mr. A. Hollander, the affecting and effective "Last Moments," also for $850, while Mr. Henry Seligman bought the "Invoking God's Blessing," with its simple yet strongly told story, for $1,800, the highest figure of the sale, but yet a low one for the excellent painting. Mr. H. D. G. Rohlfs paid $275 for the "Normandy Garden—Grandcamp," one of the best pieces of technique in the collection. Other prices paid over $100 were $105, by Mr. S. Meurer, for "The Rainy Day"; $675, also by Mr. Meurer, for the good outdoors with figures, "Helping Grandpa," which won the Thomas B. Clarke Prize at the Academy exhibition of 1896; $310 paid by Mr. S. Rothfeld, for "The Broken Sabot," and $225 paid by Mr. S. H. Wakeman, for "The Coquette—First Empire." The smaller canvases, which comprised the major part of the collection, brought on an average from $35 to $75 each.

The sale of Mr. Mosler's studio effects, including a collection of Indian curiosities, and of a number of pictures by American and foreign brushes, owned also by the artist, will take place in the American Art Galleries this afternoon. The sale will begin at 2:30 P. M.

THE BOSTON ORCHESTRA.

Its Third Evening Concert at Carnegie Hall Last Night.

The third evening concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra took place last night at Carnegie Hall. The instrumental numbers of the programme were the "Tragic Overture" of Brahms, two movements of the first suite of Moszkowski, and the D minor symphony of César Franck. The intervals between these numbers were filled with vocal solos. The symphony of César Franck was a novelty here, and one by no means unwelcome. The music of this gifted Belgian, in spite of the fact that he died in 1890, at the age of seventy-eight, is not at all well known to this public, and it is only of late that it has begun to command attention here. It has not always been the fortune of the composer to be so worthily represented as he was last night. The symphony in D minor is one of the compositions by which the full measure of his talents may be taken. It is not, indeed, a profound work, but it is interesting; and that is more than can be said of many of the new things which are brought to our notice. The style is modern, and the treatment is musicianly.

The work is in three movements, of which the first and the third are the most effective. The first is particularly happy in its thematic material, though the first motive has a familiar cut. But the subsidiary theme of this movement is a lovely one, and it is employed by the composer in a most felicitous manner. The writing throughout this movement is muscular and full of a fine orchestral mastery. Rich and solid scoring and an admirable polyphonic exposition of the leading ideas to make a delightful effect for the hearer, and the entire movement holds the attention. The second movement, which is the least satisfactory of the three, is very elaborate in construction, and the first theme is striking in itself and in its orchestral presentation; but the general effect of the movement is not brilliant. The third movement is, on the contrary, rich and luminous in its nature. The theme which the composer has selected for the tutti passages does not at first seem especially well adapted to this sort of treatment, but it finally wins its way into favor by the skill of its exposition.

Mr. Gericke had prepared the performance of the symphony with his customary devotion to the composer's intent as understood by him, and the result was admirable. The magnificent precision of the orchestra was never exhibited to better advantage, and the noble, penetrating tone of the strings and the mellow fluency of the wood worked wonders for M. Franck's music. Indeed it must be said that in the readings of the works performed last night Mr. Gericke gave us more masculinity than he is wont to give us, and for this we should be duly grateful. In the second and third movements of the clever suite of Moszkowski the virtuosity of the orchestra was displayed to the highest advantage. It is a ceaseless delight to listen to such firmness of attack, such delicacy of gradation, such unanimity, and such flexibility as this orchestra has. The little collection of masters who play the wood instruments covered itself with glory in the suite. Long may the Boston Symphony men continue to come and play for us. There is a vast, and, we may add, aching, space for them in this metropolis.

For the sake of the record, it must be chronicled that, owing to the illness of Mme. Schumann-Heink, who was engaged for this concert, Miss Rosa Olitzka of the Metropolitan Opera House company sang the aria, "Wohl denn," from Mozart's "Titus," and "Mon coeur s'ouvre a ta voix," from the "Samson et Dalila" of Saint-Saëns; but the dignity of criticism shall not be outraged in these columns by comment on her delivery.

"BELLE OF NEW YORK" IN DISPUTE

Royalties on the Original American Production May Be Demanded.

Legal complications are likely to be the outcome of "The Belle of New York" engagement in this country, which is announced to begin in this city next Monday night at the Casino. The parties to the original "Belle of New York" contract were George W. Lederer and George B. McLellan as managers, and Gus Kerker and Hugh Morton as authors. Following the production of the play in this country over two years ago the firm of Lederer & McLellan had some differences, which, it is understood, culminated in the dissolution of the firm in London last Spring.

It was announced at that time that Mr. McLellan would join forces with the authors. Messrs. McLellan and Kerker arrived here last Sunday on the St. Paul. It is now announced that the trio will claim royalties on the original American production amounting to about $15,000.

Mr. Lederer denies the validity of the claim, and now that the members of the present company are back in home territory, they will attempt, it was said yesterday, to enforce their claim by resorting to the courts. They have arranged to star Miss Edna May in a play to which Mr. Lederer claims a legal right, and which, he declares, he will also enforce. There are therefore two disputes which, it seems sure, must be settled in the courts before the final affairs of "The Belle of New York" are adjusted.

"THE COUNTESS CHIFFON."

Two Parts in the Play More Important than the Title Role.

"The Countess Chiffon," the new play which William A. Brady will produce at the Fifth Avenue Theatre on Feb. 5, is not, as has been stated, a means for starring Grace George, as there are two more important parts in the play than that of the Countess Chiffon. It is Mr. Brady's intention to have Miss George appear in a part which, in his opinion, is specially adapted to her.

"The Countess Chiffon" is an adaptation from the French by Harry St. Mur, in which the title role represents a young American girl who has been educated in Paris and who is married to a French nobleman for whom she has no regard. She seeks society and innocent amusement with persons of her own age and thereby brings about many strange complications. The first act is laid in an office studio in Paris. The Countess meets a young artist who had formerly been her lover. He declares his love for her, but finally discovers that the child has become a woman and no longer regards his suit seriously.

"Broadway to Tokio" Tuesday Night.

The management of the New York Theatre find that the rehearsals of their new production, "Broadway to Tokio," will not justify them in presenting the new piece to-morrow night, and they have decided to postpone the opening until next Tuesday night, by which time they are confident the production will be complete in every particular. The seats purchased for to-morrow evening will be good Tuesday night.

Mr. Hayman's Birthday Celebration.

In the Astor dining rooms at the Waldorf-Astoria last night Al Hayman entertained at dinner eighteen guests, all his personal friends. The occasion was the celebration of his birthday, and was a most elaborate affair in every particular.

A Play for George Boniface, Jr.

Broadhurst Brothers yesterday purchased from H. A. Du Souchet the exclusive rights to his play "The Man from Mexico." They propose to feature George Boniface, Jr., in the part of Benjamin Fitzhew, which was played by Willie Collier.

Damages from the Metropolitan.

Mrs. Annie O'Connor has obtained a $10,000 judgment in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, against the Metropolitan Railroad Company for the death of her husband, Patrick O'Connor, who was run over by a car at Sixth Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street on March 21, 1899. O'Connor was the Treasurer of the Garrick Theatre.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

Yesterday was as quiet and as comparatively dull a day in the social world as were its predecessors of the week. It seemed almost as if the world of society was in sympathy with the gray and dull skies and depressing atmosphere. There were a few receptions, notably that given by Mrs James Brown Lord, the usual number of "at homes," a music recital by Walter Damrosch and Mme. Gadski at Sherry's, a studio reception, given by Mr. Carl J. Blenner in the Sherwood Building, and the third dance of the Bachelors and Spinsters at Delmonico's in the evening. This completed the record of an uneventful day.

To-day will bring little of note. Among the "at homes" will be those of Mrs. Bancel La Farge, 31 West Tenth Street; Mrs. Charles H. Stebbins and the Misses Stebbins, at 33 West Ninth Street; Mrs. Jules S. Bache of 8 East Sixty-seventh Street, Mrs. Charles R. Coster of 27 West Eleventh Street, Mrs. Peter Augustus Jay and Miss Mary Jay of 29 Waverley Place, Mrs. James Augustus Benedict and the Misses Benedict, 325 Fifth Avenue; Mrs. Clarence W. Bowen of 3 East Tenth Street, Mrs. Adolphus Smedberg of 51 Wall Street, and Mrs. Stephen Van Rensselaer and Miss Mathilde Van Rensselaer of the Brevoort House. The second meeting of the Five Cotillions, better known as Mrs. Quackenbush's Class, will take place at Sherry's this evening, and will be a bal poudre. Among the many dinners of the evening will be those to be given by Mrs. Dexter L. Hawkins of 5 West Thirty-fourth Street, for her daughter, Miss Estelle Hawkins, and by Mrs. Edwin Mitchell of 31 East Fiftieth Street.

Late advices from Jekyl Island are to the effect that the New Yorkers now there are devoting their time to hunting, which has been exceptionally good. J. S. Soley, who has made a count of the game killed on the island since a day or so before Christmas, finds it results in one alligator, 50 pheasants, 3 deer, 150 ducks, 50 wild doves, 40 marsh hens, and 500 quail. Dean Hoffman and Mrs. Hoffman, who have been spending several weeks at the island, will to-day leave for New York. Mr. and Mrs. Cortlandt Field Bishop are expected at Jekyl this week. Mr. N. K. Fairbank of Chicago, who is a visitor at Jekyl every Winter with his family, will not be there this year, but will instead go to Egypt. There are few, if any, well-known names among early arrivals from the North at Jacksonville or St. Augustine as yet. At Asheville, N. C., there are more people who are known in the fashionable world, and the early season is quite lively there. Among recent arrivals at Asheville are Gen. McCook and family of New York, D. H. Coolidge, Jr., of Boston, Edward Murray of Baltimore, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Wells of New York, and Charles B. Perkins of Boston. A large reception will be given this afternoon at the new clubhouse of the Swannanoa Country Club, at Asheville.

Dr. Charles M. Legare gave an informal card party and musicale at his residence, 10 West Thirty-ninth Street, on Wednesday night. Among those present were Mrs. C. B. Van Rensselaer, Miss Sands, Miss Hall, Miss de Peyster, Miss Belknap, Miss Van Rensselaer, and the Messrs. Barclay, Jevons, Gildersleeve, Stahlschmidt, Harold Barclay, and R. M. Post.

A committee has been formed to arrange and give a children's National Easter festival in April for the purpose of raising funds for the unfortunate little children in Cuba. This work is under the auspices of the Cuban Orphan Society. The officers of the committee, who are Mrs. Mary Hatch Willard, Chairman; William T. Wardwell, Treasurer; John P. Faure, Secretary; Mrs. H. Fairfield Osborne, Mrs. William T. Blodgett, Cornelius N. Bliss, and Charles W. Gould, will hold its first meeting at the residence of Mrs. A. B. Stone, 150 West Fifty-ninth Street, at 11 o'clock on Monday morning next.

The Lahn, which arrived yesterday from Bremen and Southampton, brought among other passengers, Mrs. Barber, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Graham, Mr. Edward Thomas, Mr. G. Turnbull, and Mr. Gustav Bartel. Although Col. William Jay and Mrs. Jay were booked to sail on the St. Paul for Southampton on Wednesday last, they will not leave until next week. Mrs. Frederick Neilson and her daughter, Miss Kathleen Neilson, who, it was reported, had sailed on the Columbia on Jan. 9, have not yet departed. The withdrawal of the Etruria, which was to have sailed on Saturday next, upsets the plans of many intending passengers, and again interrupts the foreign mails, which have been badly delayed and infrequent this Winter.

At the third dance of the Bachelors and Spinsters last night at Delmonico's, the cotillion was led by Mr. Frederick Stuart Greene. There were no favor figures, as the members of this organization prefer using any surplus funds for extra dances. The Reception Committee was composed of Mrs. J. M. Knapp, Mrs. G. T. Harrison, and Mrs. Samuel Spencer. Supper was served before the cotillion. This class numbers about 125 members, of which fully one-half are Southerners.

The Drawing Room Club held its inaugural reunion for 1900 last evening in the East Room of the Astoria. It was an evening of "anecdote and reminiscence." Among those present were Mr. Brander Matthews, Mr. Hamilton W. Mabie, Mrs. Bronson Howard, Mr. F. Hopkinson-Smith, and others. This club numbers several hundred members, and holds monthly meetings in the Astoria. It includes among its members John Fiske, Charles Dudley Warner, W. D. Howells, and many other well-known literary men.

The University Club gave yesterday the third of its January Thursday afternoon women and Thursday evening men's receptions. The attendance of women in the afternoon was the largest yet, and the enormous building was thronged during the hours of the reception. There is no collation served at these affairs, the house being simply thrown open to those holding cards of invitation. In this dull Winter, the receptions give a welcome opportunity for the assembling of men and women of leisure, and have really been delightful in every way.

Mrs. James Brown Lord of 603 Madison Avenue gave yesterday afternoon a large reception, which was followed by a dinner and theatre party in the evening. Mrs. Lord was assisted in receiving by her cousin, Miss Potter, Miss Ives, Mrs. Harry McVickar, Mrs. Newbold Edgar, and Mrs. T. Suffern Taller. The house was handsomely decorated, the hall with palms and Southern smilax, which were also used in the parlors, with pink and white roses, violets, pots of pink and white azaleas, and smilax. Mrs. Lord wore a Macheret gown of black crepe de chine, trimmed with spangled black lace, the corsage having a yoke of white silk, covered with the delicate spangled lace, fastened with a bow and ends of fine tulle. With this Mrs. Lord wore diamond ornaments. Delmonico served the refreshments. Among those who attended this reception were Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mr. and Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Lorillard, Mr. and Mrs. George Gould, Mr. Belmont, Mr. and Mrs. De Lancey Nicoll, Col. William Jay and Mrs. Jay, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Alexander, and Mr. and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid. The Tuxedo colony was largely represented. Among the guests at the dinner which followed the reception were Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Edgar, Mr. and Mrs. T. Suffern Taller, Miss Potter, Miss Ives, Mr. James W. Gerard, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Bacon. Mr. and Mrs. Lord and their guests afterward went to the theatre to see "Wheels Within Wheels." Mrs. Lord will also give a dinner on Jan. 30.

Measles seems now to be quite a prevalent fashionable complaint. This childish disease has been a visitor at several fashionable houses. One of the last victims to a light attack of the measles is Miss Helena Parsons, the daughter of Mr. Schuyler Parsons.

Mr. C. Stacey Clark and Mr. John Y. G. Walker have sent out cards for a tea on Jan. 25. The Knickerbocker Whist Club met last evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Lester del Garcia, No. 4 West Forty-ninth Street.

The first of the series of dinner dances inaugurated by the young married set in Washington was given Tuesday night at Mrs. Wallach's. The seven dinner parties united at this ball, which was very select, no additional guests being invited, as had been expected. The hostesses at the dinners were Mrs. Senator McMillan, Mrs. Senator Wetmore, Mrs. Blair Lee, Mrs. George Fraser, Mrs. Fairfax Harrison, Mrs. Glover, and Mrs. Ward Thorn. The band from the Third Cavalry, at Fort Myer, furnished the music, Mr. "Bob" Wallach being a Lieutenant in that regiment—and exceptionally poor it was, too, for a ballroom. This first ball was a great success. The next one will be given at the German Embassy on Jan. 23. The German Ambassador himself will be out of town, however.

Mr. and Mrs. Padelford—the latter formerly Miss Fanny Smythe of New York, and formerly a great belle and beauty there—have taken the Kearny Warren house in Washington for a number of years. They gave a small dinner Sunday night in honor of Mr. John Woolsey, Mrs. Padelford's son, who is visiting them for a few days.

Quite a sensational story has been going the rounds of a rebuke administered to Mrs. Arthur Paget by Swinburne, the poet. Lady Paget and M. "Bertie" Stopford, who is the crack cotillion leader of London, went to call on Swinburne to ask him to write the masque for the charity benefit over which Mrs. Paget has supervision. The poet received them in a dirty dressing gown and berated them and the charity schemes in general in so vigorous a manner that Mrs. Paget and Mr. Stopford made a hurried escape from the house. There seems to be a reaction in London concerning these charity entertainments for the benefit of the orphans and widows of the soldiers killed in the Transvaal war, especially those arranged by Americans. They have been attacked as schemes simply to force an entrance into society. Not one of the great South African millionaires has contributed a penny to them.

Mrs. Brown Potter sails shortly for the Riviera as the guest of the Frank Gardiners on their yacht. She will pass the Spring on the Italian Riviera, and will not appear on the stage for the present.

La grippe or the influenza has broken out in fashionable circles in London, and many well-known people are quite ill with it. Among these is the well-known Mr. Hwfa Williams, better known as the husband of the best-known Mrs. Hwfa Williams. The couple recently sold their London house to Mme. Melba, the prima donna.

Mr. Ivor Guest, who goes with the Duke of Marlborough to South Africa to-morrow, is well known in New York. He is a first cousin of the Duke of Marlborough and was his best man at his wedding. He was at one time very attentive to Miss "Birdie" Fair, now Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr. He is heir to Baron Wimborne and stands about fifth in succession to the title of Duke of Marlborough. He is unmarried.

The obituaries of Lord Ava, who died from the effect of a wound in one of the last battles in the Transvaal, are filled with anecdotes of his cleverness, and bright and cheery manner. Two of his brothers are also at the Cape, and Lord and Lady Dufferin have been overwhelmed with grief and anxiety. At last accounts the new Marquis of Ava and his American wife were still at Stockholm.

Mrs. Adair has returned to London and taken charge of the battleship fund for the Maine, in place of Lady Randolph Churchill. Mrs. Ronalds, her mother, is in London for the season, but has not been giving her Sunday evening entertainments. London is very dull and dreary, and everything social there is at a standstill. The chapel in Curzon Street has been torn down to make way for the Marlboroughs' new mansion, but the work of construction has not been begun, and there is a rumor to the effect that it never will be, as the Duke and Duchess have changed their minds about the house. They have taken for a number of years the residence of the Dowager Lady Warwick.

Nice, since the New Year, has brightened up a bit, although the rain on the Riviera has been most depressing. There have been no new American arrivals of note. The Infanta Eulalia and Queen Isabella of Spain passed through Nice for Beaulieu, where they will pass the Winter. Eugene Higgins had left Nice on a yachting cruise. Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., have just returned there from a long trip in their automobile. Sybil Sanderson Terry was expected, and the American colony was much excited over the début at the opera of an American tenor named Henderson, who made a great success. Prince Lubecki of Poland, who was here some years ago, is at Nice.
